Frosh Number 1125 As Three Groups Strive For Orientation Accolades

Spirited enthusiasm, searching interrogation, and again a staunch pointed rivalry between 1125 freshmen and the sophomore orientation committee, plus strong-arm efforts are once more among the prevalent characteristics of the Villanova scene at the start of the 1961-1962 year. Several glances about the campus men's rooms and the stuffy closets of Alumni and Austin Halls would disclose to the careful observer the futile attempts of a beleaguered freshman class to avoid the wrath and fines of their superiors, the dreaded "OC" hats.

Under the guiding influence of the Student Council White Hats and with the mature desire of the Blue Key to effect a certain air of "welcome" to the Frosh, there did appear on the Mainline campus for the first time a general consideration for the welfare of the freshmen as students and fellow classmates in the university.

Blue Key Initiative

The opening day orienation program, under the direction of the Student Council Vice-Chairman, Joe Tate, proved to be a smooth efficient effort by the "OCs," Council members, and the Blue Key. A tour of the campus was conducted for small groups of freshman by the sophomore "OCs" while the Blue Key established an information booth for the parents of the incoming freshmen. Later they conducted informal question and answer periods in the freshmen dorms which served to alleviate some of the new problems of the freshmen.

Excessive fining and limited attendance at the evening assemblies organized for the frosh marred the activities of the next three days. Many of the Blue Key members and officers of the Student Council, however, expressed genuine satisfaction in the enthusiasm of the class as a whole and their interest in themselves and all other phases of Villanova life.

New Dean Speaks As '61-'62 Council Holds First Session

"I think that the keynote should be cooperation." Thus stated the Rev. William E. Farrell, OSA, newly appointed Dean of Extra-Curricular Activities, to the first full assembly of the Student Council last Wednesday evening.

Asked to speak to the assembly by Chairman Tom Wall, Fr. Farrell commented that the contact that he has had with the members of the Student Council has been pleasant, "to say the least." He concluded his talk by stating, "I am very happy to serve in this capacity and hope that we will have a successful year."

Two weeks ago, Wall called a brief informal meeting in which the recent Student Council Dance was discussed. Wall also expressed his intention of pushing for the establishment of a much wider lecture program to compare to that of other colleges and universities. During the meeting, the present plans for the "Nick Basca Weekend" were announced.

Appreciation of Blue Key

In his opening address to the assembly, Wall stressed the necessity of charging admission to movies and raising funds so that the council can offer to the Student Body more benefits than in the past. Wall further took into consideration the recent freshman orientation period for which he especially commended the Blue Key for their initiative.

Homecoming Split; Nick Basca Weekend To Be Held October 13th

On return to registration and classes at Villanova this fall, the undergraduate student body was thrust into confusion by the fact that the traditional Homecoming Weekend was scheduled as early as September 23. Senior Weekend Chairman, Ray Trapp, explained that the difficulty arose due to the fact that the Alumni Secretary each year chooses the date for the homecoming game which would be the most interesting on the schedule, from the returning alumni's point of view.

Homecoming is essentially a return by the alumni to their Alma Mater and is, for the most part, rather meaningless to the undergraduates. In the future, however, Fr. Farrell, Dean of Extra-Curricular Activities, Mr. George Pequinot, Alumni Secretary, and Ray Trapp, Senior Class President intend to select a board which will avoid this difficulty in 1962. Trapp commented that it was impossible to organize the fraternities and the necessary committees within one week's time and still present a memorable weekend for both the undergraduates and alumni.

Nick Basca

The actual homecoming weekend, for undergraduates will now be held on the 13th of October and will be called the "Nick Basca Weekend." At this time the usual floats built by the fraternities, the classes, and the spirit committee, will be featured along with the contest among the individual dormatories for the best decorated hall.

Belle Air Hosts 5,000 At '61 Press Conference

Nearly 5,000 high school students from the eastern part of the Nation will attend the 14th annual School Publications Conference at Villanova University on Saturday, September 30th.

Advance registration indicates that students representing 200 high schools and preparatory schools in eight states will attend the day long meeting on the Vilianova campus.

The young Journalists will hear lectures and participate in activities designed to assist them in their work on high school newspapers, yearbooks, magazines, and other scholastic publications.

President to speak

Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., Villanova's President will deliver an address of welcome to the high schoolers in the campus Field House at 10:30 a.m. But activities begin long before then with registration scheduled for 8:30 a.m.

Chief speaker for the Publications Conference will be the Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A., former rector of Villaneuva University in Havana, Cuba. Father McCarthy was expelled from Communist Cuba early last summer after the Castro regime took over the University.

Father McCarthy is a keen student of Latin American History and observed in detail, during nearly ten years in Cuba, the complete takeover of that nation by Communism. He will speak on "Communist Communications in Cuba."

Address by Newsmen

Other speakers are Eugene Moore of the PHILADELPHIA EVENING BULLETIN and TIME magazine; John J. Liney, who draws the comic strip HENRY; Rev. Anthony L. Ostheimer, Editor of the CATHOLIC STANDARD & TIMES; Leonard McAdams, veteran PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER journalist and James Haughton, Publicity Manager, TV GUIDE magazine.

Chief topics for discussion are: newswriting, editorials, headline writing, staff training, layout, photography and administration. Sessions will be held in the campus Field House; Vasey Hall and the University's Commerce and Finance building.

Jan Garigliano, Editor of the 1962 Belle Air, requested that all Villanovans desirous of assisting the operation of this event report to the Belle Air office which is located in the basement of Vasey Hall.

Car Pool Program Registration Opens Monday, October 2

The Car Pool Program, a Student Council service, will begin its second year on Monday, October 2. Registration will be held in the Student Council office, which is located on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

The program furnishes a means by which students who are looking for rides or seeking riders can check the catalog listing for other students who have the same destination.

The way in which the catalog is set up serves two purposes. First, a student seeking a ride to school may check the catalog according to his geographic area for people who are driving from his section. Thus he may find drivers who are willing to take passengers.

Second, a student driving to school can locate prospective riders by checking the catalog.

Widespread Benefits

The result of the program is beneficial to the student, the University, and the public, since it can lower individual transportation costs, reduce parking lot congestion, and minimize traffic problems.

All students interested in participating in the program are urged to register as soon as possible, since the program's full potential can best be realized by putting the plan into effect immediately.

The Student Council makes no charge to the students for the program.

Sharon LaRose Of Immaculata Named V.P. At Meeting

The Philadelphia Regional Council of the National Federation of Catholic College Students met Sunday in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall. Some Fifty junior and senior delegates and campus moderators from nine of the ten affiliated colleges were present.

The first speaker, Miss Rose Nardone of Rosemont, reviewed the Pittsburgh National Convention. Brother Augustine F S C, of LaSalle College, Regional Moderator, remarked on the Pittsburgh Convention and thanked Miss Nardone for acting as Regional Moderator at that Convention.

Gerard C. Lahr, also of La Salle, Student Affairs Vice-President, is the only Philadelphia Region member presently holding a national office. Mr. Lahr spoke on the aims and purposes of the federation. Regional President, John Simone of Villanova, eleborated on the goals set for the coming year.

One office election was held in which Miss Sharon La Rose of Immaculata, was voted Regional First Vice-President by acclamation. Reports were given on this year's business. The topic this year is Freedom and Responsibility in a Democratic Society.

Regret for Mixup

Ordinarily the Nick Basca Dance and Bonfire falls on the eve of the Homecoming game and according to present plans, will in the future coincide. Mr. Pequinot himself expressed regret that this misunderstanding and the consequent confusion had come about.

"I feel," Trapp pointed out, "that this weekend is important to the undergraduates as a unifying factor for their social life for the first semester since it draws participants from each class, each division, and ultimately each phase of life at Villanova."

Tate White Hat Head

According to some not-so-esoteric principle of physics, the most difficult operation in the movement of a body is obtaining the initial momentum. Such a body is the Such a momentous force is the Orientation Committee of the Sophomore class,, led by the Vice-Chairman of the Student Council, Joe Tate.

Joe Tate

Basing all observations on this principle, the guiding spirit of the OC rates the incoming Freshman Class as an especially fast-moving object, destined to ride a high plane on the wave of the future.

Tate, a junior, majoring in General Arts, has assumed his most recent command at a time when the Orientation Committee has taken on a new face. Under this system, the Vice-Chairman of the Student Council heads the committee, with the President of the Sophomore Class and the Chairman of the Blue Key as his immediate subordinates.

Blue Key Aids

Assisting the twenty-five OC's with opening week activities were ten members of the Blue Key, who kept orientation at high level by aiding the Frosh with their special problems. While the OC's patrolled the campus by day, keeping "order" and indoctrinating the freshmen to the Villanova way of life, the Blue Key performed similar duties, going around to the freshman dorms at night.

Tate, former Chairman of the Spirit Committee, is a member of the Student Congress and the Student Senate.

Frosh Bow

The Vice Chairman noted that practically all members of his "fast moving object" were wearing their regs with a minimum of complaint and refraction. Tate said he "would like to have the freshmen keep the spirit they've shown during Orientation Week, whether our teams win or lose."

New Retreat Policy Utilizes Weekends For Class Services

The new Retreat policy as announced by the University is as follows:

"The Administration of the University has approved a radical change in the policy of Student Retreats for the coming year. Instead of the Retreat after the Mid-Year examinations for the Senior and Junior Classes and the Retreat for the Freshmen and Sophomores during the first part of Holy Week, there will be four distinct Retreats scheduled during the academic year. Hence, the dates assigned for these Retreats are no longer valid.

"The new policy will include four separate Retreats—one for each class. These Retreats will begin on Thursday evening and close with Mass at noon on Saturday. The class making Retreat will be excused from classes on the Friday they are making their Retreat. No one will be excused from any exercise because of work or other duties. Ample notice is given to allow each student to attend all exercises.

Schedule

"The Retreat schedule for the present scholastic year will be as follows: All Freshmen—October 19, 20, 21, 1961; All Sophomores—November 9, 10, 11, 1961; All Juniors—February 15, 16, 17, 1962; All Seniors—March 1, 2, 3, 1962.

"The Nursing School Students and all other Women Students will make their Retreat in the University Chapel during the time of the Junior Retreat, i.e., February 15, 16, 17, 1962.

"The policy of allowing Closed Retreats off-campus will be restricted to Senior and Junior students only. Such retreats will be permitted only during the First Semester and only with the expressed permission of the Chaplain or his Assistant.

"The Annual Day of Recollection usually held on the Thursday before the First Friday of October (October 5th) will not be held. Classes will be held on this day as usual. The Day of Recollection will be held towards the end of Lent — April 13, 1962."

Dr. Joseph Reino New Moderator Of Literary Magazine

Dr. Joseph Reino has been named as the new moderator of the LYNX, the campus literary magazine. Dr. Reino, a member of the English Department, succeeds Dr. John Philipson and Mr. James Mitchell, also of that department.

The new moderator said that this year's editors will be officially announced at an open meeting this Thursday at 3:30, in room 105 of the Classroom Annex. He invited anyone interested to attend. Reino stressed the need for people interested in copy editing or business, but added that all staffs can use some new members.

Father Sullivan Leaves School For Florida Post

After twenty-three years here at Villanova, Reverend Robert M. Sullivan, OSA, has been reassigned. He had been Dean of the School of Arts and Science since 1950.

Father Sullivan has been selected to serve in association with Father Edward McCarthy, OSA, in the undertaking of the establishment of a new Augustinian Liberal Arts College for men to be located in Miami, Florida.

Father McCarthy was formerly Dean of the Arts and Science School here at Villanova until his appointment as Vice-President of Villaneuva University, Havana, Cuba, at which time Father Sullivan became Dean of the School.

Foresight and Zeal

Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President, spoke for the school and himself when he stated, in regard to Father Sullivan, "we feel deeply the loss on our campus of Reverend Robert M. Sullivan, OSA, who has, for twenty-three years, endeared himself to all who knew him well as a faculty member and as an administrator. Many strides foward have been made in his division which stands as a testimony to his foresight and zeal. We are heartened that our new Augustinian College venture in Miami will have his able and wise guidance in its formative years."

Father Sullivan himself expressed his gratitude to Father Provincial for associating him with Father McCarthy in this new undertaking.

Opens in September

The site of the campus will be 3935 NW 185 Opa Locka, Florida, which is in the northwest section of Miami. The school has for its foundation a private two-bedroom house and fifty surrounding acres of ground. To begin the school, tentatively scheduled for opening in September of 1962 with the first freshman class, the most pressing problem is the lack of classroom space.

Father Sullivan's first assignment was to the Augustinian Monastery in San Diego, California, where he resided from 1933 until 1936. From 1936 until 1938, Father studied at Oxford, England, where he obtained his Master's degree in English literature. He was next assigned to Villanova as an instructor in English. Father later became Chairman of the English Department, from which position he was appointed Dean of Arts and Science, in November of 1950.

Second Catholic College

His Excellency, Coleman Carroll, Bishop of the Diocese of Miami, invited the Very Reverend James A. Donnellon, Prior Provincial of the Augustinian Province of Saint Thomas to undertake the establishment of the College. When operative, it will be the second catholic college for men South of Georgetown University.

Father Welsh New Dean of Arts And Science Colleges

The University announced Monday, September 11, 1961 the appointment of Reverend Robert J. Welsh OSA, to the position of Dean of the School of Arts and Science. Father Welsh had previously been assistant Dean of that School, under Reverend Robert M. Sullivan OSA.

Father Welsh's promotion was necessitated by the news of Father Sullivan's departure to the new Augustinian College in Miami.

In assuming his position, Father stated that, "I expect to receive the same cooperation from faculty and students as heretofore, I am confident that the division will maintain the high levels of excellence achieved under my predecessors."

Diversification Marks Rise

Father's education included one year at La Salle College after which he entered the Seminary here at Villanova and completed his undergraduate studies. From September 1943 until his ordination on February 11, 1947, Father attended the Augustinian College in Washington, D. C. He then attended Gregorian University, Rome, from September 1947 until July 1950 from where he received his Doctor of Sacred Theology degree.

Assigned to the position of Provincial Secretary in July of 1956 to Father Greenland, past Provincial General of the Augustinians, brought to a close the full time teaching duties of Father Welsh. He continued on as a part time lecturer in religion to Villanova undergraduates and Philosophy to Augustinian seminarians.

No Changes

The next step in Father Welsh's career was the announcement that he was appointed Assistant Dean of the School of Arts and Science, a position he served in from the spring semester of 1960 until his most recent accession.

Other than minor changes necessitated by events, Father Welsh stated that there are no major changes scheduled for the administration of his division at present.

WWVU Begins October 1; New Sunday Show Starts

October 1, 1961 has been slated as the on-the-air date for radio station WWVU, 645 kc. on the dial. The programming will follow its usual time schedule, 2:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. every day except Saturday.

In an exclusive VILLANOVAN interview, Senior Charlie Labus, Public Relations and Personnel Director stated that this year WWVU is stressing the utmost in FM quality programming, the FM sound of Villanova.

Highlighting the fall program outlook is a new Sunday afternoon show. It will feature a veritable "stewpot" of material, including music, news, sports, and commentary. As yet unnamed, the show will air from two 'till five.

Heading the staff this year is Dan O'Mara, station manager. Dave Hughes, business manager, Mark Devaney, chief engineer, and Charlie Labus make up his staff.

On Orientation

Last spring, legislation was placed before the Student Council which attempted to make the Blue Key responsible for the Freshman Orientation program. This legislation was debated and re-presented in a diluted form, so that the Blue Key would jointly participate in Orientation with the Sophomore White Hats and the Student Council.

This year's orientation period, while incorporating the Blue Key, did not make any impressive improvement in the Freshman's introductory program. The organization members interviewed the resident Freshman in their dorms on the evening of registration, talked with the parents, helped the Freshmen get settled in the dorms, and spent considerable time talking to Freshmen as they walked about the Campus. The Blue Key did not harass the Freshmen in any way; rather they attempted to get on a first name basis with the new Villanovans.

This year's orientation program points out the foresight of the Blue Key legislation, as it was presented last year.

The legislation, as originally proposed, allows for representation of both the Student Council and the Sophomore Class to continue in a position similar to that which they played in the past, namely, to inspire the Freshman with Villanova spirit of both an athletic and social nature and to induce support for the extra-curricular activities.

However, the main purpose of the Blue Key control of orientation is to give a dominant and controlling attitude to a mature body of individuals who have proven in the past their ability to instill in non-Villanovans the spirit of the more serious side of Villanova life.

The Blue Key has developed a plan for Orientation whereby they would exemplify the campus leaders and the Augustinian ideal of the end product of a Villanova education. The organization worked out a six day orientation program including the reception of Freshman parents by members of the faculty and administration, possibly a coffee hour. They also planned the inclusion of a Freshman Mass and a detailed presentation of religious and social life by presidents of various campus organizations. They also planned small group discussions with the faculty in order to discuss some of the problems which a student might face while majoring in various courses.

Realizing the potentiality of the Blue Key plans for Orientation and the huge degree of success with which the organization has met in the past, it's time that the Student Council realize this excellent opportunity to give control of Orientation to a mature organization in order to present the Freshman with the best attribues of Villanova life.

Letters of Welcome

Dear Students of Villanova University:

I am very happy to welcome you once again as we begin our scholastic year 1961-1962. I particularly welcome the freshmen who for the first time are becoming a part of the Villanova family. I hope that all will enjoy a happy and fruitful year.

You enter this school year in a world atmosphere of serious tensions. There are perhaps, some who are very pessimistic about the future. The possibility of nuclear warfare which would wipe out civilization as we know it causes concern to leaders throughout the world. It may seem to a student that a time like this is hardly conducive to making long range plans involving serious study. However, in the midst of all the signs of unrest and trouble, I believe that I can detect other signs of great hope and promise for the future.

The great emphasis on education in discussions at all levels, the emergence of the African nations, the preparation for the Ecumenical Council, all point to an expectation of stability and continuity. Perhaps life as we know it today will change considerably, but we know that there is too much concern for materialistic and sensual pursuits, and in this area life must be changed.

The signs seem to indicate that the world will go on and there will be need and place for educated young men like yourselves. Indeed the need will be at its greatest in history for men who are capable of providing the leadership that is required for our troublesome times.

I urge you, therefore, not to be disturbed by the portents of disaster that hover around us but to renew your faith in the Providence of God and with trust in Him to put your utmost efforts to your studies and other development of your personality during the coming year.

May God bless you always.

Sincerely,
Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A.
President

Fellow Villanovans:

With the advent of a new school year, we of the Student Council wish to extend a warm welcome to each and everyone of you, and in particular, to the class of 1965.

The Student Council this year will attempt to exhibit programs which in past years have been non-existent, and also to initiate new ideas in all allied fields which we hope will benefit all.

Naturally, we cannot carry out and successfully execute these programs outselves. Thus it is hoped that the majority of our ideas will come to us from you, the interested student.

I would ask you to utilize the suggestion box in Dougherty Hall, and to meet with your class, fraternity, society, and club representatives in order to improve communications between yourself and Student Government. Remember, without your support we will be highly inefficient.

I would also extend an invitation to all to attend our Council meetings, which are held on alternate Wednesday nights at 6:30 in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Troika? Nyet!

Will the untimely death of Dag Hammarskjold enable the Communist bloc to further their plan for world-wide confusion and unrest? Will Hammarskjold's demise add another weapon to the Moscovite diplomatic strategy which can be employed to wheedle new compromises in other areas of world disharmony?

The Russians hold the power to veto any suggestion made regarding a successor to the late Secretary-General. This power is not absolute, however. If an impasse is reached in the Security Council, it is possible for the General Assembly to call the question to the floor. This can only be done if two thirds of the nations voting and present request this. Such a majority will not be easy to marshal. Russia and the western bloc know this. The question which now remains is: "Which one will capitalize on the situation?"

Russia seems to be the logical choice. She can argue for her "troika" plan to change the office of Secretary-General to a watered-down three man board representing the three main factions in the U. N.

The West will certainly reject any such plan. Therefore, unless the U. S. lines up a two thirds majority in the General Assembly, a hopeless stalemate will result. This stalemate could mean the end of the U. N.

The psuedo-Marxists do not want this. For in the UN they have a perfect vehicle for their propaganda plan.

Many observers believe that Russia will use her veto power to strike a bargain with the West. She will approve a neutral acceptable to the West, if the West in turn will compromise with Russia on the major issues of the day.

We cannot afford to compromise with Communism any longer. Since 1945 every such compromise has been in reality a gain for the Kremlin.

Russia agreed to the present UN setup sixteen years ago. She has no logical reason to propose such a change as the "troika". We should capitalize on their position by strongly denouncing such a fickle policy.

The time has come when we must regard our own national interests. We must begin to realize that enlightened nationalism is completely compatible with internationalism. We must stand fast on the Berlin issue and we must not give in to the application of Red China for a seat on the Security Council. We must be stubborn in order to preserve the status quo. The free world needs some leader to follow, in order to stand fast against the Russian threat of a fire and brimestone atomic holacaust. Free people need a rallying point to look to with trust and admiration. A small retreat now could only lead to more scorn from overseas.

We do not have to name a man to succeed Mr. Hammarskjold. Rather the unaligned nations will make several nominations for a new Secretary-General. These unaligned nations, will obviously nominate an extreme neutral who will be fair in his actions. What more could any member country (with an ear for propaganda) want than a perfect neutral as Secretary-General?

Let us present this positive policy of continued action along these lines of the status quo.

Now is the time for us to find out who our friends are, and to start building a more effective block against Communist aggresions.

Let Nikita Khrushchev "the balding bear" of Moscow, bang holes in the desk of the U. N., but let us put cotton in our ears and wait for the logistics of the matter to come to the surface.

WE ARE RIGHT. NOW we must stand, and be counted for the RIGHT, or live forever in the WRONG!

V. U. Students Face Own 'Line-up'

1. 2:00 p.m.—If a guy can learn to catch some shuteye in thes mobs, he's got it made.

(Editor's Note:

The VILLANOVAN presents a pictorial essay of a freshman's encounter with the book-store line.)

The ludicrous spectacle of white-hatted tyranny and juvenility so rampant but a few short years ago seems this year to have abated somewhat. No longer do the sophisticated cognoscenti known as the Orientation Committee treat their frosh charges as new arrivals in a kindergarten for idiots. The Class of '65 is rapidly becoming the most painlessly absorbed crop of freshmen (ask any sophomore) to assume the role of Villanovans.

Their joyous young faces sparkle with delight as they listen to the upperclassmen's descriptions of the brave new world of college life. Their crania are crammed with visions of Rosemont sugar-plums as they bow their heads in respect to greatness — as exemplified by various and sundry athletes, intellects, and "wheels." Mr. (or Miss) Villanova '65 gazes in awe at the scope of the school. But he appreciates its smaller, quieter, more intimate pleasures, too, — like the Pie Shoppe.

The freshman bursts with pride at his new and distinctive uniform, affectionately termed "regs," as he sits in his first college class aware of the tremendous responsibility that he as one of his country's prime resources (raw material) must bear.

Apart from the incarnation of courtesy and goodfellowship that is Muff Day, the Valhallla that is Rosement, the Armageddon that is Goodreau stadium, and the haven of rest that is Kellys what will Mr. Villanova '65 have to remember about V.U. after he has long since received his A.B. or B.S. (if it is Miss Villanova '65, after she receives her MRS.)? Undoubtedly it will be lines (no, not that kind of line). Four years in Villanova's lines make every graduate exceptionally well prepared to serve in the standing army. The President called for physical fitness in the nation's youth and the system at Villanova insures that our graduates will be able to stand up under any pressure. The training program is a masterpiece of ingenuity, designed to place the individual in any conceivable situation in order that he might always be on his toes.

Let's examine some of the varied training lines. The first one to greet the new Villanovan and prepare him for the shape of things to come is the registration line. This line occurs at least eight times in every Villanovan's life. By far it is more interesting the first time when the delicate and difficult task of being fitted properly for the all important "regs" requires that the remainder of the freshman store line. As is illustrated on this page by our handsome and intelligent Mr. Villanova '65, this genius of line is without equal. It is a model of efficiency in preparing our young men for obstacle courses, frustrating delays, and otherwise general character-building.

The book-store line is unique in that it is actually a double line. A three-hours' wait to get in is followed by an hour's wait to get out. It incorporates the in-fighting of the Pie Shoppe line with he same disillusioning reward — you come away poorer in material things but a great deal richer in heavy objects to carry and the frustration that can only lead to perservance and mental well-being.

This line, more than any other teaches the new Villanovan the value of the virtues and of humility. He, self-satisfied and proud, wonders why the book store and registration aren't combined in the Field House, or switched from Dougherty's west lounge to the C&F Cafeteria, or perhaps into three stores in the C&F building, Dougherty Hall, and Mendel Hall for the three divisions respectively.

But, then, we have realized that such a rational, efficient, workable, quick set-up within a larger area or split in three would mean that a traditional line would become extinct — that Vilanovans would have less of a comprehensive training in standing and waiting, less of a basis for the virtues of patience and fortitude and less of the chaos that marks each new semester. And that just can't be! Ask our friend, Mr, Villanova '65.

5. 4:00 p.m.—Oh well, since I'm here . . .

class wait patiently. The frosh has had his first initiation into the Villanova system of building men. By the eighth and final time the virtues of patience and fortitude have been irrevocably instilled.

The chowline genus of line has two species: the Pie Shoppe or transient line, and the Resident dining hall or constant line. Both are characterized by the fact that they exist only at those times when one is hungry, their length, by the expert in-fighting that occurs at the counter and particularly by the disillusionment occasioned by the unexpectedly great rewards at the end of the line. The great value of these lines are that it is a practical demonstration of the Christian doctrine that "man does not live by bread alone."

The very epitome of this extemely important and essential element of life at Villanova is that line which is most intrinsicially concerned with the University's scholars — the book

5. 5:00 p.m.—It was cheaper than a slide-rule and I can always draw lines on it and call it a chess board.

America Sings, Swings; Music Makes Big Business

"I hear America singing," poet Walt Whitman said a century ago. Today he'd hear not only singing, but varied sounds of the 31 million Americans—one person in six—who play musical instruments.

He'd be able to hear more than half the world's symphony orchestras in the United States. In 1900 according to information supplied by Broadcast Music, Inc., there were 10 symphony orchestras in all America, less than 100 in 1920—and more than 1,200 by 1960.

Music to his ears might also be the sound of cash registers all over the country ringing up do-re-mi. In 1959, the nation spent $450 million to hear all types of music as against $305 million for all spectator sports The box office "take" for concert music was bigger than that for baseball.

In short, Americans have good reason to blow their own horns—and 2,650,000 of them do, according to the American Music Conference. An additional 28 million plus play other instruments. The odds are better than one in nine that the next person you see on the street will be a piano player, one in 40 that he or she plays the second most popular instrument, the guitar. The odds are one in 56 that you'll meet a string player, one in 67 that you'll encounter a woodwind virtuoso, one in 78 that you'll pass an organist, and 138 to one that the next person you see doesn't play the concertina.

It adds up to a big volume of business not only for the sellers of musical instruments, but also for their buyers. Juke boxes, radios, and TV sets have recently blared forth hits composed by high school principals and school teachers, by jazz musicians and by teen-agers, by an engineer and by a gospel singer, by Juilliard-trained artists and by single-string guitar pluckers, by dance band musicians and by housewives, by famed show business composers and by one-time field hands.

A little over 20 years ago, most of these writers would have had no chance of being paid for the performance of their songs, since practically all performing rights in the United States were handled by a single organization representing only about 1,000 composers and 137 music publishers. Most of them were located in New York or Hollywood. Writers whose music was popular outside these two centers received little or no payment.

In 1940, some 600 broadcasters formed a second performing rights organization, known as Broadcast Music, Inc. The organization welcomes composers and publishers as well as music users who desire access to the repertory. Twenty years after its founding, there are some 10,000 composers and 5,000 publishers in B.M.I.

Philly Honors Mario Lanza; Kenton Shines At Red Hill

by Joe Zawacki

At first glance, trying to find something in common between Mario Lanza and Stan Kenton would seem a most monumental task. Their music is essentially worlds apart, yet this distance is greatly lessened by the one aspect of music that is common to all great artists, that of beauty. They both have had stormy careers, filled with varying types of publicity and many career peaks and slumps.

The Voice Lingers

Perhaps it seems strange to speak of Lanza as if he were still alive, but the strange truth of the matter is that a few years after his death, the voice of Mario Lanza is stronger than ever. So strong, that October 7 (the date of his death) is being set aside as Mario Lanza Memorial day in Philadelphia, the home of his birth. This is being done to perpetuate the memory of one of the greatest voices of our time, a voice so great that it brought him fame as an "embryonic Caruso".

All the radio stations in the area are cooperating by playing Lanza's records that week, and two movie houses in South Philly will show his hit movies all during the Week of October 1.

The highlight of the week will occur at 10:30 a.m. October 3, in the Mayor's reception rooom at City Hall when His Honor officially proclaims the day of honor. Many dignitaries will appear, including the Italian consul, Rocky Marciano, and the late singer's mother, Mrs. Mary Cocozza, who will fly in from California for the event.

Productive Neighborhood

Lanza hails from the 2000 block of Snyder Ave. the same area that has spawned such musical luminaries as Buddy Greco, Buddy De Franco, Al Martino, and jazz greats Eddie Lang and Joe Venuti. The tenor's recording of "Be My Love" was the first RCA Red Seal record ever to pass the million mark in record sales. He also made many fans through the medium of movies and would have probably accomplished even more had he not had so much trouble with his weight, the problem that eventually killed him at such an early age.

Toby De Luca of WFIL, who lent his capable assistance to last spring's Jaz Concert, is publicity chairman. He summed it up best when he said, "This is a fitting tribute to a great artist, whose voice should never be permitted to leave us."

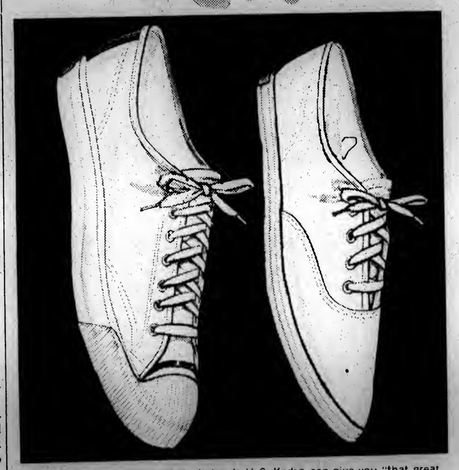
On the other side of the wide world of music, it is a pleasure to report that the musical "Stan the man" has done it again, this time with a 23 piece band that came on like Joshua at the wall in their recent appearance at the Red Hill. The band is so good that it almost defies description. Capitol promotional men Bruce Davidson and Johnny Carbo could hardly restrain their enthusiasm for this sure crowd pleaser.

What makes this band superior to other brass bands is the use of a new instrument devised by Kenton himself called a Mellophonium. Rather than go into technical description, let it just be said that the instrument brings a new color and a deeper shade to the Kenton band than has ever been heard before in any band.

Though still primarily a Jazz band, the music of Kenton extends far beyond the sometime narrow scope of that art form. For example, the "Romantic Approach" album cannot be rated as a jazz album yet makes use of all the devices and experience of the Kenton organization. It is a thing of rare beauty, topped only by hearing the music in person.



As for the leader, it is no small pleasure to watch the gray haired, 47 year old mentor bound around the bandstand like a young sprite. His enthusiasm has infiltrated the entire band. It is a loose group, playing with the cool assurance of a bunch of pros who know they are good and are headed for success. During their six day stand in Jersey, Stan called rehersals almost every day, yet the early AM found the band clowning their way through the last set.

A real, five star band.

House of Class

With the "trash" still controling much of the airwaves, the Red Hill is becoming more and more a refuge for battered ears, especially with the Fall headliners that Joe De Luca has corralled for the house across the river. Coming in during the next two months will be such class acts as Mel Torme, Gene Krupa, Lambert-Hendricks & Ross, Dukes of Dixieland, Les McCann and George Shearing. Add this to the relatively low cost of one of the nicest Jazz Joints in the U.S. and you have an easy way to impress your date.

Other shoes may look like Keds, but only U. S. Keds* can give you "that great feeling." Because Keds have a patented shockproofed arch cushion and cushioned inner sole. And because Keds are built over tested, scientific lasts to fit all feet perfectly, even narrow ones. Keds are right for class, gym, tennis court or dorm. Machine-washable (and they even look good clean). His: Keds "Court King." Hers: Keds "Champion." Get your new U.S. Keds at fine stores everywhere.

Embarking On A New Year With The Same Old Scene

by Adam Wright

We were rudely awakened by an obnoxious alarm clock at six a.m. on the morning of Sept. 17th. We stirred a bit and wondered why the world should require us to rise at such an hour. Slowly the world came into focus and in our mind's eye we foresaw the day ahead.

At seven we were on the road, heading out of the small New England town that had been a summer's refuge. Six hours later we were hunting almost vainly for an empty place to park in the Villanova University parking lot.

We stood on the threshold of another year of scholastic endeavor and collegiate congeniality, and we were vaguely reminded that it was to be our last at Villanova.

Returning Friends

An hour in the hot sun: this is the price of registration. But it is also our insurance that there are some traditions which will never change.

And the hour was a short one thanks to many "Hello's" from many familiar faces, some of which we tried vainly to connect with names.

We crept through the line exchanging comments on the heat, the summer, and the world with the chum-buddies of our college days. And then on to the desks where we picked up matric cards and class cards and address forms.

We visited the checkers and the selective service counselors and the gray haired lady who measured us for caps and gowns and called off our statistics and our degree letters with amazing impersonality, gave the officer at the door a little white card, and stepped out of the Field House.

Walking up the road we stopped to chat with the officer at the Ithan Avenue gate. He told us that faculty could no longer park on campus, per order of the efficient Radnor Township Fire Marshall. This, we thought, is a step towards equality (and probably greater enforcement of parking regulation lanes in the lot.)

We strolled through campus and noted that the windows of the new science building lacked the soap markings we had seen throughout last spring, and it occurred to us that Tolentine Hall looked like a place that ought to be called Mendel.

More Freshmen

We walked back to Dougherty—the pie shop still overcrowded .....parents and girl friends and little brothers waiting..... already a line at the bookstore .....new faces in the second floor student offices, but they were not as prominent in our mind as the absence of those old faces which we had come to expect there... more "hello's"... a roast beef sandwich at the Old Ale House, ...back to the dwelling which we would try to make home for the coming months...

We awoke the next morning with our usual degree of agility and headed towards the Mari-Nay diner.

The scene in front at the east end of the campus was as warming to our hearts as a bottle of Chianti, and as hard to believe as a flying Auk. The in-coming Frosh were waiting in line in front of the field, pants cuffs rolled up, talking quietly with the white hats.

Quiet Orientation

What is this, we asked? No wierd and howling cries, no push-ups or no foolish stunts. Frosh and White caps appeared not as opposing armies, but as different squads of the same team.

We watched with interest and approval as the following days passed. Oh, yes, there were the school songs and cheers for Frosh to learn, and rallys to go to, and spirit to be grown and shown. But who would have it otherwise in the first day of a college career?

Even so, there was, for the first time to our knowledge, maturity and a certain amount of dignity in the relationship between Frosh and White Hat, and we began to feel that the orientation had been planned with a constructive purpose in mind.

Friendliness and Cooperation

Stimulated by a certain curiosity, we decided to talk a few White Hats and Frosh. What, we asked them, do you think of orientation?

Friendliness was dominant in the answers we got. Everyone was friendly. White Hats and Frosh were on a first name basis. "They don't run away from us. They sit and talk," one White Hats told us.

And the Frosh said that they knew the songs and cheers and the location of all the buildings and even other Frosh. They knew how to get used books and where to find a quiet place to study. Some of them had received tips on study habits and felt that they knew a bit about student activities, campus life, and Villanova tradition.

We felt that these latter things might have been stressed a little more but we hear that there are more programs planned for the lowly but all-important Frosh. We have high hopes.

The days roll on and Muff-day cometh. And the line outside the bookstore is quite long. Some traditions never change.

Career Cues

"Cure for job boredom: I made my favorite pastime my career!"

Richard Bertram, President
Bertram Yacht Co., Division of Nautec Corp.

"When you stop to think what percent of our total waking hours is spent bread-winning, you realize how tragic it is for any man to work at an occupation he doesn't enjoy. Besides frittering away life, it reduces chances of success to just about zero. I know . . . because it almost happened to me!

After college, I did what I thought was expected of me and joined a solid, Manhattan-based insurance firm. I soon found office routine wasn't for me. I lived only for lunch hour when I could walk to the Battery and mentally sail with the ships that stood out in the Narrows . . . and for the summer weekends when I could go sailing. Fortunately, the company I worked for is one of the leading insurers of yachts and after two years I was transferred to their Yacht Underwriting Department. Enjoyment and interest in my work improved immediately 100%.

After World War II, I started my own yacht brokerage firm and yacht insurance agency in Miami, combining my marine insurance background with an even closer relationship with boats.

My only problem ever since has been a feeling of guilt that my work was too easy. I love boats and boating people. That affection has paid me rewards way beyond the financial security it has also provided.

The moral's obvious. You have an odds-on chance for success and happiness working at what you enjoy most — what comes naturally! And if it's not just frivolous, your life's work could well be what you now consider just a pastime. It's certainly worth thinking about, anyway!"

Richard Bertram, while still in his early thirties, became one of the country's leading yacht brokers. Today he heads up eight companies covering yacht manufacturing, insurance, repair, storage, finance and brokerage. A resident of Coconut Grove, Florida, Dick became a Camel fan while still in college.

And to make any time pass more enjoyably...

The 1962 yearbook staff announced that a number of copies of the 1961 Belle Air still remain in the yearbook office now located in the basement of Vasey Hall where the Math Department was previously situated. Any student who has not received his copy of the yearbook may obtain it at the Belle Air office. The staff warns that this will be the last call for 1961 yearbooks since the remaining copies will soon be disposed of through exchange programs with other colleges and by sending them to alumni clubs.

Any senior who did not have a portrait taken in May can be photographed Oct. 2, 3, 4, 5, when the Carl Wolf photographers will be on campus in the faculty lounge. Appointments for portraits must be made at least one week in advance in the Belle Air office. The yearbook staff advises that this will be the last opportunity seniors will have to be photographed for the yearbook.

New Battalion Leader

Captain John E. Boyle, U.S.N., has announced that James McMonagle, senior Mechanical Engineer, has been appointed battalion commander of the Villanova Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps Unit.

As battalion commander, Mr. McMonagle will be responsible for organizing and running drill and general command over the midshipmen battalion.

During the past summer McMonagle gained experience on a first class midshipmen cruise to the Mediterreanean, a highlight of which was a semi-private audience with Pope John XXIII.

Appointed with McMonagle were Casmir Skrypscak, executive officer, Harold Blot, operations officer, Clarke Costello, personnel officer, Paul Barone, Supply Officer, and Harry Tucci, adjutant.

Four New Committees

Four new committees to handle activities of the Spirit Committee were decided on at the Sept. 20 meeting. They are the Rally, Float for Basca Weekend, Publicity, and Alumni Committees.

Co-chairmen, Marty Whalen and Roger Bride, announced the purchase of a new wildcat suit and a new wildcat, Count Villan VI. Two new approaches to arouse students will be tried this year. Minutemen on every dormatory floor will talk up rallies, and students will be urged to cheer the team after all games, by the field house.

Parents' Day Extended

Tentative plans for this year's Parents' Weekend, an extension of the traditional Parents' Day, have been announced by the chairman, Len Carneghi.

There will be a variety show Friday night, Oct. 27, to be followed on Saturday by an open house, a concert on the lawn, a luncheon, the Villanova football game with Quantico, and special half-time activity. A mass in the Field House on Sunday morning will close out the weekend's activities.

Editorial Board

Editorial opinions in the VILLANOVAN are now being formulated by a group of staff members known as the editorial board, whose Editor-in-Chief, of the VILLANOVAN, stated that the board was instituted to provide a better balance of opinion for the newspaper.

Dr. Bedard Reveals Deadlines For Post Grad Study Graphs

All seniors and graduate students interested in applying for Fulbright grants for study abroad during the academic year 1962-63 must secure information and forms from the Post-graduate Study Advisor's Office on the ground floor of the Commerce and Finance Building immediately.

Although the deadline for the final submission of credentials by institutions is November 1, 1961, Dr. B. J. Bedard, campus Fulbright advisor, indicated that application forms, together with supporting papers, recommendations, and transcripts must be received by his office by October 16, 1961, if they are to be processed for this year's competitions.

Scholarship Competition

The competition for Rhodes and Marshall scholarships for graduate study is now open, and seniors interested in competing should make an appointment to see Dr. Bedard immediately.

Nominations by faculty members of seniors for the Woodrow Wilson Fellowship competition are now being received by the chairman of the committee of the region to which Villanova belongs. Any senior interested in being considered or who is notified that he has been nominated should consult Dr. Bedard now.

Application forms for the Graduate Record Examination, the Business Administration School Admission Test, and the Law School Admission Test may be secured also in the Post-graduate Study Advisor's Office. Application forms for this year's National Science Foundation Co-operative Fellowship Program are now available and the forms for the National Science Foundation Graduate Fellowship Program will be available at the end of October.

Father King Newly Appointed Director Of Development

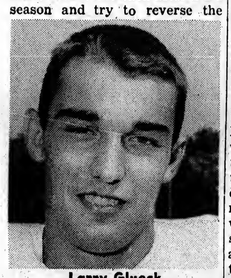
Reverend Edwin E. King, OSA, a former official of the Augustinian Order's Universidad Catolica de Villaneuva in Havana, Cuba, has been appointed Director of the Development Foundation at Villanova.

Father King was among the contingent of Augustinians recalled from Cuba during the wave of anti-clerical reprisals which followed the unsuccessful invasion of Cuba last spring. He has been attached to Villanova since his return.

His appointment as Director of the University's twenty year, twenty-one million dollar Development Program was announced by the Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President.

A native of New York City and a 1950 graduate of Villanova, Father King was assigned to the faculty of Archbishop Carroll High School in 1954 following brief parish work in New York. He became head of the school's Modern Language Department.

He was transferred to the Augustinian University in Cuba in 1959. While there he served as Director of Public Relations and Placement and was a member of the Executive and Administrative Committees of the University.



'Round Midfield

Glueck Stars In Backfield; Undefeated 'Cats Excel

by Joe Zawacki

The Villanova football picture has been a barren one the past few years. The players and coaches have been subjected to ridicule, abuse, derision and effigies. Why? Because they didn't win. It didn't matter one bit that the players on these losing teams went out on the practice field five days a week in preparation for a game, exhausting themselves in the hope that they could improve the team and taste the sweetness of victory.

When they had two disastrous seasons such as the past two, they were all but deserted by the student body and alumni. However athletes are afflicted with a strange disease that sometimes takes possession of their entire bodies and minds. This disease is known as pride. It is the thing that keeps a kid from quitting, then makes him makes him come back after a 2-8 season and try to reverse the two numbers to 8-2. They don't desert themselves.

Tired of Losing

Such is the case with out current team. I know their play as hell, but that doesn't alter the facts. These kids, especially the returning 25 lettermen, are simply tired of losing. Their attitude is reflected in thei rplay in the first two games, both victories. You might call it the "togetherness" approach and a Madison Avenue gent could mash out some fancy words to go with it. They block together, tackle together, and most importantly, they think together.

Coach Alex Bell went to Oxford, Ohio, with hopes of an opening victory and waltzed out with a 33-0 shutout. It surprised him and shocked many more people. It didn't convince many people though. It was considered by some as one of those games where every break goes to the one team.

They waited to see what would happen against VMI's speedy backs. It was these same backs plus the scouting reports that caused this writer to pick the Cats to lose by two tuchdowns, even though I had been impressed with the opening victory.

Winning Attitude

What impressed me even more was the reaction of some of the players when I mentioned this prediction to them. Instead of blasting me for treason, etc. they simply answered, "Wait until Saturday and then just watch." That's a winning attitude, spawned and nurtured by confidence in one's ability, confidence in four coaches who are sincere and dedicated to their task and who are also tired of losing.

So I did wait until Saturday and I did watch, and I only hope that I am this pleased every time I am proven wrong. In an open letter form, my only remark to the team is this: Play with the same desire and attitude through the next seven games. You've worked pretty hard fo rthese first two wins and every victory will make you a bigger target.

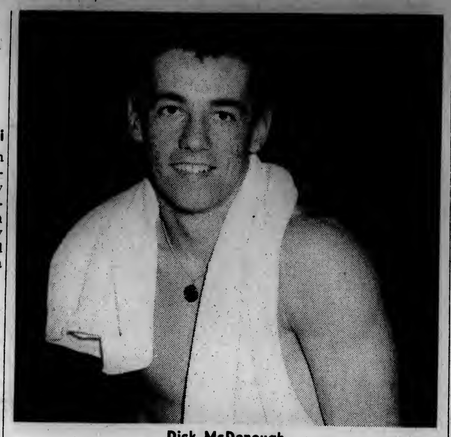
Perhaps the shape of things to come was exhibited with the opening kickoff of the Miami game. Halfback Larry Glueck took it on the 2 yard line and when he was tackled, the ball was safely placed on Miami's 31, a return of 67 yards. Though the game was described as a team victory, which it certainly was, the number 40 was most conspicuous by the mere fact that on almost every play, it was in the middle of it.

On offense, Larry carried the ball five times for 45 yards, one run totaling 30 yards and a touchdown due to his running and some beautiful blocks. He also caught four passes for 49 yards, including a 5 yard touchdown pass from Jack Sherlock.

On defense, suffice it to say that he was all over the place in Bell's Oklahoma defense, whether moving up to make a tackle or batting down an intended pass. It was a good lab course for the Junior Education major, because he hopes to coach when he graduates. Glueck stands 6'2" at 180 and his looks are the kind that bring the lasses to the games. He graduated from Lansdale Catholic where he was voted MVP in baseball, football and basketball in his senior year, and also best all-around athlete.

Good Offer

The youngest of 5 children, Larry chose Villanova over the other dozen offers he had received because "it was close enough to home but far enough away to stand on my own two feet. Besides, they treated me the nicest."



Actually, Glueck is a converted quarterback and didn't play halfback until his freshman year here. "I found the transition very rough," he says. "You have to be more in shape to play halfback because you figure in almost every play." He found blocking the hardest thing to adjust to and even now finds it the toughest part of the position.

Responsible Position

Most of his enjoyment of the defensive aspects of the game stems from his consciousness of the responsibilities of his position. "I know that every mistake I make is a potential six points and that opposing scouts are quick to notice those things," is the way he puts it.

One of the major factors behind Glueck's rapid improvement as a halfback is the fact that he is not easily satisfied with his play. In fact, he is highly critical of himself, realizing that smugness has hampered more than a few players.

Like most of the team, he is more than satisfied with his coaches. He realizes the value of their experience and as he puts it, "I know that if the team sticks together and listens to the coaches, we'll have a good year. I've never heard of it being accomplished any other way." This year's team is a winner. So is Larry Glueck.

Dick McDonough

Mc Donough Adds Lustre To VU Sports In AAU Meets

by Joe McCarthy

Wildcat athletic endeavors brought into focus several outstanding trackmen and the development of a sound football squad during the past summer. Also, among these achievements can be numbered the respectable showing of the Villanova swimming team representative, Sophomore Dick McDonough, at the National AAU Outdoor Swimming Championships, held on August 18, 19, 20, at the Los Angeles Olympic Stadium.

Competing against some of the world's most talented swimmers, McDonough successfully featured in the 100 meter freestyle, the 200 meter freestyle, and his specialty, the 100 meter butterfly.

Sixth Place

In the qualifying heat for the 100 meter freestyle, McDonough outdistanced the world-record holder, Steve Clarke, by finishing in 55.8, the fastest time he had ever recorded in this event.

The final heat resulted in a sixth place position even though he had cut three-tenths of a second off his qualifying time.

The 200 meter freestyle was marked by an upset as McDonough conquered Murray Rose, the 1960 world title holder for the event, and was nipped by Japan's Tsuyoshi Yamanaka, the world record holder with 2:00.4. Yamanaka's late spurt overtook McDonough whose time for the event was 2:04.7 as he finished seventh in the final heat.

Hampered by a poor turn and a mouthful of water in the butterfly, McDonough only managed a fifth place finish. His qualification time, however, placed him among the best in the world, 59.1 seconds, which is comparable to the standing world's record for yardage held by Japan's Legacki at 59.9

Circumstances

Villanova swimming coach, Ed Geisz commented, "We feel that Dick would have captured the butterfly event, if it were not for his failure to take his turn properly and his coordination being upset by the mouthful of water."

McDonough, moreover, explained that he did not expect to even qualify for the 200 meter freestyle because he had not been adequately conditioned for the event.

Previously, McDonough, winner of the 1960 National Catholic Swimming Championship, had garnered eighth place in the final United States Olympic tryouts. Considering the fact that he has three more years at Villanova, Geisz convincingly stated that McDonough is capable of breaking a world's record anytime he enters the water and "should prove to be one of the greatest swimmers of all time due to his ability to excel in several events."

Varied Intramural Program To Start; Board To Moderate

Again this year touch football starts the ball rolling in the Villanova intramural picture. Touch football is one of the most popular intramural sports and one of the roughest. But it is only one in the autumn lineup of intramural sports.

Cross country begins next week and it usually entices many would-be track stars to the starting line. The number of participants at the finish line, however, bears little resemblance to the original number. This procedure has remained remarkably intact through the annals of intramural cross country at Villanova.

Swimming Starts Soon

Another big participant sport last fall was intramural swimming. The swimming bug seemed to bite an unusually large number of Villanovans. Next week we will find out if swimming fever or last fall's heat spell have the Villanovans into the cool blue.

This vast array of sports activity will once again be directed by Ed Geisz and Jack Lumsden, Villanova's able intramural director and swimming coach. However, one figure will be missing and notably missed from the Villanova intramural scene.

Father Dunne Leaves

The Reverend John Dunne has been transferred from Villanova. Father Dunne has been one of the most popular figures in the history of Villanova University. Father Dunne has been a sports fan at Villanova for the last 25 years with time out only to engage in the Second World War. Father was in the Pacific Theatre of Operation and many are the Villanovans who can relate war tales told to them by Father Dunne.

Father Dunne is now the prior and principal of Archbishop Carroll High School in Washington, D.C. All of Villanova will miss him and wish him well in the future.

The Intramural department will now be moderated by a board consisting of Father Joseph Kemme OSA, Father William Farrell OSA, and Father William Cullen OSA. Father Cullen has just recently been assigned to Villanova.

Led by captain Ralph Lewis and ably assisted by vice-captain Terry O'Brien the 'Cats once more will be a strong team to contend with.

Members of the eastern Rugby union, the Wildcats meet very strong opposition from the Ivy league, as well as numerous amateur athletic clubs.

Coach Coughlin looks upon the coming fall season as a testing period for the spring season and emphatically encourages all to turn out for practice. He stresses that no previous experience is necessary and that all, especially freshmen, would be welcomed.

Captain Ralph Lewis ably summed up the future success of the team when he said, "The team has much potential and I hope that we can capitalize on it."

Lohr Looks at Sports

Innocence Abroad

by Ed Lohr

Four fashy Villanovans were seen skipping around Europe this summer on a trip which included a lot of hard work, a few laughs, and a lot of travel. The trip took them to Russia, Germany, England, Poland, Sweden, and Norway between July 8 and August 9.

On the serious side of the trip, Frank Budd, fresh off his world startling 9.2 century, led the Wildcat contingent overseas and promptly streaked through seven 100 meter races unbeaten.

World Relay Record

One of the highlights of his continental tour was running the second leg on the world record breaking American 400 meter relay team which saw another Wildcat, Paul Otie Drayton, "bringing home the bacon" for "Jumbo" Jim Elliot's coached American team against the Big Red of Moscow.

Lead-off man on the team was veteran hurdler Hayes Jones of Western Michigan fame and the third leg was handled by young Charlie Frazier of Arizona.

Budd was part of a contingent of five who left the team after the Poland meet and continued on to International competition in Sweden and Norway. Accompanying the Asbury Park, N.J. senior was the incomparable Ralph Boston the broad jumper from Tennessee A &I; Jim Beatty, the little miler from the Santa Clara Youth Village; Earl Young of Abilene Christian College (Remember them?) in the 400 meters; and Jerry Sibert the California half miler.

Amazing as it may sound, that conglomeration of lighting struck for five firsts in five events in two consecutive meets. Budd ran the best two times in the world for this year in the 100 meters, 10.2 sec. in Sweden while Boston dazzled the Scandanavians with unhuman broad jumps.

Drayton Hurt

Drayton suffered a streak of bad fortune after surprising the track world with a fantastic win in the National A.A.U. 220-yard dash. Paul looked extremely sharp in finishing second behind Budd in the 100 meters at Moscow and anchoring that surprise 400 meter relay team that snapped a world record.

However, fate then hit Drayton as he pulled up lame and could not compete again until the last meet of the tour in Poland where he doggedly placed third in the 200 meters and anchored the winning 400 meter relay team.

In between the standing ovations, record-breaking performances, and medal awarding, the Villanovans put on quite a comedy stint headed up by Jake Nevins, Villanova's incomparable trainer, who for the first time was trainer for the entire American team; 48 men and (wow!) 20 women.

Jake was seen in the heart of Moscow talking to a couple of the taller boys on the American team when a couple of hundred people gathered to observe the newly-arrived visitors decked out in their red, white, and blue.

Jumbo Nails Jake

Not to be outdone, Elliot grabbed Jake's hat, pointed to him as the crowd hit its peak and screamed, "It's Mickey Rooney"; whereupon the mob streamed after the wiry Jake who had to hide in his hotel room for hours behind locked doors.

In Russia, one oddity outside the government is the placement of the keyholes which are to be found at the top of the doors. One morning America's answer to Russia's cosmonaut, Ralph Boston, asked Jake why he looked beat, and the sharpy shot back, "those damn keyholes are so high I could not unlock my door last night and I had to sleep in the lobby all night!"

Jake Nevins

Like to spend a summer in Europe as the trainer of an American team? Listen to this one: Jake did not see one race during the entire tour, because when the men were running the women needed attention and vice versa.

About the food, Jake replied, "really great!, I lived on bread, butter, coffee, pepper, and candy —American of course." And by unanimous consent of the 'Cats, the Germans were the most pleasant and enjoyable hosts. It seemed to the Main Liners that "the Russians, while being cold and indifferent, seemed to be living a life in terrible fear of what is destined for them — what-ever it may be."

World-Wide Caddy

In a closing note, Jake would like to be recorded as the only person who caddied half the way around the world and back without his player using a club. Jake carefully packed and unpacked again Elliot's nine iron while the Wildcat mentor nagged him all the way about its safety, although it never touched on foreign links.

All in all it was a great summer even though Drayton was almost nailed as a spy by thrilling the Moscovites with his polaroid camera, but fortunately all escaped before the travel ban was imposed, and are back for another great year.

Cats Oppose Tough Crusaders In New England Saturday

by Bob Larkin

Coach Alex Bell's Wildcats will face the powerful Crusaders of Holy Cross Saturday afternoon at Worcester, Massachusetts. The Mainliners aiming for their best season since the days of Gene Filipski, will be out to revenge their 20-0 loss to the Purple Knights in 1959.

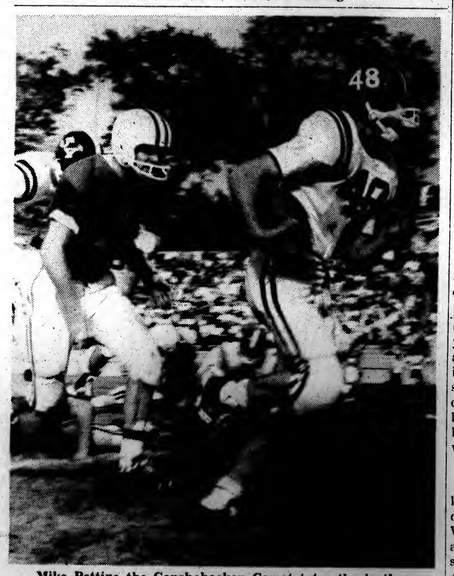
Holy Cross finished strong last season, winning six out of their last seven games, after nearly upsetting powerful Syracuse. Losing only two starters in June, Coach Eddie Anderson has twenty-three lettermen returning and a host of sophomores up from the finest freshmen team seen at Mount St. James in many years. With the return to classes of center Ken Desmaris, the 1960 captain-elect, the Crusaders will have added insurance against their perennial depth problem.

Pat McCarthy, who can run and throw, will direct the Holy Cross attack with halfback speedster Tom Hennessey carrying the mail. Hennessey, always a break-away threat, was second in the nation last year in kickoff returns.

Posts Open

The other backfield posts are still up for grabs with defensive end Al Smith in line for the other halfback slot. Hank Cutting, a powerful 200-pounder, may open at fullback with Gerry Wheeler or Bill Clark ready to jump in. Bob Finh and John Wheaton, a former 220-pound quarterback, will also see service with veterans Bill Joern, Jack Biasotti, and Kevin Malone spelling either the halfbacks or fullbacks on defensive.

Desmaris, one of the best centers in the East before leaving Holy Cross for a year, may be switched to guard this year to make room for Jon Morris, a 220-pound linebacker up from last year's freshmen club. The Knights boast two all New England linemen, tackle Denny Golden and guard John Timperio. Jack Whelan, a letterman at the tackle spot could receive pressure for a starting berth from sophomore Jack Costello who was out most of last season with a broken leg.



The Crusaders are deep at the end where two year veteran Jack Fillin is the only sure starter. Barry Lyne, Bob Hargraves, Don Mailberger, Tom Butler, Pat Vetrano, and Ron Mahen will all see action at the other end spot.

With only two lettermen lost due to graduation. Holy Cross figures to be the toughest hurdle on the Wildcat's schedule this year. The Purple Knights, ranked fifth in the East, will have to prove their press clippings to the Mainliners who have already made some of their own.

Wildcats Roar Again As Defensive Units Sparkle In Victories Over Miami, VMI

by Joe Zawacki

Combining an effective when necessary offense with the stingiest of defenses, the 1961 Villanova Wildcat eleven clawed their way to two impressive victories over Miami (O.) and Virginia Military by scores of 33-0 and 22-0 respectively.

The two victories matched last season's win total and stretched the Main Liner's winning streak to three games. It was the most successful opening in many seasons and gives hope for the first winning season since 1958.

Impressive Win

Last Saturday's win over a team that came North with a heralded offense was the more impressive of the two since it proved that the opening game was no fluke and that the current football team is here to play ball. The Cats run up a 289 to 133 advantage in total yardage with the defense holding the Kaydets offense to a mere 58 yard rushing total. The Villanova figure was surprisingly high to many pressbox observers since the offense was spotty at times. However the blocking, especially on pass protection, was a sheer delight to watch.

A crowd of 12,000 viewed a scoreless first quarter but rose to its feet soon after as Villanova scored twice within two minutes and forty-eight seconds. The Cats rolled 58 yards in 6 plays with Billy Joe capping the drive with a plunge from the one yard line. The shot-put artist also ran the big play of the series, a 30 yard sweep down the sideines, bowling over a few VMI defenders. He would have scored had he not stepped out of bounds. Richman added two with a roll around left end.

Thomas Scorers

A clipping penalty after the kick found the Keydets on their own 16 and on second down De Witt Worrell fumbled on the 18 and Rich Bertozzi recovered. On second down, quarterback Ted Aceto gained 15 on a neat fake on the keeper and two plays later fullback Jim Thomas, elevated to the second unit due to Lou Rettino's illness, plunged over from the one. The New York junior made good use of his chances, running and blocking with authority. Aceto passed to Jack Clifford for the extra two.

Meanwhile, the Southerners were totaling a mere five first downs for the entire game, only two of them coming on the ground. The speedy trio of John Traynham, Stinson Jones, and Pat Morrison found very few holes through the Villanova line and were as equally unsuccessful around the ends. Quarterbacks Bobby Mitchell and Butch Nunnally could only complete 6 of 24 passes and had four intercepted, one of which brought the Cats their final score at 6:16 of the final period.

Battling Backs

Mitchell went back to pass on his own 16 but fleet halfback Bobby Merenda intercepted on the 30 and ran it over for the final 6 points, carrying a few Keydets with him. The picture of Merenda scoring with a few men on him was typical of Villanova's play in both games. Russo, Glueck, Pettine, Thomas, Merenda, Joe, and Rettino, all of them, kept battling for vital yardage, even after it appeared that they had gone as far as possible.

The opener at Oxford started with a bang as Halfback Larry Glueck took the opening kickoff on his own two and raced back 67 yards to the Miami 31 before being stopped. Then before the Redskins even ran a play, they were behind by 8-0 as Rich Richman sneaked over from the one on the 10th play of the series. He also ran over for two points, on a keeper.

The Cats scored in every period, the other touchdowns going to Glueck (2) on a 30 yard run and then on a 5 yard pass from Jack Sherlock; and to Ron Meyers (2) on passes of 8 and 36 yards from Ted Aceto. Two of Meyer's catches bordered on the phenomenal and Aceto completed 6 of 12 for 105 yards. Richman was 4 for 8 and 58 yards.

The Cats' total yardage advantage in this game was 316 to 199, with 173 yards gained in the air. Before the season, Coach Alex Bell stated, "If the boys do what they've been told, we'll surprise a few teams this year." Well, it looks like they're doing it.

Rugby Team Opens Practice; Coughlin Seeks New Talent

With the coming of autumn all thoughts of man turn to the gridiron. Here heroes are glorified and goats are looked upon with scorn. Yes, this is football and every Saturday on fields throughout the country teams will clash, in pursuit of the coveted goal of a Bowl bid.

But, there is another group of dedicated men who every week turn out en masse to wage battle with the enemy. Their practice is just as tedious and the game which they play is just as rough. The name of this game is Rugby which combines the power of football, the movements of basketball, and the precision of a double play. This conglomeration constitutes the basic definition of Rugby which is more like an endurance contest. There are no time outs or substitution permitted. The team, consisting of fifteen men, which takes the field is also the same unit, barring injuries, which departs once the game is over.

Villanova, this year, fields a team in this rugged competitive sport. With the loss of the forward wall which helped post a fine record of 7 wins and 2 losses, a tremendous rebuilding job is in store for coach Coughlin, who is quite optimistic about the coming season.

Dr. Hartman Named Associate Dean Of Arts and Sciences

Dr. Harold F. Hartman, former Chairman of the Department of History and Political Science, has been named to succeed Father Robert J. Welsh, OSA, who was Assistant Dean of Arts and Sciences.

In a similar move, Dr. Henry L. Rofinot, Associate Professor of History, was named Acting Dean of History and Political Science Departments, replacing Hartman.

Dr. Hartman, who came to

Dr. Hartman

Villanova in 1936, has an A.B. from the University of Notre Dame, as well as an M.A. and a Ph.D. from Cornell. Dr. Rofinot, who has chiefly taught American History since his arrival here in 1947, also has three degrees. He received his A.B. from Fordham University, and his M.A. and Ph.D. from Columbia University.

Hartman Comments

Hartman said, "My appointment as Associate Dean of the Arts and Sciences Division affords an opportunity and renders a challenge. The opportunity is to participate more actively in the administrative work of an institutional office with which I have been pleasantly associated for twenty-six years.

"The challenge is to perform my duties and exercise my responsibilities to the best of my ability, and always in the best interests of the Villanova academic community."

Hartman, who has taught various courses in the Political Science division of the University, asserted, "This appointment is a recognition by the administration of the important role played by Catholic laymen in the invaluable mission of higher Catholic education."

After Year Abroad

Five Return From Vienna

Five Villanova students return this semester after completion of studies at the University of Vienna, Vienna, Austria. The program under which their stay was arranged was sponsored by the Institute of European Studies.

The five are: John Piccine, senior English major; Brian Rielly, senior Liberal Arts; Joel Zeigler and William Cercone, Political Science majors; and William Moeller, senior Engineer.

They spent different amounts of time in Europe. John Piccine and William Moeller were both there for two semesters and the summer, while Brian Rielly, Joel Zeigler, and William Cercone were there for the Spring semester and the summer.

During their stay at Vienna, each continued to study in his respective field with the added requirement of German. The classes were all taught in English, and occasionally the professors would teach in German and translate immediately.

While in Europe, the five students lived with different Austrian families selected by the Institute at a cost equivalent to the board here at V. U. These families welcomed the students and encouraged them in their study of "Deutsch." Breakfast was eaten with the family and then the students went off to the university to attend classes. Lunch and dinner were served in the "Spersensad" where the Villanovans ate with students from all over the world. This eating hall was the scene of many interesting discussions and even, in some rare instances, heated arguments.

Besides the strict academic life pursued by these students there was also a great wealth of cultural attainment which was enjoyed. Vienna, being the music center of the "old country" and professing such beloved sons as Strauss, Mozart, and Schubert, and other such greats, provided ample opportunity for operas, concerts and recitals. During the month of June the world famous music festival was held in Vienna bringing all the best orchestras and symphonies

Council Dance Huge Success, Over 700 Couples Turn Out

The primary concern of the Student Council at its meeting last Wednesday was the success of its annual dance. Executive Vice-President for Student Government, Joe Little, said, "Peter Federico, general chairman, and all students concerned with the mechanics of this function did a great job and should be heartily commended." All members of the council concurred.

Over 700 tickets were sold at the price of $3.00 per couple. The gross income was over $2,000, with the actual profit, after the subtraction of costs, totaling $1650. This represents a record high in Villanova history for a Villanova dance.

Tributes Paid

Tribute was paid to Dag Hammarskjold, deceased Secretary-General of the United Nations, when the Student Council, under the chairmanship of Tom Wall, sent a letter of condolence to the General Assembly of the United Nations.

A motion was made to institute a committee which would have the power to regulate and control campus organizations. Father Farrell spoke on this matter and stressed the fact that the Student Council is a governing body and to be valid it must have a certain degree of control, employing methods of censure to be utilized if regulations are not followed. Incorporated within this motion

Annual Interfraternity Ball To Feature Lee Vincent

The annual Interfraternity Ball, organized by Villanova's four fraternities, plays host to the Villanova student body this Friday evening in the Campus Field House.

The dance will feature the thirteen-piece band of Lee Vincent, a popular bandleader at Princeton and other neighboring universities. Also accompanying the band will be a female vocalist in order to supply an extra attraction. As is the custom in the past, the dance will be open to anyone and not restricted to merely fraternity members.

Delta Pi Mu President, Bill Finnegan pointed out that the music would follow the Glen Miller style and that the band had been together for the last ten years.

The proceeds of the first four days will go to the fraternity which sells the tickets. Tickets will also be sold in the Pie Shoppe and at the door where the profits will be split equally. The ticket charge is the customary three dollars.

Criterions

The tentative intermission entertainment is hoped to be the Criterions from Villanova, thus offering the gathering an opportunity for continuous dancing. Responsible for decorations, Delta Pi Epsilon is erecting facsimilies of the facades that belong to the individual fraternity houses in each corner of the Field House.

The general Chairman for the dance is Lou Pace of Lambda Kappa Delta, while each frat president acts as his assistant, Bill Finnegan, Delta Pi Mu, Ron Viscuso, Lambda Kappa Delta, Paul Rosedale, Delta Epsilon, and Dave Raber, Phi Kappa Pi. Each frat cares for one particular phase of the dance, band-DPM, publicity-LKD, decorations-DPE, and tickets-PKP.

Bill Della Valle, who arranged for the band, commented that the evening should be one of "fine entertainment."

5000 High Schoolers Storm Campus For Yearbook Press Meet

"Communism has no greater ally than complacency" Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, an Augustinian priest who was jailed and eventually expelled from Cuba, told an audience of 5000 high school students last week.

Father McCarthy, who spent ten years in Cuba as rector of Villanueva University in Havana, and who was imprisoned following the invasion, spoke to the students during the 14th annual school Publications Conference in the Villanova Field House, Saturday, Sept. 30

"Complacency was communism's greatest ally in Cuba and in the future, it may be its greatest ally in the United States", the priest warned.

Tracing the rise of communism in the Latin American country, Father McCarthy compared it to the rise of Hitler in Germany. "Such regimes need a scapegoat", he said. "For Hitler it was the Jews. Everything wrong in Germany was the fault of the Jews."

"But while Hitler used the Jews, Fidel Castro used the United States to foster discontent among his people. Cuban problems were blamed on aggression against the Cuban people by the United States government and its allies in big business and finance."

Track Shoes, Anyone?

No, this isn't a rush to the opening of another John's Bargain Store. Rather it's the bewildered exodus of several attendants at last week's Belle Air Press Conference being unwittingly caught in the swarm toward the Villanova 'Down with Holy Cross' tree. (Photo by Frank Matunis)

Prof. Gallen New Dean Of Engineering School

John J. Gallen, the new Dean of Engineering, is a familiar face in a new job. Dean Gallen, a Villanova professor since 1940 and more recently Chairman of the Civil Engineering department, became head of the School of Engineering after the death of Doctor J. Stanley Morehouse last July.

Dean Gallen is a graduate of Villanova University, Class of 1927, with a Bachelor of Science in Civil Engineering, and of the

Prof. Gallen

University of Pennsylvania in 1947 with a Master of Science in Civil Enginering. He is a Registered Professional Engineer, a Fellow of the American Society of Engineers, and a member of the Franklin Institute.

Catholic Educator

The main current of Dean Gillen's life seems to be devoted to catholic education. Before his twenty-one years of service to Villanova in his teaching and administrative capacities, he was a teacher in Roman Catholic High School in Philadelphia for four years. After he taught at Roman he was attached to the Archdiocesan Office of Schools for five years.

Outlining his hopes for the future, Dean Gallen declared, "In the spirit of the University's growth, we have plans for the expansion of laboratory facilities in Tolentine Hall for new courses in material science, transportation engineering, structural engineering, and thesis laboratory space. We expect to continue the expansion of graduate offerings in our present Chemical, Civil and Mechanical Engineering programs, and to begin an Electrical Engineering program in the near future."

As a mark of the respect in which he is held by faculty and students alike, Professor Gallen was a recipient of the "Christian R. and Mary F. Lindback Foundation Award" presented for the first time at the 1961 graduation exercises.

V. U. Hosts Evening Colleges

Villanova will serve as host for the fall meeting of Region Four of the American Association of University Evening Colleges on Thursday, October 5.

A day-long conference will open with a registration period from 9:15 to 10:00 a.m. Following registration a panel of speakers will discuss the subject of "Public Relations as Applied to the Evening College".

Moderator of the discussion will be J. Frederick Ekstrom, University Extension Division of Rutgers University in Camden, N. J. The session will be held in the Center Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Speakers will be Mrs. Esther Krewson, Vice-President of Public Relations, First Pennsylvania Banking and Trust Company; Richard MacMeekin, Publicity Department, Philadelphia Electric Co., and Donald Sheehan, Director of Public Relations, University of Pennsylvania.

At 12:00 noon, luncheon and a business meeting will be held. A "Problem Clinic" moderated by Mr. Charles Bruderle, Assistant Director of the Evening Session at Villanova will follow. The clinic runs from 1:30 p.m. to 3:00 p.m. and the conclusion of the activities.

Arrangements for the meeting were made by the Rev. George P. Lawless, OSA, Director of the Villanova Evening Session.

Five Seniors Return to this beautiful city located on the Blue Danube.

On the Scene

Their stay in Europe was at a very opportune time for numerous incidents causing world-wide repercussions were experienced by all. Some of the many events witnessed by this group included the Kennedy-Khruschev meeting on disarmament conducted in Vienna, the Papal Mass on Easter Sunday which was followed by the blessing given by the Pope in six languages, the farmers' revolt in France where all the streets in town were barricaded and outside contact severed, the beginning of the recent Berlin tension, the famous Grand Prix sports car race in Monaco on the French Riviera, and the Hofbraum House in Munich, where a stein of "gut beer" holds a quart; all of which added great practical experience to their classroom lectures.

General Impressions

Some general impressions all received while abroad were: the respected status of the European student who is held in high esteem and treated as a member of a profession; the absence of the American fraternities and in their place "parties" ranging from a Neo-Nazi party to an active Communist party; oral exams requiring spontaneous reply; professors stressing Nazi sympathy; unlimited arts for honor students; the loss of American prestige; favorable reaction to President Kennedy's policies; animosity towards the Americas and finally optimism for world peace.

Always a Foreigner

Other vivid impressions were the general ability of Europeans in their knowledge of English, the experience of speaking to and arguing with professed Communists, meeting and conversing with students from all over the world, the optimism of the East German and East Berlin populace, the unfriendliness of the French, and the omnipresent feeling that you are a foreigner.

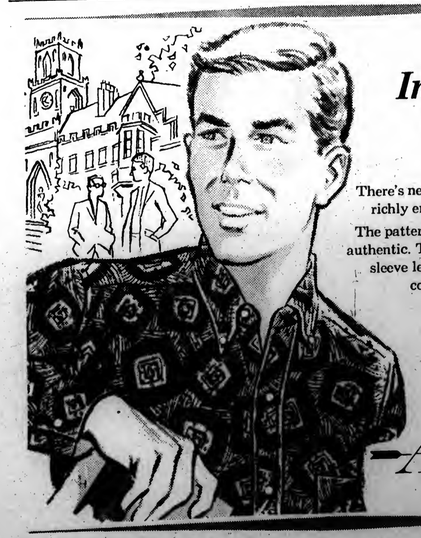
Boston College – Student Trip



The Spirit Committee has arranged a round trip to the Villanova-Boston College football game by train. Any student who desires to attend may do so.

Marty Whelan and Roger Bride began preparations last year for the game, soon after they were appointed Co-chairmen of the Spirit Committee.

The train will leave Villanova station at 4:20 p.m. on Friday, Ootober 20, and will go to Philadelphia, where students will change to another train. This second train will stop in New York for a half-hour, and then will proceed to Boston, arriving at midnight. Rooms will be available in the Essex Hotel, which is located near the railroad station.

The cost for the trip is $19, plus the special student rates in the Essex Hotel. The Spirit Committee stressed the fact that if special preparations had not been made for Villanova students, the cost would have been double. The Committee added that at least 300 tickets must be sold for student rates to apply, although the Villanova Band's sixty members will help to reach the quota. Students can obtain tickets in the Pie Shoppe during each day until Ootober 11.

'A Man To Remember'

Working behind the forward scenes, ensuring no limited degree of success are the director, the coach, the ghostwriter, and men the likes of Pete Federico, Chairman of the Social Affairs Committee of the Student Council.

Federico, a senior majoring in philosophy, was general chairman of this year's annual Student Council Dance. The dance, dubbed

Pete Federico

"An Affair to Remember," certainly lived up to its title. Federico has announced that this has been "the most successful financial affair in the history of Villanova." It topped even last year's dance, which was previously the all-time pecuniary success here at the University.

S. C. Secretary

Secretary of the Student Council, as well as Chairman of Publicity for Belle Masque, the energetic Federico labored tirelessly on behalf of the dance, as he does in all his activities. Taking heed of a not-so-old adage, "Failure is the path of least persistence," he hired the two bands, worked in publicity and tickets, and co-ordinated the various subcommittees.

Federico, a resident of Havertown, Pa., was happy with the success. He said, "The main purpose of the Student Council Dance was to raise the funds required for the Student Council treasury, which are essential to the proper execution of the projects which have been planned for the coming year."

Future Plans

Upon graduation the Student Council Secretary will apply for commission in the U. S. Air Force. His long range plans include teaching philosophy or entering into the public relations field.

The personable graduate of Monsignor Bonner High conducted the Student Council polls last year. Not limiting all his extra-scholastic duties to the Student Council, Federico has taken active part in the Junior and Senior Steering Committees, in adition to a former post as ticket chairman of the Charity Ball.

Deadline Is Oct. 6

October 6 will be the last chance to enter the Homecoming Queen contest. All pictures must be submitted to Room 326 Sullivan Hall before then. The next day the pictures will be taken to the Patricia Stevens Modeling Agency for preliminary judging. Twelve semi-finalists will be chosen and the student body will choose the five finalists the following Monday. A special board of judges will choose the Queen later in the week.

Nick Basca Weekend Set For Oct. 13, 14

The Nick Basca Weekend will be held this year on October 13 and 14. The highlights of the weekend will be the Friday night rally and bonfires, the Nick Basca Dance, dormitory decorations, and the Villanova-Buffalo football game on Saturday. The Homecoming Queen and her court will be chosen the preceding week and will preside over the festivities.

The practice of decorating halls began during the Villanova-Temple series, and William Connolly, a Villanova alumnus, donated the prize each year. After the Second World War, Mr. Connally suggested that the award be named "The Nick Basca Award" in honor of the Villanova athlete killed during the war.

The weekend will open with the Spirit Committee's pep rally and bonfire on Friday night. After the rally the annual Nick Basca Dance will be held from nine to one, with the Charley Gresh Orchestra entertaining. Tickets will cost three dollars. The Queen, having been announced at the bonfire, will be crowned during the dance.

The high point of the weekend will be the Villanova-Buffalo game on Saturday. Villanova's band, the floats, and the Queen will be featured. This year, floats will be submitted by the senior, junior and sophomore classes, the four fraternities, and the Spirit Committee. The Alumni will present a permanent trophy for the floats, with the name of the winner engraved on it. The winner will receive a replica of the trophy.

Mr. Coyne, Fr. Krupa Plan Belle Masque Production

Tryouts for this year's first Belle Masque production, "Detective Story" by Sidney Kingsley, were begun last Thursday. The entire cast will consist of thirty-two players including students from Cabrini College and Rosemont College, as well as our own Nursing School.

Mr. Bernard Coyne, who is starting his first year as director of the Belle Masque Society, will direct the play. He is well known to Villanova students for his direction of such plays as "Othello," "Our Town," and "Twelfth Night." Mr. Coyne stated, "'Detective Story' is one of the few serious plays written in the last few decades that can be considered to be a modern tragedy. It is an extremely theatrical play."

Old Friends

Working in close union with Mr. Coyne is Father Krupa, OSA, newly appointed moderator of the Belle Masque Society. This is not the first time Father Krupa has been moderator of Belle Masque. Between the years of 1945-1956, he was moderator and director of the Belle Masque productions. Even more interesting is the fact that Mr. Coyne, as a student at Villanova, was under Father Krupa's direction for four years.

President of the Belle Masque Society, Michael D'Alonzo, stressed that, although tryouts for "Detective Story" have already begun, Belle Masque is still looking for prospective members: actors, actresses, stage hands, et cetera.

Dr. Nova Addresses IRS On Past West Berlin Election

The Villanova Chapter of the International Relations Society held its first meeting of the year, Thursday evening, September 28.

Paul Downey, club president, expressed his satisfaction in the membership turnout of over eighty people to hear the club's moderator, Doctor Fritz Nova, address the first session.

Dr. Fritz Nova pauses during his lecture on Germany during the IRS meeting last Thursday.

Plans for the year tentatively include the society's two annual trips to Washington and the United Nations. In addition, new emphasis will be placed on the society's participation in the upcoming Regional Convention to be held in Philadelphia.

Adenauer's Decline

Dr. Nova's address to the club was on the evolution of present day German parties and the recent German elections. In speaking of Chancellor Adenauer's setback, Dr. Nova stated that 'Adenauer's decline may be found in terms of the Berlin crisis, because many German's believe his inaction compared to West Berlin's mayor Willy Brandt action, particularly after August 13th, hurt the government and therefore the government party." However, he assured the membership that the West had nothing to fear from any of Germany's major parties.

When asked to comment on a report in the September 29 issue of TIME magazine that said the Free Democratic Party of Germany, the party which Adenouer's Christian Democratic Party, is most likely to form a coalition government with, expressed as one its national goals resistance to "automatic alignment with the West", Dr. Nova stated that all German parties, other than the CDU, have as a desire a goal of less dependence on the West, but this does not necessarily mean a more pro-Eastern consideration in foreign policy as was implied in the report. Rather it will be a policy of a greater amount of self-determination which hopes to achieve eventual reunification of West Germany.

Dr. Nova also discounted as probable hearsay a TIME report that Defense Minister Strauss is willing to support Economics Minister Erhard as a "transitional Chancellor" in the hopes that he would blunder badly and open the way for Strauss himself to become Chancellor.

Fifth Year

When asked about IRS itself, Dr. Nova said, "it was founded to promote interest and knowledge in the field of international relations."

was the proposition that a financial report would be submitted each month by every organization. The motion was put aside pending committee discussion.

Charles Labus brought forth the matter of free parking for parents on Parents' Day. The Council favored this and decided to take prompt action for this year's festivities. Len Carneghi, chairman of the Parents' Weekend Committee, concert, luncheon, game, and a newly instituted innovation of a Mass on Sunday morning in the Field House to terminate the activities.

Joe Tate, giving the report of the orientation period, said, "It was a huge success." There were two major changes in the program this year. The first was the reduction of the period from fourteen to nine school days, and the second was the participation of the Blue Key members in the orientation procedings.

Following a general report of the Homecoming Committee, headed by Jim McMonagle, and an introduction to Robert's Rules of Order by Joe Massey, Council Parliamentarian, the meeting was brought to a close.

Awaken, Villanovans

In the dark ages of 1957 before the advent of Mort Sahl or Metrecal, 1200 Villanovans invaded Boston, Massachusetts for the annual Boston College - Villanova football game.

The Spirit Committee made arrangements with the Pennsylvania Railroad to have special cars and special rates for Villanovans. Over 400 students took advantage of this offer.

The balance of the 1200 hitch-hiked or drove. The intermediate states fattened their coffers on these Villanovans with speeding fines, towing services, and other miscellaneous methods.

The train riders arrived safely with their bankroll intact. They were together and their spirit waxed high.

In 1961 the story is different. Villanovans have suffered through two years of losing football; it has become fashionable to mock football in general and Villanova football in particular. School spirit has been saved for other things. A small core has remained truly loyal to even a losing football team. This small core finds its greatest boosters in the Spirit Committee.

This Committee now needs help. They are looking for 300 loyal Villanova football fans to make a student trip to Boston. Co-Chairman Marty Whelan and Roger Bride worked hard with Bob Emrick to arrange a trip to this year's Boston College game.

They have contracted with the Pennsylvania Railroad for a $12.00 price reduction on roundtrip train fares. They have made tentative reservations with the Essex Hotel, which is within a block of the Boston Train Station. They have seen that a block of tickets will be available to the following.

The train will leave Villanova at 4:30 p.m. Friday and return to campus at 10:00 p. m. Sunday.

Good planning and foresight is the trademark of this year's student trip, all that seems to be lacking is student enthusiasm. At this writing only six Villanovans have purchased tickets; the band and some alumni have taken up the lack of enthusiasm to raise the total of tickets sold to 114.

What is the matter with our student body? Our football team is much better than it was in 1957. This year's game will be the twenty-sixth renewal of the series. Is it true that our student body is too smug?

Maybe 1200 Villanova fans will turn up in Boston for the game, but unless a turn of events comes soon, the train trip will be cancelled. The price will go up from $19.50 to $31.50. The work of the Spirit Committee will go for naught, and the new found spirit that the PHILADELPHIA EVENING BULLETIN has talked of will be lost. —D.G.

Cloaked Freedom

by Joseph McCarthy

Daily the sun dips into the sea casting its last rays upon a palatial castle high above the Pacific on the apex of a coastal mountain.

The site is a five thousand acre tract of land in Southern California, somewhat north of Los Angeles. The castle, valued at several hundred million dollars stands as a monument to the memory and achievements of William Randolph Hearst.

Some claim that Hearst proved to be a pioneer in the field of journalism, just as did Rockefeller or Carnegie in oil and steel. They realize that their means might not have been orthodox but their efforts helped to make the U. S. the world's leader.

Others consider Hearst to be a blot upon the American intelligence and a transgressor of man's innate good taste. This opinion can not be lightly regarded.

Hearst Influence

Let it here suffice to say that whatever Hearst the man might have been, his influence upon the present-day journalism has been tremendous, permanent, and often acrimonious.

Today his massive empire has decidedly dwindled. Once it included 26 daily newspapers, 11 magazines, 200 million dollars of real estate and his priceless San Simeon estate, among myriad other possessions.

Now, from its high-water mark, the list is down to 13 dailies and greatly lessened real estate holdings. His valuable magazine interests have grown under a new management which has tightened the purse-strings, at one time $124 million in the red.

Even his San Simeon ranch has been handed over to the State of California which is far more able to maintain its weekly upkeep of $6,000. The state now charges for visitors to view the fabulous palace where, in the past, Hearst sometimes kept visitors waiting for days before granting audiences.

The waning public appetite for sensationalism in journalism gradually decreased his empire and its influence. This is the same power which was able to whip the American nation into a frenzy and finally a war with Spain.

Once the pawn of the yellow press, the American people have elevated themselves to a much more selective, and desirable, plateau. Newspaper publishers and editors have generally accepted this advance as fact.

It is found that they do not abuse their fundamental right to freedom of the presses, but rather extend to their readers views based on facts and reason. They maintain an overall sincere belief that, what is advocated, is ultimately for some good that is better than the past.

Without the right to express one's opinion, even at Villanova or any other university, a newspaper is merely a tool of some aspiring institution or group seeking more imposing control and power over other human beings. Thus, there would exist a direct violation of ancient rights.

In Russia, its satellites and other areas, Villanovans should be able to see this violation with their own eyes.

It is a duty and responsibility to see that such a situation does not and can never exist in an activity anywhere in America. The American people turned away from Hearst tactics and, so too, any group should seek to establish its privleges.

An infringement upon these rights can not but render poor results in any body, even the most unimportant.

Therefore, consider it essential to the fate of America to be able to possess freedom of the press in all phases, at the national, state, city, and most of all, among the students of the U. S., where action of a positive type seems particularly lax and repressed.

The members of any group regardless of its political, economic, or religious affiliation must be accorded its due rights.

Letters To The Editor

We would like to take this opportunity to offer our thanks to the Blue Key and to the Sophomore "OC's" who extended to us a very warm and gracious welcome upon our arrival at Villanova.

Although we dreaded the sight of a white hat coming our way when we were without our "regs," we paid our fines cheerfully to an ever smiling "OC."

On Politics

"One citizen differs from another, but the salvation of the community is the common business of them all." Aristotle, Politics.

It is ironic that the wise advice of Aristotle, whose system of philosophy so influenced that of St. Thomas Aquinas and thus of Christianity, should be disregarded by the free society and yet followed, even though pervertedly, by the most vicious oligarchy in history.

For it is a fact that Communism offers to the world community its own special type of salvation—the salvation of subjugation.

While the aspiring young communist is being carefully and thoroughly indoctrinated by the Party in its poison of the human soul, mind, and will, the young American is totally engrossed in the morass of trivia that too often obscures the paramount importance to the salvation of the free world of his intelligent exercise of citizenship. As a result he and perhaps his country are ill-informed and ill-prepared to cope with the problems of Communism, nationalism, and the other ills that left unchecked will effect the damnation rather than the salvation of the world community.

The difference, then, between Communist and American is preparation. Since there is no set American "party line," there can be no definitive group of dogmas and doctrines, no single political orthordoxy. But there can and must be an awareness and understanding on our part; particularly as students, of the essential nature of democracy.

Let us examine the opportunities, actual and potential, that exist here at Villanova for political education and action. First of all there are the Student Activities such as the Intercollegiate Conference on Government and the International Relations Society which are engaged in the study of national and international affairs respectively.

More directly of interest, perhaps, to every student than the aforementioned groups is the Student Council whose Academic Affairs Committee has plans for bringing, among others, noted political figures to the Villanova Campus.

To strengthen these actual opportunities is, however, imperative if the students at Villanova are to become able to deal intelligently with the problems of the political world.

That political awareness demands political activity is a truism. It is also true that politics demands conviction. Campus political groups with decided and contrasting opinions on the nature of the American political philosophy, and domestic and foreign policy, can help greatly to stimulate student thought and activity. The use of the Socratic Method in politics, by exposing Liberalism and Conservatism, Democratic and Republican beliefs, nationalism and internationalism to the student's view can lead him not only to the acceptance of a strong opinion in these matters, but instill in him an understanding of his role in the most important of all human affairs.

If Villanova is to have such political organizations it must also have political journals to complement them. The Book Store would assuredly increase its educational assistance to the student body by displaying and selling the leading partisan journals, from National Review to The Reporter. Political Science, like most Sciences, arrives at truth not only by induction, but also by deduction. Time and Newsweek, the Individualist and Nation, though the former are based on fact and the latter on theory, are both essential in order for one to comprehend political problems.

Let us here at Villanova awaken to the fact that political ignorance and inactivity benefits no one but the enemies of freedom and democracy. Let us return to reality and face the most important problems of our time actively, intelligently, and quickly. Let Democrats and Republicans, Liberals and Conservatives, organize; not to divide, but to differ. It is the hallmark of a free society that there is no one "party line".

Rather there are different approaches to a common goal; the safeguarding and promotion of the American ideals of liberty and democracy throughout the world. Let us remember that the "salvation of the world community is the business of us all".

The Padded Cell — by Pete Nolan

What Is A College Girl?

During the time of year when freshmen are dousing white hats in the Mendel mud, and the oldest pedagogue is beginning to be a drag, there comes a pause in the life of every good college man, when he stops to ask himself, "what is a college girl?"

College girls come in a variety of sizes, shapes and personalities. They are found in T-houses, mix - ups (sometimes called "mixers"), Volkswagens, once in a while at Show-Bars, and very seldom at Kelly's.

A college girl is always at football games, but is never interested in the play, she always talks about school, but never about marks, she is snobbish on trains, sassy in New York, and quite an intellectual with a few beers.

A college girl likes cocktail parties, weddings, English movies, St. Patrick's Day, football captains and Jonathan Winters. She has never heard of Roger Maris, Garden State Race Track, Bryn Mawr, Lucky Luciano, Jayne Mansfield (she has, but won't admit it), or a boilermaker.

A college girl is always on the prowl although she would be shocked, if you ever told her, she really doesn't think you're an animal, although she is forever telling you so, and she really likes Villanova, although she intellectuals she has met at Haverford.

A college girl is as fickle as a hot dog at the Palestra, as frigid as Mrs. Magoo; she is a dreamboat in knee-socks, and as tantalizing as a bowl of cream of nowhere soup.

The biggest threat of the year is that there will be enough snowplows to take care of a major snowstorm and thereby eliminate the closing of school on days when "big white" moves in. Rumor has it that only Jimmy Hoffa's approval is needed to pass the bill. Which brings to mind the fact that the Student Council has recently opened its chambers. Has anyone ever heard from the guy who kept proposing that pool tables be erected in the basement of C&F?

It has come to our attention that anyone who fails attendance twice will be traded to the Phillies and some people we know are not back from the Holy Cross trip.

Philly Audiences Unmoved By Smash Hit "Sail Away"

by Al LaMastra

Philadelphia is considered the "City of Brotherly Love" but as far as its theatre audiences are concerned, little love seems to be heaped upon its legitimate presentations. At a Thursday evening performance of Noel Coward's latest "Sail Away," Selma, Ethel, and Uncle Stash noisily stomped into the Forrest Theatre and rudely continued conversing above the sounding tympani about this week's bridge club meeting. Or was it "Sense and Sensibility," now the hottest thing in literature for the nouveau intelligentsia? It seems applause and laughter are out this season for the "blasé" crowd.

Dash It, Dahling!

The presentation, Coward's first American-style musical comedy, produced, cast and conceived in the U.S.A., is a delightfully charming change of pace for the playwright, director, composer. It is a pity that much of the typical New Yorker humor of the play was far above the grasp of the inept viewers.

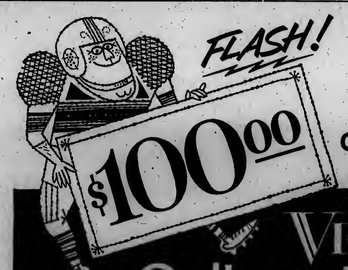
Having rid itself of a co-star, soprano Jean Fenn, and several operetta-type songs while on tryouts in Boston, Philadelphia was presented with a sophisticated, oftentimes boisterous, deftly directed, acted, choreographed and designed piece which should prepare itself for a long run off-Broadway (there are only two legitimate theatre houses on Broadway).

Young People Prominent

Elaine Stritch (star of 1959's "Goldilocks,") overcomes her limited vocal range (none) by turning in a first rate, laugh loaded performance as Mimi Paragon, a cynical cruise-ship hostess, who has learned to treat each individual passenger as a recuperating mental patient. She is given more than ample support by comedienne Alice Pearce and newcomer James Hurst, whose rich baritone voice should place his star in the ascendency.

Frantic Footwork

Ingenue, Patricia Harty, and youthful dancer, Grover Dale, fill the stage with bright notes and fancy steps. Under the control of choreographer, Joe Layton, the couple lead the chorus in some of the most original dance routines seen on stage in many a season.



Comic relief is supplied by a variety of characters ranging from an overbearing mother and her neurotic brat to the typical pseudo-socialites, who find shipboard activities rather boaring and make life difficult for the ship's ambassador-hostess.

Viva Tourista

Revolving around the hysterical contact of Miss Paragon with her fledglings aboard ship, the plot takes time out for the development of romance. But who cares, especially when it's in the finest traditions of established musical comedy. Thickening, it moves into third gear with several comedy skits, replete with song and dance, poking fun at the sundry breeds of the species, Americanis Touristis. As a whole, the skits prove to be only one of the many highlights of the show.

In the Background

Set designer, Oliver Smith, whose "My Fair Lady" and "Sound of Music" are still running, does it again by filling the stage with award winning decor. Tally up these superlatives (mind you, nary a knock) and we have a package which can surely withstand the onslaught of any audience types for years to come. The real credit, of course, belongs to Mr. Coward, who, while exploring and creating in every facet of his show, has left no stone unturned in his search for total entertainment in the theatre.

Stately Academy of Music Seat Of Musical Splendor

by Robert Lombardo

When October arrives with its chilly winds and colored leaves, Philadelphia's Academy of Music comes alive with wonderful musical presentations which stretch from Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms, to Berlioz, Boito, and Berg.

The American Academy of Music on Broad Street at Locust is one of the oldest concert halls in this country, and it was the seat of musical excellence long before the Metropolitan Opera House or Carnegie Hall were built. (Up to 1857 most operatic and concert performances were given in the Old Chestnut Street Theatre which no longer stands.)

Like the Hall of Europe

The Academy of Music is built in the grand style like those concert halls of Milan, Berlin, London, and Vienna. One is struck by the classic beauty of the grand foyer with its polished brass doors, winding marble staircases, and frescos.

The plush red carpets lead to the white and gold splendor of the main auditorium with its huge crystal chandelier suspended high overhead amid a cluster of cherubim. The Academy is reputed to have the best acoustics of any recital hall in the United States, and it is one of the few places in which a soloist can be heard clearly above the orchestra and chorus.

Houses Famous Orchestra

This concert hall is the home of the famous Philadelphia Orchestra. The Orchestra has brought international recognition to Philadelphia as one of the symphony capitals of the world. Many music critics feel that this group of musicians is the finest in the world. The Orchestra zoomed to fame under the direction of Leopold Stokowski, the beloved conductor. His job was put into the capable hands of Eugene Ormandy who has maintained Stokowski's lofty standards.

An Opera House Too!

Many times during the year the Academy of Music changes its function from a concert hall to an opera house. Philadelphia boasts two budding opera companies: the younger Philadelphia Lyric Opera and the older Philadelphia Grand Opera. Both these companies present artistically staged productions of the Italian, French and German repertories.

All operas are sung in the original tongue and range from the most popular works to the seldom performed masterpieces of operatic literature. Often these companies present artists who have not yet attained the stage of New York's Metropolitan. This can provide for many an exciting evening. (Last season Rudolf Bing, General Manager of the Met signed Gianna D'Angelo after hearing her in the Lyric's production of "Rigoletto").

Great Variety

While the Lyric presents the more popular works ("Butterfly," "Boheme," "Aida") the Grand delights its audiences with works rarely performed in this country. Philadelphia music lovers can be truly thankful for the Grand's revivals of Montemezzi's "The Love of Three Kings," Puccini's "La Rondine," and Giordano's opera of the French Revolution, "Andrea Chenier." All three were top level performances with world famous artists who would have satisfied the most critical audiences of La Scala or the Met.

Take Advantage of It!

It is the hope of this writer that more Villanovans will take advantage of the high quality musical presentations and other cultural goings-on in the metropolitan Philadelphia area this season. To keep abreast of these functions at the Academy and at the museums, watch the Cultural Affairs Bulletin board in Dougherty Hall. For further information about concerts and operas come to room 131 Sullivan Hall.

Pistol Squad Sharpens Annual Safety Efforts

The question, "Do you know the proper positions?" marked the opening remarks of Master Sergeant J. J. Rielly at the initial session of the 1961-62 academic year to the members of the Villanova Rifle team.

Under the guidance of Rielly and Captain R. L. Anderton of the Marine Recruiting Office, the squad aims to maintain its successful position in the field of Collegiate Rifle Competition. Many of the returning shooters are the product of last year's endeavors when they gained valuable experience in collegiate meets.

Safety

The necessity of a perfect safety record at all times during the year is stressed emphatically by the team coaches. This has resulted in the establishment of a course in shooting safety that will be conducted in John Barry Hall prior to the opening of the official season.

Classes have been held all this week at six o'clock. Anyone interested in the activity may note that previous experience is quite unnecesary. Members are, however, expected to practice regularly and thereby maintain their proficiency.

The new members will be taught the three fundamental positions, prone, kneeling, and offhand, while learning how to handle and clean a weapon. The keynotes of the year will also be emphasized to all members, spirit and drive. Later in the year, the more technical points will be taught and explained in order to attain a measure of team perfection.

Several of the returning squad have indicated that, if a new member possesses a sincere interest and desire, he will in all probability make the team. Further notices regarding times and places are scheduled to be posted throughout the campus.

Among the meets scheduled for the future include the always competitive ones with the West Point Academy, the Naval Academy, and Rutgers.

Mural Football Gets Underway As Jody Raiders Paste SSS

As all activities prepare strenuously for another year and the business of education swings into full force, so too, the Villanova Intramural Department under direction of Ed Geisz also tosses an ambitious program into the Villanova autumn scene.

After a successful Muff Day, all applications for the annual intramural football honors has closed and contests have been waged betwen some of the fractions. The results as of last Thursday evening in the touch football games begun on Wednesday afternoon are as follows:

Peace Corps 0	N.Y. Giants 0
(Peace Corps the winner on first downs, 2-1.)
Jody Raiders 18	SSS 0
KBC 6	Playboys 0
DPM 12	65ers 2
Avonallins 19	Fireflies 0
Denver Boys 7	Stone Throwers 6
Young Boys 6	Raiders 2
Night Owls 2	Ratheads 2
(Night Owls: the winner on first downs, 2-1.)

In the future, the standing of the teams will be included along with the scores. Today at 3:45 p.m. the Intramural Department also sponsors its annual Swimming and Diving Championships.

A week from today, Wednesday, October 11, the cross country track events will be held at 3:30 p.m. Any prospective candidate is more than welcome to attend, according to Geisz, its organizer.

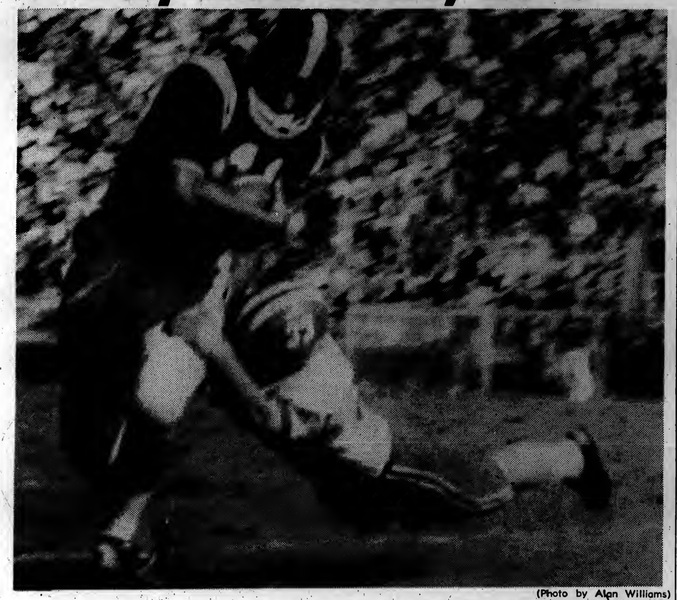
by Ted Aceto, controlled the ball for 15 plays and 85 yards. The score came about on an 8 yard pass from Aceto to Jack Clifford. The conversion attempt again failed, this time for two points. Time was 14:35 of the first quarter.

Meyers Recovers

With Bill Joern now quarterbacking the Crusaders, Holy Cross threatened again late in the second period. However, with a first and goal on the five, halfback Bill Snyder fumbled and Ron Meyers fell on it. But the Cats were not out of trouble yet. Forced to kick on fourth down, Aceto fumbled the pass from center and Holy Cross took over on the 12.



With time running out, the home team moved the ball to the one but the Cats' defensive line held for four straight plays. Hafing used all their time outs for the half, Pat McCarthy tried to plunge without a huddle but was stopped and also injured a rib in what could have been the key play of the game. De Balso, Calligaris, Gotard and Bertozzi were the chief demoralizers.

Aceto Rolls

A fumble by halfback Hank Cuttiny led to the third Wildcat TD at 12:10 of the third period, again on a handoff from Joern who had replaced the injured McCarthy. From the Cross 25, the Cats got down in 6 plays with Aceto scoring from the three on a rollout. The extra point again failed, but Villanova made up two of these in the fourth period when Hank Gotard caught Joern in the end zone for a safety.

Cats Roll To 3rd Straight As Holy Cross Bows, 20-6

"Hmm, seems to be a little extra weight here", muses Nick Russo. And there was a little extra weight; Crusader No. 33 for the Wildcat and 14 extra points on their opponent's scoreboard for Holy Cross.

The Villanova Wildcats football express gathered momentum with a come-from-behind victory over a stunned Holy Cross Crusader team that had the misfortune to schedule the Cats as their opening opponents.

In fact, the Crusaders scored with such ease on their second set of downs that a high scoring contest seemed likely. Holy Cross speedster Tom Hennessey (who was later to twice stop Larry Glueck from scoring) intercepted a Richie Richman pass on the Crusader 43 and returned it 27 yards to Villanova's 30. From there it took but seven plays for the home forces to earn the distinction of being the first team to score against the Wildcats in three games.

As it was, the Cross score was a tainted one. On a fourth and goal situation on the 2 yard line, quarterback Pat McCarthy rolled out and was pursued by three Villanova linemen. Apparently cornered, the secondary moved up to protect against a run as McCarthy eluded his pursuers and threw to end Jack Fellin in the end zone. Illegal procedure was noted by several observers on the play, but the officials did not agree and the score read 6-0, Holy Cross at 4:48 of the first period.

However, it took but three plays for the Wildcats to prove their mettle. After Ron Meyers returned Bill Joern's kick to the 33, Larry Glueck sliced off tackle for three yards, then followed with a brilliant 54 yard run, first going left then cutting back across the middle, picking up blockers on the way. He was finally stopped on the 11, but a clipping penalty placed the ball back to the 26. Undaunted, Richman went for payirt on first down, hitting Nick Russo on the five where he ran the remaining distance and scored standing up.

The try for the extra point failed.

Mass. Quarterback Poses Threat To V.U. Secondary

by Bob Larkin

Villanova returns to Massachusetts for the second Saturday in a row to take on the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

The Red Men, ranked second in the Yankee conference, have been improving their brand of ball during the past few seasons and have hopes of dethroning the perennial conference champs, University of Connecticut, this year. During the past few years U. Mass. has had three head coaches and has increased its football recruiting. Chuck Studley, last year's coach now at Cincinnati, guided the team to a 7-2 mark losing only to Boston U. and U. Conn. for their best record in 28 years.

New Coach

Dick Fusia, former Pitt star and end coach, took over the head coaching job at U. Mass., and hopes to better last year's record. He is undecided who will start against V. U. due to injuries in the opener and illness from a team virus. The Red Men have a good deep line, but have a depth problem in the backfield. John McCormick, reputed as the best quarterback in the conference, could prove to be the key to the New Englanders' offense. He has a strong arm and will provide trouble for the Villanova secondary if he is given the chance to use it.

Sam Luzzier, voted outstanding player on the U. Mass. team last year, and sophomore speedster Tim Lewis are tabbed as the starting halfbacks. Lettermen Mike Salem and Ken Kezer, a proven receiver for McCormick's aerials, will see relief action. Graduation wiped out the fullbacks; however, Fusia is counting on sophomore Ken Palm to do the job.

Outweighed in the Line

U. Mass. has depth and speed in the line but will find themselves outweighed with their their forward wall averaging less than 200 pounds. Dave Harrison and Paul Majewski are slated to start at ends with Bob Foote a converted guard, and Tom Drophy, heading the tackles. Lettermen Dick Eger and Bill Zacker will start at guard, although sophomore stand-out, Charlie Raymond could get the call.

Villanova has a definite weight advantage and will benefit from the Red Men's injuries and sickness which have weakened the U. Mass. squad. If the Cats can contain the running of Luzzier and the throwing arm of McCormick, coach Dick Fusia's pessimism will be justified. In a recent interview he followed the lead of the underdog coach claiming, "Villanova has nothing to worry about."

Villanova SPORTS

'Round Midfield

Getting The Job Done

by Joe Zawacki

While Benny "Kid" Paret was regaining the Welterweight title and national headlines with his victory over Emile Griffith last Saturday, another Benny was going home from a football game, sans headlines, but with the satisfaction and knowledge of a job well done. The second Benny is an alias for Villanova defense coach George Karras, the man Alex Bell calls "most responsible for the success of our defense."

Whole Set Up

So highly does the Wildcat mentor think of Karras that he has entrusted the whole defensive set up to George. The results of course have been most gratifying, as most Wildcat followers know by now. In three games against the Main Liners, the opposition has tallied a grand total of six points. After each of the first two games, the skeptics said, "Wait till next week. and each week the only thing falling faster than the other teams have been the doubters.

How does the same personnel from a 2-8 season come back the next year and suddenly become walls of granite on defense. Says Karras, "These kids took tremendous beatings from Army and Navy last year and after that, any other team suffers from comparison. Besides, these kids are intelligent and willing to listen and learn. They make my job easier by working hard."

Bell throws another aspect on the situation however, "George commands more respect from his men than any other fellows I've ever seen," he says.

Two Views

On observation, there seems to be merit in both views. The team is obviously in good shape. Boys like Impeduglia and Ross are natural defensive players and Bertozzi is a straight A in chemistry. These three are the signal callers on defense, the boys Karras expects to lead the units into the proper positions in each down and yardage situation.

"What I've tried to impress on them," says Benny, "is the fact that their efforts represent 1/11th of the entire defensive picture. Each of them must carry out his respective duties or the whole unit suffers. It is to their credit that they have taken this to heart."

Corrections Necessary

A questioner wanted to know the dangers of complacency after three straight successes. With a laugh, Benny answered, "After the Miami game, the kids came into the blue room to look at the game films as cocky as can be. However, even in victory there are many mistakes and it is our job to make them cognizant of these things and to correct them. After the Miami films and my constructive criticisms, I'll bet they could have killed me."

Karras' job begins with scouting reports and films of the next opponent. From these he must make up a "ready list," a system or pattern that a team and/or quarterback fall into over a period of time, many times unknowingly. This "ready list" is taken to the field where dummy scrimmages acquaint the defense with the different situations that they may face. What makes the Wildcat defense so effective is its adaptability which counteract the unexpected.

Karras has so sold his boys on the defense that he feels they would rebel if he tried to change it. Of course, with a 3-0 slate, this isn't likely to happen at the moment. But Benny will nevertheless remind the boys of their mistakes in the Holy Cross game. A good coach always does.

Nick Basca Weekend Begins Friday

Bell Seeks Sixth Straight Against Buffalo Saturday

by Dan Grove

The undefeated Villanova Wildcats in quest of their fifth victory of the season, will highlight the Nick Basca Weekend, which will begin this Friday with a mass rally and bonfire on Mendel Field.

The Mainliners under head coach Alex Bell will be out to fatten their already corpulent victory streak against the Buffalo Bulls, of upstate New York. Villanova extended its winning streak to five straight (over two years) with a 33-13 rout over the University of Massachusetts last Saturday in Amherst, Massachusetts.

The Bulls evened their record at 2-2 Saturday, when they lost to Holy Cross 22-3. Two weekends ago Villanova upset this same Holy Cross club 20-6.

Two Platoons

Coach Bell's surprising eleven features two platoons of almost equal calibre. The "Go Team," which was designated the second unit at the beginning of the season, has proven itself as effective as the would-be first string. The quarterbacks of these two elevens, Ted Aceto of the "Go Team," and Richie Richman of the "White Team," give Villanova exceptional depth in offensive leadership. This depth, plus the vicious and spirited defense shown so far this season makes the Mainliners a definite favorite in Saturday's conflict.

This weekend marks only the second time in four years that the Wildcats have come into the Basca Memorial with a winning record. The last time was in the 1958 season.

Dance Proceeds Boost Treasury To Nearly $3,000

The report of the Student Council treasury was made by Robert Benson, new Student Council Treasurer and former C&F day-hop representative.

Benson expressed satisfaction on the recent Student Council Dance which grossed $2095 and netted $1744 after expenses. The dance proceeds of $1744 has increased the council's bank balance to $2967.25, which will be spent to augment their present programs.

Prospects for an enlarged Student Council program this year with the additional funds will include an expanded forum program with subjects ranging from politics to science. The Council will also continue to sponsor, under the auspices of the cultural affairs committee, their art and literature forums, which last year brought John Crowe Ransome to campus. It also plans to open these forums to other colleges in an exchange program on the basis of either free admission or nominal entrance charge.

More Voting Machines

Annual expenses this year will include the Villanova Music Society, the Council Communion Breakfast, and regional dues for NFCCS. It has been disclosed that other monies will be made available to rent additional voting machines for council elections to be held in enlarged voting facilities.

Money providing, the council is considering the purchase of a cinemascope lens for viewing cinemascope pictures with an emphasis on day-hop attendance for support of the program.

Carnaghi Announces Plans For New Parents' Weekend

by Frank Quattrone

The fourth annual Parents' Weekend will take place this year from Friday, October 27, through Sunday, October 29. A Student Council function, the affair is an extension of the traditional Parents' Day.

General chairman, Len Carnaghi, announced that the weekend will officially open with a variety show in Vasey Hall Auditorium on Friday night. The program, which begins at 8:30 p.m., will highlight the Criterions, Guy Guarch, Kevin Shea, and the Villanovans. Featured also will be skits performed by members of the Belle Masque Society and Turf 'n' Tinsel, in addition to other special acts, as yet unannounced.

Letters containing maps of the campus, programs, and return-addressed post cards were sent out this week to parents of Villanova students.

Open House

An eventful Saturday begins with registration of parents at 9:30 a.m. by the guard house, at the east end of the campus. Between ten and eleven, the glee club or the band, will entertain the parents with a concert on the green.

Following a luncheon at noon in Dougherty Hall, they will be treated to exciting football, as the Villanova Wildcats tackle the Quantico Marines at the Villanova Stadium. The Villanovans will entertain a half hour before kickoff. Game time is 1:30 p.m. The half-time activities will feature the Villanova band, the naval drill team, and the Quantico marching band.

Last year's Parents' Day drew a crowd of 2,000. The turnout this year is expected to be much larger. Tickets are only $3.00 per person.

The weekend will officially be brought to a close with a Mass at 11:45 a.m. at Villanova Chapel.

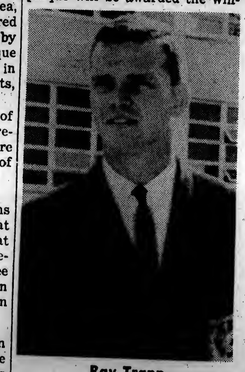
Queen To Be Named At Dance After Rally And Display Judging

by Joe McCarthy

Thursday afternoon, Friday evening, and the day-long activities of Saturday are, in short, the focal points of the Nick Basca Weekend.



Under the general chairmanship of Ray Trapp, acting in his capacity as President of the Senior Class, the weekend will assume the same activities which had formerly been associated with Homecoming.

Delta Pi Mu, as host fraternity, will be responsible for the efficient operation of the traditional Joyce Kiley Mile to be held this Thursday afternoon.

Bonfire and Rally

A bonfire and football rally on Mendel Field will begin the Friday evening activities at 8:15. At the same time, the queen will be announced and from then, will reign over all the events of the weekend.

A judging of the individual dormitories to determine the best decorated hall will follow the selection of the queen. A plaque will be awarded the winner during the dance by the Intramural Department.

Ray Trapp

Scheduled to pass judgement on the queen, the dormitories, and the float contest are Mr. Frank Solis, Alumni President; Captain John Boyle, NROTC Commandant; Mr. Ed Geisz, Intramural Director; Mr. Bob Vetrone, BULLETIN sportswriter; and Mr. Gene Ruane, Villanova University Director of Public Information.

The Charley Gresh 12 piece orchestra then will provide the music for the Nick Basca dance between 9 and 1. Cecile Mugnier,

Sorority Joins I-F Ball; Nurses Plan Intramurals

Pi Theta Chi, the Villanova nurses' sorority, participated in the annual Interfraternity Ball last Friday, for the first time in the history of the event. Judy Jones, president of the sorority, stated that the women received approval both from the administration and the four fraternities on campus to take part in the ball. The sorority, working with the Delta Pi Epsilon fraternity, provided decorations for the dance.

"Frosh Night" was held recently, during the first sorority meeting of the year. Plans were made for the initiation of women's intramurals, programming for the second annual splash party, attendance at three cultural events, and registration for the student trip to Boston College.

Intramural sports will be organized with the assistance of Mr. Ed Geisz, Director of Intramural Athletics.

Tentative plans for intramurals include the splash party, a bowling league at the Rosemont alleys, a tennis tournament in the spring (including mixed doubles), volleyball and basketball teams, a golf tournament, and swimming races.

Medals for Winners

The splash party scheduled for October 26 will be held between 6:30 and 9 p.m. in the Field House pool. The party, planned around a Hawaiian theme, will feature relay races, swimming competition, and a beauty pageant. Shows will be presented by each class.

The cultural calendar for this year consists of three programs. The first, at the Philadelphia Forum on November 29, features Mantovani and his Orchestra. Bizet's Opera, "Carmen," will be presented by the Philadelphia Grand Opera on February 9. Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra will perform Bach's "Mass in B Minor," with Eleanor Steber as soprano on April 23. The Temple University Choir will take part in the program. Any women students who wish to attend should contact Miss M. Dorothy Boyle, Dean of Women, in her office.

Order Of The Coif Charter Granted To V.U. Law School

Villanova University has been notified that the Order of the Coif will establish a chapter of the society at its School of Law. The Villanova University School of Law is the first Catholic law school to be granted a charter.

The Order of the Coif is the great national honorary legal society having chapters in most of the leading law schools of the country. Its purpose is the encouragement of scholarship and the advancement of ethical standards in the legal profession. Candidates for the order are limited to those within the top ten percent of the graduating class. The name of the society is taken from the Order of Serjeants of the Coif, now extinct, which during the Middle Ages represented a select group of lawyers eminent for learning and professional attainment at the English bar.

Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein stated that installation of the chapter at Villanova, together with the election of charter members, will take place at Garey Hall, Villanova, on November 17, with Professor John P. Dawson of the Harvard Law School as installing officer.

Beta Gamma Begins

Beta Gamma, the debating society of Villanova University, held its first meeting of the year, Thursday, October 5, in Vasey Hall. Terry Stratman, president of the club, welcomed returning members and all new members. The roster of officers and varsity members was announced.

The policy to be effected this year is to concentrate on the development of the forsenic skills of novice members during the Fall Semester.

EE's Draw Top Figure; Placement Adds Service

The Villanova University Placement Department has announced that 142 June graduates accepted jobs obtained though this department's placement service.

There was an increase of 26.7% in interviews over the previous scholastic year, as 2,535 were arranged. The number of seniors enrolling with the Placement Department last year increased 18% over the previous year to 526. The number of firms and government divisions visiting the campus last year increased 10% to 173 and made 435 job offers.

Wage Ranges

Graduates in electrical engineering drew the highest starting salaries, their median being $545 per month. Mechanical and chemical engineers began at a median of $535 per month, and civil engineers, $525 monthly.

Math and pysics majors started earning $525 and $522 per month respectively, and industrial administration graduates started at $460. Marketing and accounting majors were paid $450 monthly, and general arts and finance majors drew median salaries of $430 and $400 per month, respectively.

The Placement Department also has an alumni placement service. One hundred sixty-four alumni who wish to change jobs or who are seeking employment are currently registered. This represents an increase of 29% over last year.

Study Methods To Be Subject Of Lecture Tomorrow Evening

"Effective Study Methods" is the subject of a lecture to be delivered by Mr. George Harris, Chairman of the Education Department. The lecture will be held on Thursday, October 12, at 7:30 p.m. in room 110 C&F.

The lecture has been designed primarily for the freshman student to acquaint him with methods of study in college. However, the upperclass student can also profit from the tips, according to Charles Labus, Student Council Vice-President for Educational Affairs.

Tom O'Connor chaired the Academic Affairs Committee which was instrumental in scheduling the lecture.

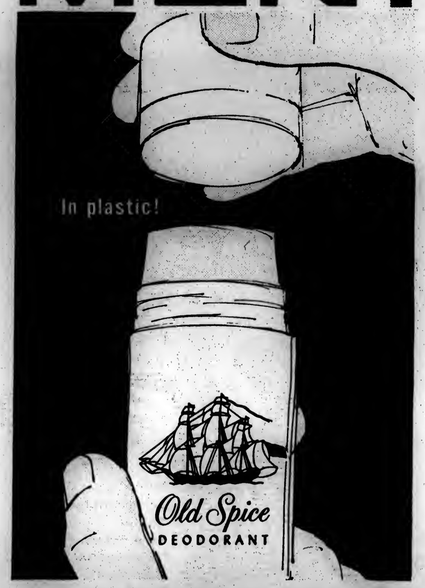
Whelan Spirit Head

The Wildcats are hot. Spirit is at an unprecedented high. The Spirit Committee of the Student Council is working at fever pitch. And keeping this fire fanned in hopes of maintaining it throughout the athletic year is Marty Whalen, Co - chairman of the Spirit Committee.

Whalen, who was named "OC of 1960-61," is planning the October 20-21 spirit trip to Boston for the Villanova game with Boston College. Spirit for this traditional trip is exceptionally high. Whalen took note of the victorious Holy Cross away game: "They outnumbered us ten to one; yet we still out-hollered them." The student body has really been backing the team.



Pledge-master of Delta Pi Epsilon Fraternity and its representative in Student Council, the outspoken native of Philadelphia makes a bold prediction: "The Boston game is our key to the East. When and if we take this one, Villanova will be the team to beat in the eastern part of the country."

A junior majoring in finance, Whalen has also been active in the Student Senate, the Finance Society, and competes in intramural football. Upon graduation, he intends either to further his studies in law school or enter into the sales field.

For the weekend trip to Boston, Whalen has arranged a $19.00 round-trip train fare, and accommodations for those going at a reduced rate at Boston's famous Essex Hotel. Whalen and his spirited entourage leave Villanova on the twentieth to shout on the team in enemy territory. He urges the true Villanova spirit for all its students, "Back the team, win or lose!"

Opinion Journal Created As CONCEPT Readies For Press

"Last year a few students recognized the need for an intellectual magazine on Villanova's campus; a magazine that would be a medium for the expression of the student ideas on a scholarly level but yet of interest to the student body. Since the main object of the University is to raise the intellectual level of its students, such a magazine could serve a definite purpose," stated Gene d'Aquili editor of the new magazine, "Concept."

"Concept" is an "opinion journal" consisting of essays of a scholarly nature. The first issue is due to appear before Thanksgiving. Its subject matter will range from lighter humor to philosophic musings, with a varied amount of abstract art.

Need For More Material

Rev. John Quinn, OSA, moderator, and Gene d'Aquili; editor-in-chief, hope that the response for articles will be encouraging, as this is a student venture. Students are urged to write their ideas in essay form and submit them to the "Concept" desk in the old math office in the basement of Vasey Hall. Any student wishing material considered for the first issue should submit it within the next two weeks. Any material received after that will be considered for the next issue.

Dan Martin, copy editor, expressed his need for more workers on his staff. He would like anyone interested to contact him at the office. There are openings on all other staffs as well.

Grad Theatre Will Present "The Brothers Karamazov"

The Villanova University Graduate Theater Department has announced that it will present the play "The Brothers Karamazov," under the direction of Mr. Richard Duprey in Vasey Hall auditorium from November 8 through 12.

Starring in the role of Ivan will be Clement F. Birch, Jr., one of the assistant directors of the Villanova Foundation. He graduated from Villanova in 1958, and while here, played in "St. Joan" and "The Taming of the Shrew." He aso played leads at Rosemont and was affiliated with the summer stock of Neptune Music Circus.

Thomas F. Nevins, a 1961 graduate of Quincy College, Illinois, will play Smerdiakov, and Rita Russell, a 1952 graduate of Creighton University in Omaha, will take the part of Groushenka. Miss Russell has appeared on TV with the U. S. Steel Hour and other network TV shows.

Kathleen Crane Returns

Kathleen Crane is a 1961 graduate of Rosemont's theater society, Jest and Jester, in which she played several leads. Here at Villanova she played the title role in "Country Girl" and Abigail in "The Crucible".

Commander Claude Frazier, USN, who received his M.A. in theater from Villanova, will play Lieutenant Mossialovitch, a decadent Polish officer. William J. Brown, a 1957 Villanova graduate, who was active in Little Theater groups in the Philadelphia area, will play the role of Feodor. Mr. Brown studied graduate drama at Tufts University in Medford, Massachusetts.

Considered one of the world's greatest novels, "The Brothers Karamazov" was adapted from Russian by Jacques Copeau, and the Villanova presentation will be the same as that done by the Theater Guild on Broadway in 1927, starring Edward G. Robinson and Morris Carnovsky.

Mr. Amelotti Named Head Of University Computer Center

The Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, has announced the appointment of Professor Emil Amelotti as Director of the Villanova University Computer Center, located in the East Wing, ground floor of Mendel Hall.

A research and development activity had been organized at Villanova in 1950, but was limited in scope because of a lack of facilities. With the completion of Mendel Hall, however, a marked increase in research is contemplated.

The Computer Center, with equipment consisting of an IBM 1620 card system and the necessary peripheral equipment was established to strengthen both research and teaching.

The transistorized machine will be installed in December. Although primarily a scientific machine, it can be adapted for data processing.

Policy Committee

Use of computer facilities is at the discretion of the director, based on a policy formulated by the President and a policy committee composed of faculty members and deans.

The center will be operated on an "open shop" basis, with users doing their own work, aided by the computer staff, until they can operate independently. No-credit courses are planned for faculty members and graduate students.

The Mathematics Department offers graduate courses in subjects in which the computer plays an important role, and the Electrical Engineering Department offers courses related to computer design.

1960 Homecoming Queen, will crown and cape her successor, who will be allowed to keep the tiara for a momento of the weekend.

For its theme the senior class committee decided upon "Gunfight at V. U. Coral." The decorations will accordingly center themselves around the theme with a buffalo and a wildcat simulating a fierce battle for a centerpiece.

Tickets for the dance are being sold in the Pie Shoppe, the C&F cafeteria, and at the door for $3.00 a couple.

On Saturday the Villanova Rugby Club will host the Baltimore Club at 11:00 a.m. on the Rugby Field in front of the stadium.

Floats

The floats will afterwards be judged in front of the Field House where the best one will be awarded a trophy by the Alumni Association. All three upperclasses, all four fraternities, the Spirit Committee, Belle Masque, and Turf and Tinsel will each offer entries.

In a pre-game ceremony, the NROTC drill team is scheduled to run through its trick maneuvers before Buffalo and the Wildcats take the field. The seniors have been granted first choice on tickets to the football game.

The half-time intermission will feature the Villanova Band and a procession of the queen and her court in convertibles followed by each float entry about the surrounding track.

According to Trapp, the top 12 girls for the title of Queen will be chosen by the Patricia Stevens Modeling Agency. Then the 12 will be voted on in the Pie Shoppe by the Student body on Monday and Tuesday. From the remaining five, the ultimate queen will be selected by the five appointed judges.

Recreation Poll Approval Sought; Proposed By Labus

Charles F. Labus, Student Council Senator and Vice President in charge of Educational Affairs, will propose at tonight's Student Council meeting that the Council take a poll concerning the student body's opinion of the present recreational facilities at Villanova.

Already Approved

Labus' legislation has already been approved by the Student Senate and now only needs approval of the Congress. If the bill is passed a comprehensive poll will be taken on the question immediately.

On Racism

A casual joke about the negro or that vague feeling of superiority when confronted by other races illustrates a habit of mind unfortunately prevalent on many college campuses. It is often an unconscious reaction. This is precisely because such attitudes toward minority groups, and toward the negro in particular, are ingrained in all the strata of society. They exist as much among Catholic college students as among other groups.

The problem of racism has been with us so long, and our psychological reaction patterns have been so firmly established, that to root out the problem requires more than ordinary perseverence. It is not enough to publicly proclaim doctrines of racial equality. As the makers of the future it is absolutely essential for us to eliminate the basic unconscious attitudes by which we engender a subtle atmosphere of prejudice even on our own campus. This can only be done if sincere students will constantly keep two points before them.

First of all it is absolutely illogical to have any feeling of superiority over a group or a person solely because of racial origin. This factor has no essential relation whatsoever to such elements as intellectual or social position. Certainly many people in many races differ with respect to these variables. But these considerations are responsible only for a relative or accidental superiority or inferiority. Evidence shows that such factors are not in any way distributed according to strictly racial lines. How much more universal then are the true criteria of human dignity which arise from the rational character of a human individual? Only a shallow thinker would contend that Einstein was intrinsically better than Joe Schultz. How much more ridiculous is it for a supposedly responsible student to state or what is more insidious to feel, that Jim is better than Joe simply because Jim is white. This is the intellectual equivalent of stating that, because oranges do not have a favorable climate for growth in our latitudes, apples are intrinsically better than oranges. This is nonsense, pure and simple. To anyone with orderly habits of mind racial prejudice is abominable. The irrational association of a factor of pigmentation with certain social and intellectual levels found among all groups, as well as the constant confusion of cause and effect, is enough to make any clear-thinking man cringe.

The second reason why racism in any form can not be tolerated among Catholic students is the positive obligation of love which is enjoined upon every Christian. If Catholic education is to be justified it must produce fruits which differentiate it from secular education. Toleration is an anemic virtue, a halfway house which is certainly not the standard of Christianity. A Christian is positively obliged not to tolerate, but to love every human being as himself. It is a serious mandate not easily rationalized away.

On Retreats

The new schedule of four separate class retreats innovated this year represents a step forward in the religious program of this Catholic University.

The class separation affords the student an opportunity to receive the spiritual benefit of the retreat in an atmosphere made more beneficial by the smaller numbers present. Perhaps, therefore, the "bleacher sleeper" may find his days numbered because of the reduced number of students at each session.

Scheduling retreats away from vacation periods will definitely benefit the student in both convenience and attitude. He need no longer remain after the vacation periods begin. Without the thought of upcoming amusements to distract him, the student will gain more spiritual value from the exercises.

It is to be hoped that this year's change in retreat policy may cause the student to appreciate the value of retreats to a greater degree so that in the future, perhaps, the university may be able to divorce machinery from spirituality completely in eliminating the blue punched cards.

An Echo From the Past

Counterpoint

Global Tug-Of-War

by Mark F. Quinn, Jr.

In the crowded and hungry masses of Asia, in the new nations of the world, in the wide expanses of the Soviet Union, and in the traditional bastions of freedom and liberty, there has arisen a common question that demands an answer. How can the risk of a full-scale nuclear war with the Soviet Union and the resultant possibility of the destruction of mankind be lessened?

We turn to the two nations which are engaged in the global tug-of-war for the victory of their philosophy of life. The forces are diametrically opposed. One considers the intrinsic value of the human being. The other subjugates the human being to the desired end. Great prudence is employed by both sides in the choice of the strategy used to achieve this victory.

Chairman Khruschev succinctly states the strategy of the Soviet Union as "We will bury you." He runs a complicated gamut from shoe-banging to maintaining one of the largest and most powerful armed forces in the world in attempting to achieve his end. We of the United States have no problem in rejecting an attitude such as this as contrary to freedom and the liberty of the individual.

Divergence of Opinion

But we in the United States, in formulating our strategy, are not able to make decisions with such facility. We are posed with the usual healthy divergence of opinion. We must arrive at our decision, however, by separating the wheat from the chaff, the precious metal from the slag, the true from the false.

The last moments of the Eighty-Seventh Congress were an example of such a distillation. The rival forces were Senator J. W. Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Senator Barry Goldwater, torchbearer of the conservative cause.

Goldwater Speaks

Senator Goldwater stated in his book, THE CONSCIENCE OF A CONSERVATIVE, that "In all of our dealings with foreign nations, we must behave like a great power. Our national posture must reflect strength and confidence and purpose, as well as good will. We need not be bellicose, but neither should we encourage others to believe that American rights can be violated with impunity." Senator Goldwater also says that "In addition to paring his (Communism's) blows, we must strike our own. In addition to guarding our frontiers, we must try to puncture his . . . To these ends, we must always try to engage the enemy at times and places, and with weapons, of our own choosing . . . We should declare the world Communist movement an outlaw in the community of civilized nations. Accordingly, we should withdraw diplomatic recognition from all Communist governments including the Soviet Union . . ."

Fulbright Counters

In a recent article in the NEW YORK TIMES MAGAZINE, Senator Fulbright was quoted as saying that "The character of a mature nation is not unlike that of a mature individual. Adulthood means the acceptance of permanent responsibilities, of continuing tasks, of enterprises that advance imperceptibly toward fruition with neither climax nor completion. It means ambiguity when we would prefer precision, tedious labor when we would prefer dramatic action, infinite patience when we would prefer immediate rewards. Above all, maturity requires a final accomodation between our aspirations and limitations."

The author stated that Fulbright's formulation of a "national style" required "the wisdom and courage to eschew those quick, clean, uncomplicated 'solutions' which are so emotionally satisfying to the radical Right and so fatally irretrievable for the nation."

Avenues To Victory

The policy of Senator Fulbright seems to be based on a realistic consideration of the effect which a responsible formulation of a foreign policy can have on easing the risk of nuclear war. We must seek other avenues to victory.

We must hold our nuclear deterrent over the Soviet Union and be satisfied with taking the diplomatic offensive without a diplomacy. (We cannot understand the ever-changing Communist strategy to the extent that we do today by breaking off diplomatic relations.) We must be confident that the ideas of freedom and liberty can be victorious employing the means of freedom and liberty.

Outright aggressive provocations of the Soviet Union by the U. S. are contrary to our traditional ideal of peace. For these reasons, the proposals of Senator Goldwater if followed would seem to increase the risk of nuclear war unnecessarily.

Campus Camera

Ques.: "Do you think that on-campus recreation facilities are adequate, and if not, what would you suggest be done to improve them?"

Jack Weed, Senior, resident

Facilities on the Villanova campus are adequate for the students; but how about guests, parents, and friends? Indeed, it looks somewhat unhospitable to have parents and friends standing in doorways, waiting for students. Since Villanova wants to impress visitors, how about representative lounges in the resident dorms.

Robert Lambdin, Sophomore, resident

What recreational facilities? Aside from a few outdoor athletic fields and one broken down excuse for an indoor basketball court, do we have any others? Any change would be an improvement. A good place to start would be a couple of ping-pong tables and a pool table or two, and any other ideas along this line.

Edward Johnston, Senior, resident

I'm in Engineering, and hence have a tight schedule. So far as I am concerned, there are plenty of recreational facilities to take up one's spare time. When its gets too cold for outdoor sports, there is always the pool in the Fieldhouse. In addition there are many activities on campus, which, I think, could also be classified as recreation.

John Delany, Junior, resident

No! On-campus recreational facilities are not adequate. More attention should be paid to the lounges, with the hope of improving their role in recreation. Two or more game rooms should be set up in the doms around the campus. These recreational facilities would make residents feel more at home and instill pride in Villanova.

Jim Rhodes: Fifth Year, day hop

Although I am not on campus this year, I have found that the recreational facilities in the past were quite adequate. The only exception would be the facilities for indoor basketball.

The Scourge Of The Roar

by Chip D'Ambrosio

In recent times each decade has received a symbolic nickname attached to its surname. We've had "The Flirtin' Thirties," "The Fabulous Fifties" and the present decade is being nailed "The Solid Sixties." In time, these names, like most names, will be forgotten.

This series will be concerned with " . . . a time of hope and a time of laughter, a time of irresponsibility and disillusionment, a period of creative chaos and rigid repression—an age from which we cannot escape and to which our environment ceaselessly brings us back. These were . . . 'The Roaring Twenties.'"

Girls Cause Roar

The twenties, according to the rumors of 1918 and 1919, would never come because the world was going to end before 1920. The world did end as far as people who believed in an earlier way of life were concerned. Theories of behavior and dress and general outlook which had existed for so long before came to a screeching halt. The change was a radical one. Now all times, like babies, eventually are changed but the Twenties took the diaper off the baby and didn't put anything back on.

The factor that made the Twenties roar was the overall change of the female counterpart. In less than two years she had shifted the hem of her attire one and one half feet skyward and the sky was also revised. To quote a little chicken, "the sky was falling."

State Fights Back

In different states the "old gang" tried to fight off the new rage. In Virginia, they tried to pass a law prohibiting a woman from "displaying more than three inches of her throat." While, in Ohio, they decreed that a lady's skirt must reach "to the part of the foot known as the instep." But the opposition didn't stop the changing tides.

As the ankle began to show the boys came out of Joe's Pizzeria to take more walks. When calves came into the picture anything movable in pants stopped walking and just looked. Soon the boys came a hoopin and a hollerin—stubbed toes, bruised noses, black eyes—and all about the beautiful dimples in Clotilda's knees. As women lost their clothes men lost their eyes. Little Clotilda's bedslat figure soon became the talk of the town. The girls also decided to alleviate themselves of the hustle of the bustle and so the doom of the corset was sealed.

More Changes

With this new surge of intestinal fortitude the age of the ladies' bathroom smoking circle hit the fan in favor of the "roll your own in public, gals, the matches are on the house" club! However, Clotilda wasn't satisfied yet so she did the only thing (outside of voting) that her counterpart, man, regretted . . . she slid behind the wheel and began the most effective reign of terror ever thrown on man.

But with the wind and the rain in her hair, her hair was forced into her eyes, so she cut it. The result was the "bob" made popular by Irene Castle of the "Dancing Castles." There were many styles of the "bob" but the most popular was the "pineapple bob" that looked about as much like a pineapple as a door knob. The general result was that she not only removed the hair from her eyes but almost completely from her head.

Even Waves Roar

Her wardrobe was complete now except for one thing, she needed something for the beach. Annette Kellerman, one of the best female swimmers of the day, decided that the old paraschutte swim togs were crampin' her style by keeping her under the water instead of on it. So she came up with the first one-piecer and this suit was so one piece that if somebody caught a loose thread it was all over.

So with cigarette in hand, her knees showing and her hair gone, little Clotilda walked out of the front door and down to the corner pub—but that's another story.

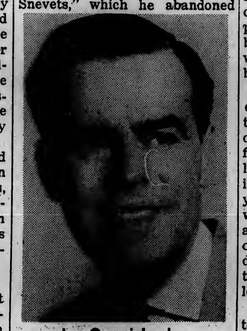
Britain's Unholy Three

Terry Thomas

Many, many moons ago, the slightly fantastic Lon Chaney appeared in an opus entitled "The Unholy Three," one of the films in which the great actor demonstrated his versatility. Now from Britain come three equally distinguished thespians who are starting to take this country's moviegoers by storm.

However, where Chaney used masks and horror to entertain his devotees, Terry-Thomas, Peter Sellers, and Ian Carmichael use comedy and their own mobile features to extract howls of delight from their steadily increasing audiences.

Good Profit



What brought this to light was an article carried in the local papers this summer which pointed out that no less than 30% of the British film industry's profits last year came from the American market. This is quite a difference from some nine years ago when the "Lavender Hill Mob" first appeared and people came away asking who Alec Guinness was.

In time, the great Alec became internationally famous and now seems to be favoring drama. The English producers, seeking a replacement, found a bonanza in the aforementioned three. Their timing is exquisite and their apparent teamwork in each other's starring films has virtually ignored Hollywood's star system.

Mobile Face

Terry-Thomas is one of the few men in cinema history who can evoke laughter merely by screwing up his face and uttering, "Gad"!! From a hilarious bit in the "Belles of St. Trinians" as the harrassed bus driver, T-T soon found himself in starring roles with immediate success.

His performances in "School For Scoundrels," "I'm All Right, Jack," "Make Mine Mink' and "Your Past Is Showing" are classic caricatures of the British upper crust. Once a butcher, he started with a group named "the Union Cold Storage Company Dramatic Society." His first stage name was actually "Mot Snevets," which he abandoned because "it wasn't quite me."

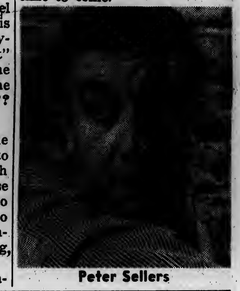
Termed the unchallenged, blustering successor to Colonel Blimp, T-T (adopted in 1947) is currently filming his first Hollywood effort, "The Bachelor Flat" with Tuesday Weld. Hope the finished product surpasses the expectations. Tuesday Weld???

Guiness' Successor

Peter Sellers is probably the most familiar of the three to Americans, scoring heavily with his three roles in "The Mouse That Roared." Sellers seems to be the ultimate successor to Guinness in that he is mild mannered, many guised, unassuming, and un-actorish.



"I work from the voice inward," is his explanation of his success, yet at the same time critics insist that he cannot project his own personality, preferring to submerge it under his many numerous guises. After his successes in "Man In A Cocked Hat," "The Millionairess," "Two Way Stretch," and "I'm All Right, Jack," he now is also headed for drama in the upcoming "Lolita" and subsequent roles as Napoleon and the Russian master, Potamkin.

Casper Milquetoast

The Cinematic incarnation of the Englishman's image of himself, boyish looking Ian Carmichael (he's 41) is constantly cast as the shy, well-bred Caspar Milquetoast who is forever being stepped on, but like the well-known worm, always turns before the last reel ends.

Completely opposite his roles off the screen, Carmichael is a top notch cricketeer and a decorated war hero as a Major. His first starring role was with the late Kay Kendall in the charming "Simon and Laura" of a few years back. Before this, he had worked in West End musicals and comedies. Public acceptance of his type casting seems to indicate more roles of this type in the future. Of the three, he is least likely to turn to drama.

If the extended run at theaters such as the Green Hill is any indication, the "Unholy Three" will be around for some time to come.

The Dry Well by Joe Noel

The Month Of The Month

In October, a young Villanovan's fancy might well turn to thoughts of November. This, reasonably enough, is prompted by the decidedly apathetic attitude held by many toward October. It should quickly be noted that a universally vibrant view of November is not necessarily intimated.

The fact remains, however, that oftentimes the sheer greatness of the tenth month is ignored. We feel that this is a deplorable situation. Imagine what it, unchecked, could do to little girls the world over. To one in particular, ever wondering, we tearfully assure: yes, Virginia, there is an October.

October's Qualities

With malice toward all, charity for none of the October skippers, we should elucidate on qualities that are singularly October's.

Perhaps it should initially be noted that, like only six other months, October has 31 days. We might even propose a mnemonic:

Thirty-one days have January
May, July August, and October. All the rest, save
One are like November.

Worthy of mention also is the fact that our month of the month is positively the only one whose abbreviation is Oct. That October originally began in March, claimed the Romans, is even more noteworthy.

As a matter of course it is naturally accepted that, in Philadelphia, nearly everyone reads; at Villanova, nearly everyone twists. Statistics show that October is by far the most appealing month for twisting-to-Lester Lanin contests. Next October more people than ever before will be urging: "Let's twist again just like we did, last October!"

Special Charms

That October holds special charms for the real sportsman is obvious. More football injuries occur during that time than during May, June and July combined. On the other hand Memorial Day, Fourth of July, and Labor Day weekend auto fatalities are amazingly low during October.

Teeth and October were the objects of a comprehensive survey recently concluded by a prominent association. It was revealed that of the two groups tested sixty-two per cent fewer cavities were detected in the group that brushed their teeth during October than in the group that failed to brush their teeth at all. The results of that scientific investigation, combined with the facts that Parents' Magazine as well as five out of every four doctors contacted recommended October, are undeniably impressive.

Nautical Notes

Similarly, who could but be impressed, when informed that Michael what's-his-name rowed his boat ashore during the month of October? Who could forget that the nomadic Mr. Columbus' birthday is in October?

October's steadfast quality of inevitability must not be slighted—never once did Hallowe'en fail to fall on the last day of the month.

As a dosing afterthought we hopefully urge that the Pie Shoppe offer a special appropriate to the freshness of October—October Pie.

A Yankee's Rude Awakening

by Bill Corcone

The European student is quite a different and peculiar entity than what we, as U. S. college students, are accustomed to associating with in daily activity.

He is a serious-minded person, who will go to great extremes to express his individuality. Some manifest this by their actions and others, by their manner and type of dress. Individualism—this is the European student. This trait, correlated with Ralph Waldo Emerson's self-reliance, is the chief component which enables the European to be such a well-adjusted, mature person, and one whose intellectual curiosity is of an intensive and insatiable nature.

The European through great effort strives to emerge above the masses and thusly attains unique recognition. He constantly works towards the unattainable goal of perfection, and the nearer he gets, the happier he is in life.

There is a compounded attitude of perseverance and determination which lose their separate identities and become amalgamated into a philosophy. This philosophy enables them to exist in a symmetrical pattern and act in a rational, quiet manner. On the surface they are gentle and unassuming, but deep within burns an intense feeling of discontent. It is this inner quality which is suppressed and can be unleashed with all the fury of an atomic explosion. This has been evident in Europeans throughout the centuries, and now this rebellious spirit is prevalent in the youth—today's students, men of knowledge, and tomorrow's leaders.

I challenge European history with all its revolutions, wars, and counter-revolutions to refute the veracity of this statement. The Europeans are explosive people and like any explosive element all that is needed for ignition is a spark. It is men like Hitler, Franco, Stalin, Mussolini, and other contemporary imperialists who capably fulfilled this need.

There is also an awareness of human suffering and bondage which results in a predominantly cold, unemotional attitude in most of the students. They have seen death, magnified by wars and tyranny epitomized by Hitler and the Nazi party. They are realists in belief, thinking that idealism is only a word existing in the minds of dreamers. However, this does not make them pessimistic, but rather optimistic concerning the future, for they realize the human limitations placed upon mankind. They also know that man must continue to strive and in striving he shall err, and in erring he shall learn. Such is the outlook of the European student.

The majority of students in Europe have all been conditioned to the horrors and terrors associated with war. This concept has been instilled within them and to each has become an integral part of his constitution. As one student from the Sorbonne in Paris with a sarcastic smile on his face explained, "We have seen two major wars and if a third is to come, we are as ready as ever." And as a Vienna University student exclaimed, "You Americans won't know what war is until it comes to you." This generalized attitude was the prevailing expression of the students. Some were cynical, others were apathetic, some screamed words of hatred, and then there were the few who sat back, drank their wine and listened. They did not care, but then one did not have to travel to Europe to incur this response.

The European student attends a minimum number of formal classes and devotes the remainder of his time to the search for knowledge. It is this tremendous amount of personal initiative which also characterizes the European student and sets him aloof from the majority of his American constituent.

This feature was exemplified when I met a student from Oxford University who was appalled at the thought of compulsory attendance. He turned while sipping his tea, "You mean, Old Chap, that you must attend classes? That's not cricket." We both laughed. It sounded funny at the time!

It is in living with European students that one comes to know them, and it is in knowing them that one comes to understand them.

It is through this understanding that we can attain world peace.

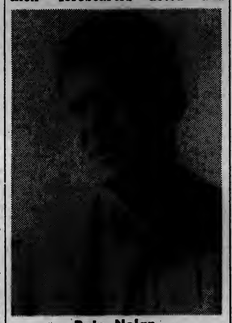
Where Do The Hecklers Go?



The resurgence of spirit on the 'ole V.U. campus is a gratifying thing to witness. It seems to return after a somewhat prolonged absence, but it must be said that the performance of this year's ball club has really put the spur into it.

Along with this upswing occurs the inevitable bufoonery and raz-a-ma-taz which is prevalent during a victorious season, and which makes the quadrangle just about as hot a little piece of territory as the Brandenburg Gate. Not to mention the fact that the lavatory supply man is just about at the end of his rope, as he witnesses his requisitions hanging from the tree tops each week. And woe to the young pretty who tries to make a short-cut through that sacred ground after dark.

A recent trip to "Smokey Joe's" gave an on-looker the glimpse of a different campus which calls itself ivy-league and all that jazz. This may be somewhat true because some of the guys have ivy growing down the back of their necks. It's typical to see one of these gay fellows walk in, clad in his tweed sport jacket, sneakers, fraternity pin, and ivy league nose.

The usual expression is in Gordon Hathaway fashion; "Hi Brucie, how 'bout a brew?" This really kills me. The recent trend in these schools is that the current generation is trying to act exactly as they've always heard their forebearers acted and they're turning out not quite like roses. So much for the boola-boola.

* * * * * *

World series time always makes many wonder what the ball players are going to do now that the season is over. But still further one might begin to ponder over the whereabouts of the hecklers who attend every game faithfully.

If you ever go to a ball park frequently you know who I'm talking about when I speak of a "heckler." He sits in the same place at every game. He weighs about two-hundred and fifty pounds, has a gut like a mushy medicine ball, and a big round pudgy face with a two-day growth.

The "heckler" is usually attired in T-shirt and trousers almost always spotted with paint. He sometimes has the chewed-up stub of a cigar sticking out of his mouth and is never without his supply of six-packs. If you don't see him come in, you know he is there when you hear a boisterous, "You stink Jones.," or some facsimile. You can either get a big kick out of him or despise him depending whose side you're on.

You begin to wonder about this guy; what he does for a living (he's at the ball park every day), where he comes from, but most of all where he goes during the off season. So much for the life of a heckler. Try Gulf Stream or Hialeah.

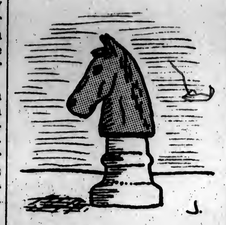
ACTIVITIES OF VILLANOVA

Chess Club Covets New Horizons

For many, many years, decades, and even centuries, man has consistently rendered himself to the techniques and rudiments of inimical actions with others while living on earth.



This tendency has ultimately been the cause and reason for the development and perfection of the game of chess, one of the most intellectual activities ever considered.

Villanova's representation in this field has just recently taken on some proportion of organization. The new 1961 team captain, Tony Davila, a Junior Electrical Engineering major, is mostly responsible for its increase in membership and activity this year.

At present the club's membership numbers about 25 active participants and is open to anyone interested, whether his major be C & F, Arts, Engineering, or Nursing.

Janik, Minicci, and Noto

Other members of last year's team which finished second in the Philadelphia area intercollegiate competition are junior engineering majors: John Jan-ik, Joe Minicci, and Bill Noto. These three and Captain Devila have now acquired the use of the Day-Hop Cafeteria each Wednesday evening for weekly meetings and intramural play.

Among the future plans of the club include the tournament now in progress to single out the more outstanding members for representation in intercollegiate games. Teams which will be be encountered during the first semester are those of Temple, LaSalle, Pennsylvania State, Haverford, and the University of Pennsylvania.

"Our purpose," stressed Davila, "must be recognized as an attempt to increase and emphasize chess and its methods of defense and offense. The present tournament for team representatives is open to everyone at Villanova and anyone who might have the least interest in chess, either a beginner or a professional, is encouraged to attend one of our Wednesday night meetings."

Trophies will be awarded to the winners of the campus and intercollegiate tournaments as an inducement to extended interest and practice.

to the depths of the sea

Our job is providing communications of all kinds, wherever needed—whether in the northern snows to flash word of possible enemy missile attack, or in your home or college, or in serving the nation's business.

When we can't fill a need off the shelf, then we start fresh and create the answer to the problem. We've done that hundreds of times.

We began transatlantic radiotelephone service in 1927. Then we developed the world's first undersea telephone cables to speed calls between continents.

We handled the world's first telephone conversation via satellite. And we have started development of an important world-wide communications system employing satellites.

When industry and government needed a way of gathering huge amounts of coded information from distant points, we were ready with our vast telephone network and Data-Phone, which can transmit mountains of data at extremely high speeds.

And so it goes—Long Distance service, Direct Distance Dialing, the Transistor, the Solar Battery—a succession of firsts which goes back to the invention of the telephone itself.

Universal communications—the finest, most dependable anywhere—are what we deliver. Inside: for home, office, or plant. Outside: on land, under the sea, through the air.

BELL TELEPHONE SYSTEM

Massey Muses — by Joe Massey

The Folly Of The Forty

Amid the clutter of tables covered with empty paper cups and dirty trays, the clatter of clanging dishes, the din of numberless dimwitted bull-sessions, and the roar of meaningless messages, a significant event took place recently in the Pie-Shoppe. The first indication that anything was taking place came when the Pie-Shoppe television was turned on.

Slowly but perceptibly a group of people commenced to gather in the area adjacent to the T.V. From a few original members the crowd grew to immense proportions. From their unheated dorms, from the windswept quad they came. Some came from as far as Mendel Hall and C and F. All races, all sexes, all classes they came, till the original few had become a monumental number—forty, at least.

Among this mass of humanity were numbered two faculty members, one nurse, and an estimated crowd of thirty-seven male students. It was a distinguished group.

There was also another group present at this time (11:40 a.m.) in the Pie-Shoppe. This contingent slightly outnumbered the other group. It consisted of approximately four hundred persons. There was, however, nothing unusual or peculiar about this crowd. It was the ordinary group of gourmets and epicures who daily converge on the Pie Shoppe and Day-Hop Cafeteria to indulge their sybaritic culinary fancies. In short, it was the average (oh, so average) Villanovan at lunchtime.

In contrast to the quiet air of solemnity and expectancy of the first-mentioned group, the latter had a remarkably loud and vigorous character. Their section of the cafeteria was marked by such an aura of bliss that, if one were to be accurate but unkind, it could be said that it was reminiscent of a nursery for mentally-retarded children.

The topics of discussion at the tables of these joyous souls were assuredly such as to warrant the exercise of lung power to the greatest possible extent. Booze, broads, baseball, and pure bull amply cover the possible range of subject material.

But the smaller group gathered around the TV was without the benefit of such enlightening vocal intercourse. The silence of this group, if one could have heard it over the din created by the other group and the urgent blare of the public address system, would have been deafening.

The significant event taking place was the President of the United States making his first address before the United Nations General Assembly. The speech dealt with the current world situation and the position and policy of the United States on these most urgent problems.

The President presented a challenge to the Soviets and a program to the U.N. Both were intended to offer to the world the American point of view. The world, including the Soviet Union, listened carefully.

And so did forty people at Villanova.

What about the rest of Villanova? Undoubtedly the other televisions and radios on campus were tuned in. Certainly there were more than forty people interested in their government's policy in the world crisis.

But if there weren't it wouldn't be surprising. Bliss is the object of the sum of most Villanovans' interest, and ignorance is bliss. Yet it is obvious that an education is subordinate to recreation to many of us.

Education leads to distinction, to self-development, and to wisdom. But it is folly to be wise and most of us would prefer the anonymity of the dolt to the distinction of the wise man.

So, when next a significant event takes place we shall again leave the forty to their folly. And as the world grows older, history will record that America died from a lack of the folly that is wisdom and of the fools who are wise men.

CAMPUS NEWS BRIEFS

T'n'T Offers Prize

Turf and Tinsel held its first meeting of the scholastic year last Thursday, October 5. It was announced that there would be a $100 prize for the person submitting the best original musical comedy suitable for an all-male cast. Selection of the musical comedy will be made by a committee of graduates and members of the Turf and Tinsel.

George Brestle, president of the Turf and Tinsel, stated that there is a definite need for new members. Any male student interested either in writing a musical comedy or performing in one should contact Brestle.

Pre-Law Club Opens

The Pre-Law Society of Villanova University held its first meeting of the school year, Thursday, September 28.

The guest speakers at this meeting were Mr. William C.A. Henry and Mr. Richard E Ruane, both of the Pre-Law department.

Mr. Henry, chairman of the department, encouraged the new members and offered the services of the Pre-Law department to anyone interested in the study of the law. Mr. Ruane, moderator of the society, showed expectation of an active year, commended the new officers, and welcomed the new members of the society.

John Dillon, president, briefly outlined the plans for field trips, guest speakers, and social events to be sponsored by the society.

Freedom Forum Starts

The first general meeting of the Freedom Forum Chapter at Villanova will be held in the third week of October with Reverend Norman W. Galloway, OSA, as guest speaker. This meeting will be open to all the student body.

The forum's purpose is to acquaint Villanovans with the philosophy and tactics of Communism. There are both general and council memberships. General membership is open to any student. In order to become a council member the student must submit an acceptable paper of not less than 300 words on Communism, and must display an elementary knowledge of the subject.

When asked why the Freedom Forum was begun, Chairman Bill Williams replied, "During the last fifteen years the Free World has been continually retreating and unless this policy is reversed, Khrushchev's prophecy, 'we will bury you' will come true."

Last year's Freedom Forum, under the moderation of Reverend Joseph J. Burns, consisted of twelve members. It functioned primarily as a study group.

Although this year's moderator has not yet been chosen, a new constitution has been approved.

Foreign Service Exam

The U. S. Department of State will conduct its annual Foreign Service Officer examination on Saturday, December 9. Prior to this examination, their representative, Mr. Christian G. Chapman, will address group meetings which will be arranged for interested seniors. These meetings will be held on Wednesday, October 11.

Mr. Chapman is the Officer-In-Charge, Laos Affairs, in the Bureau of Far Eastern Affairs.

NFCCS Plans New Program: Racism Topic To Be Studied

by Carol Burton

At an executive meeting of NFCCS, the National Federation of Catholic College Students, held on October 4, 1961, plans were made to implement the NF programs. The officers expressed their confidence that this year's program will meet with interest and success at Villanova.

In the area of contemporary issues, each year a special NF secretariat proposes one topic which is of current interest and pertinence. This national secretariat lays the groundwork enabling the individual campus NF groups to research, analyze, and discuss the subject extensively. The topic to be investigated this year is racism.

Prominent Speakers Sponsored

The NFCCS, in co-operation with the Student Council, will present prominent speakers and conduct debate groups and seminars to draw out Villanova students' views on this issue. The officers hope that some positive action to remedy the problem of racism will be developed, based on the study done on the subject during the year.

In addition to its own programming, the NFCCS provides information and outlines for debate groups on many important contemporary issues to any clubs and organizations on campus who can utilize the material. NF plans to co-operate this year with the IRS, ICG, and the newly formed Communist Study Group, in programming in this area of current issues.

Valentine Dance Proposed

In order to help support the federation's activities, they will hold a Valentine Dance on February 9, 1962. The dance will be open to the entire student body.

By passing national resolutions at their colleges, Catholic college students can make their views heard on a national level through NFCCS. The officers explained that all Villanovans, by their matriculation at an affiliated college, are members of NFCCS. This year's officers are: Gene d'Aquili, Senior Delegate, and Len Limongelli, Junior Delegate. The Regional President of NFCCS, John Simone, is also a Villanovan.

Round 'Midfield

Touching All Bases

by Joe Zawacki

A bunch of stuff; or clearing the desk of old unused notes.

After four victories Coach Alex Bell is indeed a happy man, yet he still takes the time to remember and compliment his assistants on the fine jobs that they are doing. The assistants, Rodgers, Karras, Michaels and Ferry, appreciate this recognition in addition to the highest compliment, that of the responsibilities that Bell has entrusted them. It looks like harmony and talent make a fine team for victories. Our hats off to five fine gentlemen, for their efforts and sincerity as well as the victories that they and the team have brought this year.

Good Luck Charm

Another young fellow who deserves recognition is Ken Mugler, the Sports Information director, whose job it is to prepare the pressbox facilities and also keep the public reminded of the Villanova sports scene. When Ken came here in the spring, he remarked, "I didn't come here to lose." The success of the baseball, track, and football squads seems to bear this out. Few people realize the long hours that Ken and his assistant Bud Beloin put in on the job. Another ace in the V. U. sleeve.

Most of the headlines concerning the Wildcat eleven have naturally concentrated on the scoring thrusts of Richman, Aceto, Glueck, Joe, Rettino, et al. Fortunately, the reporters covering the team have not neglected the linework of the team. To name all those who are doing their job so proficiently would consume a couple of columns, so let it just be stated that if Tom Kepner starts getting to practice on time, the linemen will appoach perfection.

Gratuities

A humorous incident came out of the first trip of the year to Cincinnati for the Miami game. A few years ago, a big furor arose over the poor tipping of some of the major league baseball players. One hotel went so far as to send a letter to the management of one team stating that if one of their star pitchers didn't start leaving a decent tip, the team could take their business elsewhere. Getting shaved in the barber shop of the Netherland Hilton, this writer stumbled on to a different type celebration.

The barbers were having a coffee break, the money being provided by the same star pitcher, the tip being the first that the group of barbers remember his leaving in his career.

Double Pleasure

Want to try something different? Go to a fight in Philly some night when two local favorites are in combat. Like the Soo-Matthews beauty last week at the Aréna. The crowds are just as entertaining as the fighters, and in the case of this fight, that's saying something. In one of the best fights staged here in many moons Jimmy Soo, with a heart bigger than he himself, won the battle but lost the war to the explosive fists of Matthews.

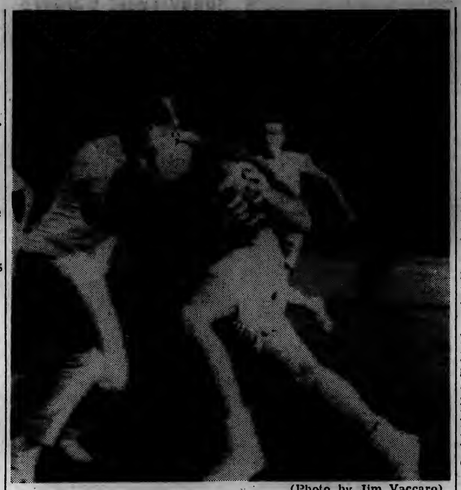
The aftermath will provide must interest also. Soo, with a handful of kids, will have to decide between continuing in the fight game or a steady job. Matthews will have to prove that he is on the comeback, having bandied about for the last year as if in a daze.

Much has been written of the greatness of Stan Musial, the Cardinal long-time star. Even at the age of 41, the future hall of famer finished the season on the threshold of two more great records. The next 30 base hits will give him the highest career total of any National leaguer, surpassing Honus Wagner's 3430. Only Speaker and Cobb top this. Also, he needs but two runs scored to break Mel Ott's standard in the Senior Circuit. Like old man river, he keeps rolling along.

Hurley Paces Sailing Club At King's Point Regatta

Continuing the efforts of one of Villanova's lesser, but nonetheless exciting and successful sports, the Wildcat Sailing Club opened its fall schedule with meets on October 1, 7, and 8.

In its initial outing, hosted by Swarthmore College at Fairmount Park on Schuylkill River Road, the Wildcat sailors copped 2nd in competition with teams from Haverford, Penn, St. Joe's, Lehigh, and Swarthmore.



Facing stiffer opposition last Saturday from Penn, Lehigh, Princeton, St. Joe's, and the N. Y. State Maritime College, the 'Cats still gained a third place tie with Penn. Guiding the effort, Maureen McKeegan, a freshman nurse, and Tony Fisher, a junior physics major, proved equal to many of the more experienced skippers.

King's Point

Sailors Pete Urban, Mark Devaney, and Dan Hurley on Sunday carried the Villanova tag with them to the King's Point Regatta for the Monotype Championship eliminations.

Dan Hurley, Club Commodore, paced the Wildcats with a third place finish while competing against 18 other skilled helmsmen from six colleges.

As Philadelphia Area Champions, the 'Cats will thus encounter a stiff rivalry in defense of their trophy in the Championships on October 28 and 29.

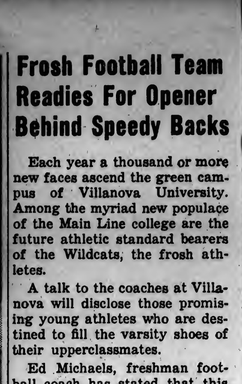
Frosh Football Team Readies For Opener Behind Speedy Backs

Each year a thousand or more new faces ascend the green campus of Villanova University. Among the myriad new populace of the Main Line college are the future athletic standard bearers of the Wildcats, the frosh athletes.

A talk to the coaches at Villanova will disclose those promising young athletes who are destined to fill the varsity shoes of their upperclassmates.

Ed Michaels, freshman football coach, has stated that this year's junior team will sport a good series of linemen with above average backs. In their first meeting of the season with Bullis Prep next week, the Wildkittens will try to emulate their varsity counterparts' successful encounters.



Pigskin Men

Stated Coach Michaels "The backs that I have this year are really something. Three or four have shown great potential talent."

Leading the frosh back list are quarterback Frank Dougherty and halfbacks Dick Sernyah and Tom O'Connor. Dougherty, a West Catholic alumnus, has shown all around ability in practice thus far. A 6' 1" quarterback, Dougherty was an All Catholic and All State selection last year.

Other backfield prospects are Mike Manger, Ed Strannix, and Johnny Burke.

Working in the end position are Bill O'Hara, John McDonnell, Emmit Michaels, and Tom Smith. At tackle might be Charlie O'Reilly, Alan Atkinson, Harry Walter, Bill Quigley, and Mike Rappald.

In the frosh basketball picture appear three tall and two fast backcourt men. Fighting for the jump position are Samuel Larlo 6'8", Jim Washington 6'6", and Charles Lightcap 6'9".

In the backcourt are Eric Erickson and Ben Kenny.

Cinder Men

Filling the ranks of the freshman track team are Tom Sullivan and Daniel Webster. Sullivan broke the National high school mile mark last year posting 4:03.5.

Freshmen runners include Ron Hangey, Stan Kozlowski, Larry Livers, Marty Ferko, and Jim Orr. Rounding out the team will be Marshall Uzzle and Dave Highland.

Gruncisen Out For Season

It was learned late Monday that Sam Gruneisen, senior star end aggravated the knee injury incurred in the VMI triumph and will undergo the surgeon's knife today. He is not expected to return to action for the remainder of the season.

Coach Bell immediately withdrew his star end after the injury in the early first quarter and kept him on the bench for the rest of the game.

In The Groove

Busman's Holiday

by dan grove

The following is a diary recording last weekend's football trip.

Friday, 7:45 a.m.—Arrived at Villanova fully armed with books to study enroute. Buses haven't arrived yet.

8:15 a.m.—Buses pull up in front of Dougherty Hall. A handful of early rising Villanovans give the team a cheering sendoff.

8:20 a.m.—Buses are loaded. Managers Bill Borden and Tony Lang check to make sure every one is aboard.

8:45 a.m.—Everyone has settled down. Morning papers are at a premium. Someone in the back of the bus quotes Red Blaik's prediction, "Wildcats too wild for Massachusetts."

10:00 a.m.—The New York skyline looms up to the right. The sleepers awake and the readers decide to take a break. Conversation is increased. The relative merits of the bus trip are compared to the two previous plane trips. Someone figures that after this trip they will have traveled 2500 miles for three games.

10:45 a.m.—Buses halt somewhere in the Bronx; the consensus of opinion is that we are lost. The bus drivers seek aid from a Chinese laundryman who claims to have read Rand McNally from cover to cover.

11:00 a.m.—Back on the road, but the wrong road. Westchester policeman informs drivers that no commercial traffic is permited on the road.

12:00 a.m.—After seeking directions from everyone in sight, we are finally on the correct trail. Jake Nevins, the trainer, looks up from behind his cigar and informs the busdriver that planes never get lost. The bus driver answers that planes can't pull over for repairs either. A profound silence follows. Someone picks up an itinerary sheet and announces that we were due at the Red Barn for lunch thirty minutes ago.

2:00 p.m.—Lunch is finished and we are underway again. Card games begin. A shortage of change is noticed, so matches are used for chips. Married man Sam Gruneisen quits after losing a dollar.

3:00 p.m.—Everyone is thoroughly disgusted with bus travel. Headaches and a cramped feeling prevail. Someone asks if we are taking a bus to Detroit.

5:45 p.m.—Arrive in New Hampton, which is ten miles from U. of Mass. Coach Bell announces a light drill in thirty minutes. Some groan, others say it's just what they need. Rooms are assigned in the rustic hotel. I wind up in a four-man room with convenient facilities right down the hall. The closet is big enough for two or three coats. The Hilton was never like this.

7:00 p.m.—Supper in the hotel; omelets and potatoes. Many don't have any appetite. A group of girl singers serenade us.

8:15 p.m.—Fifty Smith co-eds troop into the hotel for a mixer. Things seem to be looking up.

8:45 p.m.—After a few dances, the squad leaves to watch movies of Massachusetts.

9:00 p.m.—A look at the paper reveals that "White Christmas" is playing at the local movie house.

10:00 p.m.—After the films, captain Dick Ross gallantly tells the team to hit the hay and forget the mixer. More moans. Being a non-combatant has its advantages.

10:00 a.m.—A few turn native and sit on the front porch of the old hotel and comment that this place is like Peyton Place.

12:00 N.—Buses come to take us to Amherst.

12:12 p.m.—Arrive in Amherst, U. of Mass. campus is beautiful.

3:30 p.m.—A reporter asks Coach Bell if he can remember the last time he was disappointed in a twenty point victory.

4:15 p.m.—One bus full of players leaves.

Rugby Team Garners Tie And Win; Plans Games With Weekends

The Villanova Rugby Club gained a tie and a shutout over the Princeton Tigers and Quantico Triangle Club last Saturday in its initial efforts of the fall rugby season.

The final score with Princeton in the morning game wound up with the Tigers leading 21-11. Captain Ralph "Pig Pen" Lewis, however, explained that the end of the first half the score was tied at 8 points apiece. During the second half, the Wildcats gave their "B" team an opportunity to gain experience against the Princeton A squad.

The fall season is not considered as anything but as a preparation for the regular league season in the spring. No records or standings are kept and the season is in itself rather informal.

Quantico then offered little afternoon opposition to the Wildcat assaults as they were blanked 13-0. Forwards Mike Innis, Don Kilmartin, and Pete Triolo each guided the attack with a tri (three points equivalent to a touchdown).

Autumn Schedule

The fall schedule will now include four more home tilts and three away contests. Most of these games will correspond with either a home or away football games.

Scheduled as part of the Student Homecoming Weekend, the 'Cats will encounter the resistance of a Baltimore squad at 11:00, previous to the football contest with Buffalo. On the following weekend, the student trip, the team will travel to Harvard to compete in the morning against the Crimson. Afterwards, the gridmen will play the Eagles of Boston College at 2:00.

B. C. Trip

Lewis commented that this game can be easily attended by those students who plan to make the B. C. trip. He also emphasized the necessity of receiving the support and interest of the student body and the faculty.

The other games on the autumn agenda are as follows:

Quantico	Oct. 28 (Home)
Philadelphia	Nov. 4 (Home)
Yale	Nov. 11 (Home)
Dartmouth	Nov. 18 (Away)
Seven-A-Side Tournament	Dec. 2 (Away)
Baltimore	Dec. 9 (Away)

The Quantico and Philadelphia games will fall among the activities of Parents' Weekend and the Sophomore Cotillion Weekend respectively while the Seven-A-Side tournament is held in New York where the Wildcats finished third out of 23 entries last year.

Managers

A sophomore resident is needed to round out the managerial staff of the basketball team. If anyone is interested please see Chip D'Ambrosio in the Field House, October 16, after 2:30 p.m.

Lohr Looks At Sports

A Day In A Scout's Life

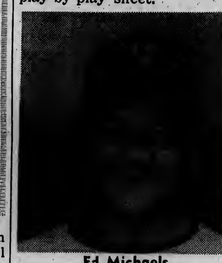
by Ed Lohr

Every fall Saturday afternoon when the 'Cats hit the gridiron there is one member of the coaching staff who misses his share of glory for the week's work.

He may hear, usually a quarter or two later, the half time score, but he is many miles away from the crushing gang tackling and the snappy blocking that he has tutored.

This coach, however, performs one of the most difficult and most unselfish duties in modern college football—scouting. Villanova's two martyrs this year are Ed Michaels Sr. and George "Benny" Karras—to them the unbeaten 'Cats owe a great part of their record.

Immediately as a scout reaches a foreign field his duties begin with the recording of the weather condition and the type of field. Before the game the press box supplies all scouts with a "three-deep chart" which lists the three top players at each position and also any injuries.



As the team under observation warms up, the scout is busily watching the specialists. For example, the type of passer, left or right handed, the type of ball he throws, hard or soft, the distance he can throw, how far he fades back, etc.; the same for the punters; also the accuracy of the extra-point kicker and the length of the kickoff.

When that whistle blows to start the game, that is when the men are separated from the boys in scouting. A scout must quickly place the player by numbers at their respective offensive positions.

Amazing as it may sound the scout then proceeds to sketch every play the team runs on a separate sheet of paper, paying particular attention to the initial formations and each and every block.

As soon as the team loses the ball, the scout will instantaneously switch his efforts in a likewise fashion to the defense—scouting and recording every defensive formation in order.

Michaels reported in this interview that in the case of a good passing team (such as Holy Cross) he will concentrate his best efforts to diagnose exactly all the pass patterns and record them on the "scouting work sheet" which is the play-by-play sheet.

Ed Michaels

A good scout will also watch for idiosyncrasies or deficiencies of any one player or any one side of the line, etc. When the game ends the scout's work really begins as he usually hits the hotel room for an hour or so to decipher his afternoon's work.

Michael's first job back on the main line is to prepare a frequency chart, that is how many times did the team run into each specific hole. This is done with both running and passing plays.

Bell Given Whole Report

He then presents to head coach Alex Bell the play-by-play sheet of the entire game, who spends hours trying to figure out patterns and develop defenses to stop them.

The defensive coaches headed by Karras then begin an assault on the reports Monday night, when also films of the previous Villanova game are shown to the players.

Finally by Tuesday night the players see the scouting report in the form of mimeographed sheets and out onto the field they go to learn how to successfully defend and score often against Saturday's opponent.

Scouting is definitely one of the most involved parts of football. It takes a tremendous amount of football sense, a quick eye, and most important that essential quality of unselshness in which he gives up Saturday afternoons with his players in order to scout next Saturday's opponent so that those same players may again taste victory.

Wildcats Crush U. of Mass. 33-13 For Fourth Straight Win Of Season

Richman Stars As Delayed Wildcats Defeat Amherst 11

by Dan Grove

The travel-weary Villanova Wildcats kept their undefeated record intact last Saturday with a 33-13 victory over an outmanned University of Massachusetts eleven at Amherst, Mass. The surprising Wildcats of coach Alex Bell were in command throughout the game; only the loss of five fumbles and a few mental lapses kept the Mainliners from rolling up a truly lopsided victory.

The Redmen of coach Vic Fusia turned Villanova's third fumble in five plays into their first score. This occurred after halfback Jim Kropke's bobble was recovered by Massachusetts' tackle Bob Foote on the Villanova 23 yard line. Four plays later Sam Lussier crashed over from the 1 yard line.

This score followed Villanova's first paydirt strike which followed the opening kickoff. Richie Richman was responsible for the initial 'Cat tally as he rolled around left end for the final eight yards, following a thirty-two yard pass play on which he and Nick Russo collaborated. Tommy O'Rourke skirted the opposite end for the extra two points.

Glueck Scores

The Wildcats scored once more in the first half. This one came with only four minutes gone in the second period.

Richman and Larry Glueck teamed up on a beautiful forty-two yard pass play that spotted the ball on the Indian's 25 yard line. Glueck scored six plays later on a two yard plunge. Ronnie Meyers' conversion attempt was wide. The rest of the half was scoreless and ended with Villanova leading 14-6.

Sustained Drive

The Mainliners put on an impressive display of power early in the second half. They marched eighty-six yards in thirteen plays, all of which were on the ground. The entire first string backfield, with the help of a hard charging line, figured in the drive. Billy Joe capped the power show with a one yard plunge. Richman's pass for the two points was incomplete.

In the third quarter Villanova completely dominated play. They ran twenty-two plays from scrimmage to the opponents' six. Their "three yards and a cloud of dust" offense was employed to control the ball and to confuse scouts.

The last two Wildcat scores came in the fourth quarter. The first one came as a result of a bad pass from center in a punting situation. Massachusetts' Quarterback John McCormick slipped to his knee on his own sixteen yardline trying to run the ball out. Villanova took over on downs and sent Billy Joe into the end zone from the six yard line to make the score 26-6.

Mass. Strikes Back

Massachusetts struck back quickly with a sixty-seven yard drive of it's own. This one was highlighted by sophomore Freddie Lewis' thirty-six yard dash McCormick's pass to Majeski for the six points. The conversion was good. The New England aborigines then threw a real scare into the Wildcats when they completed a forty yard touchdown pass, only to have it called back because of an offsides penalty. This seemed to wake Villanova up.

Two plays later center Henry Gotard intercepted an Indian pass and rambled thirty-six yards with it before being hauled down from behind. Ted Aceto's four yard toss to Ron Meyers culminated this final drive with the clock running out. Meyers also booted the point after.

Injuries Darken Picture As Cross Country Begins

At this writing the outlook for the Villanova cross country team is precarious to say the least. Injuries seem to be the biggest problem of the harriers at the moment.

The most scintillating member of last year's team, Pat Traynor, is recovering from a freak accident received during the summer. Jon Dante, another reliable pace setter, has what is termed an undiagnosed ailment —a general feeling of fatigue and nausea. Angelo Sivieri, one of the best distance runners in the East when well, is just starting to come around after a season's absence due to a back ailment.

Good Form

However there are a few bright spots. Bob Collins, one of the lesser known but highly competent members of the cross country team, is showing excellent early season form. Others who are doing quite well are Gerald Hackett, Frank Hagerty, Pat Nicastro, and Al Adams.

There are several sophomores who are expected to add quantity and quality to this year's team. Vic Zowalik leads the bright contingent of sophs and may well develop into the outstanding distance runner on the team before the year is complete. John Angerene, Harry Smeck, James Smyth, and Joe Reilly are some of the other sophs who are expected to score.

In-And-Out Buffalo 11 To Test Cats Saturday

Buffs Out To Spoil Second Homecoming

by Bob Larkin

Coach Alex Bell's Wildcats return to the Mainline this Saturday to host the University of Buffalo in their first meeting on the gridiron. The 'Cats will be out to fatten their record on the New York upstaters who have posted a 2-2 record this season including an upset over Boston University.

Head Coach Dick Offenhamer has 18 lettermen returning from last year's 4-6 club and a group of highly touted sophomores up from last year's freshmen squad which edged the Army Plebes 8-7. In spite of the loss of 12 lettermen by graduation, the Bulls are deeper than last year's club although the depth is largely untested.

2-2 Record

Buffalo opened up their campaign with a 14-6 victory over Gettysburg and a 24-12 upset over Boston University. After starting out the season like a ball of fire, the New Yorkers got caught resting on their laurels 36-12 by the Blue Hens of Delaware. The Bulls lost out to the Crusaders of Holy Cross last weekend at Buffalo 20-8 and hope to get back in the win colunm against the Wildcats.

Co-captains Jack Hartman and Bill Selent at left guard and right end respectively, head up the forward wall which averages 210 pounds. Hartman at 195 who drew pro feelers last year is hailed as the team's "defensive sparkplug" at linebacker. Bill Selent, a converted fullback, is short as ends go, at 6'1", but managed to snag 21 passes for 241 yards during the 1960 season and will be the man to watch in the Villanova secondary.

Bull's Shakeup

Injuries and the losses to Delaware and Holy Cross have forced Coach Offenhamer to insert several new faces in the lineup for Saturday's game. Dick Hort, 6'-225, will replace Lon Lodestro at center with Jim Wich also on call. Jim Wolfe crushed three ribs in the B.U. game and may not see action against the 'Cats. Sophomores John MacDougall and Bill Roof will fill in at right guard. Kevin Brinkworth and Ed Morradian will handle the left tackle slot while Soph Jerry Philbin and Gene Reilly will fill in the right tackle slot. Letterman Bob Miller will be ready to go at either tackle.

Chuck Winzer, the tallest man on the team at 6'3", will be ready at left end with Larry Gergley on call. Jim Bowden and Dick Dickman will spell the co-captain Selent at right end.

"Long John"

Gene Guerrie, who returned to the quarterback slot in the opening game this season after a year of ineligibility, will see only limited action. A bruised shoulder forced Guerrie to the sidelines in the opening game and he hasn't been able to hit his stride since. John Stofa, one of last year's talented freshmen, has taken over the signal calling and proved himself under fire. Teaming up well with Selent and Winzer during the Bulls' victories, Stofa has been tabbed as "Long John" on the U.B. campus.

Returnee Roy Clayback who averaged 3.7 yards a carry last year will start at left half with Canadian speedster Sunbach waiting in the wings. Roy Sommer, senior speedster, will get the nod at right half with Tom Butter filling in. Last year's big gun, Bob Baker, has yet to see much action.

Jim Burd will start at fullback with last year's starter, John Valentic, out of the picture temporarily. Valentic led the club in interceptions last year and was expected to team with Butter as the Bulls 1-2 punch in the backfield.

Buffalo has size, depth, and breakaway speed but has been hampered this year by injuries and bad breaks. The Bulls have an experienced backfield combination and a top notch quarterback in Stofa. The New Yorkers will need all the breaks they can get to set their breakaway men off against the vaunted V.U. line. If Coach Offenhamer plans to dent the scoring column "Long John" will have to live up to his name this Saturday.

Beantown Prepares For Onslaught As Wildcats Go North

by Josephine M. Morello

After a three-year absence Villanova returns to Boston. The idea of the student trip to the New England town this Friday is many things to many people.

To Villanova alumni, it is a pang of nostalgia and a memory of the "good old days." To the Villanova football team it is a chance to chalk up another win on its 5-0 scoreboard.

To Boston College it is too soon. And to present Villanova students, it is their first time to back a winning team, and to back it enthusiastically, all the way to Boston.

Villanova beat Boston College in 1956, and again in 1957. In '57 the B.C. trip spirit was at fever pitch and over 1200 students made the jaunt from the Main Line to the Back Bay.

Trains were so crowded that many Villanovans went to the game in private cars which were decorated with banners "to let the various town populations on the way to Boston know the spirit possessed by Villanova students."

After 1957, the Boston game took second place to West Point, and no one was quite so excited with Villanova's upset over B.C. in '58 as they had been the year before.

In following years the team weakened, the spirit dropped, and Boston became a memory.

A Welcome Change

This year Villanova has reverted to its status of 1957, and most observers agree that the change is a welcome one. A new and ambitious Spirit Committee has organized enthusiastic frosh and formerly apathetic upperclassmen to back their powerhouse team.

Villanova will visit Boston again just as in '57—by train, bus, car, and thumb. They will stay at various hotels, hold rallies, cheer their team, and enjoy the weekend. And, one hopes they will remember that their behavior as individuals will affect the reputation of Villanova as a university.

The performance of the football team this season indicates that the student body has good reason to go to the B.C. game. With the combination of an outstanding team backed by a spirited student body, and the companionship and partying of a student trip, any Villanovan going to Boston this Friday seems assured of a worthwhile weekend.

Council Effects Constructive Plans In Solemn Atmosphere

As yet unable to commence its usual verbosity, length, and general entertainment value, the Student Council held its fourth regular meeting of the semester last Wednesday evening.

New Attitude

This gathering of Wednesday evening did not have the same "pat your buddy on the back" or "aren't we great" atmosphere of those assemblies of the past.

Topics ranging from campus movies, disappointments in the lecture series, constitutional incongruities, a Boston trip, and proper behavior were all covered in an objective, rational manner.

Tom Wall, Chairman of the Council announced that during the earlier part of the year he had been approached by the Rev. Joseph Kemme, OSA, to have a member of the Big Brother Foundation speak at one of the meetings. He then introduced Mr. Robert Parsons who explained the need for young men who could devote some time to helping youngsters without fathers.

Following the address, Wall asked for the committee reports of his Executive Vice Presidents. The progress and advances of these committees were rendered to the Congress.

Discounts

Charles Labus, Vice-President for Academic Affairs, announced that all legitimate theatres and movies houses in greater Philadelphia had been contacted and asked to send to the Council schedules and discount coupons which would be distributed to the student body.

Films are also scheduled to be resumed in the Vasey Hall Auditorium in the next several weeks as soon as rental lists and contracts are acquired.

The 1961-62 Student Council Lecture Program was then brought under discussion. Tom O'Connor declared that politics would be the topic for the program. Present plans consist of the attempt to have prominent local speakers visit the campus this year and the initiation of next year's program in February in order to obtain several national figures.

Recreations Poll

A poll to determine the student opinion of the recreational facilities on campus and whether the student body would support a Student Council-sponsored program to obtain more and better facilities will be undertaken during the next few days by the Council Polling Committee.

An Admonition

In other action Jim Howley, Vice-President for Student Affairs, pointed out that the scheduled train trip to Boston has been discarded, but that buses would now be used if enough students sought rides. He reiterated a desire for all Villanovans to act in a respectable manner while away from school.

Other motions introduced among the new business and sent to committees for implementation include a motion to look into the book store operation and methods to effect a quicker, more efficient operation; a motion to have the Library opened until 10:00 on Sunday evenings; and a resolution to request the opening of the day-hop cafeteria at 10:30 on Thursday morning.

Fr. Duffy To Conduct Freshman Retreat Beginning Thursday

The Annual Retreat for all Freshmen will open Thursday evening, October 19 in the University Field House at 7:30 p.m. All Freshmen men Students are required to make this retreat. The Retreat will continue through Friday and close with Mass and General Communion on Saturday at noon. There will be no classes on Friday for the Freshmen.

Due to the change in the policy on retreats each class will have its own retreat and all are required to attend the scheduled exercises. No one will be excused from any exercise because of work or other duties. Ample notice of the change has been given at the time of registration

Sheehan, Director of Public Relations at the University of Pennsylvania, during a meeting of Region Four of the Association of University Evening Colleges held at Villanova on Thursday, October 5th.

Peggie Connolly Reigns Over Weekend Clouds Follow Suit

Peggie Connolly, a hazel-eyed beauty from Immaculata College, assumed the regal tiara and robes last Friday evening in her role as Queen of the Nick Basca Weekend.

The dark-haired Miss Connolly, escorted by Joe McGill, sophomore Arts major, was crowned on stage during the Friday night dance and subsequently reigned over the weekend's activities.

Especial Thanks

An estimated attendance of 850 couples filled the Field House at the dance, the best gathering ever drawn at Villanova.

Previous to the dance, the judging of the dormitory decorations was held. Upperclass dormitory, Sullivan Hall, garnered first with a colorful display of a simulated old western town entitled "A Hot Time in the 'Ole Town Tonite."

Some Precipitation

The Saturday activities were not to be favored by the advantages of sunshine, blue skies, and warm weather. Instead, a half-inch of rain sporadically drenched the groups attending the rugby game, the float contest, and the football triumph.

The honors of victory, however, were again Villanova's as the Rugby team nipped Baltimore 3-0 and the football squad continued undefeated 28-6 against Buffalo.

The Class of 1964 was awarded the plaque for the best float entry with that of the Class of 1963 and of Belle Masque taking the runnerup positions.

D'Aquili: Scholar, Editor

To create an awareness among the students of contemporary problems, a fresh and especially pointed Villanova publication is about to be made available to the student body. The name: CONCEPT. Editor-in-chief of this important new magazine is Gene d'Aquili, a thoughtful senior with high ideals.

"CONCEPT," announced d'Aquili, "is programming extensively in the field of racism and racial prejudice. But the articles in general are varied, ranging from philosophy to humorous views on life." Working in co-operation with the Student Council, CONCEPT intends to obtain lecturers, each expert in his own field. After the first guest speaker, it will try to arrange for seminars and discussion of vital topics among the student body.

In explaining the purpose for its formation, the Editor-in-chief said, "CONCEPT is a magazine to serve as a medium for student opinion. It will train students to think clearly and to write scholarly but readable articles." Every topic treated well, unless it is solely a literary piece, will be considered for CONCEPT.

Majoring in two courses, general science and philosophy, in order to acquire as broad an education as possible, d'Aquili will go to medical school soon after he is graduated from the University. He intends ultimately to enter into psychiatry.

As senior delegate to NFCCS, d'Aquili has a twofold duty: to represent the Catholic students of Villanova at its national congresses, and to represent the NFCCS on the Student Council.

Activities' Handbook To Be Released By Council Committee

Mal Carton, Co-Chairman of the Student Activities Committee, has announced that the Committee has prepared for issue a directory of all student activities and societies on campus.

Carton hopes by the publication of the directory, "to give the incoming freshmen a fuller knowledge of all activities on campus and means of joining these organizations." The directory is the first of its kind at Villanova.

The directory in first form will be ten mimeographed pages; however, Carton expressed his desire to have it published in the regular Student Handbook as a permanent section.

The directory will contain an outline of the organization activities, officers, and information on how to join. The committee hopes by this publication to increase interest in these organizations.

Tentative date for release is October 25. The directory will be distributed to all residents.

"Gay 90's" To Be Theme Of Sophomore Cotillion Nov. 3-4

The intricate painstaking preparations which are the essential features of developing a college weekend into a successful affair are now assuming definite proportions for the Sophomore Cotillion on Nov. 3 and 4.

Sophomore Class President Marty McGuinn has arranged that the Cotillion dance on Friday evening between nine and one be preceded by a rally for the football team and the selection of a weekend queen.

The ten-piece orchestra of Chuck Gordon and a female vocalist are now signed to appear for the evening. For intermissions the class has also obtained the services of the Revelers. Thus continuous entertainment and dancing will be offered.

Open To All

"The one important point to be stressed," emphasized McGuinn, "is that the dance will be open to all classes."

The weekend itself is ideally situated since it includes the last home football game of the season, and since the game will be with a traditional rival, West Chester. It is furthermore the weekend after the mid-term examinations and is three weeks distant from the Basca weekend.

McGuinn and Joe Triarsi, General Chairman for the Cotillion, expect an outstanding turnout in view of the advantageous timing of the weekend. They have also decided to develop the "Gay Nineties" as the general theme of the dance.

In addition to the football contest, the Villanova Rugby Club will render their version of American football against the Philadelphia Rugby Club. The match is scheduled for 11:00 a.m., so that the students with weekend dates will have an opportunity to do something during the morning.

Tickets for the Cotillion will be available three weeks earlier this year. They are presently on sale in the Pie Shoppe and C & F cafeteria for three dollars.

Why the gold bars?
Future You:
You're needed... just as your father and grandfather were. It's an obligation that a lot of qualified college men have to meet. If we don't...

The mountaineer thought a moment. "I sleep real good nights, and pretty good mornings," he drawled. "But afternoons I jest toss and turn." Catholic Digest—Oct.

Drill Team Practices Before 1st Competition Next Month

The 1961-62 Villanova Drill Team, under the direction of a new Marine officer, Captain Richard Anderton, starts its long hours of practice once again. Anderton, recently arrived from Camp Pendleton, Calif., has as his assistant MSgt. J. J. Reilly.

The new team commander is Gerald F. Corrigan, a drill leader with experience from Quantico, Virginia. Under Midshipman Lieut. Corrigan's direction the team hopes to retain its championship form of past years.

This year due to a large turnout of freshmen, the Whiskey Company is able to field two additional teams as well as the trick team. The first public performance of the year was given as the pre-game program at the Buffalo game on October 14. The first actual competition will be on November 11 when the unit will host the Third Annual Villanova Invitational Drill Competition at the University stadium. This competition wil bring to Villanova some of the finest teams in the East.

Big Brothers Ask Help Of Students At Council Meeting

An appeal to the students of Villanova from the Big Brothers of America was voiced at the Oct. 11 meeting of the Student Council. Mr. Parsons, Regional Director of the program which provides male companionship to fatherless boys, addressed the Council, inviting Villanovans to participate in the program.

Under the Big Brother program, one volunteer is put in touch with one boy in need of friendship. According to Parsons the boys, who range in age from 8 to 14 years, are in their own homes. Some, he said, may have minor psychological problems, but none are serious enough to require professional treatment.

Once the contact is made, the boy and his Big Brother get together for such pastimes as are of interest to both, usually on the basis of once a week. The schedule is entirely for those involved and is not restricted in any way by the association.

Thorough Screening

Both the boy and the Big Brother are thoroughly screened by the Association before the contact is made. The Big Brother is then given a complete file on the boy he will work with.

Any student interested in the program and desiring more information on it may write to Big Brothers of America, 25 So. Van Pelt St., Philadelphia, or call LO 3-7796 and ask for Mr. Barnes or Mr. Cairns. They are also requested to inform Charles Labus, Student Council Executive Vice President for Educational Affairs.

"And may I introduce . . . " are the words of a solicitous Lambda Kappa Delta member in presenting Miss Joyce Kiley at the annual Joyce Kiley Mile last Thursday.

LKD Crawls Over Tape For Win In Annual Kiley Mile

A solemn and traditional event on the Villanova campus held forth for its sixth consecutive year last Thursday afternoon.

This activity, the annual running of the Joyce Kiley Mile, is actually the only bona fide tradition at Villanova (indeed strange and disquieting when one considers that the school is 119 years old.)

Gentle Deception

To many, even now, the name Joyce Kiley conveys little, if anything. Miss Kiley, who graced last Thursday's sprint with her presence in the personage of carefully camouflaged Junior Jack Shiels, is, however, no myth.

It appears that Miss Kiley accepted two dates for the 1956 Homecoming Weekend. Subsequently, the two good-humored Villanovans decided to resolve the crisis by the running of a mile to determine who should escort the young lady during the weekend.

This year, with various aids, such as bicycles, short cuts across the track's green and a general free-for-all during the final lap among those fraternity members with ultra-strong loyalties, Lambda Kappa Delta's

On Education

"The secret to education lies in respecting the student."

Dale Carnegie did not write the above statement. It was written by Ralph Waldo Emerson in his essay, "Education," and has a very practical significance here at Villanova.

Today, education is probably the most valuable asset that a man can possess. The better the individual's education, the greater his advantages in life. Education has always been difficult to come by, but day by day it is becoming increasingly more so.

Why is it that with all the modern facilities, techniques and funds available, education is becoming harder to achieve? Evidence for the answer to this can be found here at Villanova.

It seems to us that the respect and admiration commanded by today's student is somewhat less than that held previously. In past years, the admiration accorded to students led those in contact with them to help them and to attempt to remove possible frustrations to the academic processes.

Today, it seems as though efforts are being made to increase the obstacles to these processes. It has become virtually impossible, though understandably so, to obtain a library book without excessive delay and inconvenience. The same is true of the Book Store. The strict security measures taken at exams should be unnecessary.

How can we possibly get the most from our academic efforts when these very efforts are everywhere impeded, delayed, and inconvenienced? How are we to develop an academic frame of mind when we are always conscious of the aura of distrust that follows us?

Before casting blame, can you tell us what causes this distrust? A little reflection will reveal that it is a direct result of applied student action. It is the result of past and present theft in the library and the Book Store. It is the result of gross dishonesty in our academic efforts. All of us complain about the hardship of getting an education and yet we daily cause it to become more difficult.

The measures which this school has found necessary to take in order to prevent economic loss and to preserve academic integrity are a financial burden which would gladly be laid aside. It is often more difficult to guard than to be guarded.

What can be done to get rid of these impediments to education? A realization by us is in order. A realization that we have caused the school to lose its respect for us. Restoration of this respect is paramount. A more acute awareness by each of us about the meaning and importance of personal integrity will bring this about. Once we start, the strict measures mentioned would be unnecessary and our studies here would be a lot easier. The secret to our future success here lies in establishing this respect.

Why Not Get Out of the Fire?

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

I realize that your staff is not the largest of all campus organizations, but I cannot use this fact to justify incompetant (sic) and distorted articles to appear in your newspaper. I refer to, (sic) "The Folly of the Fourty" (sic) by Joe Massey. After reading the article, I could feel nothing but disgust for this self-styled voice in the wilderness, crying out for the good of humanity. Since when does this psuedo-reporter and columnist have the right to accuse three hundred and sixty people of "dimwitted bull-sessions" and "meaningless messages?" Maybe this author's friends are of the level of this type of conversation, but I resent the blanket implication that everyone else is the same. I would sincerely ask how the author is so expert on "topics requiring the exercise of lung power to the greatest possible extent." Could it be that he is one of the foremost experts on "booze, broads, baseball and pure bull?" How can you, the editor, permit this member of the "elite fourty (sic)" to criticize (sic) people for not watching a program when it is physically impossible for them to do so? I would suggest that you inform Mr. Massey that a lot of people around this campus only have one hour for lunch. As a result, the viewing of a major speech is also impossible because of the time factor.

I suggest that Mr. Massey purchase the New York Times of the day following the President's address. He will find that a complete text of the President's address is to be found. In fact, summaries and editorials on the address can be found in ALL newspapers. I am sure that most, if not all, of the people in the scene "reminiscent of a nursery for mentally retarded children" read of the President's major address. Could it not be, Mr. Editor, that "education is subordinate to recreation" during lunch period? Does this imply that Villanovans don't care about world-shaping events?

I would think that Mr. Massey has insulted Villanova by his outspoken, pseudo-intellectual and God-like statement, "Bliss is the object of the sum of most Villanovans interest, and ignorence (sic) is bliss." I take this statement as an insult to my school, my classmates and myself. I am of the opinion that the article is not fit for printing in a newspaper which represents Villanova. I believe that this article creates a false and derogatory picture of Villanova and her students. I hope that an apology or clarification is coming from Mr. Massey. I, and I am sure that there are others, would like to know what right Mr. Massey has to condemn the students who were present in the Pie Shoppe on the day he received his inspiration.

I sincerely hope that articles like Mr. Massey's will disappear from the Villanovan or at least have a better basis for argument.

Stanley W. Zak, Jr.'63

Reply By The Editor

The article referred to by the writer, "The Folly of the Forty," appeared in the October 11 issue of the VILLANOVAN.

There are several points on which the writer stands mistaken. First of all, the article mentioned four hundred people, not three hundred and sixty. Secondly, there was no accusation made whatsoever. There was simply a clear statement of fact. Surely Mr. Zak is not so naive as to believe that the conversations taking place at the various tables and the messages blaring over the public address system were of more substance and more importance than the President's address.

Thirdly, the author is also a student and assuredly well aware of a student's lunch hour limitations. But there is no reason why a crowded cafeteria can be quiet at lunch time when the World Series is on the television and not when the President is. Or is there, Mr. Zak?

The writer will be pleased to note that the author did indeed purchase THE NEW YORK TIMES and, what is more important, read the President's address in its entirety. Neither a summary nor an editorial, neither of which, as Mr. Zak would have discovered had he investigated were carried by ALL papers, could possibly have conveyed the full meaning and import of the speech.

Mr. Zak has taken Mr. Massey to task for making a "blanket implication." But to say that "most of the people . . . read of the President's speech" is to make a highly unstable generalization, yourself, Mr. Zak. Such a statement merely gives added emphasis to the point of the article. Rather than listen to their President they relegated what he had to say to the same status as Lillian Reis pinups and the other odds and ends that fill the pages of their favorite tabloid.

As to the alleged insult and desired apology Mr. Massey replied by paraphrasing a famous American. He said, "If the truth be an insult, Mr. Zak, make the most of it. The President of the United States is the elected representative of the people of the United States. He deserves, if not attention, at least respect. Making it virtually impossible for him to be heard by those persons interested in their country is not according him that respect. It was the President and the country, not the noise makers, who were insulted.

On Survival

Today, more than at any other period in history, we are faced with an alarming danger beyond all envision or expectation of the human mind. This peril is total annihilation as a direct result of a thermonuclear war.

We have a choice: either survival which entails surrender or freedom which demands a readiness to wage war. The decision which we make today will determine the future of later generations. The course of action which we pursue will have an unswerving effect upon the people of tomorrow. Therefore, now is the time that the repercussions of these choices be ascertained and a decision rendered.

The verdict must be capable of preserving the rights of man at any costs and by using any means. For if these natural rights of man are lost, then civilization will sink to the lowest depths of degradation and all that man ever cherished will have been destroyed.

Those who advocate total disarmament and oppose warfare, no matter what the Soviet Union does, do so under the pretense and guise of reality. Hence, the pacifist stresses surrender as the only guarantee of survival. But, what is survival if man cannot be free? To exist only as a physical entity without the right and freedom of conviction would be futile. This restriction would be antagonistic to the very nature of man.

The realism the pacifists propose is distorted to their own concepts, but the correct connotation of this reality has its origin in antiquity when a man from Virginia leaped to his feet and screamed, "Give me liberty or give me death!" It was reality when thousands of men gave their lives in war to preserve what others may enjoy. It is reality when freedom is instilled deep within man and the desire to maintain it is prevalent.

Are we Americans going to permit these "realities" to become fantasies because we place a greater value on survival? If so, then multitudes have died in vain!

The trend is inevitable; we have no choice . . . .

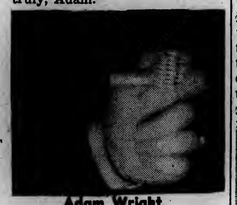
An Exhortation

After weeks of political manuevering and misleading press releases, the search for a successor to Dag Hammarskjold seems to be at an end. The replacement for the deceased Hammarskjord is supposed to be U. Thant, a relatively obscure Burmese diplomat. He will, if elected, fill the one and a half year gap left in Hammarskjord's term.

The quest for someone of Mr. U. Thant's acceptibility was not as hard as the agreement between the great powers regarding this man's power. Russia proposed her preposterous "troika" plan and followed this up with a similarily preposterous "sub-troika" proposal.

Finally Russia's chief diplomat, Valeria Zorin, conceeded to consultation powers for the three man board. This was not a great concession for the communists although it will be exploited as such.

Actually it is a gain for the Russians because to some small extent they have diluted the prestige of the office; they have also opened the door for a future interpretation of the panel's power to mean "veto power."



On top of all of this they can smile and say that they negotiated and compromised in order to save the U. N. Actually they saved it because they still want to use it.

It speaks well for the United States that we were not frightened into conceeding more. We must now hope that U. Thant is strong enough to know his own mind, and not be influenced to a great extent by the three man board especially into making more concessions to the Soviet bloc.

Trip To B.C., Talk To Be A "BMOC" —So Begins The Swing Of Things

We're not getting as much mail as we are accustomed to receiving at this time of year. Usually the letters are pouring in from friends at such places as V.M.I., Holy Cross, and the University of Massachusetts. But we're not going to neglect our friends just because they're not writing to us, no sir! So the post cards go out—"Dear John, Villanova, 22—V.M.I., 0. Yours truly, Adam."

Adam Wright

We enjoy dropping the three-penny cards into the little mail slot and we'd like to voice three cheers times thirty for the guys who are winning games for Villanova, and ergo, for us.

B.C. Weekend

We're going to the B.C. game. But we're a bit concerned about that weekend. We hear that not many of our fellow Villanovans are going with us. This makes us sad. We remember Boston a few years ago and we remember the Villanova part at the Boston Armory. The Armory holds 4000 people. It was over-crowded by 2000. This much we're sure of: we are going to Boston; Villanova's going to win; we're going to celebrate; then we're goin to come back to Villanova and send post cards to all our friends at B.C.

We took Physics in our Sophomore year. We learned, among other things, that a current follows the path of least resistance. We wish the guys who designed the new Mendel Hall had taken physics too. We're stil looking for a path of least resistance between classes in that building.

We were told that this building cost over $4,000,000. Would someone tell us where the COKE machine is?

The other day we saw a three time loser: a V.M.I. football coach driving an Edsel with a Nixon sticker on it.

And speaking of politics, we ran into a fellow Villanovan who had been an avid Kennedy supporter in the last election. He was wearing a button which said "Goldwater in '64." We wonder!

The other day we were ascending the stairs in the Library when a clumsy frosh rounded the corner, tripped, and came tumbling down the steps on a collision course pushing both of us to the floor. We realize that frosh are "out," but we thought that we could at least have had the decency to be a nurse.

We helped the shaky little fellow to his feet. He looked at us somewhat sheepishly and said that he was sorry. He was hurrying, he told us, to a meeting of the Biology Club and was a bit late because he was just coming from a meeting of the Sociology Club. He added that he was trying to take advantage of everything Villanova had to offer.

The Biology Club, Sociology Club, I.C.G., and I.R.S. would help him to better understand mankind. He added that the Philosophy Club helped him to tie these subjects together.

How To Make A Million

Not long ago John Paul Getty, world's richest man (in the billions) wrote a newspaper article telling how any ordinary person could become a millionaire. He cited the usual things: up early in the morning, shave every day etc.

I believe in a different school of thought which holds that a millionaire has to be a conniver; a real, honest-to-goodness red-blooded wheeler and dealer.

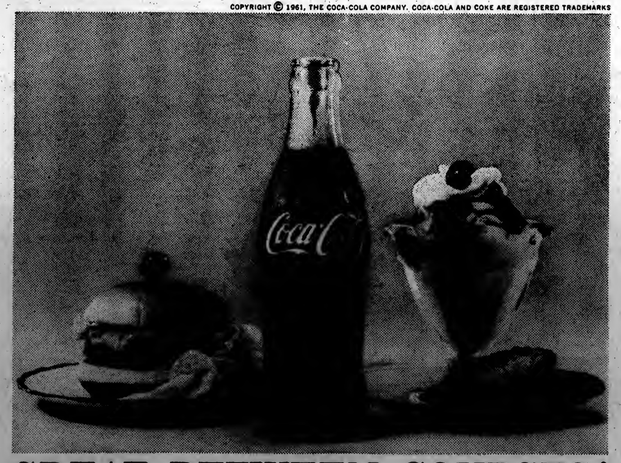
Here are some typical examples of ordinary jokers throughout the years who made their bundles in just this way. Historians have no record of these people, but they would have, if they had kept their eyes open.

Marcus Rebellius—got started scalping tickets outside the Roman Colosseum, later took over the hot dog concession.

Sir Patrick Pensee — began picking up discarded helmets at jousts and melting them down for scrap iron, later opened a chain of junk yards.

Duncan Stuart — lived in London during the 17th century, did not panic during troubled times. Sigmund Freud—had a better than average imagination, started selling comic books.

Leroy Frammis — knew how to speak the Indian's language, got a big kick-back from Peter Minuet on the Manhattan Island deal.



Pete Nolan

Seymour O'Connor — met a shoeshine boy in Philly and got the idea of calling him "Father Divine," now calls himself "The Holy Ghost."

Dan Kelly — opened a beer parlor near V.U.

Fellini's "La Dolce Vita" Proves Only Partial Success

by Al LaMastra

Because there are too many flaws in "La Dolce Vita," it cannot really be called one of the greatest films of all time; yet there are many sequences which still make it a notable addition to the great Italian neo-realist school, and place it above the ranks of hundreds of banal films churned out at Cinecitta Studios in Rome.

For one thing, no one can deny that it is an "exploitation" picture, i.e., a movie which is promoted so as to attract sensation-seekers. For the past two years it has been shrewdly and expensively sold throughout Europe with many of the same gimmicks used in its U.S. presentation.

In directly cutting from scene to scene, sans fade-out and musical crescendo, artistic moods in the spirit of early Orson Welles, are sometimes achieved. But continuous use of sharp editing makes us suspect that the film is a series of shock effects, entertaining as in Psycho, but not a first rate technique for drama.

Morality Inc.

The story ideas, supposedly gleaned from Italian newspapers, can be called a script but cannot in strictest definition be considered a screenplay, being little more than literal expansion of copy which might appear in the "Roman Tattler."

Finally, the quiet uneasy feeling that the film's concluding sequence, "the orgy," has been added to bring in not only the discreet customer but also the tired, poor, and perverted from all alleys of life, might clutch the audience. Fellini has called it his greatest moral indictment. Of course many dollars can be made in this kind of indicting.

Searing Drama Evolved

Undoubtedly this scene as well as the film's other revelations do hit home. In this final sequence, the entire tempo of the film has deliberately been placed in slow motion. Nino Roto's well conceived background music score sets the pace, by creating a vulgar theme to match the degenerate antics on-screen. The thrill-seeking cafe-society is stumped. They have tried every perversion and by the time of the orgy are stupified because they cannot think of anything new or exciting to amuse themselves.

Their movements are purposely made clumsy by Fellini's superb directing, and every inch of their horrible past existence is magnified by their futile search in conversation and action for some new "high" not to be found. Perhaps it is this thought-provoking topic which persuaded the Legion of Decency to place this film on the Separate Classification list.

The "Sweet Life"

Each segment of the picture in itself is thought-provoking, absorbing, and unforgettable. They are flimsily held together by the rovings of a gossip columnist who, unable to resist the temptations of his corrupt and sensualist subjects, sinks with bitter significance to the depth of his surroundings. It is the "sweet life," the easy life of Rome's scandalous upper crust and foreign celebrity crowd which is attacked—an attack which denounces loose living and low morals everywhere.

With the reporter we spin through an image of a tired Rome, perhaps a tired world in which decadence and depravity are ever moving forward. It presents a fascinating but too often sensational picture of the morally sick and the callously cruel, the sad and the sinful, the greedy, vain, and selfish, the suicidal and the hypocritical, the sexually perverted and the phonily pretentious, the religiously corrupt and superstitious and the atheistically cynical.

Excellent Type-Casting

Federico Fellini has derived his cast from all walks of life and all turn in a first rate performance. Anita Ekberg has been chosen to represent Hollywood's noisy colony abroad. She is well supported by Yvonne Furneaux, Anouk Aimee, Alain Cuny, Magali Noel, and Lex Barker.

Our star-reporter, Marcello Mastroianni, turns in an adequate characterization of man on his way downhill. A man who knows his life is futile and cannot break away; yet refuses to drag anyone else down to his level. It is upon the bright, hopeful note of his waving-off the advances of an innocent young girl that the film frightfully but thankfully ends.

Friday night's Nick Basca Dance was a swinging affair, with over 800 couples in attendance.

Garett Evans, Junior Arts Major, has succeeded from Poetry Editor and Student Council Representative to Editor of this year's Lynx, the campus literary magazine. The editorial staff includes, Dan Grove; Associate Editor; Brian Vachon, Poetry Editor; Joe Ruggiero, Art Editor; Frank Murphy, Layout Editor; Barry Thornton, Copy Editor; Linda Vetisse, Business Editor; Toney McCrannon, Publicity Editor. Doctor Joseph Reino will act as moderator of the magazine.

The editor, expressing his hopes for this year's Lynx, has said, "I have nothing but the greatest optimism for the Lynx.

"I have watched it improve steadily since my freshman year. Last year many lauded our literary magazine as the best ever produced here . . . and last year, the Lynx was badly marred by technical errors!

Radical Improvement

"This year, without question, the literary magazine will not improve steadily at all, but will improve radically. It is impossible for it to do anything else with what we have to work with now.

"It should be as good as is possible though. It is, in my opinion, the most obvious gauge of creative ability on this campus. So I appeal to anyone with creative ability—submit your best work—and before we are finished this year even the girls at Bryn Mawr will gasp with admiration!"

KIELY MILE

President Ron Viscuso managed to crawl across the finish line before the others.

Knights Of Columbus Donate Microfilm Reader To Library

The Father Ludwig Knights of Columbus Council No. 4609, recently donated a microfilm reader and printer to the library. The machine will be available to all undergraduate and graduate students. With the printer, students may reproduce existing microfilms at nominal cost.

At the council meeting of Monday, October 9, tentative plans for the year were announced. The council's first undertaking, a buffet for members at the Ardmore Hall after the Buffalo game Saturday, October 14, was touted a "success".

Future plans include the showing of the film "Noble Heritage," a movie history of the Knights of Columbus and their achievements, on October 25 at 7:30 p.m. at Vasey Hall Auditorium. All Villanova students are invited to attend this free movie. New council members will be granted the first degree on October 31.

Communion Breakfast

The annual Communion Breakfast of the Knights will be held on November 1. The Mass will be offered at 10:00 a.m. in St. Mary's Hall Chapel, followed by a breakfast at 11:00 a.m. at the Treadway Inn. Speakers at the breakfast will be Dr. William Costello of Villanova's Education Department and General Program Director of the Knights of Columbus for the state of Pennsylvania, and Mr. Jack Kraft, the Varsity Basketball coach of Villanova.

Law School Red Mass To Be Celebrated By Bishop Furey

The annual Red Mass for the students and alumni of the Villanova University School of Law will be celebrated on Friday evening, October 20, at 7:00 p.m. in the St. Thomas of Villanova Chapel on the campus. The Mass is traditionally celebrated to ask the blessing of the Holy Spirit upon the students, faculty, and alumni of the School of Law.

The Mass is known as the Red Mass for two reasons. The vestments of the clergy and the altarcloths are of that color which has always been associated with the Holy Spirit.

The celebrant of the Pontifical Mass will be the Most Reverend Francis J. Furey, Auxiliary Bishop of Philadelphia. Most Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President, will assist at the Mass. Reverend Fidelis O'Rourke, OFN, Dean of the School of Business of St. Bonaventure College, will deliver the sermon.

Parents' Ticket Sale

Len Carnaghi, general chairman of Parents' Weekend, has announced that tickets for the Villanova-Quantico Marines' football game that weekend will go on sale two weeks early. This will enable students to procure their own and their parents' tickets for the game a week before the tickets go on sale to the general public.

With the game ticket each student will receive a special ticket enabling his parents to park in the Villanova parking lot without paying the usual fifty cents. Carnaghi urges students to buy their tickets early so that they will be able to sit with their parents at the game.

In addition to the game on Saturday, Parents' Weekend will consist of a variety show on Friday, October 27 and a Mass in the Chapel on Sunday, October 29. Admission to the variety show will be free.

AICHE Awards Prizes

The Villanova Chemical Engineering Department has announced that it was awarded first and second prizes at the twelfth annual conclave of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers at Bucknell University.

This is the first time in the history of the conclaves that first and second prizes were awarded to the same school. A panel of eight representatives from industry judged the technical papers submitted by seventeen Eastern Universities.

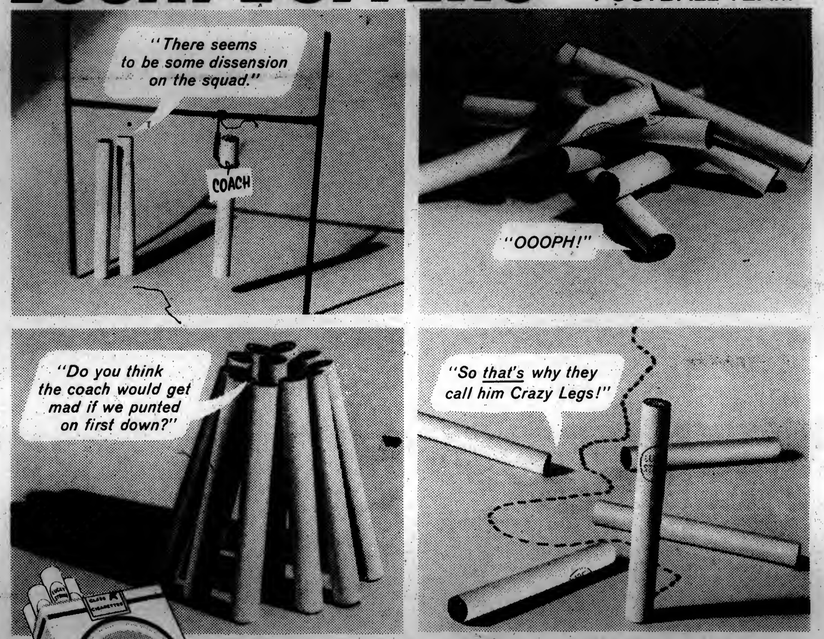
$13,000 Grant Made

A grant of $13,000 has been received by Villanova University from the National Science Foundation it was announced this week by the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President.

The grant was made to the University's Biology Department for the support of research in the field of cell division. Studies in this field were begun by the University two years ago under an earlier grant from the Foundation.

Dr. Roman Maksymowych, Professor of Biology, will direct the research project. A native of the West Ukraine, Dr. Maksymowych was educated in Austria and the University of Pennsylvania. He joined the Villanova faculty in 1959 after serving as a biology teacher at Penn.



Under the terms of the grant the project will continue for another two year period. The present grant becomes effective immediately. Research will be conducted in the University laboratories.

The Record Office has requested that all foreign students report to that office in room 202 Tolentine Hall. Students will report before October 27 in order to fill out cards for the Foreign Census.

LUCKY PUFFERS "THE FOOTBALL TEAM"

WHY ONLY 11 MEN ON A FOOTBALL TEAM? Because all the other students are just too busy. Yes, busy doing research, studying, smoking Luckies, playing bongos, smoking Luckies, dating, partying, praising professors and smoking Luckies—much too busy for football. Why so many "smoking Luckies"? Simply this: We try to give an honest representation of college life; and college students smoke more Luckies than any other regular cigarette —so smoke Luckies.

Scholarships Given For Europe Studies To Undergraduates

Scholarships for undergraduate study in Europe during the academic year 1962-1963 were announced by the Institute of European Studies.

The scholarships are valued from $1,950 to $2,350, and provide a full year of study at one of the Institute's three study centers, Vienna, Freiburg (West Germany), and Paris. Round-trip ocean transportation from New York; tuition, room, most meals, language instruction, special courses, and field study are included.

October Application

The scholarship application period for the 1962-1963 academic year begins October and closes February 1, 1962. Students who will be sophomores or juniors, and who surpass the minimum qualifications required by each program, may apply.

Robert T. Bosshart, president of the Institute of European Studies, said the scholarship program is aimed at placing the best American and European education within the reach of all qualified U. S. college students.

Many Courses Offered

Students in each center may choose from a wide range of liberal arts courses. Sophomore and junior courses are conducted in the language of the host country. Feiburg classes are taught in German and open only to juniors.

Intensive language instruction is provided to all students, Bosshart said. Other special courses are also available.

Each program includes field-study trips which are directly related to formal course work. Bosshart said, the study trips, timed to occur during normal vacation periods, are a vital source of background knowledge for lecture classes.

The goal posts loom ahead as the Wildcats' blocking makes the way clear for another Richman gain during the Buffalo contest last Saturday.

Frosh Eleven Opens Here Friday Against Unbeaten Bullis Prep

The Villanova University freshman football team takes to the field Friday afternoon in the Main Line stadium to entertain Bullis Prep, from Silver Springs, Maryland, in their '61 opener. Under the direction of Ed Michaels, the Wildcats will be out to open the season with a victory and follow in the footsteps of their varsity cohorts.

In an interview with Bullis Prep coach Bob Hayes, the VILLANOVAN learned that the Bullis team is anxious to face the Wildcats but even more anxious to maintain their undefeated ways. So far, the Maryland team has disposed of Westly College, 32-0, and the University of Richmond frosh.

Big Halfback

The Bullis' boys have some impressive players in their own starting lineup. The most impressive runner is a big halfback, Bob Windsor.

Windsor, at 6'4" and 215 lbs., ripped the Westly line for over a hundred yards in the first half and then had to retire from the game with a twisted ankle. The quarterback is C. M. Twinkle. Though only 6'2" Twinkle weighs 220 lbs. and moves with authority. His passing stands out. Against Westly, C. M. threw three touchdowns. Two of them went to Howard Humphrur, an end. Howard is 6'4" and 200 lbs. The rest of the line is as follows: end Dick Brener 6'1", 185; tackles Bill Mandley and Gil Royal, both 6'2". Handley at 225 is 10 lbs. heavier than Royal. Guards are Jack Connally, 5'8", 195 lbs., and Floyd Koch, 6'0", 190. The center is George Twasko, 6'1", 205 lbs., while in the backfield with Twinkle and Windsor are Mike Tonley, 5'11", 190 lbs., the fullback, and Steve Shrawder, 5'10", 175 lbs., the other halfback.

Impressive Backfield

The Villanova team has a impressive backfield itself. Franny Dougherty, quarterback from West Catholic, was an All-Star selection last year. The halfbacks, both speedsters, are Dick Sernyah, from Bonner, and Tom O'Connor, whom Coach Michaels calls another Larry Glueck. The fullback is Mike Manger.

Coach Michaels hasn't decided on his starters in the line yet and the positions are still up for grabs. Bill O'Hara, John McDonald, Emitt Michaels, and Tom Smith are battling for the end posts while Bill Quigley, Charlie O'Reilly, Harry Walter, and Allan Atkinson are fighting for the tackle berths. There are some big boys in the group. The guards look like Tom Fitzpatrick and Mike Strofalino, while Chappy Moore from Bonner, and John McDonald from LaSalle, will divide the center positions.

Rugby Team Triumphs Over Baltimore 3-0 On Rain-swept Field

by Tom Bruderle

Villanova's Rugby Team defeated the Baltimore Rugby Club 3-0 this past week. It was the Wildcats second straight shout-out-victory of the year. Mike Ennis left-center, scored the only points of the game on a three point tri. The kick for the extra two points was missed. This is similar to a touchdown and the extra point try in American football.

Match Delayed

The Baltimore team arrived an hour and fifteen minutes late, with the match scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. This would enable the fans to watch the Buffalo game after the match. At noon, however, the team was forced to leave the field because the parking for the football game became a problem.

Game Played on Austin

The team moved to Smaller Austin Field. Finally at 12:15, Baltimore arrived and by 12:30 the game was under way.

The Wildcats waited only a few minutes before Ennis scored. Nevertheless, Baltimore continued to press. Villanova's eight forwards had trouble containing the Baltimore backs on the line-outs, which are used when the ball goes out of bounds.

Offensively, the Wildcats were stymied for three minutes while on the Baltimore five yard line.

Second Half Tight

In the second half Baltimore put Villanova on the defensive with some tremendous kicking. However, the Blue and White forwards (linemen) held the enemy backs in check and no score resulted.

Support The Team

Considering the inclement weather, delay of the game, and the switch of fields, the crowd was good. Captain Ralph Lewis urges support for the team by the student body. Fundamental instructions are printed and given out before each match.

They kept the ball and pressure in the VU end of the field for the last 15 minutes,but the defensive units were equal to the task. So proficient were they in their duties the Soph quarterback John Stofa commented, "Nearly everytime I went back into the pocket, I saw twice as many players as there should have been." He added, that Villanova was far and away the best club that he has faced all year. If you hear that remark again this season, rest assured it's not an echo. Next stop, Boston.

Richie Richman (15) makes short work of the Buffalo line as he gains ground during the 28-6 Wildcat victory last Saturday.

Rains Fail To Dampen Wildcat 11 As Buffalo Joins Bell's Victim List

by Joe Zawacki

With Villanova's vaunted defensive troops holding the University of Buffalo's net rushing yardage to 3 yards, the Wildcats fought ther way to a 28-6 victory over the Bulls in the rain last Saturday. A homecoming crowd of 10,000 for the Nick Basca weekend saw the home forces ignore the elements and four fumbles as they gained their sixth straight victory over a 2 year period.

Such was the might of the defense that the fourth period found the ball in Villanova territory the entire period, yet the Sophomore laden Buffalo team could not score. As it was, they had to fight the clock for their only score. With about a minute left in the first half, quarterback John Guerrie, passing from the VU 32, found end Rich Dickman on the 2 yard line for Buffalo's first completion of the game after 5 previous incomplete passes.

Best Position

After Guerrie tried the line without success, he passed to Larry Gerley in the end zone for the Buff score. This made the halftime score 14-6 and when they received the ball on the second half kickoff, they were in the best position of the day to make the game a battle.

However, with a 3rd and 18 situation, on their own 35, Bill Selent tried a quick kick, one of Buffalo's most successful moves this year. But a block was missed and Captain Rich Ross barrelled through and blocked the kick. The ball bounced back to the 7 yard line where it was recovered by Selent. Tommy O'-Rourke took the 4th down kick and returned it to the 34, where it took the Cats seven plays to score and put the pressure on the visitors. VU's leading ground gainer, Larry Glueck, scored his second TD with a plunge off left tackle, then followed with a run around left end for the extra two.

Unfair Tactics?

It took the Cats 6:16 to break in the scoring column, in the 1st period, and, as seems to be the custom these days, the opposition hadn't run too many plays before they found themselves behind. In this case, the Main Liners failed to gain a first down after the opening kick and after Ron Meyer's punt was returned to the Bulls' 26, John Guerrie's first down pass was intercepted by Glueck on the 38, which he returned to the 26. From there it was a matter of 9 plays before Richman sneaked over on fourth down from the one. Meyers was good with the first of his two extra point kicks.

"Easy" Larry

The second session opened with Richman throwing his only completion of the day, a big one to Glueck which covered 45 yards and placed the ball on Buffalos 14. Five plays later, Glueck, who seems to have an obsession for being all over the place, skirted left end from the three for six points.

A poor pass from center and the resultant four yard punt from the Buffalo seven led to the final Villanova tally at 9:16 of the third stanza. It took the "Go" unit just two plays to cover 10 yards as Bobby Merenda hit left tackle for the final 8 yards. The Bulls were dead, but not buried.

Five Down And Five To Go

VIEW FROM THE PRESSBOX, ÓR RAIN NEVER BOTHERS ME AT A FOOTBALL GAME: Did you ever notice that rain only bothers certain people at an outdoor event? If you apply the Association theory, you might observe that the unaffected bulge in certain areas, whereas those suffering do not. Is this a physiological difference?

Many were disappointed at the sudden change of weather for last Saturday's game. However they were laboring under the impression that the rain was a direct result of the elements of nature. Those close to the football scene knew better though. It is no small coincidence to them that the rain came in the same week that Tom Kepner came to practice on time everyday. This is progress, men.!!

No Excuses

Buffalo coach Dick Offenhamer refused to use the elements as an excuse. In answer to a viewer's question as to whether the rain had hampered the Bulls' passing attack (they had attempted 49 passes the week before), Offenhamer snorted, "It rained all right . . . Villanova linemen."

Tom Kepner

And so it did. The defense continued to function as a whole and the results came out assembly-line fashion for the fifth time in a row. Twenty-five points is all that the opponents have tallied thus far.

Another compliment from Offenhamer: "Your team jumped into the lead from the start and while we were scratching for first downs to catch up, you were grinding our lines for scores."

"If your boys keep their present attitude and continue the same level of play, you could go unbeaten. The teamwork is something to be admired."

Greasy Fingers

If there are any complaints at all to be leveled at our forces, it has to be in the fumbles dept. where 13 of 18 have been recovered by the opposition. Fortunately, they have not been as damaging as they could be.

Some people like their hobbies sufficiently enough to live by them. Halfback Larry Glueck seems to be no exception. A dixieland jazz fan, he hops around the field as much as some of his favorites on stage. The result is that he leads the VU ground gainers with 230 yards in 29 carries, the pass receivers with 144 yards and 7 completions, and in points scored with 32. As further evidence of the 'Cats' teamwork however, each of these departments are so close that they are subject to change from week to week.

The team statistics show up the Main Liners' assets even better:

VU		OPPS.
62	First Downs, Rushing	23
22	First Downs, Passing	16
86	Total First Downs	42
364	No. Offensive Plays	254
1103	Net Rushing Yardage	362*
512	Net Passing Yardage	455
1615	Total Offense	817

 Should place the team in the top ten in the country.

Passingwise, Richman has completed 12 of 32 passes for 250 yards, with 1 TD and 1 interception resulting. Ted Aceto has completed 15 of 36 for 210 yards, 4 TD's and 4 interceptions.

Mr. Cool

One wonders how jealousy has not reared its ugly head in the Wildcat locker room this year. This is not meant to imply team dissention, but rather a more serious problem. For example, could you play on the same team as Richie Phillips and not be envious of his suaveness ?? It makes you wonder of the injustice that the "Bear" should have all the "cool" while others are left without it.

Season's Third Trip North Matches Wildcats And Eagles

by Ed Lohr

Villanova's undefeated, untied Wildcats storm into Massachusetts for the third time this season to take on rugged Boston College Saturday at Alumni Stadium in Chestnut Hill.

The Eagles from New England, suffering from injuries and a tough schedule, have only managed to salvage one win in four outings this year. They opened with a win at home against Cincinnati and then headed on a disastrous three game road trip, in which they were drubbed soundly by Northwestern 45-0, Houston 21-0, and a future Villanova opponent Detroit 20-3 last week.

Same Team Back

Coach Ernie Hefferle will field about the same team that knocked off the 'Cats last year at the Main Line Stadium 20-6. Directing the attack again for the Maroon and Gold will be senior George Van Cott with Mike Tomeo back at right half and 205 pound Harry Crump at fullback.

In the right half slot it will probably be either Jack McGann or Jack Shields, with McGann the junior getting the nod over the senior.

The Eagles from Beantown boast of one of the biggest forward walls in the country but it lacks overall speed. Playing at the pivot position will be Tom Hall, a 210 pound junior from Brooklyn, N. Y. The guard duty will be handled by two capable platoons. One will be Lou Cioci (210) and Dave Yelle (210), the other twosome Don Gautreau (205) and Bill Byrne (220).

Two Massive Tackles

It begins to sound like the N.F.L. when you hear the weights of the tackles. Don Antonellis and Gene Garrington both tip the scales at a mighty 270 pounds and John Buckly is a little guy at 240 pounds.

The ends are headed up by injury-riddled and highly touted Artie Graham a 185 pounder from Somerville Mass. and Lou Kirouac a 200 pound senior. Another standout at end is Captain Joe Sikorski.

In a recent interview Hefferle complained of multiple injuries and the amount of traveling his Eagles have done in the early stages of the campaign.

The three things that have hampered the Bostonians have been lack of depth in several positions, lack of a good punter to get them out of trouble, and most important they are very deficient in overall speed.

Villanova's surprising Wildcats (5-0) will be rated the favorites in this year's renewal of a long-standing rivalry but Alex Bell's chargers will have to be at their best mentally and physically to clip the Bird's wings on Saturday as the Eagles will be flying high to knock the 'Cats from the unbeaten ranks.

Boston Hosts 700 Villanovans For Boston College Weekend

It has been three years since Villanova last visited Boston and it might be another three years before they will want to visit it again. For, their previously undefeated and untied football squad was squelched by an immense Boston College squad 22-6.

But spirit was great. Better than 700 undergraduate Villanovans and another 300 alumni appeared at B. C.'s Alumni Field to cheer and support a Villanova rarity, a winning football team. Students traveled the four hundred odd miles to Boston from the Main Line via many modes.

To Those Who Walked

Some came by plane, as did the the official football party, some made the scene by bus, as organized by the Spirit Committee, some by their thumb, as a means of being economical and some by their own ingenuity, as befits Villanovans. But most traveled by automobile for comfort and luxury leaving behind them a wake of spirited enthusiasm throughout New Jersey, New York, and New England.

Four Boston hotels hosted the Villanovans and contributed to their spirit of companionship and partying with a tolerant attitude.

Essex Party

The scheduled "victory dance" on Saturday saw many of Villanova forget the past and look to the remainder of the season. Girls from many of the area colleges and universities accepted the invitations extended by the Spirit Committee to attend the party in the hotel ballroom.

Much traveling was done that weekend and the Wildcat's head did even more as Boston College students paused it about the stadium. Villanovans finally recovered it and prepared an attack upon their eagle but its cage proved adequate and the eagle merely lost much energy and feathers. Tom Wall President of the Villanova Student Council, has authorized a letter to the Boston College Student Council requestion payment for damages to the Wildcat.

Come Sunday morning and many headaches, Villanovans packed up and headed back to classes and a Quantico game this weekend.

Lawrence Hosts 35 College Editors At Historical Press Meet

David Lawrence, Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania held a historical press conference October 17, in his Harrisburg office. The press conference was attended by delegates of thirty-five college newspapers. It was the first such gathering in the state's history. Universities such as Penn State and Villanova, plus small colleges like Chestnut Hill and Haverford were invited to question the affable governor on subjects that ranged from federal aid to education to water pollution.

Loaded Questions

The conference which was held in conjunction with National Newspaper Week, turned out to be a tremendous success. Capitol Hill reporters who attended the meeting as silent guests, remarked that they had never seen the chief executive face so many loaded and straight forward questions. The reporter

Nasser's Mistakes Caused Split Of UAR Dr. Malik Tells IRS

The International Relations Society of Villanova University held its second meeting of the year, Thursday evening, October 19.

The featured speaker of the evening was Dr. Hefeez Malik of the History and Political Science Department whose topic was the recent dissolvment of the United Arab Republic.

In his talk, Dr. Malik enumerated what he thought to be three main reasons for the failure of the UAR.

Nasser's Blunders

Dr. Malik stated that when the UAR came into existence in 1958, Arab nationalism was at its peak, and all concerned parties were for the union. But Nassar made three vital mistakes in the handling of the nationalism of Syria.

Mistake number one: When Syria joined the Union with Egypt, her government was leftist and entertaining Soviet overtures. Nasser disregarded this element when he outlawed Communism and leftist sentiments.

Mistake number two: Administration for Syrian local affairs was shifted to Cairo, and in many cases hindered the carrying out of these affairs.

Mistake number three: Nassar wanted reforms; his own kind, and not Communist reforms. He wanted reforms in labor, land, and living conditions. This attitude aggravated the industrial and vested classes. These three

Dance and Westchester Game Dominant Notes of Cotillion

Final preparations for the Sophomore Cotillion on November 3-4 have become concrete with times, dates, and events for the weekend being finally established.

The cotillion itself has been arranged for Friday evening at nine o'clock until one. Preceding the dance, a rally for the Saturday football game with West Chester will be held at 8:30 on Mendel Field.

West Chester Game

Marty McGuinn, President of the Sophomore Class, reiterated the fact that the dance would be open to all classes and that the weekend is ideally situated since it includes the last football weekend of the year, and since the game does present a tremendous rivalry between area colleges.

Arrangements have been completed to have Chuck Gordon and his ten piece orchestra entertain while the Revelers offer music during the intermission. During the first intermission, each male will be allowed to vote for the eight finalists in the Cotillion queen contest. Then, at the second, Joe Tate, Orientation Chairman will present the "Best OC" award to the best member of the Orientation Committee.

Heavily Decorated

The whole atmosphere of the dance has been centered around the theme of a dance in the park during the 1890's. More so than any other dance of the year, the Cotillion relies heavily on extensive decorations.

Tickets are now available in the Pie Shoppe and through individual members of the committees for three dollars.

Decorations are being handled by Andy Lovus and John Sperger. In charge of publicity are Bob Rose and Don Nikolaus while Bob McGarry will take care of miscellaneous details.

Psychology Lecture By Doctor McGurk Enlightens Club

At the October 19 meeting of the Psychology Club, Dr. McGurk of the Villanova University Psychology Department spoke on "Basic Concepts in Experimental Psychology".

In his lecture, Dr. McGurk differentiated between the two kinds of mehods employed in experimental psychology. The laboratory method takes place under rigid controls, with as many variables as possible held constant. Field experiments are used where laboratory experiments are not feasible. Dr. McGurk stated "Controls sometimes destroy the very thing you are looking for".

The end sought in experimental Psychology is the ability to predict between an experimental variable and a person's response to it. "Predictions," said Dr. McGurk, "are statements of probability, not truth. Science does not deal in absolutes, but in probabilities".

Dr. McGurk's lecture was one in a series of talks involving scholastic preparation, opportunities, and the type of work involved in the field of experimental psychology. The series of lectures will be followed by a field trip, to be decided at a later date.

Barren Victory Tree

A lone piece of tissue paper dangles from the Villanova victory tree, symbolizing either victory or defeat. Had Saturday brought a win the tall elm would be covered for the sixth time this year with the white toilet paper of the campus dormatories.

Harrisburg Conference

from West Chester State College continually badgered Governor Lawrence, trying to get him to shed some light on the recent fiasco regarding the firing of that college's president and the subsequent accusations about West Chester's liberal treatment of athletes.

Governor Lawrence, a crafty politician, maintained that the colleges board of trustees had handled the situation according to the power granted to them; he added that his investigation revealed no signs of a football scandal.

Many of the representatives of small state colleges questioned Lawrence about the apportionment of funds to their schools, and the changing of these colleges into liberal art schools (formerly they were teachers colleges). His answers to these queries seemed to satisfy the inquisitors.

Election Question

A great guffaw went up from the crowd when one of the collegians asked the seventy-two year old Governor if he planned to oppose Bill Green in the upcoming Democratic primary election. Lawrence categorically denied the implication, but later on said that he would remain active politically. The Governor also expressed his approval of federal aid to education, and a graduated income tax for the state, to replace the Sales Tax.

After the conference with the Governor which got under way thirty minutes late but still lasted for over ninety minutes, the party was taken on a tour of the capitol. Later, the college editors were invited to attend any one of three conferences with either the Superintendents of Public Education, Welfare, or Forest and Wildlife.

Application For Teacher Examination Now Being Accepted

The National Teacher Examinations, prepared and administered annually by Educational Testing Service, will be given at more than 200 testing centers throughout the United States on Saturday, February 10, 1962.

At the one-day testing session a candidate may take the Common Examinations, which include tests in Professional Information, General Culture, English Expression, and Non-Verbal Reasoning; and one or two of thirteen Optional Examinations designed to demonstrate mastery of subject matter to be taught. The college which a candidate is attending, or the school system in which he is seeking employment, will advise him whether he should take the National Teacher Examinations and which of the Optional Examinations to select.

Bulletin of Information

A Bulletin of Information (in which an application is inserted) describing registration procedures may be obtained from college officials, school superintendents, or directly from the National Teacher Examinations, Educational Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey.

Completed applications, accompanied by proper examination fees, will be accepted by the ETS office during November and December, and early in January so long as they are received before January 12, 1962.

Catholic Youth Week Planned By NFCCS

Villanova University will hold its first Catholic Youth Week between October 29 and November 5. A national observance, Catholic Youth Week is sponsored by the NFCCS and held in conjunction with the Religious Affairs Committee of the Student Council.

Catholic Youth Week has as its purposes the emphasizing of potentials and resources of Catholic Youth and the need of Catholic Youth in the reform of society.

Tentative plans for the week of October 29-November 5 include a Mass celebrated in the Byzantine Rite on All Saints Day and the nomination of Villanova's outstanding Catholic student of the year. Nomination and election of the nominee will be made by the Student Council.

Belle Masque Skit Featured As Lead For Variety Show

The abstract term, variety, has now assumed definite concrete notions in regard to the annual Parents' Weekend sponsored by the Villanova Student Council. Thus, it will be the general theme for the weekend.

General Chairman, Len Carnaghi, has posted letters to all the parents containing maps, programs and return-addressed post cards.

Six Acts

As master-of-ceremonies for the Friday evening Variety Show, in Vasey Hall Auditorium Joe Salviolo has arranged for six acts with a one-act play by Belle Masque as the highlight. Also featured in the show are skits by Guy Guarch, impersonations, Kevin Shee, magician; the Criterions, "Kingston Trio" type music; the Villanovans, dixieland and jazz music; and a humorous act by Turf 'n' Tinsel entitled "Crime Doesn't Pay."

Members of each act are offering their time and efforts for no monetary consideration, about which Carnaghi particularly complimented them. There will, subsequently, be no charge for admission.

The Saturday activities will incude official registration of the parents at the Guard House, at 9:30, and, at ten, a "Concert on the Green" given by either the Glee Club or the Villanova Band.

Rugby and Football

Saturday aso offers two sporting events for Villanovans and their parents to view. At 11:00, the Villanova Rugby squad tests the strength of the Triangle Club from Quantico.

Then, two and a half hours later, the Quantico football team takes the field against the strong Villanova club of Alex Bell. This game will be the only expense for the weekend at Villanova.

On Sunday at 11:45, the weekend will close with a Mass in the University Chapel.

Rosemont Tournament Begins The Season For Debate Society

Villanova University's Beta Gamma Debate Society is one of many debate societies which exist on different campuses around the United States. Its principal objective is to train Novice and Varsity members in the art of argumentation, so they can compete successfully against other colleges in debate tournaments.

This semester, President J. Terry Stratman intends to concentrate on the training of the Novice team, so it can join the Varsity team in the important tournaments which will be held in the second semester. A plan has also been developed in cooperation with other colleges, to hold intercollegiate novice debates, which will enable novicees to obtain more experience and polish, thus advancing towards the Varsity ranks.

The Varsity team will compete in its first intercollegiate tournament on the weekend of November 3 and 4 at Rosemont College. The week after, a tournament will take place at St. Joseph's College. The general topic for all of these year's debates will be: Resolved that labor organizations should come under the jurisdiction of anti-trust laws. The judges in every tournament will be faculty members, moderators or teams from colleges not participating in the particular tournament.

Villanova University will serve as host for the 2nd Annual Invitational Debate Tournament on December 11, 1961 .

Marine Corps Selection Team Interviews October 26 to 31

A Marine Corps Officer Selection Team will visit Villanova University on October 26, 27, 30, and 31, to interview students who are interested in becoming officers in the United States Marine Corps.

Basically there are two programs: one for freshmen, sophomores, and juniors; the other for seniors and recent graduates. The former program, popularly known as PLC (Platoon Leaders Class) can be summed up in the following features: remain in school with draft deferrment; no on-campus meetings or drills —just two six-week summer courses at Quantico, Virginia; pay while in summer training—and increased pay later as an officer by reason of seniority; and commissioning on graduation day followed by three year's active duty.

Under the Officer Candidate Course, for seniors and recent graduates, completion of a ten week Officer Candidate School at Quantico, Virginia, is followed by commissioning as a second lieutenant and three years of active duty. In the case of aviators, the active duty obligation is approximately a year and one-half longer because of flight training.

Chemical Society Receive Honor

The most recent issue of the American Chemical Society Student Affiliate Newsletter, September-October 1961, has a list of seventeen chapters of student affiliates which "deserve special commendation for submitting reports of a superior nature". These seventeen chapters have been singled out from among the 376 chapters in the country for this special recognition. The Villanova Chapter was among this honored seventeen.

The reports were judged on the basis of the activities they described for the year 1960-1961. The officers and members of the Villanova Chemical Society, Dr. Downey, Chemistry Department Chairman stated, have reason to be proud. Judging from the spirit I have seen in the Society this year, I feel sure that the good work will continue.

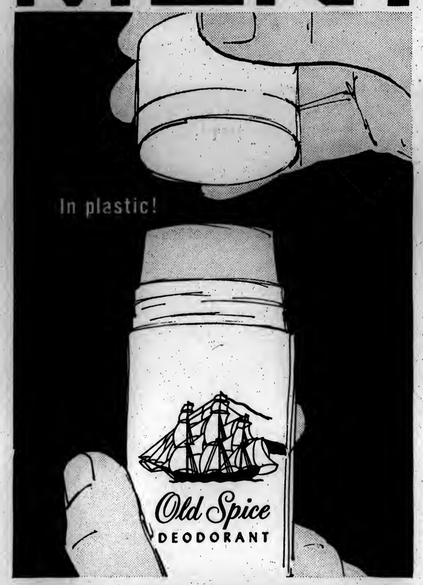
Gentle Sex Invades Council

When the rallying was over and the tallying was completed, the name of but one girl appeared on the winning ballot. Patricia Berry, affectionately dubbed "Trish" by her many friends, established a precedent by becoming the first girl ever to win an election in the male-dominated student body.

Trish Berry

Trish Berry, a nursing major, is the present Secretary of the Sophomore Class. Following the election last May she remarked, "The nurses like to feel that they are a real part of the University. Now they have their own representative in the student body and I'm honored to help them out in this respect."



In addition to her studies and her secretarial duties for the class, Miss Berry has an exceptionally busy extra - curricular schedule. She is an active member of Villanova Girls' Glee Club, Pi Theta Chi Sorority, and Belle Air.

Likes MEDICO

When she is graduated from the University, she would like to work with MEDICO, among the people in underdeveloped nations of the world. Projecting her thoughts in preparation, she has taken active roles in the International Relations Society and the Villanova International Student Association.

A native of Euclid, Ohio, Miss Berry is greatly indebted to those who aided her during the election campaign, for through their efforts and her subsequent victory, the nurses have been figuratively elevated from "second class citizens" of the University.

Psychological Services Set Up To Aid Student Difficulties

In an effort to improve existing facilities in guidance, the University has initiated, under the Chairmanship of Doctor E. J. Albrecht, an extension of the Psychological Department to be known as Psychological Services.

Dr. Albrecht received his Bachelor's degree from Saint Louis University and his M.A. and Ph. D. from Loyola University in Chicago. He taught at Loyola until 1957 when he began teaching at the University of Detroit. He remained at Detroit until 1960 when he accepted a position with the General Motors Corporation in their Defense System as a research psychologist. He became acting Chairman of the Psychology Department at Villanova in September of 1961.

To Help In These Fields

The new Phsychological Services will place emphasis on the three most common student difficulties.

Educational Difficulties: Because of a lack of insight, new students often are overwhelmed by college work. The Services will try to help these students.

Reading Difficulties: Hoping to expand the present Reading Clinic, the Psychological Services plan to help not only deficient readers, but also hope to be able to improve the reading techniques of already proficient readers.

Vocational Difficulties: By use of good guidance techniques, the Services want to help those students who have yet to formulate a clear idea of what they want to do.

Expanded Staff

These Psychological Services are to be made more accessible to the students by the addition of Messrs. Carberry, Ziegler, and Grimes, all psychology teachers trained in psychological testing, interviewing and guidance, to the present counseling staff of Doctors Zuckowski and Weissman. Dr. Albrecht hopes that this coordination will put these men in contact with many more students.

Marine Officer To Speak At NROTC Communion Breakfast

The annual Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps battalion Mass and communion breakfast will take place on Saturday, October 28. The day will commence with a special mass for the unit in the university chapel. Celebrant will be the Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, Following the mass will be the communion breakfast. Guest speaker at the breakfast will be Lieutenant General Edward W. Snedecker.

Prior to the Quantico game that afternoon, the battalion will march as a unit. A special section in the stands has been set aside for the unit. At half time the NROTC drill team will entertain along with the Marine Corps Band.

At the half during the game, General Snedeker will present an award to Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, from the Marine Corps for the services which Villanova University has rendered to the Corps in the past.

Law School Test Is Subject Of Talk By Mr. O'Toole

Mr. Thomas J. O'Toole, Vice-dean of the Villanova University School of Law, discussed facts concerning the Law School Admission Test at a meeting of the Pre-Law Society last Thursday evening. Nearly one hundred undergraduates were present.

Mr. O'Toole gave a short history of law schools' entrance requirements. The dean told the group that previous to the war law school admission was relatively easy. With the influx of applications after the war a need was seen for a standardization of entrance qualifications.

Schools Control Test

Twenty-five law schools gathered together at Princeton and decided that the test should be controlled by the schools themselves.

The examination consists of two parts: the morning session which is an apptitude test and the afternoon session, a test of writing ability and general background.

The test will be given in November, February, May and August. Application forms are available at the Placement Office in the basement of Sheehan Hall.

groups, once alienated, aided the collapse of the Republic.

Dr. Malik, also commented on the paradoxical situation that is now present in the Syrian Government. Where once the government was very leftist in its policies, now extreme rightist elements control the government. The only social reform that was initiated by Nassar that now remains in Syria, is the labor law that allows the worker a vote on company policy.

DOCTOR MALIK

In summation, Dr. Malik remarked that, "when Syria merged with Egypt it is said that some very high ranking Egyption officers made the statement, while smiling, that Syrians are VERY hard people to govern."

Even with the dissolvement of the UAR, Dr. Malik expressed his belief that Arab nationalism was genuine, and that there will be a resurgence of it based on the common ties of Arab culture, history, language, and religion.

Nursing Professor Discusses Area Of Clinical Evaluation

Mrs. Julia B. Paparella, assistant professor of Nursing at Villanova, was chairman of the third in a series of conferences on "Evaluation in the Clinical Area." The discussion was sponsored by the Nursing Education Committee of the Southeastern Pennsylvania League for Nursing and was held in Philadelphia on October 18.

Students from schools of nursing in the five-county area of Southeastern Pennsylvania attended the all-day program at which nursing education and service personnel discussed methods of evaluating students in the clinical area.

Mrs. Paparella, who is in her seventh year on the Villanova faculty, was also recently appointed to a two-year term as Chairman of the Nursing Education Committee of the League.

Catholic Youth, Note!

Between October 29 and November 5 Villanova, along with Catholic colleges and universities throughout the country, will observe Catholic Youth Week. Its purpose is to spotlight the potential of Catholic youth, their resources, their talents, and their responsibilities in a secular society.

Most Villanova students are probably sick and tired of hearing about their unique obligations as members of a Catholic student community. That is not surprising. Unfortunately the truest and most necessary principles are often ignored, or even scorned, owing to the familiarity bred of constant competition. There comes a time, however, when everyone must pause and honestly take stock of his duties both to society and to himself in terms of his own specific abilities and opportunities.

No matter how trite it might sound to our ears already long accustomed to hearing it, we must face the simple fact that catholic youth occupy a very influential position with respect to the future society.

If they do not uphold an unwavering moral code, if they do not go into business and into the professions influenced by a zeal for social justice, if they do not expose and correct the hypocritical ethics of a degenerate culture, in short if they do not "restore all things in Christ", then we have good reason to tremble with fear.

The savages of a militant atheism are a blessing compared with the typical morality of an unchecked Western materialism.

Catholic Youth Week, quite apart from any activities which may have been planned, should provide the average student with the impetus necessary for him to begin a realistic appraisal of himself, precisely as a Catholic student. As we indicated earlier our society certainly needs a stable, unchanging code of morality if it is to withstand the tremendous ideological impact of the well knit, cohesive, dynamic power that communist doctrine represents.

Obviously for such a code to become a living element, a driving force in Western culture, those instructed in such modes of thought and action must fill every level of our social structure. Each individual must take his role seriously, and persistantly work for a noble good: the complete restoration of society from top to bottom according to Christian principles.

This is the future; these are the opportunities which present themselves to the young Catholic student. He might see in such exhortations a mere repetition of what he has heard a hundred times. Or he may see for the first time the truth behind these arguments.

If he does, and if he can grasp the full impact of his unusual position, the first step will have been taken toward a realization of the goal.

Counterpoint

A Congressional Failure

by Mark F. Quinn, Jr.

The major failure of the Eighty-Seventh Congress was its refusal to enact a comprehensive education program such as the one proposed by President Kennedy. It takes no enlightened mind to deduct the reasons for its defeat—factional wrangling, the selfishness of pressure groups and the general non-interest of Congress.

Representative Adam Clayton Powell (Dem., New York), chairman of the House Committee on Education and Labor and the leading House backer of the administration proposals, said most of them will have to be abandoned for several years.

Powell Deviates

In a desperate attempt to have some kind of education legislation adopted beside the NDEA and the Impacted Areas bill Powell planned to press for aid to higher education in the fields of science and engineering for the reason that it would aid national defense and consequently the common good.

Although this rule may apply in the former instance, it certainly has very little connection with the latter. Rep. Powell has waived the bloody shirt of technology before the eyes of Congressmen and their constituents at the cost of neglect in the humanities, social sciences, and other fields which are supposedly not directly related to the national defense.

Powell explains the situation in this manner: 'We must face the stark, brutal and disheartening fact and not dissipate the energies of this Committee nor of this House on bills with no change of passing.'

Reflection of Decay

The attitude of Rep. Powell is not an individual one. It reflects a subtle decay which has infected the American people even up to the level of Congress. Today, we must specialize. if we have enough students specializing in the various scholastic fields, we will be able to depend on each other to leading more successful lives.

This is not possible in this era. The criterion for this age is the educationally well-rounded man. More and more, the doctor doctors, the plumber plumbs, the engineer engineers, the educator educates uninterested about what goes on in the world about them or the people around them.

The American nation, it appears, is losing its sense of values about such things as ethics, art, psychology, sociology, government, and so on. But how will man deal with his fellow man? How will man understand the nature of man, his environment, and his probems as they arise in that environment? We cannot retract into a cubicle and isolate ourselves from our problems and other people as some would have us do.

Foundations Tremble

The collapse of morals in society, in government, and in business and the dangerous trends of people away from practiced religion becomes more obvious every day. Perusal of a newspaper reveals these conditions. The foundations of a nation are shaking.

These evils can be treated in either of two manners. We can achieve a more perfect knowledge of ourselves and of mankind and thus know how to remedy our problems. Or we can solve them with a slide rule. If we employ the latter method we approach a situation spoken about by Emerson—

"Things are in the saddle
And ride mankind."

Letter To The Editor

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to extend my congratulations to all who helped to make the Nick Basca Weekend the success that it was. Certainly it was one of the most successful in many years.

The hall decorations were cleverly conceived and well executed. The floats were a credit to the classes and organizations that sponsored them. It is most regrettable that, because of the inclement weather, these latter could not be displayed at the half-time of the football game.

The Basca Weekend — 1961 stands as an accomplishment to be emulated. Congratulations to the many who participated.

Sincerely,
Rev. Joseph W. Kemme, OSA
Vice-President for Student Affairs.

Governor's Tribute

The Collegiate Press Conference held last week by Governor Lawrence was a tribute to the modern day college student, and the influence of the collegiate press. The fact that the Chief Executive of a state the size of Pennsylvania initiated and organized such a gathering proves that he, a man of seventy-two years, believes that our generation is interested in contemporary political occurances and intelligent enough to interpret and criticize them.

He had nothing to gain politically from such a show of good will. His term expires in fifteen months, and he cannot run for another occupancy. His age will almost certainly restrain him from seeking a higher public office.

A conference of this nature could have brought unfavorable publicity to his administration, and he realized this. Many of the representatives were from state supported schools that are continually wailing about the way the education apportionment pie is sliced. Many of them came armed with a pad full of loaded questions. A few such reporters tried in vain to create an impression of scandal or mismanagement regarding certain boards of trustees. The Governor very aptly assured the assemblage that these rumors had been checked and were uncorroborated by facts.

His master accomplishment, however was the image that he created in his minds of the college editors. He dispelled the doubts and misgivings that are universally held about politicians. He maintained his dignity and poise while creating a rapport between himself and the inquisitors.

His liberal views and straightforward answers favoring federal-aid-to-education and a graduated state income tax, meshed perfectly with his realistic opinions about the impracticality of prohibiting the sales tax on text books, and the inadvisability of predicting a smooth path for the reapportionment of Congressional districts.

The VILLANOVAN congratulates Governor Lawrence for his mature realization that today's college students are political minded and an important and ever widening tributary to the mainsteam called the future.

Kremlin Cancer

The farce known to the mindless faithful as the Communist Party Congress and to everyone else as the world's largest rubber stamp met this month in an ornate new convention hall in Moscow under the gaze of a mammoth portrait of a demi-god called Lenin.

Khrushchev has chosen the Party Congress as the time and occasion to bring differences to a head. His expulsion of Albania from the Communist camp is obviously an open threat to the Chinese to fall back into the Soviet line or face similar action. Whether the Chinese fall back down or not is a question whose answer will only be known in the future.

With a maximum of foresight and skill the West should be able to capitalize on Russia's fear of war and China's hatred subservience to the U.S.S.R. the longer the split remains the weaker it becomes. No ideology that is divided on such a basic point as the means to directly achieving its goal can be a world dominating ideology until its believers agree to one view or the other. We should strive diligently to insure that such agreement never occurs by exploiting every opportunity to reinflame the difference of opinion without aiding either point of view.

The biggest problem that Nikita will one day face is the knowledge that through neither war nor peace can Communism win. War means the destruction of the world, peace means competition with a complex of industrial powers three times stronger than the combined Communist economies. The sole means to eventual Communist victory is unity. Khrushchev realizes this, so must we. Let us, through word, deed, action, ommission, keep the Communist world a divided world—and divided it will eventually falter and inevitably fall.

Automation: Good or Evil?

by Bob Durney

In 1887 Dr. Herman Hallerith, employed by the United States Government Census Bureau, felt that the methods used would soon necessitate an overlapping period between the completion of one census and the start of another. Consequently, the first statistical machines were invented by Dr. Hallerith and his staff. Now, it seems that every day we read of new applications for Analogue and Digital Computors. This process has been going on since the development in 1944 of the Harvard Mark III Calculator.

Tabulating equipment uses the principle of automatically actuating machines to add, subtract, multiply and divide in various combinations, and in the same operation prepare finished reports showing descriptions and calculated results.

Machine Methods

For the mass bookkeeping of present-day Industry, Commerce and Government, computing machinery is essential for volume, speed and accuracy. Concerns such as Life Insurance Companies and Public Utilities must deal with many customers in a routine manner. The Bureau of Internal Revenue, the Veterans Administration and the Social Security Board have similar problems. In all these fields, volume considerations alone make machine methods imperative. A typical application is the pari-mutual machinery used for betting odds at race tracks.

Although business arithmetic consists of many repetitions of a few simple operations, scientific calculations in general require long computations of great complexity. Astronomy, Fluid Dynamics and modern Technology have been applied in ways that involve every available form of computation.

Equation Solving

In another type of application of computers, speed is the essential factor. Thus, to point a gun so to strike a fast-moving airplane, the gunner must solve an intricate system of differential equations, introducing a great amount of specific data in 15 seconds at most. This test is clearly beyond merely human effort, and gun directors are designed for this purpose.

Bomb-sighting and automatic aerial navigation involve similar problems. In these, the development of computing machinery parallels, and also complements that of radar, which corresponds to a sensing organ for the "mechanical brain" of the computer.

The more complex chemical processes, which are of a continuous rather than a batch character, require control machinery with sensing mechanisms and a computer to produce quickly the correct orders. In a simpler case, electronic counters, activated by photoelectric cells, are widely used as production controls. These are robots—mechanical devices quicker and more sensitive than human beings.

Process Control

Every day more and more chemical plants, petroleum refineries and other industrial giants are changing over to completely automatic process control. Why? Because a well-designed system, fitted to the individual needs of each process, always results in increased productivity at a lower cost, better quality and more uniformity of product, along with greater safety and less drudgery for operators.

The valve-turners of yesterday are rapidly becoming the skilled computer technicians of modern day industry. When automation takes over, operating manpower is used to monitor processing performance, while the routine manipulation and adjustment is taken over by instruments.

It has been said that the unskilled worker is being slowly but surely pushed out of the American force. Well, there is still hope for him.

In the years to come, many of these workers will be taught skills relating to mathematical machines, which are helping to create thousands of new jobs every year in our ever-expanding automated industrial empire.

Worker Problem

Corporations have a serious obligation to initiate training and placement programs to prepare their workers for automation so that they may continue to lead productive lives, rather than be thrown out of their jobs. If the latter happens on a wide scale, our economy can go only one way—down.

Automation is here to stay, and the sooner we accept it and take full advantage of its tremendous potential, the more prosperous our Nation will become in the years ahead.

The Padded Cell

A Really Frightening Idea

by Pete Nolan

There have been only a few things which have really frightened me during my short life. Long ago, it was the air raid warnings during World War II. Not very long ago it was called "La Dolce Vita," but more recently and possibly even more frightening was something that I heard about right here at Villanova.

Tingling Sensation

The idea manifested itself in a very serious proposal of erecting a taproom on campus. It isn't that I don't like the idea. On the contrary, it brings about a delightful tingling sensation in the tip of my nose. However, as I have said, it is somewhat frightening.

It makes me think of the many facilities which are afforded a person on this campus, many of which I have foolishly ignored, and . . . well, it still scares me a little. Not that I would take too much advantage of it, but—can you imagine a tap room on campus.

Has Advantages

At first I thought the idea was preposterous, but as I listened, I realized that these people were really serious. They call themselves the Society for Promoting Gentleman-Like Beer Drinking at Villanova Without Getting into Trouble (SPGLBDAVWGT), and besides the long name, they also have a bagful of arguments.

First of all, the project would be run exclusively by the Student Council. Think of the money the Council could make, instead of having it spent elsewhere—and it is bound to be spent elsewhere, members noted.

Also, it would save students the long trips to and the even longer trips back from nearby establishments. One member stated that the pike is a dangerous place after dark, especially with a few under the belt. The Society also cited the fact that such undertakings have worked out very well at Georgetown and Fordham.

Artist's conception of proposed on-campus pub.

Minors

Someone raised the question of how to control the beer parlor from infiltration by minors. This was easily answered by issuing photo identification cards to all those who had reached the age of twenty-one years, and allowing admittance only to those who possessed such cards.

I asked what advantages such a place would have for a non-drinker such as myself, but they just laughed and seemed to pass it off.

Then came a series of cons. There was talk of the Student Council becoming too powerful and picking up the mortgage on Dougherty Hall, and also such objections as nearness to the library,..but we all agreed that the library couldn't interfere.

By this time everyone was getting jittery and I was still somewhat frightened. Could you imagine a beer parlor on campus? The meeting ended and we all retired to Kelly's.

ACTIVITIES OF VILLANOVA

V. U.'s I.C.G. Heads The Region

The Villanova Chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government is an organization devoted to the study and discussion of the problems facing the local, state, and national governments.

Tom Gallen, a Senior Arts major is the ICG chairman. Mr. John J. Logue, associate Professor of the History and Political Science Department, is the moderator.

This year the ICG has for its topic, the government of the United States. To develop this topic involves a great deal of work on the part of the individual member. Research on a particular phase of the federal government must be done.

Then after acquiring some knowledge of his subject, the member must prepare a model bill which he presents to the club for debate, according to parliamentary procedure. This requires the member to be able to speak before an audience, to be familiar with Robert's Rules of Order, and, at the same time, be able to defend his bill.

The activities already mentioned only involve the ICG as it operates here on campus. However, the ICG is a statewide organization which exists on approximately fifty college campuses throughout the state. On the state level the ICG is divided into five regions.

Villanova is a member school of the Southeast Region. This year Villanova holds the highest office in their region in the person of William J. Rademaker, A Senior Chemistry Major, as regional director.

Schools in this region are the University of Pennsylvania, Ursinus, Drexel, Rosemont, Immaculate, Bryn Mawr, West Chester, and PMC.

During this semester representatives of the colleges in this region will hold a one day convention in the form of a mock national congress at the school of one of the local chapters. At the convention the bills prepared by Villanova students will be in competition with the bills prepared at other colleges. After much parliamentary debate in committee meetings, the bills which survive will be presented to the assembled delegates meeting in a general session.

State Convention

Another phase of the regional convention is the electing of a Speaker who will preside over the general session and who will be the region's candidate for Speaker at the three day ICG state convention in Harrisburg, held during the second week of April.

Area Stations On Comeback Trail Where IS Elvis Hiding?

by Joe Zawacki

Sometime this past Spring, this column bemoaned the lack of good music on AM radio in the Philadelphia area, with only WRCV receiving plaudits for fine programming. Now six months later, there has been almost a complete about-face on most of the major stations and discriminate listeners can finally choose some good music from a varied list of offerings.

Though critics have heralded the destruction of rock n' roll for a few years without any noticeable change, it appears that maturity is now gaining control not only in the programming and advertising areas of the business, but also in the listening audience itself.

Bandstand

About a month ago, this writer was stunned when he accidentally heard Billy Maxted's Dixie-ish version of Duke Ellington's "Satin Doll", one of the prettiest tunes ever written, on Dick Clark's "Bandstand", of places. If that perpetrator of junk these many years is finally deigning to give the kids a chance to hear something with musical value, then you know that good music is making headway.

The credit for the return to sanity has to go to WRCV, which is NBC's outlet in Philly. Searching for a gimmick to tie in with the network's "Sound of the Sixties", Dick Paisley of WRCV came up with a big band gimmick that immediately captured the fancy of the public. With such capable DJ's as Jack Pyle and Pat Landon making the selections, the music department was in good hands and the station's listening audience has not yet stopped growing.

Money Talks

Economically, the return to good music was almost an eventual necessity. A sponsor paying good money for prime listening time wants to make sure that his product reached an audience that is receptive to his product. Therefore, a refrigerator manufacturer will hesitate to buy on a station that pushes garbage to infantiles and adults with juvenile mentalities.

An ironic case is that of WIP. At one time, the station had the best set of DJ's on the market and a medium-sized but faithful coterie of listeners. Trying to buck the chief garbage-dispenser when ownership of WIP changed hands, the station policy was switched to R & R. The DJ's defected and the ratings slipped. Now the station is 80-20% good LP. type music and the 20% is that portion of tunes which have some sort of musical value to them.

Dean of DJ's

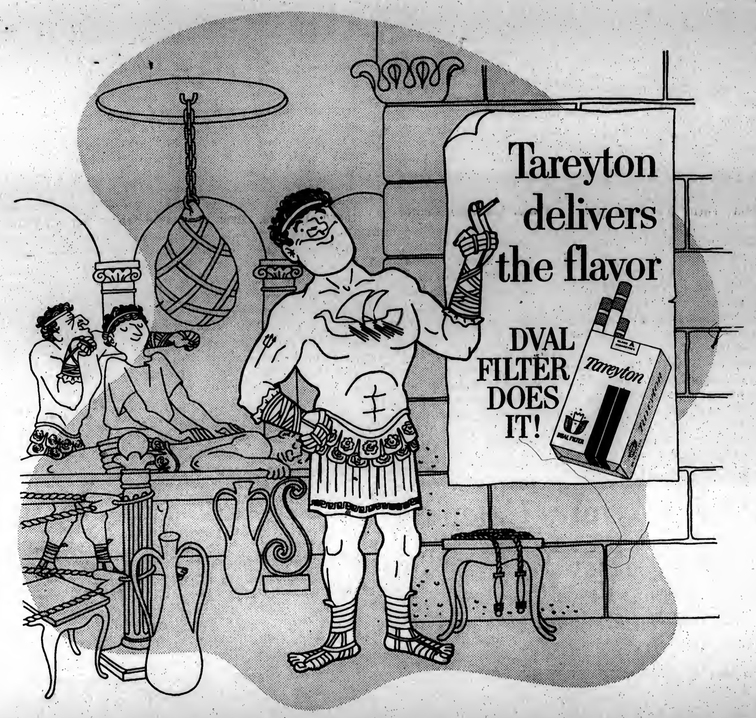
WCAU, the CBS outlet, doesn't feature music as much as some of the independents, but does have men like Doug Arthur and Bob Menefee to take care of the listeners. Arthur is the Dean of local DJ's, having also built WIBG into one of the first big independents in the country as its program director. This of course was before WIBG's hideous downfall.

Latest station to make change for the better is WFIL, the ABC outlet. Abandoning their middle of the road policy for an FM concept, the station has aroused much notice in the area in less than a month. Bob Klose and Toby De Luca are doing a great job of producing varied programming and should experience much success with the type of listener who likes almost anything.

WFLN and WJMJ, two of the smaller stations, have kept a steady course through the past few years, the former with classical music and the latter with much of show tunes.

It is said that things must get worse before they can get better. Judging the past few years around this area, the bottom of the barrel has been scraped and there's no place to go but up.

Swinging Around Town



Lambert-Hendricks and Ross, one of this writer's favorite groups, never sounded more impressive than in their engagement last week at the Joe De Luca's Red Hill. Odds are that they will sweep both the Down Beat and Playboy polls again by a wide margin this year. The Dukes of Dixieland come in this weekend, to be followed by Mel Torme'.

Mel Torme, who is to appear at the Red Hill November 3 to 12.

A trip into town last Saturday to Billy Krechmer's found the group still in good shape, and swinging furiously. The seemingly ageless leader was all over his clarinet and at times threatened to blow the walls out into Ranstead Street. At a $2.50 minimum, it's a worthwhile night.

Those that like a little dancing with their drinks can find it with class by crossing the Ben Franklin bridge and stopping next door to the Latin Casino at the Marlton Manor. Two combos provide continuous music and when dining ends, the tables are removed to form a second dance floor. Reasonable rates, and dancing till 2:30 a.m.

Orchestra Set To Perform; Opera Offers Varied Works

by Bob Lombardo

Philadelphia music lovers will be happy to learn that this city's musical organizations are going to present an interesting and varied season this year. First among these organizations is the Philadelphia Orchestra which, thankfully, will highlight its full season with Hector Berlioz's oratorio, L'enfance du Christ in early December in conjunction with the Rutgers University Choir.

A Beethoven cycle will occur in early January and February. April will bring an all Tchiakovsky program, Bach's Mass in B Minor with the Temple University Choirs, and Ormandy's usual request night. All of these programs are contingent upon settlement of the Orchestra strike. Guest conductors this season will be Leopold Stokowski, Constantin Silvestri, Max Rudolf, and Hans Schmidt-Isserstedt.

Otello Opens Opera Season

The Grand Opera of Philadelphia will again prepare many worthwhile evenings for us this year. The season opens today, October 25, with Verdi's masterpiece, Otello. This will be followed by Butterfly in December, Tosca in January, Carmen in February, and Saint-Saen's Samson and Delilah in late March. The Grand has engaged the very beautiful Mary Costa, whom you will remember from Chrysler Corporation's "Shower of Stars" TV program, to sing her interpretation of Violetta in Traviata early in March. Miss Costa has been with the San Francisco Opera for the past three seasons.

Gabriella Tucci a vivacious, young Italian soprano, will sing her Philadelphia debut as Puccini's fragile heroine Cio-cio-san, in Butterfly. She will follow this with the title role in Tosca. Ferruccio Tagiavini will sing with the Grand, marking his first appearance in the United States in quite a few years.

Tebaldi Will Not Sing

The Lyric Opera will give us nothing unusual or diverse this year as far as its announced repetory thus far but it is headlining some of the world's best known artists so that it will undoubtedly have a very successful season. The season opens on November 10 with Gounod's Faust. Later on, Wagner's Lohengrin, long absent from Philadelphia, will take over the stage of the Academy. The rest of the season is as follows: The Barber of Seville, Manon Lescaut, La Boheme, Il Trovatore, Tosca, Un Ballo in Mashera, Aida, and Carmen. Bastianini, Colzani, Corena, D'Angelo, Kirsten, Merrill, and Price all will return for performances.

Many music lovers will be disappointed to learn that Renata Tebaldi will not sing in Philadelphia this season. Last month Miss Tebaldi walked out on the Metropolitan because Rudolf Bing, General Manager, decided to shelve Cecil Beaton's sets for Adriana Lecouvreur which was to be revived after a fifty-two year absence just for her. We will have no Tebaldi this year, and if she pulls a Callas, perhaps next year too!

Corelli

Controversial Franco Corelli, the dueling tenor with the golden voice, will sing his Lyric debut as Cavaradossi in Puccini's Tosca, and he will also sing the role of Don Jose in Carmen. (Mr. Corelli has affected audiences in many ways. At Naples' San Carlo Opera two years ago he nearly wounded basso Boris Christoff because Boris was upstaging him. During that same performance Corelli rushed from the stage during the curtain calls to clout a member of the audience over the head because he was yelling Brava instead of Bravo)!

Phila. Cultural Center

The old joke "I spent a month in Philadelphia last week" no longer stands true. Through the efforts of interested citizens and some promoters, Philadelphia has become one of the cultural centers of the east. Though it has neither the resources or the audiences of New York, Philadelphia is far superior to Boston, Baltimore, and Washington. We at Villanova should learn to appreciate these activities and when these organizations extend the hand, we should take hold of it.

LEO GOODREAU

The Birth Of A V.U. Tradition

Editor's Note: This story is a reprint of the article written by Bill Jones that appeared in the January 1, 1956 issue of the VILLANOVAN. The facts that were used for that story were taken from the December 5, 1950 VILLANOVAN from an article written by Robert J. Quinn. It is reprinted here in order to acquaint all freshmen with the name and tradition of Leo Goodreau for whom the Stadium is named, and to whom this newspaper is dedicated.

Villanova University has produced many outstanding men throughout its years of Catholic education. Among these men some have been brilliant students, some excellent athletes and other superior gentlemen. But perhaps one of the finest men ever to enter Villanova, a humble competition of each of these qualities, never graduated. The man today is a shining memory of those of the faculty who have been at Villanova since 1930, and to the present undergraduates, merely a simple name on a tarnished plaque. This man, to whom the VILLANOVAN is respectfully dedicated, is Leo Goodreau, a scholar, an athlete, and most of all, a gentleman.

THE GOODREAU Memorial Plaque still remains at the entrance to the stadium, in tribute to the player who died on the gridiron.

Merely a Name

To most of the students at Villanova, Leo Goodreau is merely a name that decorates the stadium and appears in the VILLANOVAN every week, but he is far more than that.

In 1927 the Villanova Stadium was erected and dedicated. The entire Villanova student body attended this ceremony. One of these students was a freshman who was destined to die on that field within one short year. The story of Leo Goodreau is in reality inspiration, an inspiration to all Villanovans.

Football

Leo was an All-New England interscholastic quarterback in high school and became a prominent name on the Villanova campus. He joined the ranks of freshmen football players and due to his hard, fast, clean and aggressive play was immediately tagged as a future star and a sure bet to take over the first string quarterback slot on the varsity the next fall.

In his first game for the Villanova frosh, he scored the first touchdown to be recorded in the new stadium, a touchdown which opened the season and the stadium with a triumph. Little did Leo realize that in the space of a few short years this field would be dedicated to him.

Baseball Too

Although he was the finest football player that Villanova had seen in quite some time, this was not his best sport. Despite his skill as a quarterback, Leo showed as much if not more proficiency as a catcher on the baseball team. His coach, Charles A. McGeehan, predicted that he easily had a major league career before him if he wanted it. He was truly a great athlete.

On the field Leo never gave up digging, and ironically this hustle cost him his life.

One early September afternoon he was calling offensive signals for the varsity against the frosh in a grueling scrimmage held in preparation for Villanova's game. The frosh lined up determined to prove their mettle against a larger and more experienced varsity. As the ball was snapped to a halfback, Leo, who besides being a triple threat on offense was a demon on defense bolted forward leading the interference. The frosh line charged. There was a quick pile-up. It was Leo Goodreau's last play.

LEO GOODREAU

His Last Play

When the players unpiled, Leo was lying quite still, face down on the turf. As he slowly came to, his face was contorted with pain. A teammate tried to help the stricken player to his feet and he shrieked with pain. His back had been brutally broken.

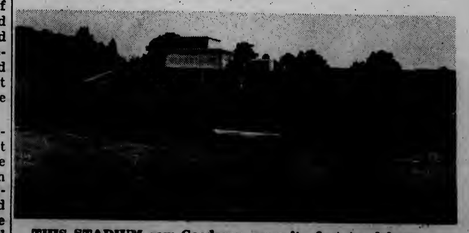
He was given no chance of survival by the specialists called in on the case. He was almost completely paralyzed. His back was broke all right but his spirit was hardly dented. No longer was he fighting for his school, he was fighting for his life. He refused to give up. He insisted on hearing all the football scores that grim Saturday; his wish humble composition of each of was not denied. He assured everyone that someday he would be back in the Villanova "line-up." But Leo underestimated himself, for he was soon to participate in a far more rewarding "line-up."

Undefeated Season

When it was recognized that he was not going to pull through, there was talk of postponing the entire football schedule, but Leo would have nothing to do with this idea. He movingly complained that it was not only unfair to the team which had worked so hard for so long, but even unfair to himself.

It is merely an anti-climax to state that the Villanova football team, inspired by his tough plucky youth swept on to an undefeated season, crushing all opposition.

The Last Spark



But soon the fight became too much, even for Leo Goodreau. He confided to his coach, Harry Stuhldreher, "I've given the best that is in me, I'm tired out, I can't hold out much longer." Death was near. He was given the Last Rites and soon lapsed into a coma. While in this coma, he began to call football signals and continued until, early Tuesday afternoon, just four short days after his gridiron play, the spark of life in Leo Goodreau flickered out.

A Sad Scene

Father O'Leary who was present at the time of the death had this description: "It was a beautiful but sad scene. Outside were teammates and classmates, and inside priests and doctors. To the last Leo maintained that same staunchness of heart which marked him on the football field."

At the funeral in Villanova's College Chapel, the casket was carried by his former teammates. The entire student body was present at the Solemn High funeral Mass.

Surely the spirit of Leo J. Goodreau lingers in the halls and on the playing fields of Villanova, a spirit which is to those who know his story, an ever present inspiration to higher standards of sportsmanship and duty.

THIS STADIUM saw Goodreau score its first touchdown.

Father Galloway Criticizes State Department At Forum

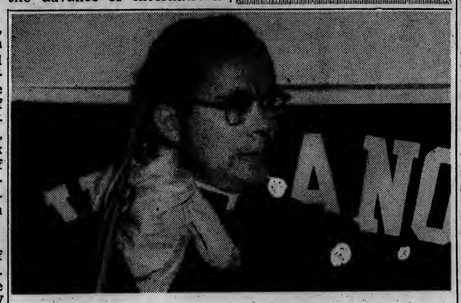
The lecture delivered by the Rev. Norman Galloway, OSA, "Cuba and the State Department" was the highlight of the first meeting of the Villanova Freedom Forum. After the meeting, held Tuesday evening, October 17, Bill Williams, chairman of the society, stated that "the tremendous attendance at this first meeting indicates that the students of Villanova University are deeply concerned about the paramount problem facing this nation, the advance of international communism."

Officers of the organization, Bill Williams, Chairman, Ron Klammer, Vice-Chairman, and Walt Fetterer, Secretary-Treasurer, were introduced to the audience. Mr. James Brown, of the Civil Engineering Department, as the faculty adviser, gave a short introductory talk pertinent to the main topic of the evening. Fr. Galloway, a recent exile from Cuba now teaching at Monsignor Bonner High School, was then introduced.

Editorial's for Foreign Policy?

One of the political aspects of the Cuban situation, which Fr. Galloway stressed was the role of the editorials of the NEW YORK TIMES in determining American foreign policy, during and preceding the present Cuban crisis. Mr. Herbert Matthews, responsible for all the TIMES' editorials on Cuba, has for the past few years expressed his own personal opinions, which were garnered from an exclusive interview with the rebel leader Castro in 1957, in the Sierra Maestra Mountains. Mr. Matthews stated in a TIME magazine interview several weeks ago that he was and is still very favorably impressed by Castro and his political ideology.

Fr. Galloway noted that a complete dossier on the Communist activities of Castro was kept by a pro-American Cuban journalist since 1950. Also noted was the fact that the State Department originally ignored the warnings of those who saw extreme leftist sentiments and inclinations inherent in Castro. A rather extreme departure from usual diplomatic procedure was observed, when in 1958, the new American Ambassador to Cuba failed to consult with his predecessor, and was instructed instead to be briefed by Mr. Herbert Matthews.



Petitions Circulated

Ending his lecture, Fr. Galloway urged all students interested in stopping the Communist blight of Cuba, to write letters to their Congressmen and the President, demanding positive curtailment of the Communist movement, and a decisive foreign policy to rectify the Cuban situation, and to prevent its possible duplication in our own country.

Applications for membership were distributed at the meeting, and are to be returned the following week. A petition was circulated by a member of the audience, protesting the States Department's policy of permitting Yugoslavian jet-pilots, to be trained at United States Air Force bases in Texas. The petition received over 100 signatures.

Attention Writers

The Lynx, student literary magazine, is now accepting material for its fall issue. Garry Evans, the editor, is asking for poems, plays, short stories and essays. These can be left at the Lynx desk in the English office, their office in Vasey Hall basement, or in room 105 Sullivan Hall.

Dr. Myron Heidingsfield Addresses Group At Bartram

Dr. Myron S. Heidingsfield Associate Dean of Commerce and Finance spoke at the fifteenth Annual Meeting of Associated University Bureaus of Business and Economic Research which was held at the John Bartram Hotel on October 22, 1961.

The theme of his talk was the responsibility of university research bureaus to the business community. He indicated that there was an important mutual benefit derived from the relationship between a corporation and a research bureau.

Dr. Heidingsfield also stated that probably the areas where the university bureaus could be most helpful to corporations would be in short-range and long-range forecasting, studies of population flow and family formation, distribution cost analyses and such marketing studies as brand preference analyses, product testing, and the organization and administration of consumer and industrial panels.

It was further pointed out that as the relationship became stronger between the university research bureau and the individual corporation that the chances for obtaining scholarship money, pure research grants for the faculty, and some contribution to the endowment fund would grow.

The lecture delivered by the Rev. Norman Galloway, OSA, "Cuba and the State Department" was the highlight of the first meeting of the Villanova Freedom Forum. After the meeting, held Tuesday evening, October 17, Bill Williams, chairman of the society, stated that "the tremendous attendance at this first meeting indicates that the students of Villanova University are deeply concerned about the paramount problem facing this nation, the advance of international communism."

Officers of the organization, Bill Williams, Chairman, Ron Klammer, Vice-Chairman, and Walt Fetterer, Secretary-Treasurer, were introduced to the audience. Mr. James Brown, of the Civil Engineering Department, as the faculty adviser, gave a short introductory talk pertinent to the main topic of the evening. Fr. Galloway, a recent exile from Cuba now teaching at Monsignor Bonner High School, was then introduced.

Editorial's for Foreign Policy?

One of the political aspects of the Cuban situation, which Fr. Galloway stressed was the role of the editorials of the NEW YORK TIMES in determining American foreign policy, during and preceding the present Cuban crisis. Mr. Herbert Matthews, responsible for all the TIMES' editorials on Cuba, has for the past few years expressed his own personal opinions, which were garnered from an exclusive interview with the rebel leader Castro in 1957, in the Sierra Maestra Mountains. Mr. Matthews stated in a TIME magazine interview several weeks ago that he was and is still very favorably impressed by Castro and his political ideology.

Fr. Galloway noted that a complete dossier on the Communist activities of Castro was kept by a pro-American Cuban journalist since 1950. Also noted was the fact that the State Department originally ignored the warnings of those who saw extreme leftist sentiments and inclinations inherent in Castro. A rather extreme departure from usual diplomatic procedure was observed, when in 1958, the new American Ambassador to Cuba failed to consult with his predecessor, and was instructed instead to be briefed by Mr. Herbert Matthews.

Petitions Circulated

Ending his lecture, Fr. Galloway urged all students interested in stopping the Communist blight of Cuba, to write letters to their Congressmen and the President, demanding positive curtailment of the Communist movement, and a decisive foreign policy to rectify the Cuban situation, and to prevent its possible duplication in our own country.

Applications for membership were distributed at the meeting, and are to be returned the following week. A petition was circulated by a member of the audience, protesting the States Department's policy of permitting Yugoslavian jet-pilots, to be trained at United States Air Force bases in Texas. The petition received over 100 signatures.

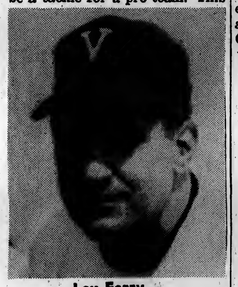
The Duffel Bag

Another Cog In The Wheel



by Jack Duffy

For a Villanova football fan or student, this fall is vastly different from the two previous football seasons. Gone this season are the discouraging and aggravating barbs and taunts thrown their way. No longer do friends and acquaintances insinuate that the VU football team couldn't beat the Little Sisters of the Poor. This season there is a winner on the Main Line campus and everyone from Bob Germer to the area sportswriters have their views on the reasons for the Wildcat surge of success.

To get a clear line on the subject the most direct method would be to ask a man who knows or a man who might be responsible for said success. This line of operation led to a movie theater in the rear of the field house. This cinema had a sign on the door stating the establishment also doubled as an office for the football coaching staff.

Large Part

A knock on the door was answered by a man with a smiling face who looked like he might be a tackle for a pro team. This gentleman turned out to be Lou Ferry, the line coach, who has played a large part in the Villanova success story.

Ferry was an integral part of successful football when he matriculated at Villanova in the late 40's. Lou was an outstanding tackle during the seasons 1946-1948 when he was twice selected to the all-East team. Ferry captained the Wildcat team that was 8-2-1 in 1948 and which played Kentucky in the Refrigerator Bowl. After graduation, Lou spent seven seasons in the NFL, the last five with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

First College Job

The 6'2", 230 pounder got his coaching start in high school ball in Tuscon, Arizona and later on in Pittsburgh. His assignment at VU is his first in the college ranks.

When asked his beliefs on this year's success, Lou at first gave the credit to hard work. He later expounded by saying, "The kids are for the most part the same fellows that were taking the lickings the past two years. They have a year or so of experience this year, and with experience goes confidence. The boys have seen most of these teams before and their formations are not new to us."

Coach Ferry went on to add that the spirit this year, both on the team and in the student body, was a great help. "The boys came back to school in very good physical shape and got right down to business. Henry Gotard is a fine example of this type of spirit."

When asked to single out individual players for praise Ferry said that this would take the rest of the afternoon, as this in indeed a team effort.

Everybody's Gunning

The question concerning our final record was then offered to Ferry, Lou said, "From here on in, every team that we play will be aiming for us, and is capable of knocking us off.

Quantico is loaded with former college players and West Chester has a good a first team as anybody that we play. Detroit has one of the best backs in the country in Jerry Gross and they play a tough schedule.

The inevitable inquiry of a bowl bid then popped into the conservation. "I know the boys would like something like that but we have a few tough games remaining and anything can happen."

Lou Ferry, the man who should know, wouldn't commit himself but no doubt he and several thousand other Villanovans are studying past pairings in the Gator and Liberty Bowls.

end of the first half. Bell's forces had driven from their own 35 to the B. C. 8 with Richman, Glueck, Joe and Russo leading the way. On a 2nd and goal on the 8, Richman went back to pass. Ron Meyers broke into the end zone, but was bumped smartly by Van Cott who picked off Richman's pass. The Eagles then ran out the clock.

Two Scores In Last Quarter

Another interception of a Richman pass led to the third B. C touchdown. Murray Reyan vrabbed it on the Villanova 28 and from there it took only five plays before Van Cott sneaked over from the three. The time was 8:30 of the final stanza. When another drive failed on the V. U. 18 four minutes later, Kirouac booted a field goal to bring about the final score.

"Game of Possession"

In losing, the Cats were not overwhelmed statistically. They had 13 first downs to B. C.'s 12, ran 46 rushing plays to 53 for the Eagles. It was just a matter of giving the ball up too often and the home team capitalizing enough to hurt. Coach Lou Ferry stated it succintly: "The story of the whole game was simply that of possession."

Round 'Midfield

B.C. Loss Will Make V.U. Tougher

by Joe Zawacki

You can't win them all: or, the Marines will regret this trip. Look for Villanova's Wildcats to rebound hard this week against Quantico. They're a proud lot and will work extra hard this week to correct last Saturday's mistakes. The attitude that prevailed on the plane trip home was a heartening one. None of them liked the idea of losing and no one was pleased with the team's showing, but at the same time, there was a feeling of unity and one gets the impression that someone is going to pay for their poor showing against a good Boston College.

Al Calligaris

Since the men are obviously not giving up on themselves, it will be interesting to see whether their fans do.

B.C. Best Yet

Even though our club admits to their poor showing and feels that they would have won, had they played better, they didn't want to slight the Eagle team. Both players and coaches granted that B.C. was the best team faced to date and that they were "up" for the contest.

George Van Cott, the senior quarterback from Brooklyn, was like a pesky mosquito all day. Everytime you turned around, he was in the middle of a play. The 175 pounder gained 70 yards in 15 carries, completed four passes for 89 yards, scored a TD and passed for one, and added two interceptions for good measure. It was no surprise that he was a unanimous choice for back of the game.

Mistakes Hurt

Alex Bell on Saturday's game: "I feel that we were better than we showed, but when you make that many mistakes against a team of Boston College's calibre, you're going to be hurt."

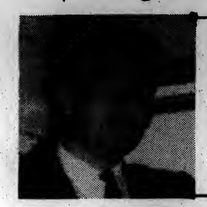
George Karras: "The defense was as good as it has been, but we gave them more chances to score. Had they not scored the 2nd TD as they did, I think we were ready to launch another long drive."

* * * * * * * * *

"I predict that if he continues to progress as he has, he will be the best guard in the East by the time he graduates. He's a real blue-chip player." Thus speaks Coach George Karras of Junior guard Al Calligaris, one of the mainstays of the tough Villanova defense this season.

The 5'11"-210 pounder from West New York, New Jersey has been one of the big reasons that the 'Cats' defense has been ranked near the top ten all year, yet his play often goes unnoticed in the stands. The reason? Karra says it's because he is so consistent. One scout added that his average would be considered superior for many other guards.

Al's personality adds to his being often unnoticed. The Accounting Major has to be prodded into talking about himself. The general impression that he gives is of a guy who doesn't say much, but can handle anything that comes his way and handle it well. This is obvious on the football field, whether opening a hole on offense or linebacking on the defensive unit with Captain Rich Ross.



True To Form

Ken Mugler, the Sports Information Director, related an amusing incident concerning Calligaris that came about on the opening trip to Miami of Ohio. On the plane trip home, Ken was telling a few listeners that he had known Calligaris for over six months and he was so quiet that he hadn't heard him saying anything besides "hello, please, and excuse me." Just then, Al was walking down the aisle and, passing the stewardess in front of Mugler, said, "Excuse me".

Calligaris shrugs this off just like he ignored a knee injury that should have kept him out of the Holy Cross game. After not practicing all week, Karras did not plan to use him but an injury to Ross necessitated a replacement and Al was in there doing his usual able job despite the act that the knee injury was causing him obvious pain. If there's any truth at all to the cliche' about actions being louder than words, Al Calligaris reflects it.

Wildkittens Defeat Bullis Prep By Solid 27-6 Score

Villanova's freshman football team defeated Bullis Prep last Friday by the convincing score of 27-6. The victory marked the first time in eight years that the Wildkittens have defeated Bullis.

The Blue and White drew first blood as Fran Dougherty scored on a 15-yard rollout. The TD was set up by a 40-yard toss to right half Ed Stranix. The try for the extra point was missed.

Another touchdown by Stranix, this 65 yards, was called back by a penalty.

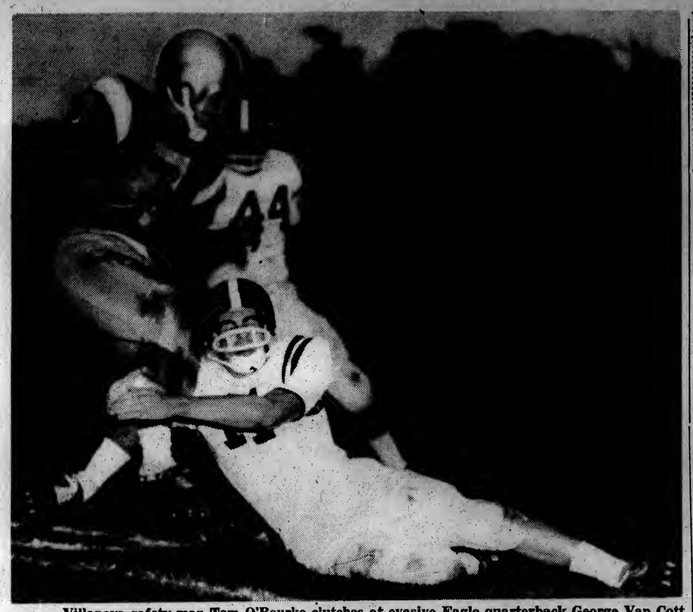
Villanova led at the half, 12-6 as left halfback Grey Fay scored from the three.



Manger Scores

In the second half Villanova continued scoring as Mike Manger, fullback, played from the three. Manger also scored the extra point.

The final score for Villanova came on a six-yard rollout by Fran Dougherty. This was set up by a 24-yard run by Tom O'Connor the right halfback. Dougherty passed to O'Connor for the extra two points.

Coach Ed Michaels was very pleased by the performance of his boys. When told that Bullis had lost to Villanova for the first time since 1953, Michael could only say, "It was a helluva ball game." Michaels then thanked the student body, particularly the freshmen for "their tremendous, spirited support."

Leathernecks Test Wildcats In Grid Contest Saturday

by Ed Lohr

Villanova's now once beaten Wildcats will try to bounce back against the Quantico Marines when the leathernecks use the Main Line Stadium as their beach head Saturday.

The Marines come to town supporting a 4-1 record and a rough experience including four members of Navy's 1961 Sugar Bowl team, two Notre Damers, two from Holy Cross, a single representatives from such powers as Alabama, Tulane, Arkansas, Maryland, Illinois, Nebraska, and the Air Force Academy.

Opened with a Victory

Quantico opened the 1961 season with a squeaker over North Carolina A&T by a 20-19 score. The Marines then traveled to Berea, Ohio, only to lose to Baldwin-Wallace 18-7.

Last year's All-Marine Champs and winners of the first annual Missile Bowl over the Pensacola Goshawks then went on to inter-service play and massacred Fort Benning 33-2 and Fort Campbell 32-9.

Finally in a game scouted by Alex Bell and company, last year's Little All-American quarterback Paul Terhes of Bucknell came off the bench and playing in his first game as a Marine led the Leathernecks in their two touchdown drives to nip Fort Dix in a 13-8 comeback victory.

Ex-Middies Star

Leading the Marines in the backfield this year is little Harry Dietz of Naval Academy fame. The 5-8, 160 pounder alternated with Carl Spooner to lead Navy to the Lambert Cup Championship last year.

The other Middies on the 1961 Quantico team are John Prichard, who starred in Navy's victory over rival Army and overshadowed All-American Joe Bellino in that classic; Fred Palumbo, an ex-Middie fullback weighing 190 pounds and first team tackle 6-4 210 pound Frank Butsko.

Quantico's Head Football Coach is Major Will E. Overgaard from the University of Idaho who is assisted by Captain Ernest L. Brown of Kansas State and Captain James Quinn of Fordham.

In the only other game between the two teams Villanova was beaten 19-13 and came out of the game with quite a few injuries. Last year Quantico lost to two Villanova opponents Detroit by a 7-28 count and the Musketeers of Xavier 20-28.

The big question Saturday is how good are the 'Cats — can they bounce back and still sneak into the Liberty Bowl after last weeks upset at the hands of the Eagles of Boston College?

Probable Quantico starting lineup:

E	Lynn Oxenreider	6-3	200
T	Frank Butsko	6-4	210
G	Dolphius Milton	6-0	205
C	Brian McNeeley	6-2	215

Wildcats Victory Streak Broken As Boston College Romps, 22-6

by Joe Zawacki

Villanova's penchant for fumbles, combined with four interceptions and a 5'8" quarterback named George Van Cott, sent the Cats to their first defeat of the season last Saturday at Boston College's Alumni Stadium.

A Homecoming crowd of over 20,000 saw the Eagles break their own three game losing streak and probably save head coach Ernie Hefferle's job in the process. The final tally was 22-6, but this score was deceiving. With less than two minutes left in the third period, the Main Liners trailed by 7-6 and had seemingly stopped a B. C. drive.

Cats Score

Villanova had just scored on a one yard plunge by Lou Rettino, one of the few bright spots for the Cats, and on the ensuing kickoff the Eagles got down to the visitor's 32 yard line when the defense stiffened. End Jack Mount threw Van Cott for an 8 yard loss at that point, putting Boston in a 4th and 12 situation.

The Eagles then gambled not once, but twice. Not only did they not kick, but they refused to go for the short pass and the first down. Instead, Van Cott faded and threw to end Art Graham, who was closely guarded by Tom O'Rourke and Nick Russo. However, the pass was as perfect as possible and Graham took it on the 15, eluded his pursuers and scored standing up. The TD had the double effect of demoralizing the Cats, who seemed to be coming back at that point.

Good Punt

The first score came at 13:26 of the initial period and was also the result of a fourth down situation. Stopped on their own 25, Bill McKenney got off a beautiful high punt. O'Rourke called for a fair catch but the wind seemed to take the ball and it hit the ground making it a free ball. Nick Russo couldn't handle it and it was finally recovered by Captain Joe Sikorski on the Cats' 32. On 3rd down, Van Cott snaked his way 17 yards down to the 10. Two plays later, fullback John Sullivan plunged off right guard for the score. Sullivan was playing in place of injured Harry Crump and distinguished himself well. Lou Kirouac added the extra point.

Rettino's score for the Cats' only points of the day capped a 57 yard drive that originated when Russo recovered John Flanagan's fumble on Villanova's 43. The Main Liner's scored on 8 pays, the big play being a 31 yard pass from Rich Richman to Larry Glueck.

Zwolak Paces Cat's Harriers Over Hawks In Record Time

On October 16, the cross country team opened its season by defeating St. Joseph's, 20-41.

In a previous column it was predicted that Vic Zwolak may well develop into the outstanding distance runner on the Villanova team. When the race against the Hawks was completed, Zwolak had covered the 4½ mile distance in 23:02—a new course record, His only apparent trouble was that he had too much left at the end.

Good Showing

Pat Traynor, coming along very rapidly after his late summer injury, finished a strong third behind Kevin Quinn of St. Joe's. Pat held the previous record of 23:24 which he set last year. Another surprise was the extremely good showing of Angelo Sivieri (4th) and Joe Reilly (5th). Sivieri has all the characteristics of a great distance runner and before the year is over he could prove to be valuable.

Owen McGuire (7th), John Angerine (8th) and Bob Collins (10th) finished in the top ten.

The future still remains uncertain for the harriers. The team as a whole needs a great deal of work, despite the relatively good showing of a few individuals. Improvement, coupled with the curing of key injuries, might lead to a successful season.

Crimson Of Harvard Overpowers Wildcats In Rugby Match, 11-0

The Villanova Rugby Club, reduced to 14 men for most of the game, succumbed to the rigorous assaults of the Harvard forwards last Saturday as the Crimson shutout the 'Cats 11 to nil.

Quick Scores

Inside the first two minutes, the Wildcats had lost the services of starting forward wing, Luke St. Onge, due to the aggravation of some torn hand ligaments received earlier in the week. Harvard was quick to capitalize on the advantage scoring two tri's and one two point conversion in the next two minutes.

Continually pressing the Wildcats inside their twenty five yard line, the Crimson only allowed the 'Cats one scoring opportunity throughout the entire afternoon. Advancing to the Crimson twenty, Richie Guidan was granted a penalty kick from the twent yyard line at a acute angle. The kick fell wide and the 'Cats never seriously threatened again.

Crimson Forwards

The predominant characteristic of the Harvard squad was the tallness and strength of their forward wall, averaging 6'3" in height. Captain Raloh "Pig Pen" Lewis commented that the Villanova squad did a tremendous job in containing the Crimson to even 11 points.

The Crimson garnered their last three points with a tri on the final play of the game as the Cats appeared to be worn down physically. A rematch, however, is tenatively scheduled during the regular spring season.

This Saturday, as part of the Parents' Weekend activities, the Wildcats will play host to the Quantico Triangle Club at 11:00 in the morning.

Gene d'Aquili Chosen As National Catholic Youth Nomination

At the Student Council meeting of October 25, 1961, Eugene G. d'Aquili, a senior science and philosophy major, was elected Villanova's outstanding Catholic youth. With this election, d'Aquili also became Villanova nominee for the national award for the Outstanding Catholic Youth, an annual award given by the National Council of Catholic Youth.

Each NFCCS college, each Newman Club, and each Diocesan Youth Director may submit one candidate. The nominees are then judged by the National Directors of the three organizations on the basis of their accomplishments and merit. The winner is given national recognition as the Outstanding Catholic Youth.

D'Aquilli, who is from Trenton, New Jersey, attended Trenton Catholic Boys' High School where he was an active member in a number of organizations.

Gene entered Villanova in September, 1958, as a pre-med student. He has since expanded his curriculum to include philosophy as a minor.

His extra-curricular activities include his post as senior delegate from Villanova's NFCCS to the Student Council; a member of the Editorial Board of the VILLANOVAN; and the Editor-in-Chief of the new campus magazine, CONCEPT.

After graduation from Villanova Gene plans to go on to medical school, and eventually to enter the field of psychiatry.

A tense moment during the rehearsal of The Brothers' Karamazov shows James Failing in the role of Dmitri being restrained by Clement Birch, Jr., playing Ivan his brother. The terrified victim is William Brown in the role of Tyador the boisterous boys' father.

Graduate Theatre Begins Season With "Bros. Karamazov"

The Graduate Theatre Department of Villanova University will present Jacques Copeau's adaptation of Dostoyevsky's celebrated novel, THE BROTHERS KARAMAZOV, beginning Wednesday evening, November 8, and running through Sunday evening, November 12, in Vasey Hall Theatre. Curtain time for each performance is 8:15 p.m.

The production will be under the direction of Mr. Richard A. Duprey, department chairman.

Technical director for KARAMAZOV will be Mr. George Herman, also a member of the Villanova facuty. Mr. Herman, added to the faculty last year, is the author of more than thirty plays and musicals, and his work has been produced in the United States and England.

Graduate Assistants

Three new graduate assistants in the Theatre Department will be involved in the production of KARAMAZOV. Miss Mary Lee McDonald, a graduate of Saint Norbert College in West DePere, Wisc., will be stage manager. Thomas Nevins of Chicago, who is a graduate of Quincy College in Quincy, Ill., will be assistant technical director in addition to acting in the role of "Father Zossima."

Other members of the cast of KARAMAZOV in the men's roles include: William Brown, a graduate of Villanova, Class of 1957, as "Fyodor"; James Failing, in the role of "Dmitri"; Clement Birch, Jr., as "Ivan"; Thomas McCoy, as "Aliocha."

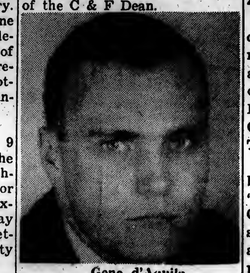
The major female roles will be filled by Miss Ria Russell as "Grushenka" and Miss Kathleen Crane as "Katerina." Miss Russell has had television appearances on the United States Steel Hour and in "My True Story."

Council Ponders Old Legislation To Establish First Autumn Lecture

The election of Eugene d'Aquili as Villanova's Outstanding Catholic Student and the announcement of the first lecturer of the 1961-62 series were the keynotes of the bi-weekly meeting of the Student Council last Wednesday evening.

D'Aquili, Senior Delegate of NFCCS and Editor of CONCEPT, will, by virtue of the election, represent Villanova in the national competition among the Catholic colleges of the country. In a preliminary speech, Gene Felch, last year's NFCCS Delegate, informed the assembly of the background and requirements for the election while noting that the past candidate finished second nationally.

Peace Corps Lecture



The evening of November 9 will host the first lecture for the Student Body at 7:30. Mr. Richard Thomas, Regional Director of the Peace Corps, is also expected to spend the entire day on the Villanova campus, meeting with members of the faculty and student leaders.

Among the other old business conducted included a report from Charles Labus, Vice President for Academic Affairs, that a recommendation has been sent to the Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President, to have the Library opened until 10:00 on Sundays for at least a two week trial period.

Previously, the Library had closed at 5:00 Sunday afternoon. The recommendation was based upon a poll taken by the Council. Approximately 35% of the 2000 students polled replied that they would probably use the Library sometime during Sunday.

Approved Motion

Permission was given to students desiring to use the public address system in the Commerce and Finance Building by the Rev. Joseph Kemme, OSA. The announcements would, however, have to be of an academic nature and await the approval of the C & F Dean.

WWVU 'Casts On WDAS-FM; Shows Aired Every Two Weeks

The Villanova University WWVU radio station, in co-operation with WDAS-FM radio station, held the first transmission of the program "University Forum" last Sunday, October 29. The production dealt with the Villanova Singers and the Glee Club.

The program will be on the air every other Sunday until June, from 6:06 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. on WDAS-FM, a WQXR network radio station. Among the productions will be informal recordings of play rehearsals, athletic news, and formal lectures by faculty members.

Selection of topics and information of programs will be under the direction of Dr. Charles B. Smith, Faculty Moderator; Dan O'Mara, Station Manager; and Mr. Gene Ruane, Public Information Director of Villanova University.

In connection with this first series of professional FM programs offered by the station Dr. Smith said, "I think the series is extremely worthwhile for the members of the station, inasmuch as it provides a professional outlet for the training that the students have been receiving by working on Villanova University's closed circuit station."

Villanova To Host Nurses During Workshop Next Week

The Villanova University Division of Nursing and the Southeastern Pennsylvania League for Nursing will co-sponsor a workshop to be held on campus during the week beginning Monday, November 6 and ending Friday, November 10.

Opening Address

The theme of the workshop, "The Staff Nurse Contributes to Continuity of Patient Care," will be enlarged and developed in the daily lectures which begin on Monday after an opening address by the Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President, at 8:30 a.m.

Miss Marion M. Schrum, Dean of the Division of Nursing, will present the plan for the workshop, which will be followed by the keynote address. The address, "The Concept of Continuity of Patient Care," will be presented by Mrs. Lucile Petry Leone, Chief Nurse Officer of the United States Public Health Service.

Other lectures to be presented during the week will be given by various guest speakers.

Morning sessions will begin at 9:30, and afternoon sessions will be held from 1:30 to 3:30.

Enrollment for the workshop is limited to fifty staff nurses employed either in hospitals or public health agencies.

Student Tours Begin As NFCCS Starts Travel Program

The NFCCS is sponsoring a program of Student Tours of Europe and South America which will be available to all interested students on campus.

The idea of tours for Catholic Students began in the Holy Year of 1950 when 2500 American Catholic Students traveled to Rome. So successful was the tour that NFCCS and the National Newman Club Federation have since sponsored annual travel programs to many countries of Europe and South America. More than 6000 students form Catholic schools throughout the country have participated in the travel program.

There are several benefits to be gained from taking a NFCCS sponsored tour. The rates include trans-Atlantic steamship fare or full economy class jet fare for air tours, land travel in Europe, hotel accomodations, three meals daily, tour conductors and guides.

Full Schedule

The schedule is arranged to allow visits to shrines, sightseeing and time for individual exploration. Also, all difficulties arising from language differences, schedules, and exchange of foreign monies are eliminated.

Tours are available to almost any country in Europe or South America. It is planned that one of the European tours for 1962 will extend behind the Iron Curtain to Poland and Czechoslovakia.

Anyone interested in obtaining further information about the NFCCS Travel Program may contact Villanova's travel chairman, Len Limongelli.

Mort Farr Addresses Marketing Society On Price Aspects

The new Marketing Society of Villanova University presented Mort Farr, well-known retailing personality, as the featured speaker of their first meeting of the year. The session, held Wednesday evening at 8:00 p.m. in Dougherty Hall, was well attended by parents and friends of students, as well as the students themselves.

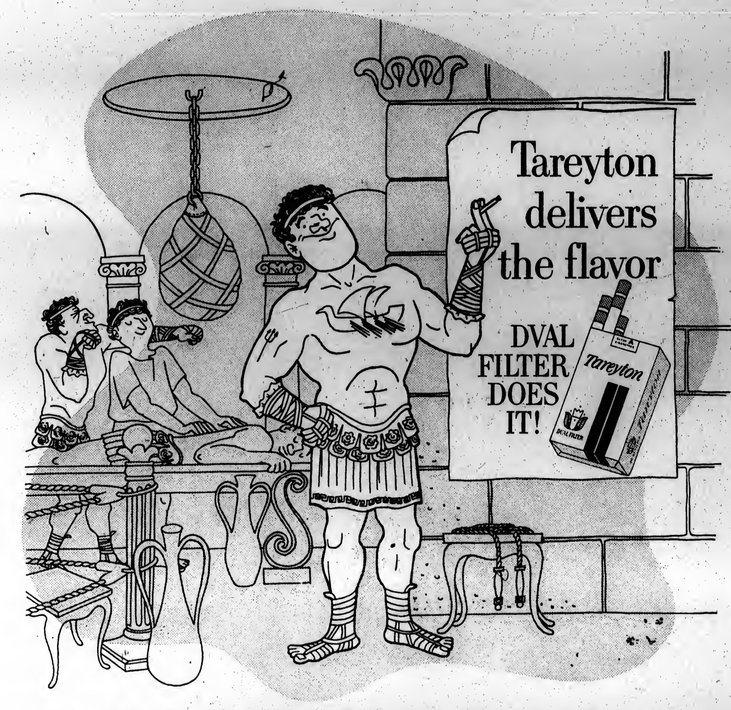
Mr. Farr spoke to the group on certain aspects of marketing and competitive pricing and their relationship with store image and personality. In speaking of his own particular field, Mr. Farr said that "survival in the highly competitive and cut-throat appliance industry is possible only by stressing values, together with customer services". He also added that "this industry has provided much to the American way of life in offering time and labor saving devices, thus furnishing greater opportunity for leisure time activities".

Soph Cotillion To Feature Revelers, Chuck Gordon, Award

The annual Sophomore Cotillion assumes its 1961 appearance this Friday evening in the Villanova Field House between 9 p.m. and 1 a.m. It is to be a semi-formal dance open to the entire student body.

The dance will commence a weekend of activities for the only social function of the Sophomore class this year. The ten-piece orchestra of Chuck Gordon, featuring a female vocalist and the Revelers for the intermission entertainment, are the scheduled attractions of the Friday evening dance.

"OC" Award



Titled "A Dance in the Park during the Gay '90s," the Cotillion will again rely heavily on decorations centered around the theme. During the first intermission, the annual presentation of the Best "OC" Award will be given to the sophomore displaying the best interest and effort in the orientation period.

Marty McGuinn, Sophomore Class President, added that a professional photographer will be present to take pictures of those in attendance. The photographer is also offering a free wallet size picture to every couple who attends the dance.

The Saturday activities will include the home football game with West Chester and the many after-game functions sponsored by various clubs and societies. All sophomores who attend the game are to acquire tickets reserved for them in an entire section.

Heading the weekend's affairs is Joe Triarsi as General Chairman while Bill Roccia, Barry Thorton, and Maurice McCarthy are in charge of the Ticket Committee. Other committee heads are Bob Rose for Publicity, Joe Tysowski for Crowning, Andy Lovus for Decorations, and Bob McGarry to care for all the miscellaneous details.

McGuinn Heads Cotillion

A potentially successful affair demands the mixture of a variety of active ingredients, among them dedication and spirit, stirred to success by energetic leadership. Such an affair is the upcoming Sophomore Cotillion with its chairman, Marty McGuinn.

Sophomore Class President McGuinn is confident that "this year's Cotillion dance will be the best dance of the year, due to a number of factors." Overllooking his own activities in connection with this affair, he said, "The dedicated work and preparation of Joe Triarsi and the dance chairmen, not to mention the impressive class spirit, have been invaluable in the efficient and smooth planning."

The only one of his party to be elected during the class elections last May, McGuinn further displayed his leadership qualities as Chairman of the Orientation Committee. He is also actively connected with the Student Activities Committee and the Social Affairs Committee of the Student Council.

Looks To Law

A native of Princeton, N. J., he plans to major in English, and will attend law school after he is graduated from Villanova.

McGuinn carries an extremely heavy work load, having changed from Commerce and Finance to the Arts Division of the University. By virtue of his position as Sophomore Class President, he is a member of the Student Senate. Of course, his most pressing activity at present is the cotillion and its outcome.

Peace Corps Representative On Campus For First Lecture

The first in the series of Student Council-University Lecture Forums will be presented at 7:30 on November 9. The Academic Affairs Committee has announced that Mr. Richard Thomas of Princeton University, the Regional Representative of the Peace Corps will address the student body on the activities of the Peace Corps.

Mr. Thomas, while at Villanova, will interview prospective participants, hold a discussion with interested faculty members, and also be interviewed by WWVU and the VILLANOVAN.

Father Klekotka, University President, has appointed Mr. Daniel Rivas, the foreign student advisor, to be the liason representative of the Peace Corps.

The Student Council-University Lecture Forum is presented annually by the Council in an attempt to keep the student body alert on various aspects of current events.

Any one interested in the Peace Corps should contact Mr. Rivas in room G27 of the new Mendel Hall.

Football and Music Inaugurate Tradition Of Parents' Weekend

Two thousand parents turned out Saturday to witness the Quantico-Villanova home football game, the highlight of the first annual Parents' Weekend.

Len Carnaghi, General Chairman of the Weekend, organized the initial introduction of the students' parents to Villanova life, with the Variety Show last Friday evening in the Field House.

Heading the show were soloist Guy Guarch, magician Kevin Shea, the Criterions, and the Villanovans. After the intermission Belle Masque staged a one-act play, "The Happy Journey" by Thorton Wilder. Joseph A. Salviola directed the evening which was attended by 1100 parents.

After registration by the Blue Key Saturday morning, Mr. Preston Rhodes, past Parents' Committee Chairman, delivered a short talk before introducing the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova. Mr. Anthony Mucceti, the new Parents' Committee Chairman, afterwards spoke to the parents.

The Villanova Marching Band opened the 11:00 Concert on the Green with the march "Black Jay" and other selections. After the concert a noon luncheon was served in the Day-Hop Cafeteria.

A crowd of 12,500 then saw the Wildcats trounce the Quantico Marines 34-0. At half-time the Quantico and Villanova Marching Bands performed for the parents along with the Villanova Trick NROTC Drill Team.

Also during the half, Marine Corps General Snedeker presented Fr. Klekotka with a miniature reproduction of the raising of the flag by the Marines at Iwo-Jima in 1945.

Concluding the weekend, 650 parents and their sons attended a Mass on Sunday morning in the Field House.

Marine Award To Villanova Highlights NROTC Activities

The Villanova NROTC Unit held its annual Military Mass Saturday, October 28, 1961. Celebrant of the Solemn High Mass was the Reverend John A. Klekottka, OSA, President of Villanova University.

Following the Mass there was a Communion Breakfast in the C&F Cafeteria for the Midshipmen and guests. The featured speakers were Father Klekotka, Captain John Boyle, USN, Commanding Officer of the Villanova Unit, and Lieutenant General Edward W. Snedeker, USMC, Commandant of the Marine Corps' school at Quantico. Emcee for the breakfast was Captain James Donnelly, (USN, ret.) of Villanova's Mechanical Engineering Department.

Marine Recognition

During halftime, General Snedeker presented Father Klekotka with a "token of recognition" for all Villanova had done in the past in cooperating and aiding the Marine Corps.

The award was a miniature of the statue commemorating the flag raising at Iwo Jima. Father Klekotka, in accepting the award, also took the opportunity to welcome those participating in Parents' Weekend.

Villanova's champion Drill Team and the Marine Corps Band added color to the halftime ceremonies.

Father Ammering To Conduct Soph Retreat Next Weekend

The annual retreat for the Sophomore class will be held on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, November 9, 10, and 11. This is a change in scheduling over last year when the retreat was held during the week.

Classes for sophomores will be held on Thursday, with opening exercises, conference, and Benediction beginning at 7:30 p.m. However, classes will not be held on Friday, with 8:30 Mass for resident and day students alike starting the day's exercises.

Cards Available

Attendance cards will be available to the students on Tuesday and Wednesday, November 7 and 8, in the Center Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Rev. Donald J. Ammering, OSA, will be the retreat master this year. Fr. Ammering was ordained on May 22, 1945 in Washington, D. C., and has spent several years on the Augustinian Mission Band.

Traditional Adoration

Nocturnal adoration is a tradition during Villanova's annual retreat. The Blessed Sacrament will be exposed after the Holy Hour on Friday afternoon until the closing exercise at 12:00 noon on Saturday.

"Retreatants are urged to spend an hour before the Blessed Sacrament during this time. Day students may bring their family or friends on Friday evening to join them in the period of Adoration," stated Rev. Norbert W. Whitley, OSA, University chaplain.

In the opinion of Fr. Whitley, this year's change in scheduling and format will enable the sophomores to concentrate their full attention on the retreat and to gain a closer friendship with God.

On Buildings...

In the past ten years Villanova has pursued a phenomena program of development. Not only has it advanced to the status of a University but it has also kept stride with the tremendous advances made in the fields of science and business in the last few years.

In continuing this policy, the Board of Trustees of the University announced recently in the VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY CAPSULE that the following buildings are scheduled for construction by 1975 as part of the Development program. The planned additions are a chapel, a graduate residence hall, an administration building, a theatre, a library addition, a recreation building, an infirmary, a dormitory, a maintenance building in that order.

The VILLANOVAN praises the extent of this program as an effort to meet the spiritual, academic, and material needs of the Villanova Student Body of the future. We especially take note of the construction of a theatre and hope that this is the precursor of an extensive development program in the humanities which are being allowed to fade more and more into obscurity as the years pass. We ask, however, why the proposed recreation building is placed sixth on the list when the dire need for such facilities has existed for so long a period of time.

The large Student Body of 1961 has found that it can make only little use of the recreation facilities which were provided for the Student Body of the 1930's. It has been forced to go off-campus to find diversions. A student could either join the long line of people who wait to use the inadequate facilities which are provided at this time or he could give up in desperation. But he cannot do this every moment he finds that he has time for relaxation from the fatigue of study. There must be a remedy now.

We also ask if the proposed dormitory will be one for the non-male student body who certainly may be classified in the category of "Too many students live off campus." A large number of students who live off-campus do so by volition, not because of cramped dormitories. The members of the Nursing Division, however, have no choice whatever. In addition to the costs of education and residence, the upperclass nurses also incur large expenditures for transportation to and from the University and the hospitals in which they receive practical instruction. It is evident that something must be done here.

The University has proposed a development program of noble stature which will most likely meet the needs of the Student Body of 1975 but something can be done to alleviate the hardships which those of the present will have to endure.

Megatons Mean Money

by Daniel G. Grove

The Kremlin Katzenjammer Kids under the tutelage of Colonel Nikita Puffel have finally gone and done it. The fifty plus megaton bomb they exploded was supposed to be one small step along the road to their ultimate end — the defeat of the capitalistic system.

In reality it will have an opposite effect. For now capitalism will be revitalized. The fear of radioactive fallout produced by the bomb will surely stimulate the market for anti-radiation devices and gimmicks.

Umbrella sales will quadruple. (In the near future some frustrated umbrella engineer will come up with an anti-radioactive treated fabric to revolutionize the whole industry).

Soap Flakes

Instead of advertising that "twenty-six leading washing machine manufacturers pack our soap in their machines," a leading washday detergent company will state that, "Our product is positively guaranteed to sterilize all clothes from fallout particles." The commercial will go on to insure that these snowy flakes are 99 and 55/100 percent effective against Strontium ninety.

Toothpaste manufacturers will have to scrap their invisible shield and GL-69 subterfuges, and come up with a dental cream that contains Cobalt 95 (a neutralizer to Strontium 90) and have it endorsed by the Russian Atom Bomb Explorers' Association. One company is reportedly conducting a test on Siberian children exposed to the bomb. A televised result will be forthcoming next year.

The great fear of the advertising executives is that, if these experiments fail, little Sally will someday come trotting home after the latest multi-megaton blast shouting "Look, Mom, no teeth."

Construction companies will probably profit the most. Fallout shelters built two years ago will become obsolete. Some entrepenuers envision a new chain of fallout motels along the Civil Defense Highways aptly named the Fallout Inns. These underground hideways will have all of the modern facilities, such as ceiling to ceiling lead, and missile shaped ice cubes.

The cocktail lounges will feature exotic drinks such as a Strontium 90 Sings and a Kiss of Death (3 parts Vodka, one radioactive onion, and freshly crushed olive branches). Carte Blanche credit cards will not be honored.

Deodorant manufacturers will face the problem of keeping their customers sweet smelling for sixty days in an underground hideaway. It probably won't matter whether it rolls on or sprays on, but rather if it stays on. A suggested name for such an innovation would be Span.

Getting back to the construction boom that the great threat will produce, we must consider the possibility of Federal Fallout Shelters. Some future presidential candidate will undoubtly come up with an earthy slogan like "What this country needs is a good five cent fallout shelter".

Filibusters & Fallout

Of course, some Southern Conservative will filibuster the whole idea, because it would definitely be an encroachment on States Rights, and besides the segregation problem in these shelters would have to be handled delicately.

Oil companies will flood the market with petroleum products that will not only stop motor knocks and keep your car's fuel line clean, but also will protect against that sluggish response that come from wires corroded by hot ashes.

The American Automobile Association Board of Executives is in session right now trying to decide if service calls on such burned up vehicles will be carried in membership policys.

No Nudists

Of course it won't be completely beneficial for the nation. Nudist camps will almost certainly disband, and bikinis will be replaced by the old gay-ninety bathing togas.

As the happy investor sits back and envisions all of these alterations in the system; the millions of new jobs that will be created, and the emergence of new companies, and fresh capital; he also may remember what a white haired scientist once said, "I don't know what kind of weapons will be used in World War III, but I do know what they will be using in World War IV—rocks."

Wasn't 30 Enough?

Just three years ago the dove of peace, Nikita Khrushchev, Premier of the U.S.S.R. implacable foe of all war-mongers, announced that for the sake of humanity the Soviet Union would suspend its nuclear testing.

But Comrade Khrushchev has shown the world once more that he is a man neither of principle nor of his word. This summer witnessed the Soviet's resumption of nuclear testing even as they were negotiating at Geneva for a permanent end to all testing.

As of this moment the Soviet Union has set off twenty-four nuclear explosions.

Monday, October 30, has become a day the world will long remember with horror and loathing. Within several days of the thirty megaton explosion, Khrushchev's scientists set off another explosion, this one about two to three times as powerful as its predecessor.

What is the reason for this cruel unconcern about the fate of coming generations on the part of the man who preaches "humanitarianism"? He answers, to a safeguard world peace. But the peaceful world brought about by world-wide radioactive contamination may well be one of deformed idiots peopling a world landscaped in ashes and desolation. But only the fool fails to realize thtat the real reason is nothing but Soviet atomic blackmail. Khrushchev says to the free world, "take your choice; Communism or contamination; calamity or catastrophe."

What the fat man in the Kremlin fails to realize is that radioactivity is neither Communist nor Capitalist. He prophesies that our grandchildren will live, if they live at all, and grow up, if somehow they can grow up, as deformed, insane monsters, totally unable to comprehend anything more than their most primitive needs.

King's Counter

In any type of conflict, the weapons that are used have to be evaluated in light of how effective they are. Thus in a military conflict, guns and bombs are evaluated by how straight they shoot or how big their blast is.

In a socio-economic conflict ,such as that which is facing the American Negro today, the same rule applies. The moral and legal weapons in their arsenal are to be judged by how effective they gain respect and acceptence for them.

The recent past shows that the Negro has been given his most efficient weapon to-date by Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King. Starting with the Montgomery bus boycott, he has successfully insisted that the underlying theme of the integration struggle be "non-violent resistence."

Borrowed from Mahatma Gandhi's movement in India, this concept insists that Negroes actively resist any attempt to make them second class citizens. But in doing so, violence on their part is to be removed from both thought and act. Their aim in the words of Gandhi is to "wear down with our capacity to suffer."

Dr. King's successful introduction of this concept into the struggle deserves our highest praise and admiration. He is undoubtedly responsible for saving both the blood and life of White and Negro. He has been responsible for an immeasureable increase in the respect given to his race.

In recent speeches here in Philadelphia, Dr. King has indicated that he is going to urge Negro disobedience of unjust segregation laws. This is commonly known as civil disobedience. He indicated that this is to become another weapon in their arsenal.

We fear to be quick to condemn this for it may turn out to be the only way for the Negro to gain his deserved place in our society. Only the future will tell, but it appears to us that Dr. King is jeopardizing all the good that has been gained by "non-violent resistence."

There still remains legal and judicial means of abrogating these laws. The concrete progress of the sit-ins and bus boycotts have shown this to be the responsible road to acceptance. Civil disobedience can only result in alienating those factors in the country that are trying to aid Negro efforts.

In the past, Dr. King has acted intelligently and responsibly. Let us hope, for the sake of all involved, that he will continue to do so.

"Splendor In The Grass" Hailed As Honest, Significant Drama

by Al LaMastra

The tide has come for this column to turn its attention towards the latest American film products. During the past few months a few movies of laughter and tears have been proving quite successful both visually and financially. We should take pride in these films for the number of young faces they are elevating to stardom and also because they pertain to subjects which only the citizens of the still movie-capital of the world could produce with any effectiveness. One movie in particular is SPLENDOR IN THE GRASS, an extremely sincere social drama.

Even from playwright William Inge and director Elia Kazan one could hardly expect perfection in the making of so long, involved and detailed a film as this drama of two starry-eyed teenagers struggling through the storm of adolescent love-pains into the calm of maturity and a second-choice marital adjustment.

Inge has squeezed into SPLENDOR's screenplay enough to fill a two-volume novel; Kazan has directed it with tenderness, taste, sensitivity and great power; and Natalie Wood and Warren Beatty play the anguished youngsters with exquisite sympathy and persuasion. The film has been most elaborately produced, and expensively and meticulously detailed.

Parents Are Problems

However, it's not always certain that so much of Inge's story should have been packed into this meaty but, sometimes, meandering picture. Even so, what is here is mostly cinematic drama of a high order—a drama that frequently soars and sings as it tells its story of these two idealistic young lovers thwarted and, in a sense, degraded by not-always-understanding parents: by a mother who warns her daughter "sex is ugly and not for nice girls"; by a father who wants his boy to go to Yale to become a "big football star" and "let off steam with the other kind of girl."

Set in Kansas, in a small town in the 1920's, the sequences are almost predictable but still persuasive—in high school and at the prom, in lovers' lane, classroom and coupe, down by the river and behind the gym—with the in-love youngsters trying to follow St. Paul's admonition: "It is better to marry than burn," while their parents urge them to be "practical"—to wait, wait, and wait. Inevitably, the boy's well-meaning father and the girl's puritanical mother destroy what they loved most. And the children lose what they wanted most: the lifelong romance they'd dreamed of, gone—replaced with a sort of humdrum adjustment to contentment, with someone else.

Kazan is a master at getting fine performances out of his actors, right down to the smallest bit-player. Natalie Wood proves again she is probably Hollywood's finest young actress; Warren Beatty in his first film role shows great promise; Audrey Christie as the girl's prudish mother, Pat Hingle as the boy's ambitious father and Barbara Loden, Zohra Lampert and Martine Bartlett all provide excellent support. Boris Kaufman's color photography and David Amram's background score contribute, too, toward making SPLENDOR IN THE GRASS one of the year's worthwhile pictures.

Screwball, Sophisticated and Stereotyped

The month of October also has brought us Audrey Hepburn in a wacky, rowdy adaption of Truman Capote's BREAKFAST AT TIFFANY's; and it can be easily said that the best of the hold - over laugh-evokers are COME SEPTEMBER and THE HONEYMOON MACHINE. With so many bright young faces bouncing around on the beaded screen such as Jim Hutton, Paula Prentiss, Brigit Bazlen, Steve McQueen and the older Rock Hudson and Gina Lollobrigida, how can anyone help but say things are looking brighter in our movie industry.

Bright futures in data transmission at W. E.

New engineers with initiative who can meet Western Electric's high standards are offered many exciting career opportunities with our company in data processing development work as it relates to communications.

For example, Western's engineers—working closely with Bell Telephone Laboratories—have solved development and manufacturing problems connected with the Bell System's new DATA-PHONE Data set (made by Western Electric). DATA-PHONE service lets business machines, such as computers, "speak" to each other in a language of numbers and symbols over existing telephone communication networks. This represents a tremendous boon to business; and consequently, it is estimated that some day there may be more machine talk than people talk using telephone lines.

Of course, data communications is only one of many rewarding career areas that await you at Western Electric. Here are just a few of the others: electronic switching . . . solid state electronic devices . . . microwave radio relay...computer-programmed production lines . . . solar cells . . . optical masers . . . futuristic telephones.

We need high-caliber, forward-thinking engineers now to help us transform these plans into realities or to work with us in scores of other key communications areas. Your future, the future of Western Electric, and the future of America's communications—could well depend on your first career connection.

Challenging opportunities exist now at Western Electric for electrical, mechanical, industrial, and chemical engineers, as well as physical science, liberal arts, and business majors. All qualified applicants will receive careful consideration for employment without regard to race, creed, color or national origin. For more information about Western Electric, write College Relations, Western Electric Company, Room 6106, 222 Broadway, New York 38, New York. And be sure to arrange for a Western Electric interview when our college representatives visit your campus.

Names and Nature of Fraternities Illuminated For The Uninitiated

by Joe Noel

Allegedly supplementing the Villanovan's academic life is his social one. It seems that supplementation is of the essence —what, then, supplements the social life?

With the fall semester earnestly under way, campus organizations of all types have steadily been gathering momentum. Unfortunately in some cases, fortunately in others, this is all a few of them will ever gather. Nevertheless, if having little else in common, each is either seeking or soon will begin to seek new members. Here is the supplementation answer: one might easily use an extra-curricular activity as a social life supplement.

Fraternal Fraternities

Continuing our practice of presenting an informative column, portenting nothing, we should like to discuss but one type of available supplements—the campus fraternity.

Unperturbed, we reveal that the first Villanova college fraternity was an outgrowth of the Villanova college campus. It ironically was not co-ed. A near-insatiable thirst for brotherhood among other things prompted its formation; the membership was of the elite, and secrecy and non-conformity were keynotes.

Not altogether original, its members took its name from the Greek. Endeavoring, much in the fashion of a Saturday afternoon sportscaster, to give credit where credit is due, we make haste to add that this custom dates from that of Greek college fraternities of taking their names from the Greek. Thus was VU's first fraternity off to perhaps a humble, but unmistakably individualistic start.

Fraternal Multiplication

Subsequent fraternities that arose—and there have been several since the notion of copying the formation of a truly secret, non-conforming body spread with all the exuberance of influenza—retained the Greek naming practice, and it is still in vogue.

Although a fraternity title invariably includes three words, more invariably only the initial letter of each is used. Evidence: Delta Delta Tau becomes DDT, and Alpha Omega Phi, AOF; TSK is Tau Sigma Kappa, while BRP is Beta Rho Pi.

Names are selected in no haphazard way, but contrary to the belief held by even some fraternity brothers, the process is not really esoteric. Often a name is intended to call to mind the purpose for which the members united. DDT — Drink Drink Twist — illustrates adequately such a fraternity.

Fraternal Sisters

It may happen that sister fraternities, called properly sororities, will be organized. As if in reply to DDT fraternity, Nu Iota Xi — NIX —was hurriedly but resolutely formed.

Fraternity or sorority names may be changed, though this is rather uncommon. Changes are made not without much difficulty, because the consent of each member is required — difficult, indeed, to obtain since the very secrecy of the organization prevents word of the meeting needed from being spread. At any rate, NIX sorority succeeded in becoming Sigma Tau Mu — Second That Motion.

Another naming method, the merit of which is only coming into its own, is that which expresses the common motto of the group. Vanguarding the mottoed fraternities is Alpha Omega Phi — Always on Phriday.

Brothers and sisters, like strangers, are of all sizes, shapes, and conditions. While this holds true for fraternity and sorority members as well, they can readily be identified by their tweedy attire, further indication of their constant struggle to remain paladins of nonconformity.

Fraternal Candidates

Perhaps it should be noted that one does not simply join such organizations. Tremendously rigid stipulations must be met by all aspirants, called pledges, for a length of time called appropriately, the pledging period. Requirements vary from college to college, fraternity to fraternity — here at Villanova, the most important are two: and index card, which, worn on the lapel, informs the world of the pledge's intentions, and money, which enlightens the fraternity as to his potential.

Perturbed, we close with a Hammerstein paraphrase: What ain't Villanova got? You know damn well!

Grad Fills Job In Backfield

by Tom Bruderle

The backfield of a winning team always receives a great deal of praise. The reason for this is that the backfield has made the most obvious contribution to victory. Nevertheless, after the hand-shaking is over, one man does not seem to have received his due. This is the backfield coach. In Villanova's case the forgotten man is Joe Rogers.

Former Halfback

Coach Rogers graduated from Villanova in 1950 with a Bachelor of Science Degree in Economics. One of his classmates was a fellow named Paul Arizen.

Prior to graduating from Villanova, Rogers played four years of varsity football as a halfback. The teams on which he played compiled a 27-9-2 record. One of these decisions was a Bowl victory. In fact, Rogers was sixth in the nation in rushing in his sophomore year.

To revive bitter memories, last year's Wildcats played good but losing football. Numerous mistakes cropped up in the earlier games. However, out of a season that saw eight stinging setbacks, there came two glimmers of hope. These came in the form of victories over Xavier of Ohio and Rutgers, the latter uudefeated. This was a promise of things to come.

Twenty Points in First Five Games

And what a promise it was. In each one of those first five games the experts were somewhat pessimistic. Villanova had a potent but a relatively young team. Against the Wildcats were five teams with a combined 29-19-1 record last year. In each one of these five games the Blue and White scored no less than twenty points.

Commenting on his backfield, Rogers said that Larry Glueck is having a fine year, Billy Joe is in "excellent shape" despite a lingering charley-horse, and Ted Aceto has been making a "good selection of plays and formations. Split ends and flankers have been particularly good".

In general the coach said that the blocking has been good but "overall speed is needed."

Thirteen Fumbles

With 13 fumbles in the past two games there has been a small amount of groaning. How could they make so many miscues after only five fumbles in the first four games? Coach Rogers said that "the fumbles did not come from center snaps or pitchouts. These fumbles occurred when the runners were hit.

Coach Rogers

"The cure for acute fumbleitis is scrimmage. Since the line is ailing, rough body contact is not permissible. They'll have to work it out themselves," said Rogers.

Interceptions Costly

Coach Rogers believes that the interceptions were more costly than the six fumbles in the B.C. contest. He explained that "three touchdown drives were halted by the interceptions." If only one or two of these aerials had been grabbed, the game might have been different.

VU Rebounds In 34-0 Romp; Marines Rush Minus 1 Yard

by Joe Zawacki

The team that plays together, stays together . . . and wins. Villanova's 1961 Wildcats, rebounding from last week's B. C. setback, surprised and overwhelmed Quantico, Saturday by a 34-0 count, before the cheering Parents' Day crowd estimated at 12,500.

Team Play

The older and more experienced Marines found themselves the victims of the Main Liners' superior teamplay. The defensive line held the visitors to a -1 yardage in rushing and quarterbacks Harry Dietz and Paul Terhes to distraction. The secondary intercepted four errant Marine passes and covered extremely well (on one play, Tommy O'Rourke let his man get behind him, but recovered immediately and batted down what would have been a 75 yard TD play). The offense added to the unexpected rout by running their plays with finesse and imagination, helped in no small way by the excellent blocking of the Wildcat line.

Good Play-Calling

Heroes were rampant. Leading the runners again was surefooted Larry Glueck who ran 11 plays for 87 yards, caught a pass for 11 yards, and ran back a punt for 48. Quarterback Rich Richman and Ted Aceto continued to improve in signal calling, the former devastating on the option and the latter gaining 100 yards on five passes.

On the line, Charlie Johnson received the "guts" award, playing with three shots of novocaine which didn't deaden the pain of his shoulder injury. Jack Weed broke through on numerous occasions, deflecting a few passes in the process.

Less Fumbles

The home forces fumbled but twice this time, the first one coming on the first play from scrimmage on the Cats' 38. Led by Dietz's passes to Joe Gacusans the Marines drove to the 10 before the defense stiffened and VU took over on downs.

The first tally came at 6:08 of the second period. After Barry Bocklett's punt went out of bounds at the VU 36, the "first" unit took ten plays to score, with Glueck going off left tackle from the 11 for the score.

Too Much, Too Soon

In the next six minutes, the Main Liners tallied twice more, causing head coach Major Wil Overgaard to comment "that those three quickies took the starch out of us. He had hoped to make it a contest, but three in six minutes is hard to compensate for, I think."

Bobby Merenda chalked up the second six, after which Billy Joe plunged for two. The last of the trio was the result of Joe intercepting Dietz' pass on the 40 and returning it 26 yards. On the very first play, Aceto passed to Clifford on the 3 and he ran it over unmolested. Gruneisen kicked the extra point.

Was That Point Necessary?

After a poor 7 yard punt, the Cats marched from the Quantico 44 in 10 plays for their fourth score. Nick Russo gained the honors this time with a plunge from the one, making an Olympian type dive over the line. Gruneison again added the point, and was nearly hurt on the rush, causing several observers to wonder about the wisdom of exposing the injury prone end to perhaps needless danger.

Richman Scores

The scoring was completed at 5:50 of the final period although the third unit had the ball on the 3 when the game ended. Richman led the attack from his own 33 to paydirt in 12 plays, gaining necessary yardage himself and passing when needed. Fittingly, he took it over on a sneak for the tally.

This Saturday, a good West Chester team challenges the Wildcats in a game of which the importance has been blown way out of proportion. Look for a close first half, but don't be surprised if it develops into a second half rout. Two years isn't time enough to forget the ridicule and embarrassment.

Billy Joe (35) Villanova's mammouth fullback picks up interference in the form of Bob Merenda (46) and Bob Kowalski (69) after intercepting a Quantico pass in the fourth period of Saturday's game. Joe gained 26 yards on the play. (Photo by Rich Stoughton)

by Bob Larkin

Villanova takes on once beaten West Chester State College this Saturday at Villanova Stadium hoping to avenge the 13-7 humbling in 1959 that sent the Wildcats into a tailspin that lasted for two years. The Mainliners dropped from the unbeaten ranks by Boston College, will be out to spoil the Rams, great record over the past four seasons. Since bowing, to Villanova, 28-14, in 1958 they have won 31 of 33 games.

Coach Alex Bell's charges are still hurting over the loss two years ago and are anxious to show the Rams that things have changed. At West Chester Coach Jim Bonder has continued his winning ways with few changes rolling through his first five opponents, and then dropping their first game in Bonner's Tenure last Saturday night to a tough Muskingham (O.) eleven, 19-16.

The Wildcats main target will be Joe Iacone, a 185 lb. fullback from Radnor High School. Lacone will be the chief threat to the Wildcats' defense with his hard running and breakaway speed, having a 6.5 yard per carry average. Leading the team in rushing for the past two years, the Rams' fullback is ranked eleventh in that department according to the NCAA small college ratings.

Coach Bonder in a recent interview claimed "Iacone could play for any team in the country."

Jim Pribula West Chester's right halfback, is the leading scorer in the state with 63 points in the first five games. Pribula, ranked fourth in the nation for small college scoring, has 40 and 44 yard field goals to his credit so far this season. Quarterback Vince Bonkoski is tenth in small college total offense with a 12 yard per play average and an impressive 58% pass completion average.

Last year's state college champions are ranked near the top of the small college ratings in all departments. The Rams lead the nation in total offense with 424 yards per game with 214 of these yards coming through the air. Ranked tenth among the country's small colleges, West Chester has 15 touchdowns to its credit to rank fourth in scoring.

Statistics won't tell the story this Saturday, however. The Rams will be up against a team, with a memory to erase and a few records of its own to set.

Sports Round-Up

Kittens Lose; Harriers Win

by Joe McCarthy

The Wildkittens, in their second outing of the year, were tumbled 14-6 by the West Chester frosh last Friday. Hampered by 5 interceptions and four fumbles, the squad was unable to take advantage of their few chances.

The only Villanova scoring took place on a long pass from quarterback Fran Dougherty to Joe McDonnell down to the two yard line. Two plays later Dougherty again hit McDonnell with a TD pass. The conversion was missed.

Coach Larry Sopko commented that they encountered something new and for which they were not entirely prepared for, the "gap 8" defense with a roving linebacker. Previously, they had defeated Bullis Prep in their opener.

Five teams remain undefeated in the intramural touch football league after five weeks of play. The Avomillius pace the league with a 5-0 record while three squads are tied for second with 4-0 slates, the Jody Raiders, the Denver Boys, and the Rejects. In fifth but still undefeated are the 5N's with their 3-0 record.

Time for all games now are 3:15 and 4:15 due to the change from Daylight Saving Time to Standard.

The Wildcat Cross Country team scored their second and third successive victories of the year in the past week, defeating St. John's 22-36 and Quantico 21-40.

Vic Zwolak paced the Wildcat triumphs with firsts in both meets. His times over the 4½ mile Cobbs Creek course were 23:11 and 22:47, the latter cutting 15 seconds off his own course record, 23:02, set against St. Joe's in the first meet.

Wildcat Pat Traynor also took seconds in both meets, pressing Zwolak closely with times of 24:16 and 23:27 respectively. Coach Jim Tuppeny is reported quite pleased with Traynor's recovery performances.

Since the Marine Rugby squad was unable to appear last Saturday at Villanova for their scheduled game, the Villanova Rugby team featured an intramural game for their part in Parents' Weekend. The Villanova A team shutout its classmates, the B squad, 16-0.

This Saturday for the Sophomore Cotillion Weekend, the Club will play two games, hosting the Marine Triangle Club at 9:45 and the Philadelphia Rugby Club at 11:00.

Under new basketball coach, Jack Kraft, the 1961-62 edition of Villanova basketball has begun its daily practice sessions. Twenty-nine candidates reported on the first day of practice to Coach Kraft.

It has also been announced that the Wildcats will play in the Quaker City Tournament during the Christmas holidays this year.

Twenty-Nine Seniors Make Who's Who; De-emphasis Doesn't Mean Disaster; Father King Appointed To New Post

New Executive Office Aids Development Foundation

The office of the President released the following announcement made by Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of the University: "I am pleased to advise that I have received official notification that the Provincial Definitory has elected Rev. Edwin King, OSA, Vice-President in Charge of Public Relations and Development for Villanova University. This appointment was made to coordinate the operations of the Alumni Foundation, the Development Foundation, and the Public Relations Office."

Father King stated that one of his primary objectives in his new position would be to clear away the misunderstandings with regard to the Development Program. He defined the Development Program as "a university-wide effort aimed at total development, quality, and excellence in such things as teacher's salaries, buildings, and curriculums." He stressed the fact that he would strive to attain these goals by planning a unified effort by the Administration, Faculty, and Student Body. He continued that "the accent is on finances but not for finances alone but for educational quality and excellence."

Father King

Father King stated that at the present time the Development Foundation is working on a campaign to obtain funds for professors' salaries. He said that this was an effort to obtain more and highly qualified teachers and to retain those which we have at the present.

Realization of Rules

With regard to his plans for the Alumni, Father King stated that one of the major portions of his plans will be to instill a realization in the present students of their roles as members of the Alumni, particularly with regard to the Senior Class.

Father King came to Villanova University from Villaneuva in Havana, Cuba in July of 1961. He was Director of Public Relations at Villaneuva during his two years there. Previous to that he was Head of the Modern Languages Department at Archbishop Carroll High School. Father King graduated from Villanova in 1950.

Father King stated that we have many reasons to be proud of Villanova. He expressed great determination in finding solutions to present problems that would consequently give Villanova more reasons to be proud of itself.

Mahan Announces New Policy Changes For Football Team

Villanova's Athletic Director, Arthur Mahan announced last week that the University will change its football policy. The announcement followed a story in a local newspaper that quoted Mr. Mahan in regard to certain cutbacks in football scholarships.

The new Villanova policy concerning the football program will not be a radical shift or a complete de-emphasis according to Mahan, and Reverend Thomas Kenney, OSA, Assistant to the Chairman of the Athletic Board. Father Kenney went on to say "this season is the epitome of what we hope to maintain in the future". Father Kenney made his remarks to the Student Council at their meeting last week, having come to address the council at the request of Chairman Thomas Wall.

Flexible Policy

"The new policy will be a flexible one that will give the student body the chance to follow their team, and to establish rivalries with teams in the area, but will still permit us to keep our traditional foes such as Boston College and Detroit on the schedule," stated Mahan.

According to the Athletic Director this change has been implemented for two reasons. The first was a suggestion made to Villanova by the Middle Atlantic States Accreditation Board, that Villanova try to bring a better balance between the number of athletic scholarships and the amount of academic scholarships. The second reason is to produce a football schedule that will see evenly matched teams, and that will be of interest to the student body.

These statements seem to ally most of the pessimism that the aforementioned newspaper article created on campus. Villanova is not going to cut the athletic program drastically, or play a schedule with Haverford, Swathmore, and Ursinus," said Mahan.

Rivalries and Home Games

In the future, Villanovans will be able to see more home games, and more games with area teams. Teams like Delaware,

Contest, Outing, Ball To Highlight Charity Weekend

The Junior Class will host the Annual Charity Ball on Friday night, December 1, 1961. Co-chairmen Jim Jordan emphasized that the proceeds of the affair will be used to give the "Johnnies" at St. Johns' Orphanage a Christmas that will be a little fuller.

"This affair, aside from being a social function," declared co-chairman Jim Shiels, "will be a function for charity and will be one of the high points of the class year."

The music for this dance will be provided by Villanova's The Revelers. Ticket sales will be handled by Day-hop John Canuso and Resident Joe Moshner. Sales will open in the Pie Shoppe on Wednesday, November 15. The donation for the tickets will be two dollars per couple.

Ugly Man

The high point of the evening will be the announcing of the winner of the Ugly Man Contest. This custom, started here at Villanova last year, is to choose the "ugliest" man from the student body. Votes are a penny, donated to the Orphanage during the week preceeding the dance.

An abstract modern Christmas motif, designed by Joe Ruggerio, will make an unusual and interesting decoration theme.

The main source of income for the weekend will come from the ball and the committee hopes that it will receive the fullest

Villanova To Participate On College Bowl In January

Villanova has accepted an invitation to appear on the television program "College Bowl" on Sunday, January 7, it was announced this week by Eugene Ruane, Director of Public Information.

The program is seen each Sunday at 5:30 p.m. over the full Columbia Broadcasting System network. Mr. Ruane explained that an earlier invitation to appear on the show was declined because the date fell too close to the opening of the school year and sufficient time was not available for the selection and preparation of a representative team.

Students interested in trying out for Villanova's "College Bowl" team are asked to report to Vasey Auditorium, Thursday, Nov. 16th at 3:30 PM.

Quiz-Type Program

"College Bowl" is a quiz type program in which teams of four students from each of two schools compete. The program is sponsored by the General Electric Company and is moderated by Allan Ludden.

Council Hears Two Addresses Notes Progress of Old Business

An address by the Rev. Thomas Kenny, OSA, on the subject of athletic de-emphasis at the invitation of the Villanova Student Council dominated the recent assembly of Villanova's student legislators last Wednesday.

In essence, Fr. Kenny stated that there is no drastic change contemplated in the Villanova football policy which was successfully originated this season.

Post-Graduate Problems

Following Fr. Kenny's talk, John Simone, Regional NFCCS President, spoke about the formation of an intellectually aware Catholic Lay Apostolate and his own moral commitment to the apostalate.

The progress of several motions were reported by the committees. Among them, it was pointed out that 500 copies of the Student Activities Handbook had been printed and distributed to each of the freshman residents. The handbook, under the chairmanship of Jim McErlane and Mal Carton, contains 11 pages of over 50 campus organizations.

Senior Cars

A survey of the available spaces in the parking lot indicated that there were a minimum of 183 spaces at all times, this being three times the number of residents with cars. An attempt to have the Senior Car Privilege extended, the Rev. George McLaughlin, OSA, Dean of Men, said that such was out of the question until next semester, since about 25% of the seniors have been abusing the privilege.

Work is being done to determine the possibility of having several art exhibits on the Villanova campus. The committtee has had several successful meetings with Dr. Radan of the Fine Arts Department and has received generous co-operation.

A debate enlivened the proceedings of the assemble on the motion of whether the Council should sponsor a Student Council Dinner Dance. The motion, after much debate and voting was finally referred to a committee for investigation.

oming, Wheaton College, and Brigham Young University. If Villanova wins, the team will return the following Sunday to meet the University of Alabama. A team continues to play either until it is beaten or until it has a maximum of five wins.

Scholarship Prize

The winning team receives a $1500 scholarship grant for its school, and the second-place team receives $500 for its school's scholarship fund. The coaches and students who participate, receive a gift from the General Electric Corp.

Plans Announced For Civil Defense

Initial preparations have been begun by the Villanova Administration for the proper installation of an adequate Civil Defense program on the Villanova campus. Thus, in the event of a nuclear attack, all those who might be on the campus at the time of an attack would have a means of shelter and safety.

Several meetings have been held by the Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President, to determine the preliminary efforts which would be necessary for such a project. Fr. Klekotka pointed out that the program is merely in an embryonic stage and that much more research needs to be done before final plans and actions are formulated.

Much of the responsibility for the program has been delegated to Captain John Murphy of the Campus Security Force in view of his appointment as Chief Warden. At present, Captain Murphy is surveying the campus and its present facilities with a look to Civil Defense pre-requisites.

Extensive Responsibilities

Fr. Klekotka expressed hope that he would be able to call in Civil Defense authorities soon to let the university know whether they are going in the right directions. The entire scope of the program has extensive proportions in a community sometimes as large as six thousand.

Many problems have been encountered, for example in the field of food and water provisions, first aid supplies and student responsibility.

A need for specialized volunteers with first-hand knowledge of Civil Defense procedures was voiced by both Fr. Klekotka and Captain Murphy. Faculty members or students who have had any experience in Civil Defense or who have helpful information to offer are encouraged to contact Captain Murphy.

West Chester, Rutgers, and possibly Temple will appear on our schedule. In addition traditional rivalries with Holy Cross Detroit, V.M.I., Xavier, and Boston College will be maintained.

According to Father Kenny and Mahan the coaches' reaction to the new policy was one of agreement.

The Leader of the Band

Few students through four years of hectic university life recall the basic tenet for collegians — to utilize these formative years proximate to adulthood for the purpose of becoming a well-rounded individual. But one who has advanced significantly toward this ultimate goal is senior, Bill Diepenbrock, President of the Villanova band.

Student Director of the band as a sophomore, Diepenbrock has not only invested his time in many extra-scholastic activities, but he has also competed on the Lacrosse Club, while maintaining a "B" average.

Broadcasts Jazz

A native of Silver Spring, Md., this busy accounting major has divided his time among the Student Council, the Sanctuary Society, Belle Masque, Turf 'n' Tinsel, and the Accounting Club. And for four years he has broadcasted the nightly jazz program on campus station WWVU. But his most pressing and vital duties are in connection with the band.

The Villanova band, with the exception of a music director, is managed entirely by the students. The officers of the band carefully plan the football halftime shows. In addition, they drill the band and choose all the songs which they will perform at the games and at their concerts at girls' colleges.

'Run by Students'

"Few people realize that the band is perhaps the most active organization on campus, and that especially during football season there is hardly a let-up until the last game is over."

Continuing with definite fervor, Diepenbrock said, "Since it is almost completely run by the students, there is a feeling of camaraderie and working together which is hard to equal in other organizations."

Diepenbrock, who tentatively plans to go through the Marine P.L.C. law school program, made a final comment about the band: "I find it extremely gratfying that so many students are willing to give so freely of their time for so little recognition."

94% Of Polled Students Request More Recreational Facilities

The Student Council of Villanova University conducted a preference poll among the student body on Wednesday, November 8 to determine whether or not existing recreational facilities are adequate. The poll which was long sought by students was particularly aimed at on-campus residents.

The first question on the form sheet was: "Do you think that the present recreational facilities are adequate?" An overwhelming majority answered "No" to this question. Of the 1,414 resident students who took the poll, 1,328 or 94 per cent answered "No" and 86 said "Yes" to this question.

The second question was: "Are you in favor of the use of Student Council funds to sponsor a recreational program which would include a place for recreational facilities such as pool tables, ping pong, shuffle board, etc.?" Of the residents who answered this question 1,106 said "Yes" and 224 said "No."

Bill DiPaolo, co-chairman of the polling committee, tabulates the results of the recreation poll being answered by Sal Rico and Denny Corcoran.

The day-hops who took the poll answered "No" in the number of 546 and "Yes" in the number of 78 to the first question. They answered "Yes" in the number of 368 and "No" in the number of 258 to the second question.

Student Suggestions

When asked for suggestions, many Villanovans stated that more adequate facilities were needed because they felt that there was no place to entertain visiting parents and friends. Many also stated that the administration should finance part if not all of the expense involved.

Specific recommendations are: lounges in each dorm; improvement of existing equipment; longer hours for the use of athletic and recreational facilities; and the possibility of utilizing the Classroom Annex as a Student recreation building.

The results of the poll were submitted to Joseph Little, Executive Vice-President for Student Government at the Student Council that night. The survey was conducted by Paul Breen and Bill DiPaolo.

The Student Council expressed its belief that if positive action is to be taken, sufficient coverage must be provided by the Publicity Committee to inform students of the situation.

Dr. Malik Lecturing To State Department On Muslim Problems

Dr. Hafeez Malik of the History and Political Science Department has been invited by the United States Department of State to deliver a series of lectures at the Foreign Service Institute. The invitation, effective since August, when the first lecture was delivered, was extended to Dr. Malik in recognition of the State Department's high esteem for his work on Muslim Nationalism in the Indo-Pakistani subcontinent.

Dr. Malik, who conducts courses at Villanova in the study of South and Southeast Asia, will lecture on Muslim Nationalism in India and Pakistan and related subjects. He will be addressing Foreign Service officers probably including those of almost all ranks, who are being sent to South Asia. The lectures will be given approximately once every two months as part of the Introductory Area Training Program Seminar on South Asia for Foreign Service Officers under the auspices of the Department of University Training and Area Studies of the Foreign Service Institute in Washington, D.C.

Dr. Malik is a native-born Pakistani and a former White House correspondent. He received his doctorate at Syracuse University and joined the Department of History and Political Science as an Assistant Professor this semester.

THE UGLY MAN?

'Peace Corps Misunderstood' States Thomas During Forum

Mr. Richard Thomas, a field representative for the newly formed Peace Corps, opened the Student Council Forum series last Thursday evening in Dougherty Hall. Thomas, a Methodist minister, gave a well-rounded account of what the Peace Corps is all about to a very enthusiastic audience.

Not a New Idea

Mr. Thomas explained that there has been much misunderstanding concerning the Corps in that it was a political move. Actually the idea had its roots in the Point 4 program which went to Congress about two years before President Kennedy was elected. He went on to explain that the Peace Corps would manifest a new idea in American foreign policy, the idea of "exporting people."

Mr. Thomas elaborated on the three main goals of the Peace Corps. The first was a response to human need through the accomplishment of specific jobs for specific countries. The second goal is to make available a new window by which America can really be seen.

"In the past the people of foreign countries have seen only service men and tourists with cameras," stated Mr. Thomas.

The final and equally important goal of the Corps is to give America a new window through which may be seen the emerging nations. Mr. Thomas said that Peace Corps members returning to the United States would be extremely valuable in promoting international understanding.

Everyone Eligible

In closing, Mr. Thomas emphasized that no interested student should consider himself unqualified.

"No one should eliminate himself because of his course of study or any other reason. We believe that every American youth has some talent to offer."

A vigorous question and answer period followed during which many particular questions such as living conditions and draft deferment were answered. The entire lecture was taped for broadcast by radio station WWVU.

Information

Photographs and Complete biographical material on the nominee appears on pages 8, 9, and 10 of this issue of the VILLANOVAN.

The Deans of all divisions of the University and the moderator of each student organization nominated approximately eighty five seniors for the honor.

Selection Committee

On De-emphasis

For the past two weeks the word "de-emphasis" has been bandied around Villanova campus with fervor and pseudo-congnizance. The furor was created when a local newspaper quoted Athletic Director Art Mahan, concerning a reduction in football scholarships. Since the article appeared, everyone connected with the University has interpreted the meaning of this "shift in policy," and formed an opinion on it.

Many feel that Villanova is going to retreat into football oblivion by scheduling Haverford and Swarthmore. The more realistic group isn't quite sure what the future of football is at this school.

The "new policy" is explained in this edition (page 1), but the question still remains, how will it affect our football reputation, which is good at the present?

The answer is quite simple. Villanova can't play a big-time football schedule and be successful either financially or record-wise. A glance at our record over the last ten years bears this fact out. Except for a few excellent years, the Wildcats have been soundly beaten by powers such as Army, Navy, Mississippi, L. S. U., Syracuse ,and Baylor.

The Army and Navy fiascos last year were the product of trying to play in fast company without the necessary equipment, in this case football scholarships. Now the Athletic Board has charted a saner course.

It plans to decrease the amout of football scholarships without setting any absolute number to adhere to. At the same time plans are being made to keep football on the campus instead of emulating former Wildcat teams that traveled more than John Foster Dulles and played their home games in Bud Dudley's "grocery bowl" (a pre-green stamp innovation).

Local teams will appear in the Main Line Stadium. These local teams will not be of a lower calibre than some of the opponents on this year's schedule. We will continue to play our traditional rivals, and build new ones, which have been neglected long enough, at the same time.

This "sane policy" will place Villanova in a category that will permit consistent recruiting and scheduling. It will also comply with the wishes of the Middle Atlantic States Accreditation Board.

The end result should be exciting football every fall weekend instead of senseless shellacking due to mismatches.

BECAUSE OF THE THANKSGIVING VACATION THERE WILL BE NO VILLANOVAN NEXT WEEK. THE STAFF TAKES THIS OPPORTUNITY TO WISH EVERYONE A HAPPY THANKSGIVING.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

There were a few flaws that need mentioning concerning the editorial "King's Counter," which appeared in the November 2, issue of the VILLANOVAN. The editorial was evidently written by someone ignorant of the real meaning of sit-ins and civil disobedience. This is made clear by the striking contradiction in the last few paragraphs of the editorial.

The editorial states that, ". . . Dr. King has indicated that he is going to urge Negro disobedience of unjust segregation laws. This is commonly known as civil disobedience." The editor who wrote the editorial goes on to state that, "We (the editors of the VILLANOVAN) fear to be quick to condemn this for it may turn out to be the only way for the Negro to gain his deserved place in our society."

The reversal stated, "The concrete progress of the sit-ins and bus boycotts has shown this to be the responsible road to acceptance." If this is the responsible road to acceptance, then civil disobedience is proper, for what are sit-ins if they are not flagrant acts of civil disobedience. Obviously the editorial was not proof read successfully as to see the bold contradiction, or it was a vain attempt by the editor who wrote the article to recapitulate unaccurately what so many have said.

On the other hand, we question the civil disobedience of southern law enforcement agencies that have in the past refused to uphold THE LAW, be it state, federal or civil. Which of the two is most unjust? Is it wrong for the Negro to use civil disobedience, as a means of gaining those rights which are naturally his or is it right for southern whites to enact civil disobedience and refuse to enforce the law as handed down by the Supreme Court?

Let us not be naive in thinking that the legal and judicial means of abrogating segregation laws will enhance "those factors in the country that are trying to aid Negro efforts." They will not. "Civil disobedience can only result in alienating those factors . . .," so the editorial states, yet what concrete efforts had been taken by 'those factors' prior to the use of PASSIVE RESISTENCE and CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE.

In closing, we would like to express our regret that the editors of the VILLANOVAN have shown such lack of insight and understanding when they say, "it appears to us that Dr. King is jeopardizing, (by use of civil disobedience) all good that has been gained by "non-violent resistence." We would like to point out that sit-ins were a part of the passive resistance movement which adhered to non-violence. At the same time sit-ins were open acts of civil disobedience, and there was no violence on the part of Negroes. Therefore how can the editors of the VILLANOVAN insinuate that Dr. King will jeopardize, by using civil disobedience, all the good that has been gained, if civil disobedience has been tried and proven effective on previous occasions—unless the editors of the VILLANOVAN feel that Philadelphias react the same as their counter parts in Montgomery, Alabama.

To the Editor:

Art Mahan may want to ". . . meet teams like Delaware, Temple, West Chester and others on an even basis so that the outcome of each game will be in doubt until it's played . . .", but I'll be darned if I do.

I think it opprobrious to meet them on any basis.

To the Editor:

It is a well known fact that it is perfectly fain and just to argue against or to cut apart an opposing point of view. It isn't at all fair and just, however, if this is done without good reason, or done merely to malign without cause. This brand of injustice was demonstrated towards Bill Williams in a piece in the last edition of the VILLANOVAN entitled "Expose." Objective reporting requires evidence of having the facts. If the VILLANOVAN lies, instead of assinine and immaterial remarks, the facts concerning the John Birch Society, let it print just those—and along with it an objective and honest evaluation of Mr. Williams and his position.

On Neutrals

Under the guise of neutralism Jawaharal Nehru was welcomed by the United States government, entertained by the United States President, and was even permitted an address to the General Assembly of the all power-wielding, world-protecting ,United Nations.

The main controversy confronting the Prime Minister of India and one which seems to have stirred up his concern is nuclear testing. Nuclear testing as viewed by Nehru is an "evil thing" regardless of which country pursues this policy. Now, this is certainly not a disputable fact nor one which can be criticized. However, it does not take a man having the intelligence possesed by Nehru to make this profound statement. No, on the contrary, every man exercising right reason in accordance with the natural law would arrive at this same conclusion.

The crux of the matter, then, is not to define nuclear testing or make generalizations of a known nature, but to come right out and denounce those who are persisting in these "evil things." The solution lies in positive action of condemnation of the guilty party, and to give support to the country striving to maintain and perpetuate peace.

Why, now, that the correct method has been ascertained and seems quite logical, does not Nehru make his decision and levy his wrath at the one responsible for this testing and back the country advocating banning of nuclear arms?

Why doesn't Nehru realize his great responsibility to the uncommitted nations and those that are "neutrals" and aid in convincing them of the need to support the ideology which proposes peace and freedom as its final goal?

How, from the incriminating evidence presented to the world, can there exist indecision concerning which nation stresses nuclear testing?

But, then again, perhaps the decision has been made and that India's Defense Minister V. K. Krishna Menon speaks the sentiments of Nehru when he argues that Russia was forced to resume nuclear testing by the United States. Do not these feelings sound pro-Russian? Is not Nehru's neutralism a shield for concealing the Red monster?

Beware, United States, the man from the mysterious land of India bearing gifts . . .

On Snow

Snow leads to a blase environment a new aspect of beauty. To the poet, it may be a symbol of purity or a cover over the death of autumn from which rises the new life of spring. To the scientists, it means water in a frozen form. To any person, it provides a romantic element during the Christmas season. But to the traveller, snow is a hindrance.

Last year, Villanova passed through the winter with great hardship. The mountainous amounts of snow not only impeded all forms of vehicular movement but also made the daily treks to classes, meals, and chapel practically impossible. Day after day passed and still the snow was not cleared away. Irate students erected signs such as "Two weeks and still no place to walk." Twisted ankles, wet derrieres, and vivid language flourished.

If we are to rely on the old almanac, which successfully predicted last year's fiasco, this winter will be twice as bad. Once more the students and faculty will have to conjure up methods to cross the wide expanses of the Villanova ice pack.

Students in Fedigan Hall will have to use reserve care-packages usually saved for good meals because they could not get through the drifts. Rescue missions will have to be sent out. The Pie Shoppe will be empty on Thursdays at 10:30. Commandoes will not be able to fight on to Rosemont. Teachers will leave for a class hours early and strive valiantly to make it by twenty of, but will be lost in a snow chasm in the Quad. Physicians will be called in to treat the snow injuries. Students will walk on the grass because they could not find the roads and paths.

It would be very easy to provide a solution to these problems. A mechanical means could be provided to clear away the snow, such as was done in the parking lot last year. If the situation should remain the same, Villanovans, enjoy the roads and paths now, while it is possible.

Graduate Theatre's 'Karamazov' Emerges As A Moderate Success

by Gus Susnjara

Last Wednesday evening, Jacque Copeau's adatation of Fyodor Dostoyevsky's "The Brothers Karamozov" was presented by the Villanova Graduate Theater Department. The production emerged moderately successfully despite two rather formidable obstacles: a poor dramatic conversion of a magnificent novel, and a bit of surprisingly unimaginative casting.

The plot revolves about the Karamozov family. Feodor, the father, a self-centered boor, has devoted the better part of his life to the sensual in an alchophysical vein. He consistently seeks philosophical confirmation for his Hedonistic attitude from the "middle" son, the Weltschmerz, Ivan. Fancying himself a self-styled philosopher, Ivan spends the better part of his leisure time contemplating the existence of God. He concludes that there is nothing, and "all is permissable." (In this nihilistic bent, he affects a cynicism which casts a blackness about his personality.) In the final scene, however, under extreme philosophical duress, Ivan envisions a hallucinatory devil and the atheist cannot rest assured in his position. He, too, has his moments of doubt.

The most superficial personality is that of Dmitri, the eldest brother. Almost engaged to Katerina (who really loves Ivan), he is enamoured of Gruschenka, a delightful prostitute whom his father is presently trying to purchase with the legacy left to Dmitri by his mother. In a monastery, Dmitri threatens to kill the old man if he carries out the intended seduction. Feodor is eventually murdered and the blame is laid on his eldest. Dmitri is convicted and sentenced to forty years in pre-Leninist Siberia. Gruschenka, having undergone a Magdellean conversion, takes her pick and follows him to the salt mines. Along with them goes Alyosha, the saintly young brother. He realizes the family's unconventional grey character when he tells Katerina that she loves neither Dmitri nor Ivan, but "you love Karamozov."

The real murderer, however, is Smerdyakov, the epileptical bastard of Feodor. He contends that the guilt falls equally upon Ivan because he, Smerdyakov, has acted through the ethic of non - culpability. Smerdyakov then hangs himself and Ivan goes mad, or is perhaps struck dumb.

At the finale we find Feodor and Smerdyakov dead, Ivan insane, and Dmitri and Alyosha putting in their forty hours in the mines. So ends, for all practical purposes, the family Karamozov.

Perhaps the major difficulty in the play is that the novel is simply too big for the stage. This is no fault of Copeau. However, to realize the full significance of the plot, i.e. "man's need for God," one has to have read Dostoyevsky. Here especially, the portrayal of Zossima comes to mind. The ancient monk is a profound mystic, a miracle worker, and has the conglomerate virtues of a saint. Copeau makes him little more than a "nice old man" filled with insipid platitudes. When Zossima falls prostrate before Dmitri, the audience is unprepared for it, not that it is so sudden, but that Zossima just doesn't seem to have that capacity. The act must be explained by Alyosha before the audience realizes it is not a case of coronary thrombosis.

Casting was a problem. Alyosha is a tolerant, mystical individual. He is without doubt soft-spoken, innocent, and understanding. Tom McCoy simply did not fit the part. The orthodox monk became a puritannical overseer. Alyosha's voice was harsh and dominating and an embarassed downcast demeanor made his innate innocence seem more like low I.Q.

Patrick Caffrey lacked the profound vocal tone which is an essential characteristic of Zossima. His inflection was utterly insufficient to convey the sagacity of the old monk.

By far, the most outstanding performance was rendered by Thomas Nevin. As Smerdyakov, he covered, insinuated, led, instigated, and epilepized with real mental derangement. The final scene between Smerdyakov and Ivan was a singular spot of brilliance. As Ivan, Clem Birch was cynical, spiteful, and misanthropic. He may have affected a swagger too often, but his overall attitude was convincing.

Both female roles were handled with relatively mature acting prowess by Kathy Crane and Kia Russell. The old Feodor (Bill Brown) and Dmitri (James Failing) were adequate but not outstanding.

The minor characters, as usual, were minor.

The Padded Cell

Ain't No More

by Pete Nolan

The other day I was recalling, much to my amusement, the good times I had in grammar school. After a few years in college you begin to forget those good old days and they were really good. I mean you never had any homework on weekends, there were spelling bees, and drawing every Friday, things that you just don't have anymore. When you were in seventh and eighth grade you could be on the safety patrol, and wear a white belt and badge, and all the girls looked up to you.

Remember when the baseball cards came out? ,I spent every nickel I got on baseball cards. I was always trying to get Ted Williams, but all I ever got was Carl Furillo, and Willy Jones, and Ned Garver of the old Saint Louis Browns. I must have chewed up a half ton of bubble gum trying to get Ted Williams. I never found out until years later that they wouldn't take his picture cause he used to swear at the photographers.

We used to pitch cards behind school every afternoon. You always had a separate pack of beat up cards that were used strictly for pitching and all you could ever win were guys like Richie Ashburn or Billy Goodman, but there was always the hope that the guy next to you had Ted Williams in his back pocket.

Squealers

When we were in eighth grade we had permission to use the boy scout room and all the guys used to go down there in the morning and copy their arithmetic and smoke until one of the girls squealed to the sisters. Those girls were always a pain in the neck.

There was a girl who sat next to me all through grade school. She lived down the street and was always tagging along. I never paid much attention to her except when I wanted her to get me in good with a little blonde that I had a crush on. It's funny cause the little blonde grew up and her nose grew up and ten times as fast as she did, and the girl down the street turned out to be a real knock-out, and hardly knows me anymore. It's funny how things work out like like that.

Those were the good old days . . . lime popsicles, sling shots, smoking behind the garage, hopped-up bicycles without kickstands, and green apples. It's fun to think about them now cause you just don't have those things anymore.

The Rubbish Report

by Joe Massey

Recently, among the trash that daily accumulates on the tables and floor of the Pie-Shoppe this writer spotted an imposing blue book lying next to a tattered copy of the WORKS OF POGO. On the cover was emblazoned in bright red and white the inscription "Annual Report of the Committee on Un-American and Other Subversive and Questionable Activities of the John Burps Society, Inc., Robert Belch, President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer, and Committee Chairman."

I had not long to wait before I discovered in what such activity consisted, according to the report. The report read like a novel, perhaps because it was fiction. Anyway I found out exactly what kind of things came under the critical views of the report.

The first of these gems of wisdom and political insight was that the phrase "We, the people . . ." of the Preamble to the Constitution be stricken out completely. Also it was urged that the lines "the government of the people, for the people and by the people" from Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg Address be changed to "government over the people." The reason given for both proposals was that each smacked of democracy. "Democracy," said Chairman Belch, "is the worst form of government." And so I learned that democracy is a subversive and un-American activity.

The Peace Corps was next under fire. The concept of altruism and lending a helping hand was not at all in the interests of the United States the committee stressed. If that's the case, then, I thought to myself, the Lord was not at all American when he staid "Love thy neighbor." I wonder if the Committee has thought of investigating the Beatitudes? "Blessed are the peacemakers . . ." sounds like appeasement, doesn't it?

The report favored a campaign to impeach the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. It seems that a cash reward will be paid to anyone writing the best essay on the reasons for the impeachment. Basically the Chief Justice is guilty of interpreting the rights enumerated in the Bill of Rights as certain and inalienable. Moveover, unlike certain totalitarianists, he obstinately believes and upholds equality before the law and innocence until guilt is proven. In so doing he is aiding and abetting the cause of our enemy, says the Committee. Definitely un-American!

Education is investigated in the report also. The Committee urges the introduction of observers-informers (spies) into college classrooms. Freedom of speech won't be abused by subversive teachers if they know Big Brother is watching.

At this point I looked up and saw a noted campus conservative (who prefers to remain nameless) and asked his opinion of the report. He said he felt that every American who loves his country should read this report.

I agree emphatically. Help stamp out democracy.

As the risk of sounding like a gossip columnist I should now like, on behalf of the VILLANOVAN, to strike a pleasenter note in extending congratulations and best wishes to Bill Speers, former Associate Editor and columnist for the VILLANOVAN on his marriage to Miss Mary Lynne Henderson. Bill, whose column, "Speeritualism," was noted for its honesty and courage, was married at Holy Child Parish on Saturday November 11.

by Adam Wright

We sometimes feel that only our sense of humor keeps us from tranquilizers, ulcers, and psychiatrists. As we observe this small world spinning dizzily in its little eliptical orbit and its inhabitants spinning more dizzily in their erratic fashions, we often wonder if we ought not to be afraid. Fortunately for us, we usually become amused and our amusement holds back the floods of fear.

We have been amused in this way by MEN WORKING signs and by women drivers and by student leaders and by dogmatic professors and by newspaper editors and by policemen and dogcatchers and by musicians and football fans. But mostly we have been amused by politicians.

We have observed politicians. We have seen them vote often at the polls and seldom in the assemblies. We have seen them shake hands and kiss babies. We have seen them in front of parades and in the back of bars. And we have seen them make promises and break laws. We have been amused; for our own peace of mind, we have been amused.

Extremists

Most amusing among the breed of politicians we observe are the extremists. These fall into two categories: the Liberal Extremist and the Conservative Extremist. These two animals would shudder with horror to think that we would classify them together. Their very natures are opposed, we are told. And while they would agree, this poses a problem to us. For we have been taught that man's nature is rational, and fail to understand how two rational beings can be in complete opposition to each other.

Yet the fact remains. "There is a moon in the sky," says the Liberal.

"How can that be? You must be wrong," says the Conservative. "For any fool can see that there are stars in the sky." And so they argue, back and forth. And as we sit back and watch, we notice one thing always present in their arguments; each is certain that his opinion is right, and each believes that because he is right, the other must, of course, be wrong. Neither ever seems to wonder if perhaps they might both be right. And each is so intent in proving the complete error of the other, that he never bothers to examine to see whether his opponent's thoughts might be of some value.

Oldwater—Moleberger

We recall a television debate this year in which Senator Oldwater and Secretary Moleberger were the contestants. They were discussing the problem of an economically depressed area, and Liberal Moleberger said that the nation must send food, clothes, and fuel to the people of that area.

Conservative Oldwater, on the other hand, said that this would only relieve the effects of the problem and not solve it. He maintained that we shoud help the people to redevelop their economy and eliminate the cause of the problem.

"But," replied Moleberger, "can we let these people starve?" Neither had the complete solution to the problem. But we feel that both of them had part of the right approach. We feel that it is a shame that their ideas cause them to fight, not to unite. For neither, in its positive ideas, was necessarily opposed to the other. The real opposition was but a figment of their meager imaginations.

The "Ultra Twins"

We fear that the Utra Twins, Lib and Conserv, are a bit confused. Each considers himself a shining example of his own adopted family of political philosophy. And each considers himself to have nothing in common with the other.

But watch out boys. Your true blood is showing through. You're both members of the Radical family. And you know all about "houses divided" and "brothers fighting brothers."

As for ourselves, we're conservative. But we believe that a conservative is one who looks at a problem objectively, evaluates it thoroughly, judges without prejudices, and makes a decision. We are neither Fascist nor Communist, Anarchist nor Socialist. We are, incidently, Christian.

The Conservatives will not admit to our conservatism, for we do not want to abolish Liberals, the income tax, or even Social Security. But by our definition we are conservative, and we still have our sense of humor.

'Round Midnight

It's A Swinging World

by Joe Zawacki

Harvey Pollack — The Grand Llama.

FLASH!!! Elliot Ness and his "untouchables" will soon be headed into the Philadelphia area to break up a syndicate based in the annex. The syndicate is headed by a man known to his minions as "the Octopus", and the "Grand Llama", and the situation is said to be so serious that Ness took the job even though the leader is no Sicilian.

However, if Ness wishes to keep his slate perfect, he would do well to stay away from the Big City because this is quite a swinging group. In actuality, the syndicate is a friendly grouping of a bunch of compatible guys who enjoy working together and helping out. About the most serious thing that they control is the running of the indoor activities around town.

Pretty Busy

Their leader, the Grand Llama, is 39 year old Harvey Pollack, whose acquisition of the "Octopus" nickname becomes apparent when you find out that he is at the present moment the Special Events Coordinator of the Dept. of Recreation, the publicist for both the Warriors and Ramblers, active in the running of the Junior Baseball Federation, Temple football, a Palestra basketball statistician, and a sometime contributor to the AP and UPI. This in addition to keeping a wife and two children happy.

What makes Harvey stand apart from other ulcer-baiters, whose nature it is to keep constantly busy, is the simple fact that he is doing what he wants to do and as much as he feels like doing. Also, now that he has a capable staff of "minions" to aid him, the only conceivable catastrophe that can confront the syndicate is if the Llama himself has to work, which Pollack usually manages to circumvent. Each member of the group receives a copy of the combined schedules of all events that have to be covered so that everyone knows what night they are expected to show.

Big Stag

Among the more prominent members of the syndicate are Bob Vetrone of the Bulletin, Villanova's Ken Mugler, WFIL's Toby De Luca, Temple's Al Shrier, and publicist Herb Freedman. With both Temple and Villanova playing away recently, the Warriors' season started on an ignoble note. The Llama had to work.

Pollack grew up in North Philly, attended Gratz High and majored in Journalism at Temple. It was while at Temple that he started to get involved in numerous projects, serving as manager of the baseball, football, basketball and soccer teams, sports editor of the Temple paper, Editor of the "Owl" and working part time at the Bulletin. One of the causes he championed was the rescuing from oblivion of the Women's athletic program. For this, he was rewarded by being named an honorary member of the Women's Athletic Association. "I was sort of their mascot," he says.

The war found him in the Special-Service division of both the Army and Air Corps, working with the Red Cross and doing "morale-boosting" work. "The experience was very valuable to me," he relates.

By the late 40's, he was on his way. A good indication of this is the fact that he once covered the Penn Relays for 18 schools at one time. Harv reached his present situation around 1957 when he took over the Ramblers' publicity and it was almost six years ago that the first annual syndicate party was held. These blasts are arranged by the Llama and his wife, the Llama-ess, for the benefit of the group, most of whom are not paid for their troubles during the year. The size and grandeur of the affairs show the appreciation that Pollack has for his "minions".

The highlight of his career probably came the night Harv walked into the Bulletin with interests. He changed caps with each announcement. It was the biggest hit performance in Philly since "My Fair Lady".

It would seem that Ness and his gang would profit by staying clear of the "Octopus". He swings.

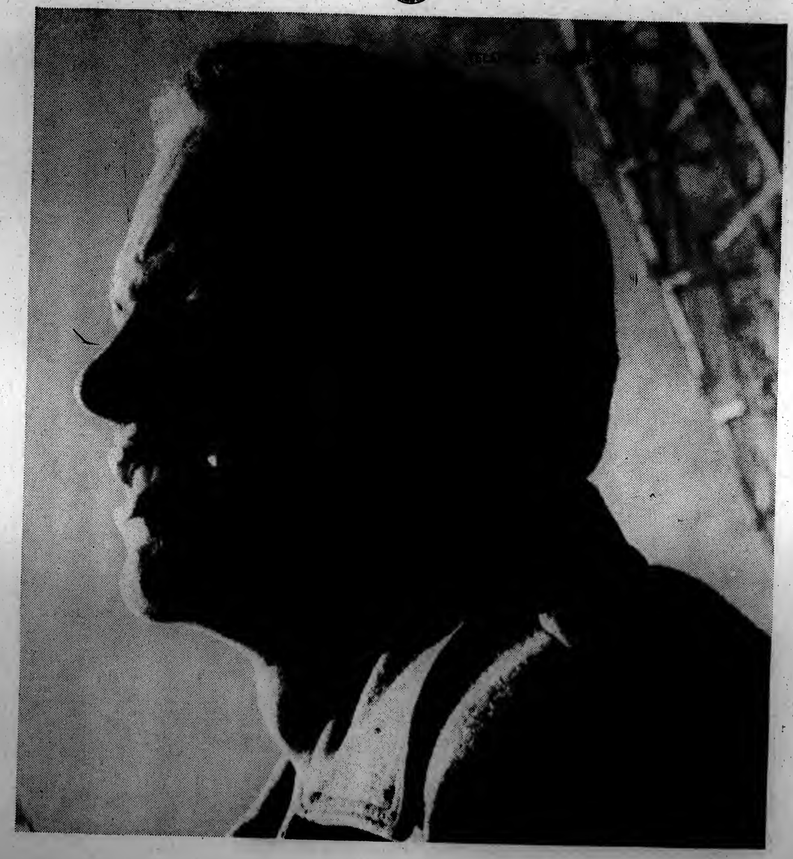
Continuing the Graduate Theater's tradition, the sets were better than empty pockets usually allow.



In the final analysis, "The Brothers Karamozov" succeeded in conveying a message. However, the poor adaptation of Copeau and the production's inadequacies made that message cloudy, limpid and scarcely reminiscient of Dostoyevsky's novel.

Amusement Books Continue On Sale Until November 17

Through a special arrangement the Student Council has available a limited number of amusement ticket books. The tickets in these books are valued at over $90.00 and they are being offered to the Student Body for only $3.50. Some of the activities for which these tickets cover are for fully paid admission for bowling, golf, Big Five basketball games at the Palestra, dancing, Academy of Music, drag racing, professional hockey and many others.

These sport samplers are being sold under the direction of the Social Affairs Committee of the Student Council headed by Bob Benson. The tickets are not limited to use by one person but must be presented at every admission with the tickets intact.

Sales Extended

Due to the great demand for these samplers the sales period has been extended from November 15 to November 17. Books may be purchased in the Student Council office from 10 AM to 3:30 PM. There will be no more extensions in the sales period as the company will be leaving the area.

These books are not for public sale and have only been obtained through the efforts of the Student Council. This is another service offered to the school by the Student Council.

Captain Frazier To Be Reassigned

Captain Claude R. Frazier, USN, of the Villanova NROTC unit has recently been promoted from the rank of Commander. He and his family will be leaving the area in the near future for a sea duty billet as yet unassigned.

Captain Frazier is a graduate of Bowdoin College, and later completed Naval Flight training in 1941. He was a combat fighter pilot during World War II, and was awarded two Distinguished Flying Crosses, three Air Medals, the Presidential Unit Citation, and Navy Commendation Medal. He has since served as Executive Officer of two fighter squadrons, Commanding Officer of Air Anti-Submarine Squadron 24, and Navigator of the USS FORRESTAL.

Library To Remain Open Sunday Night For Trial Period

Permission has been given by the Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President, to the student body for the privilege of using the Library on Sunday evening until 10:00 p.m.

Previously the Library had only been open between two and five during Sunday afternoon. The results of a Student Council poll indicating the student interest in keeping the Library open were instrumental in the decision to press for later hours.

At present, according to the poll, residents use the Library at a ratio of 12-1 and day-hops at 10-1. The total number of students questioned were 2000 of which 1100 were residents and 900 were day hops.

Study and Reference

Thirty-five percent of the residents and ten percent of the day-hops responded that they would take advantage of the Sunday night opening. Out of the total polled, this would mean that there would be approximately 450 students using the Library sometime on Sunday night. The poll also revealed that the majority of students use the Library for both study and reference purposes.

The University Library is thus open to 10 p.m. on a trial basis pending the number of students that do use it. "It is imperative," stressed Jim Howley, Council Vice President, "that, if the Library is to be kept open, the same number of students who answered the poll affirmatively will have to use it."

Father John Vrana Leaves Villanova For Florida Post

Rev. John Vrana, OSA, a member of the faculty for the past thirty years has been assigned to parish work in Dania, a suburb of Miami, Fla.

Father Vrana

One of the most popular and revered members of the faculty Father Vrana began teaching at Villanova in 1931 following his ordination. His contribution to the University during this period can not be measured but will be remembered for many years.

The people of Dania, where Father will establish a new parish, are to be envied. The VILLANOVAN joins facutly members, students and his brother Augustinians in wishing Father Vrana good health and good fortune in his new work.

Fitzgerald, Maureen Powers Honored At Soph Cotillion

Balloon-shadowed crowds filled the Field House last Friday, November 3, for the Sophomore Cotillion. The Gay Nineties theme proved a tremendous success and the whole affair proved to be a "blast" as promised.

Chuck Gordon and his Orchestra provided a big-band background putting the turn of the century setting into a swinging modern mood. Intermission entertainment was provided by a local group, The Revelers.

At the first intermission, the Annual OC Award was given to Barry Fitzgerald, a resident student in Sullivan Hall. This award is given by the Student Council to the members of the Orientation Committee showing the best qualities that exemplify a Villanova student.

Upon receiving the award, Barry stated, "I really appreciate this, but I think this award should go to everyone of the OC's. Each one of us did all that we could to make the Frosh feel at home here. We enjoy meeting them and I think that we all had a good time."

The Queen of the Sophomore Weekend was announced at the Cotillion. Jim O'Connor's date, Maureen Powers was chosen to be Queen by popular vote. Maureen is a student at Mt. Aoysius Junior College. The Queen's Court was Barbara Basen, date of Wayne Whitney, Louise Bunch, date of George Marciano, Marge Faise, date of Andy Lovus, and Mary Gail Cattie, date of Joe Pensabewe.

O'Connor To Head Council's Student Tutoring Program

The Student Tutor Program, under the auspicies of the Student Council, began operations for the current academic year on November 9, under the auspices of Tom O'Connor, Academic Affairs Committee Chairman of the Student Council. Registration for the program will take place in Dougherty Hall from 9:30 until 2:30 for a period of about two weeks.

Tom O'Connor

Operated entirely by students, the program aims to provide free but competent aid for students experiencing difficulty in any subject area. Students wishing to instruct in a given subject are placed in contact with students desiring aid in that subject through the council. The two students then work out their own tutoring schedule.

In order to qualify as a tutor, a student must have achieved at least a "B" grade in the subject which he is to tutor. As well as providing a service to those students being tutored, the program serves as an excellent review for the tutorer. Charles Labus, Student Council Executive Vice President for Educational Affairs, told the VILLANOVAN that he would "urge teachers to encourage both students needing aid and students qualified to tutor to participate".

The affair is not limited exclusivelv to members of the Junior Class and all members of the student body are encouraged to participate. Anyone interested in pledging his attendance may do so by contacting Joe Birle in 51 Sheehan Hall.

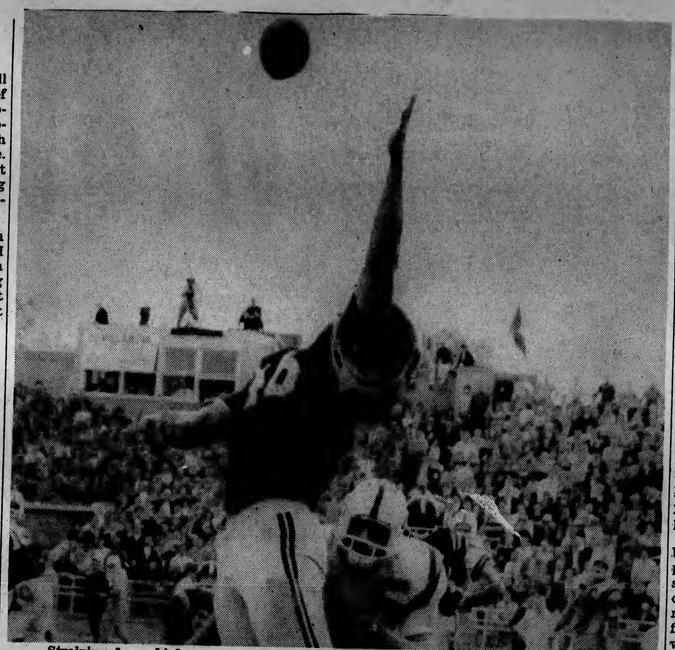
The prospect of a bid is still possible but, in the opinion of both Coach Alex Bell and Captain Rich Ross, highly improbable especially to a bowl with any prestige or significance. Neither Bell or Ross feel that the work necessary in accepting a lesser bowl would be worthwhile.



But in any case the decision is that of the team which had been "up" for the game, which had the "right" attitude during the season, and which brought back to the Villanova student body a winning record.

Responses

Were there bad breaks in the Detroit game, was the game given away as in Boston, or was Detroit that much better? No, responded both Bell and Ross.

It was something intangible. But each feel that the better team in the long run belonged to Villanova, both in the Hub and in the Motor City.

Still, for a squad that was generally expected to win about five games, their seven victories speak for themselves and are a tribute to all the men who took part in the 1961 campaign. The spirit and attitude were there this season and, thus, so was the winning team.

collected ten more yards in Detroit to total 305 for the year in 87 tries. In back of Richman and Gleuck are full backs, Billy Joe (267) and Lou Rettino (252).

The only Wildcat score came as a result of an 80 yard thrust behind "Blue" team quarterback, Ted Aceto, starting late in the first period. Trailing 6-0, the Villanova backs ground out sixteen plays before Billy Joe finally plunged through for the tying touchdown. The attempted conversion by end Sam Gruneisen was blocked.

Senior halfback Tom O'Rourke again highlighted the Villanova defense with key stops while Titan guard Gary Tinkle dominated the Detroit defense tactics.

Tie Breaker

Climaxing a fifty-six yard drive mostly in the air, Titan quarterback Ron Bishop, subbing for the injured Jerry Gross, hit end Jack Lower for a 19 yard touchdown pass. The tally put Detroit on top 12-6.

After Villanova received the ball on their twenty-eight, they pushed forward unti they had short yardage to make for a first down on the Titan 32. But the next play was called back by a fifteen yard holding penalty which ended the Wildcat threat.

The Titans then rolled for their third and insurance touchdown in 5 plays from their own 39. The final play was a masterful catch by Lower from quarterback Bishop covering 35 yards.

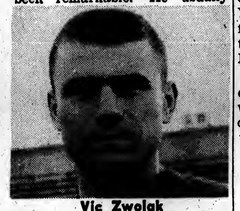
ahead for good at 3:52 of the second frame on a draw play that saw him scamper 60 yards for the score, aided by a glock thrown by end Mike De Lone at the 30 to set him free.

The other Wildcat points were notched by Lou Rettino on a 2 yard plunge; Larry Glueck (2) on a 16 yard pass from Richie Richman and a 15 yard interception return of a Joe Bonkowski pass; and Billy Joe again, this time on an 11 yard dash off right tackle, carrying a Ram player into the end zone with him.

The defeat marked the first time in many years that a West Chester football team had lost two in a row. Now it's his turn to get his team off the floor. Don't bet against him.

Long Hours Of Hard Work Pay Off In Victories For Zwolak



by Charlie Hammock

Victor Zwolak is rather small—for a distance runner—and no one on this campus could tell by looking at him that he is perhaps the best cross country runner in the East and certainly the best Villanova has had in years.

Marine Vet

A graduate of Salesianum High School in Wilmington, Delaware, Vic has already spent three years in the Marine Corps at Quantico, Virginia. During this time he established a name as one of the best two milers in the east. When asked why he chose Villanova, for his college education he says that he cannot give any one particular reason. Orginally, he had leaned toward Oregon State, but decided against it because it was too far from home. In any case Zwolak is here and says he loves it.

Thus far during the races of the cross country team, Vic has been remarkable. He usually goes to the front early in the race and stays there. He has yet to be pushed by any runner.

Hours of Work

Coach Tuppeny feels that the current success of Vic is due to long arduous hours of hard work. Mr. "T" believes that Vic's accomplishments to date would have been impossible without his willingness to sacrifice—although Zwolak is short on natural talents, he is completely devoted to his sport.

Desire is necessary for any sport, but it is of particular value to the X-country runner. The practice is long and hard and the results are often unpublicized.

Good Training

Zwolak credits his improvements to the training schedule of "Jumbo" Elliot. He believes that the schedule is "just perfect for training at my distance". The schedule of long workouts—sometimes 10 to 15 miles a day—has given the pupil the necessary distance strength. On the other hand, Vic has supplemented these daily workouts with his own program of lifting weights, in order to built a better chest expansion, necessary for distance runners.

During the summer, Zwolak ran the mile in a few invitational races. His best time was 4:10, which would be a definite place in the IC4A championship. This indoor season he expects to compete in the 2 mile or 3 mile run, and to try an occasional mile "if the coaches think it is necessary." There is no doubt that the sophomore will be a definite contender for the IC4A two mile championship and it is conceivable that he could be a long shot at the mile title.

Twice a Day

There is no substitute for daily training. However, Vic works twice a day—morning and afternoon. The results of this practice was evidenced on November 4 when Zwolak covered the Van Courtland Park course in New York in 25:49—the fastest time for the course this year; the time was well under the existing IC4A record.

There is no substitution for determination, desire and the will to win—Zwolak has these qualities . . . and he wins.

Wildcat Sailors Nab Philadelphia Area Championship Trophies

The Villanova Sailing Club copped its second consecutive Philadelpria Area Championships two weeks ago nosing out the University of Pennsylvania's squad 61-59 to retain possession of the Colonel Edwin Chance trophy.

Junior Skipper Dave Branning paced the Wildcat euorts with four firsts and several seconds in the eight races in which he sailed. Teammate Bob Bellwear continuously pressed Branning with a couple of added firsts and several seconds.

Exceptional Performance

Commodore Dan Hurley voiced the opinion that Branning's performance was exceptional while Bellwoar's was far better than average. Joe Little also added to the Villanova euorts with several good finishes.

Next weekend, the club takes on many of the major teams from the east at Annapolis including those from the Ivy League and other squads of the same calibre for the War Memorial Trophy by virtue of their winning the Philadelphia Championships. The trophy is a symbol of the Eastern Championships for the fall season.

TAKE A JOHNNY OUT DURING ORPHANS' WEEKEND

Philadelphia Club Succumbs 14-7, To V. U. Rugby Club

Villanova's rugby team ran its season record to 5-2-1 Saturday with a 14-5 victory over the Philadelphia Rugby Club. The victory, the second in the 'Cats past three outings, avenged an earlier loss at the hands of the same Philadelphia club.

Split Twinbill

November 4 saw the team split a rarity . . . a rugby double header. The Quantico Marines provided the opposition in the opening game, orginally a part of the Sophomore Weekend festivities, was postponed from October 28 and later rescheduled as part of the doublebill. The wait was worth it, however, as the Wildcats dumped the hapless Gyrenes by a 13-0 count.

Immediately following the Marine victory, Villanova took the field. This time it was against the Philadelphia Rugby Club. The local club manhandled the exhausted 'Cats and walked away with an 8-0 victory.

Luke St. Onge and Mike Ennis paced the Wildcat attack. They both combined to account for Vllanova's entire point output. St. Onge tallyed eight points, the 'Cats first half total, while Ennis' six markers paced the second half ocense.

Only five minutes of the first half had gone by before St. Onge started his first half scoring spree. He grabbed the ball and took off on a 75-yard jaunt that ended in the Philadelphia end zone. Luke added the two point conversion and the 'Cats had a 5-0 lead. With about four minutes left in the half, St. Onge closed out the scoring. He went over from about the ten yards out. The conversion was missed.

Lewis Sets Up Score

Midway through the second half, Ralph Lewis broke into the clear. The neet senior, dribbleing with his feet, was in the clear and seemed headed for a sure score. However, he overran the ball, lost control, and it squirted out of bounds on the twenty five yard line of Philadelphia. Ennis rushed the final twenty-five to add three more to the 'Cats column. Again the conversion was missed.

Next Saturday Villanova travels to Hanover, New Hampshire to play Dartmouth.

Harriers Defeat Violets In Final Tuneup Before IC4A's

On November 1, the X-country team defeated LaSalle, 21-37. Vic Zwolak and Pat Traynor finished 1-2 and Angelo Sivieri was 5th. Joe Reilly and Owen Maguire were 6th and 7th respectively.

Syracuse and Fordham fell to the Cats on November 4 in a triangular meet. Zwolak and Traynor again finished 1-2 and Sivieri was 7th. Zwolak's time was under the existing IC4A meet record, 25:49, over a 5 mile course. Owen Maguire, steadily improving, placed 10th in the meet, and Bob Collins and Joe Reilly ran 12th and 14th respectively.

Last Chance

On November 11, Villanova hosted a strong NYU contingent led by James Brown. The Cats won, 21 to 27, as Zwolak finished first in 26:01. This was the last meet before the grand final—the IC4A.

This team title will be a hotly contested battle between five schools. Penn State, last year's winner, led by Steve Morehead and two other returning veterans, looms as the favorite. Michigan State could easily pull an upset. Gerald Young is their ace, a good get for the individual title. Princeton will enter an undefeated team, and Army has a very strong squad.

St. John's the Metropolitan Champion, is a strong contender. Anyone of these teams could carry home the IC4A title. There is however a darkhorse in the race—Villanova. The Main Liners are conceding the trophy to no one.

Outside Chance

In order to upset the "dope", several members of Villanova's contingent will have to come up with outstanding performances. Sivieri, Maguire, Collins and Reilly will have to "finish in the money". Although the Cats' 3-4-5 men are uncertain finishes, it is conceivable that with a great effort on their part, Villanova could be considered a definite contender.

Zwolak can look for a great deal of competition from Machooka of Cornell, who is undefeated this year and has probably the fastest time in the East. Young of Michigan State, Norris of Duke, Mack of Yale, and Brown of NYU will also be top contenders for the individual title. Zwolak of course has to be considered. He is undefeated and some say that he has yet to extend himself.

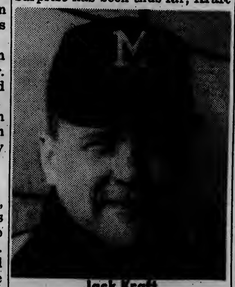
Cat Cagers In Full Practice Open Dec. 2 Against Scranton



by Tom Bruderle

Villanova's basketball team will open its 1961-62 season on December 3 against Scranton at the Palestra. Due to graduation and scholastic deficiencies, the only returning lettermen from last year's squad are Joe Walsh, Jim O'Brian, and Hubie White. While lacking the usual big man at center this year, Coach Jack Kraft said that Villanova, by the end of the year "will be very proud of their team".

O'Brian Surprise

Since October 15 the hardwood 'Cats have been practicing in the Field House. Contrary to most coaches, Kraft is not praising his team with huge and oft-used adjectives. Summing up the team play so far Coach Kraft said, "They are progressing satisfactorily for their time together; however, there is still a long way to go."

When asked who the biggest surprise has been thus far, Kraft quickly named Jim "Obie" O'Brian. "For his limited experience last year, he shows a great deal of know-how on the court."

Rugged Schedule

In December the Cats take on a schedule that would rival the pros. In one week the cagemen will play four games. When asked about this rush in games Coach Kraft said "that this is a tough way to start a season. The team will have have to improve with each game since we won't have time for practice."

Starting Five

Kraft stated that the starting game will come from George Leftwich, Jim O'Brian, Wally Jones, Joe Walsh, Hubie White, and Jim McMonagle. Because of the heavy schedule in December, Coach Kraft expected the bench "to be weak in the beginning but will gain the necessary experience as the month goes on."

High School to College

Every coach who has switched from high school to college basketball is always asked the same thing: is there a difference between the two?

"Fundamentally none. There are still the same problems and headaches. However, the college players catch on faster than the high school kids because the college boys are older."

No Tempermentalist

No longer will Villanova put five different players on the court with five different ideas on playing. This year's edition of the Wildcats will start a team with one idea on playing—playing to win. Said Coach Kraft, "the boys get along very well on and off the court." Such a team spirit will certainly be needed.

Support Needed

On Friday, December 2, the Wildcats will tangle with Scranton at the Palestra. For those who like to consider scores, the Wildcats defeated the Violets last year 106-73. Even though the football season might not end at Detroit, Coach Kraft is hopeful that the the spirit displayed at the home football games will continue into the basketball season.

However, an athlete wishing to participate in intramural competition must first obtain permission of their respective coaches and he may not take part in his respective sport. Only one athlete per team will be permitted in basketball and two athletes per team in both football and softball.

GRID SEASON CLOSES WITH 7-2 SLATE

Titans Score First Enroute To 20-6 Win In Season's Finale

by Joe McCarthy

A hungry Detroit Titan team rebounced from its losses to Annapolis and West Point to avenge themselves on the Wildcats 20-6 last Friday evening, thus chilling the 'Cats hopes for their first post-season bowl since 1949.

The defeat was the 'Cats' second, their first having been suffered at Boston College, against a formidable record of seven victories. Even with the final loss, the 1961 Wildcats brought home an unexpected 7-2 slate, best since the 1952 campaign of 7-1-1.

Within 11 seconds of the opening gun, the Wildcat eleven found themselves behind 6-0 on a 88 yard kickoff return by Titan halfback, George Walkosky. Darting to the home sideline from the 12 yard line, Walkosky rolled the distance to the 'Cat goal line. The run gave Detroit the initial psychological advantage.

A Statistical Triumph

Despite the fact that the 'Cats bettered Detroit in practically all the final statistics, they never seemed to manage to press the Titans continuously. Several times, they appeared to be grinding towards a touch down but either a penalty or a stiffened defense compelled them to yield possession of the ball.

Halfback Larry Glueck again paced the 'Cats in the rushing coumn with 65 yards in 9 attempts for some 7 yards a try. Glueck finished the season as the 'Cats' leading ground gainer with 400 yards in 60 attempts.

Bowl Bid Chilled With Defeat

by Joe McCarthy

Previous to Friday night's football game on the shores of Lake St. Claire, Villanova's gridiron eleven had received much notice from the press on the prospects of their being invited to the dream of all college football participants, a post-season bowl.

This dream was crushed by the University of Detroit Titans. The game was to determine the Wildcats' readiness for a bowl bid. Everyone, especially the players themselves, knew this fact.

In short, the team which had bourne the brunt of the criticism and scorn of the past two inglorious seasons would be gaining not only campus respect but also national prestige. They failed to grasp their chance.

It was a great disappointment for everyone connected with the team, but even more so to the individual players. Each player, while sitting on the wooded benches in the locker room after the game, was akin to each other in their feeling of loss, to most, a real, factual personal one.

The eyes of many mirrored the story, Rich Ross, Rege Magnus, Billy Joe, just to mention a few. They had lost the "big" one, the only game which really mattered all season to the players.

Superior Depth And Manpower Prove Too Much For Gutty Rams

by Joe Zawacki

A standing room only crowd filled Mainline stadium on November 4 to watch the big battle that never came off. Superior manpower and depth told the tale as Villanova shook off West Chester after a close first half and went on to win handily by a score of 40-13.

Ram coach Jim Bonder used an old adage to sum up the game: "The good big team always beats the little good team." He added: "We came here to put up a good fight and I don't think that we failed in that respect."

Praise for Bell

Alex Bell also rated a king-size kudo from the gracious Bonder: "Last year, after the horrendous defeats that Villanova suffered at the hands of Army and Navy, your team came back and knocked Rutgers from the unbeaten ranks. Only a top-notch coach could bring his players off the floor after two defeats like that".

The game was only 4:58 old when Nick Russo crashed through right tackle from the 12 and scampered across the goal for the first score of the game. West Chester cut this in half with 40 seconds left in the period with a 15 yard field goal by Jim Pribula who showed quite well while scoring all the Ram points. He scored their only TD early in the second period on a 2 yard plunge and added the point. With the clock running out at the half, he closed the Ram scoring with a 32 yard field goal.

Pre-season Bell: '5-4 Minimum'

by Joe Zawacki

What were your pre-season hops for this year?

Before the season, I felt that a 5-4 slate would be the minimum. Any coach hopes for a winning season. I predicted that no team would have an easy time against us this year . . . and they didn't.

After the pastings handed you by Army and Navy last year, the team managed to win two of their last four, and continued winning this year. To what do you attribute this?

Alex Bell

Well, you have to give the kids credit. They didn't give up. I like to think that a good part of this is due to the fact that we, the coaches, never gave up on them. We tried to instill this confidence in them . . . you know, when you give up on kids, they can sense it, and they'll tend to give up on themselves. Beating Rutgers last year showed them that they had it.

What were the most pleasant surprise to you about this year's team play?

We were tremendously delighted with the defense. They were a pleasure to watch in action. Also, the way we controlled the ball in most of the games. Even in the Detroit loss, we ran some 80 plays to their 50. We scored more points than I expected, even though we weren't tremendously fast in the backfield. Another big surprise was the two units balancing out like they did. Going into that first game knowing that we had two equally strong units was awfully comforting.

Which games do you think were played best by Villanova.

Probably Miami and Holy Cross, because we looked good beating real fine teams, especially the Miami group. The Quantico game was also a good one, primarily on defense.

Most Did Well

Individually, did anyone develop faster than you expected?

I was really pleased with Ted Aceto's play. He realized much of his potential this year. Jim Thomas, I think, also came along very fast. We hope to use him at left halfback next year. With his power and brains, he'll be a great help to us. Most of the kids came along like we thought they could.

Could the B. C. and Detroit games have gone the other way?

Yes, I believe so. We were outplayed in each of those losses, but had we played to the best of our abilities, I think we would have won each of them. I dont mean that the kids didn't try. They just made some bad plays, were lax on some patterns. We failed to take advantages of a few key breaks in the Boston game and we failed to get down fast enough on the opening kickoff against Detroit. I'll never let that happen again. Next time I'll put my fastest 11 guys in, even if it means calling time out to substitute a defensive unit.

Invaluable Aids

Has your job been made easier by your assistants?

Definitely yes. Karras and Ferry on the defense, and Michaels on the scouting have been an invaluable aid to me. Both the kids and myself think highly of them.

What about the de-emphasis talk?

I'd rather not comment on that. The school makes the policy and since I work for them, I follow it. The only time I would complain is if they made my teams too weak for the competition that we were playing.

Did you know that teams like Rutgers, Delaware and Temple are giving out more scholarships than Villanova?

Yes, and when you consider the mortality rate due to flunks, injuries and players that don't develop, it's easy to see that a certain minimum must be kept.

Good Idea

Can you think of any other solution to the constant disappearing "middle ground"?

Well, I saw in a magazine last week that Boston U. and Buffalo are plugging for a conference to be made up of independents like ourselves, B. C., Massachusetts, etc. I think that this is a fine idea because it would create the healthy rivalries that the schools are looking for and at the same time give the teams an incentive to shoot for.

Do you have any final comment?

Yes, I would like to express my indebtedness to the spirit committee, student council, and faculty for their cooperation. And I'm deeply indebted to my boys and aides for carrying out my ideas. The way that they responded to all that we asked for, and without complaint, is very gratifying. These are the kind of kids that you need to make a winner and to put Villanova back on the football map where it belongs. They're the best.

So is Alex Bell.

Orphans' Week Starts With Dance

Charity Ball Friday Features 'Revelers' And Abstract Motive

by Tom Finan

The Charity Ball, the opening phase of Charity Weekend, will be held this year on Friday evening December 1. Sponsored annually by the Junior Class, the Charity Ball is part of a tradition at the University. Co-chairmen of the Charity Ball Committee, Jim Shiels and James Jordan have announced that decoration ideas will be a departure from the past. With Chrismas in Versailles" as the central theme, the unusual arrangements and unique decor are guaranteed to put dancers in the Christmas spirit. Highlight of the evening will be the awarding of the "Ugly Man of 1961".

Continuous Entertainment

A popular new group, the Revelers, will provide the evening's entertainment. Old favorites, new twist songs, and a generous sampling of holiday tunes are anticipated. Continuous entertainment will be provided throughout the evening, and during the intermission refreshments will be served. The price of the tickets, $2.00 per couple, is the year's lowest. The Charity Ball itself acts mainly as a fund raising activity to help alleviate the overall expense of orphans' weekend.

By attending, Villanovans and their dates can help make the Charity Ball a success financially, and will have many happy holiday moments. At the same time they will have the satisfaction of knowing they have helped someone less fortunate in having a better Christmas.

Purpose of Orphans' Weekend

The Charity Weekend itself comprises three events: the Ball, the Orphans' Outing, and the Orphans' Party. Co-chairmen of the entire committee, John Bird and Chuck Butler, have stressed that "This charitable program is aimed at providing the Johnies with the type of Christmas which most Villanovans take for granted".

Visit With Santa And Christmas Party To Highlight Outing

by Bill Gross

In accordance with the charitable tradition of past years, Villanovans will take out the orphans from St. John's Home on Saturday, December 2nd, co-chairmen Joe Birle and Bill Springler have announced.

To alleviate the transportation problem, for those who are not driving, buses will be on hand to transport Villanovans and their dates to and from the orphanage. Activities will begin at 8:30 a.m., when the buses will leave from Dougherty Hall. They will proceed to St. John's at 49th and Wyalusing Avenue, where the boys will be waiting. Moving on to the 69th Street shopping area, they will visit the various toylands and talk with Santa Claus during the morning. Gimbels has granted a ten percent discount to all Villanovans accompanied by a "Johnnie". Kiddie rides will be available at no extra cost.

At 12:00 all will gather at Kostic's Restaurant to have lunch. The special price given to all Villanovans for lunch is $3.00 per couple which includes lunch for the Johnny.

Afternoon Activities

After lunch, activities will continue at the 69th Street theatre with a special showing of the "Seventh Voyage of Sinbad" and assorted cartoons. There will be no theatre charge for Villanovans. With the conclusion of the show at 4:45 p.m. Villanovans and their Johnnies will return to the orphanage.

Free bus transportation will be provided for all activities, however, all those who drive are urged to take another along so the number of buses may be kept to a minimum. To insure that a sufficient number of Villanovans will be available to take out "Johnnies", those interested have been asked to pledge their attendance at the table provided in the Pie Shoppe.

This event is not limited to Juniors, all are encouraged to participate. Birle and Springler requested that those attending have a date.

Orphans' Party

Christmas arrives early this year, about four weeks early, for the young men of St. John's Orphanage in nearby Philadelphia. On Tuesday, December 5, over two hundred boys will be entertained at the Orphans' Party sponsored annually by the Junior Class of Villanova University.

The festivities begin with the arrival of Santa Claus and his bag of gifts and games for the boys. Each boy will receive a

23 Picked For College Bowl; Number To Be Pared To Five

Twenty-three students have been named as semi-finalists in the eliminations to determine the four contestants who will appear on the General Electric, "College Bowl," January 7. The test was conducted under the direction of Dr. Henry L. Rofinot, acting Chairman of the Department of History and Political Science, Henry B. Cushing, Associate Professor of English, and Felix M. Beiduk, Professor of Physics. These three evaluated the tests and determined the twenty-three. They will also act as coaches and will continue the process of elimination until the finalists are chosen.

Also included are George. Welsh, Joseph Massey, Thomas Castagena, Joseph Willmott, T. R. Conley, D. A. Hughes, Thomas Fortin, Barry Bornstein, Daniel J. Martin, Eugene d'Aquili, James T. Murphy, and Daniel G. Grove.

The second step of the screening process was held on Monday night. At this meeting, the strategy that will be used was presented. Further academic tests will reduce the number to approximately eight. These eight will return to school on December 27. From then to the date of the College Bowl the finalists will practice on the game. A panel will be constructed similar to the one used on the television program. The finalists will answer questions which have been designed to develop the contestants' knowledge and speed in answering.

'Detective Story' To Open December 6

Sidney Kingsley's "Detective Story" will open a five night run in the Vasey Hall Theatre on December 6 until the 10th. Curtain time each night is 8:30.

Tickets for the play may be purchased in the Pie Shoppe during the week between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. for $1.25. Blocks of ten may be bought for one dollar apiece. The deal is especially intended for organizations or clubs which would desire a reduced rate.

In short, the team which had bourne the brunt of the criticism and scorn of the past two inglorious seasons would be gaining not only campus respect but also national prestige. They failed to grasp their chance.

It was a great disappointment for everyone connected with the team, but even more so to the individual players. Each player, while sitting on the wooded benches in the locker room after the game, was akin to each other in their feeling of loss, to most, a real, factual personal one.

The eyes of many mirrored the story, Rich Ross, Rege Magnus, Billy Joe, just to mention a few. They had lost the "big" one, the only game which really mattered all season to the players.

Superior Depth And Manpower Prove Too Much For Gutty Rams

by Joe Zawacki

A standing room only crowd filled Mainline stadium on November 4 to watch the big battle that never came off. Superior manpower and depth told the tale as Villanova shook off West Chester after a close first half and went on to win handily by a score of 40-13.

Ram coach Jim Bonder used an old adage to sum up the game: "The good big team always beats the little good team." He added: "We came here to put up a good fight and I don't think that we failed in that respect."

Praise for Bell

Alex Bell also rated a king-size kudo from the gracious Bonder: "Last year, after the horrendous defeats that Villanova suffered at the hands of Army and Navy, your team came back and knocked Rutgers from the unbeaten ranks. Only a top-notch coach could bring his players off the floor after two defeats like that".

The game was only 4:58 old when Nick Russo crashed through right tackle from the 12 and scampered across the goal for the first score of the game. West Chester cut this in half with 40 seconds left in the period with a 15 yard field goal by Jim Pribula who showed quite well while scoring all the Ram points. He scored their only TD early in the second period on a 2 yard plunge and added the point. With the clock running out at the half, he closed the Ram scoring with a 32 yard field goal.

Pre-season Bell: '5-4 Minimum'

by Joe Zawacki

What were your pre-season hops for this year?

Before the season, I felt that a 5-4 slate would be the minimum. Any coach hopes for a winning season. I predicted that no team would have an easy time against us this year . . . and they didn't.

After the pastings handed you by Army and Navy last year, the team managed to win two of their last four, and continued winning this year. To what do you attribute this?

Alex Bell

Well, you have to give the kids credit. They didn't give up. I like to think that a good part of this is due to the fact that we, the coaches, never gave up on them. We tried to instill this confidence in them . . . you know, when you give up on kids, they can sense it, and they'll tend to give up on themselves. Beating Rutgers last year showed them that they had it.

What were the most pleasant surprise to you about this year's team play?

We were tremendously delighted with the defense. They were a pleasure to watch in action. Also, the way we controlled the ball in most of the games. Even in the Detroit loss, we ran some 80 plays to their 50. We scored more points than I expected, even though we weren't tremendously fast in the backfield. Another big surprise was the two units balancing out like they did. Going into that first game knowing that we had two equally strong units was awfully comforting.

Which games do you think were played best by Villanova.

Probably Miami and Holy Cross, because we looked good beating real fine teams, especially the Miami group. The Quantico game was also a good one, primarily on defense.

Most Did Well

Individually, did anyone develop faster than you expected?

I was really pleased with Ted Aceto's play. He realized much of his potential this year. Jim Thomas, I think, also came along very fast. We hope to use him at left halfback next year. With his power and brains, he'll be a great help to us. Most of the kids came along like we thought they could.

Could the B. C. and Detroit games have gone the other way?

Yes, I believe so. We were outplayed in each of those losses, but had we played to the best of our abilities. I think we would have won each of them. I dont mean that the kids didn't try. They just made some bad plays, were lax on some patterns. We failed to take advantages of a few key breaks in the Boston game and we failed to get down fast enough on the opening kickoff against Detroit. I'll never let that happen again. Next time I'll put my fastest 11 guys in, even if it means calling time out to substitute a defensive unit.

Invaluable Aids

Has your job been made easier by your assistants?

Definitely yes. Karras and Ferry on the defense, and Michaels on the scouting have been an invaluable aid to me. Both the kids and myself think highly of them.

What about the de-emphasis talk?

I'd rather not comment on that. The school makes the policy and since I work for them, I follow it. The only time I would complain is if they made my teams too weak for the competition that we were playing.

Did you know that teams like Rutgers, Delaware and Temple are giving out more scholarships than Villanova?

Yes, and when you consider the mortality rate due to flunks, injuries and players that don't develop, it's easy to see that a certain minimum must be kept.

Good Idea

Can you think of any other solution to the constant disappearing "middle ground"?

Well, I saw in a magazine last week that Boston U. and Buffalo are plugging for a conference to be made up of independents like ourselves, B. C., Massachusetts, etc. I think that this is a fine idea because it would create the healthy rivalries that the schools are looking for and at the same time give the teams an incentive to shoot for.

Do you have any final comment?

Yes, I would like to express my indebtedness to the spirit committee, student council, and faculty for their cooperation. And I'm deeply indebted to my boys and aides for carrying out my ideas. The way that they responded to all that we asked for, and without complaint, is very gratifying. These are the kind of kids that you need to make a winner and to put Villanova back on the football map where it belongs. They're the best.

So is Alex Bell.

Orphans' Week Starts With Dance

Charity Ball Friday Features 'Revelers' And Abstract Motive

by Tom Finan

The Charity Ball, the opening phase of Charity Weekend, will be held this year on Friday evening December 1. Sponsored annually by the Junior Class, the Charity Ball is part of a tradition at the University. Co-chairmen of the Charity Ball Committee, Jim Shiels and James Jordan have announced that decoration ideas will be a departure from the past. With Chrismas in Versailles" as the central theme, the unusual arrangements and unique decor are guaranteed to put dancers in the Christmas spirit. Highlight of the evening will be the awarding of the "Ugly Man of 1961".

Continuous Entertainment

A popular new group, the Revelers, will provide the evening's entertainment. Old favorites, new twist songs, and a generous sampling of holiday tunes are anticipated. Continuous entertainment will be provided throughout the evening, and during the intermission refreshments will be served. The price of the tickets, $2.00 per couple, is the year's lowest. The Charity Ball itself acts mainly as a fund raising activity to help alleviate the overall expense of orphans' weekend.

By attending, Villanovans and their dates can help make the Charity Ball a success financially, and will have many happy holiday moments. At the same time they will have the satisfaction of knowing they have helped someone less fortunate in having a better Christmas.

The Charity Weekend itself comprises three events: the Ball, the Orphans' Outing, and the Orphans' Party. Co-chairmen of the entire committee, John Bird and Chuck Butler, have stressed that "This charitable program is aimed at providing the Johnies with the type of Christmas which most Villanovans take for granted".

by Bill Gross

In accordance with the charitable tradition of past years, Villanovans will take out the orphans from St. John's Home on Saturday, December 2nd, co-chairmen Joe Birle and Bill Springler have announced.

To alleviate the transportation problem, for those who are not driving, buses will be on hand to transport Villanovans and their dates to and from the orphanage. Activities will begin at 8:30 a.m., when the buses will leave from Dougherty Hall. They will proceed to St. John's at 49th and Wyalusing Avenue, where the boys will be waiting. Moving on to the 69th Street shopping area, they will visit the various toylands and talk with Santa Claus during the morning. Gimbels has granted a ten percent discount to all Villanovans accompanied by a "Johnnie". Kiddie rides will be available at no extra cost.

At 12:00 all will gather at Kostic's Restaurant to have lunch. The special price given to all Villanovans for lunch is $3.00 per couple which includes lunch for the Johnny.

Afternoon Activities

After lunch, activities will continue at the 69th Street theatre with a special showing of the "Seventh Voyage of Sinbad" and assorted cartoons. There will be no theatre charge for Villanovans. With the conclusion of the show at 4:45 p.m. Villanovans and their Johnnies will return to the orphanage.

Free bus transportation will be provided for all activities, however, all those who drive are urged to take another along so the number of buses may be kept to a minimum. To insure that a sufficient number of Villanovans will be available to take out "Johnnies", those interested have been asked to pledge their attendance at the table provided in the Pie Shoppe.

This event is not limited to Juniors, all are encouraged to participate. Birle and Springler requested that those attending have a date.

Orphans' Party

Christmas arrives early this year, about four weeks early, for the young men of St. John's Orphanage in nearby Philadelphia. On Tuesday, December 5, over two hundred boys will be entertained at the Orphans' Party sponsored annually by the Junior Class of Villanova University.

The festivities begin with the arrival of Santa Claus and his bag of gifts and games for the boys. Each boy will receive a

Twenty-three students have been named as semi-finalists in the eliminations to determine the four contestants who will appear on the General Electric, "College Bowl," January 7. The twenty-three were named for the grades which they attained in a competitive examination of over 200 preliminary applicants.

Coaches Appointed

The test was conducted under the direction of Dr. Henry L. Rofinot, acting Chairman of the Department of History and Political Science, Henry B. Cushing, Associate Professor of English, and Felix M. Beiduk, Professor of Physics. These three evaluated the tests and determined the twenty-three. They will also act as coaches and will continue the process of elimination until the finalists are chosen.

The coaches identified the semi-finalists as Jerome Heavey, Andrew d'Arcy, William Huttanus, Gerard Goulet, Gerald West, Joseph Styborski, Lawrence Rosintoski, David McDevitt, Thomas Owens, Vincent Biondi, and Peter Murphy.

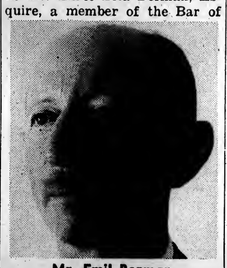
Strategy Determined

The second step of the screening process was held on Monday night. At this meeting, the strategy that will be used was presented. Further academic tests will reduce the number to approximately eight. These eight will return to school on December 27. From then to the date of the College Bowl the finalists will practice on the game. A panel will be constructed similar to the one used on the television program. The finalists will answer questions which have been designed to develop the contestants' knowledge and speed in answering.

'Who's Who' Banquet Scheduled For Dec. 7 At Falcon House Inn

A banquet in honor of the twenty-nine seniors who represent Villanova University in the "National Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges" has been set for the evening of Thursday, December 7.



The site of the banquet, announced by Student Council Secretary, Pete Federico, will be the Falcon House on West Chester Pike in Manoa, Pennsylvania. Dinner time is 6:30 p.m. Invited guests will include administration officials and the honored seniors of "Who's Who."

Treasurer of the Student Council, Bob Benson, is Chairman of the event. The possibility of having an outside speaker is now being investigated by the Student Council, which is sponsoring the banquet.

Expenses will probably be shared by the alumni and the administration, and the Student Council.

Law Forum Monday To Present Berman 'For The Defense'

Tickets for the play may be purchased in the Pie Shoppe during the week between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. for $1.25. Blocks of ten may be bought for one dollar apiece. The deal is especially intended for organizations or clubs which would desire a reduced rate.

Warwick Scene Of IRS Convention; Former Castro Teacher Keynotes

The International Relations Society of Villanova, on November 17, sent a ten-man delegation to the Annual Convention of the Middle Atlantic Region of International Relations Clubs. The Villanova delegation, stimulating an active campaign for their presidential nominee, Tom Burke, completely surprised the other delegations. For the first time, a well-organized campaign challenged the Middle Atlantic's domination by the metropolitan New York district.

The hard core of the Villanova delegation consisted of President Paul Downey, Vice-President Hugh Leitch, Anthony Bateman, Gene Corcoran, Tom Gallen, and Burke, a junior pre-law major. They were ably assisted by Noel McGeehan, Lucille Founey, Tim Hauser, and Jim Mitchel.

'Castroism and Cuba'

At 7:30 p.m. Friday Doctor Hermino Porto-Villa, a former teacher of Fidel Castro, delivered the key-note address, a discussion of the theme of the Convention — Castroism and Cuba. Following the opening address, various delegations informally met Villanova's candidate at a reception in the Villanova suite.

The morning session of the Conference on November 18 began with a series of round-table discussions. The delegates were purposely integrated in order to obtain a cross-section of opinion from the various districts. The major topic centered upon the impact that Castro has made on South America as a whole and the United States in particular. The final results of these discussions were announced at the end of the assembly: that a synthesis of the discussion would be formulated into a comprehensive draft which will be sent to State Department officials.

New York Wins

Election of executive officers was held on Saturday afternoon. The final balloting revealed that the New York metropolitan district voting as a bloc controlled enough votes to maintain a definite majority in the Middle Atlantih Region. As a result, Harry Reuvauldt of St. Peter's College was elected President.

The Sunday sessions were set aside for amendments, corrections, and adoption of the "position paper" formulated at Saturday's session. After the position paper with finally adopted, the Conference closed with a promise by the new president to maintain closer contacts among the various district leaders.

Student Council Dance Plan Stirs Congress Controversy

by Joe McCarthy

Continuing its tendency to consider the Student Council as of the utmost importance and as an influential organ of campus life, the Student Council again is pondering another advance for itself, the establishment of an annual Dinner Dance.

The motion as recently presented on the assembly floor read: "Be it moved that the Student Council inaugurate an annual Student Council Dinner Dance." The motion was unanimously recommended for passage by the Student Senate.

No Affirmative Debate

When it reached the floor and the request for debate was voiced by Chairman Tom Wall, it appeared to many that the resolution would receive a majority support. After no one spoke for the affirmative, Tony Bateman, representing the International Relations Society, rose and hurled the Council members a biting indictment of their purposes.

Bateman contended that approval of the motion would constitute the same concept as that of Congress voting themselves a pay increase and that the Dance would really constitute nothing more than an award presented to the Student Council by the Student Council for their work.

Rebuttal Absent

He further questioned whether or not the Council did in fact deserve a Dinner Dance. The question was then moved before a startled Pete Federico could collect refuting arguments.

The ensuing voice vote was close and division of the assembly was called, whereupon a feverish hand vote was taken and the motion was passed by the slender margin of 19½-18. Afterwards a roll call vote was ordered, again passing the bill.

After a motion to reconsider, an amendment was then proposed that the bill read: "that the Student Council look into the possibility of having a Dinner Dance." A vote was taken and the bill passed. Now, the motion is in the hands of the Social Affairs Committee who will attend to its possibility.

False Premise

The maker of the bill, Pete Federico, Council Secretary, later contended that opposition to the bill had been based on a false premise. He pointed out that many of the representatives and many of the students thought that the money would come from the Council Treasury.

Under the present plans, each individual would pay for the Dinner Dance himself just as if it were to be held by any other campus organization. Thus, it would not constitute an award for the Council. "The Dinner Dance," stressed Federico, "is just something that almost every campus organization has. The Student Council as a campus organization is entitled to it then."

Moot Court Contest Begun; Oral Arguments Open To Public

This Tuesday night, November 28th, witnessed the commencement of the annual Theodore L. Reimel Inter-Club Moot Court Competition at the school of law. This year, the Reimel program will consist of four rounds of oral arguments, beginning on November 28th and terminating on December 7th.

For the preliminary rounds, prominent members of the Pennsylvania bar serve as the appellate justices. In the final and semi-final rounds, Villanova is fortunate this year to have Federal and State court judges to serve in the appellate judge capacity. In the third round, the Chief Justices will be the Hon. Thomas McCann, from the Burlington County Court in Mount Holly, New Jersey and the Hon. Samuel Orlando, formerly of the New Jersey Superior Court and now a Camden, New Jersey attorney. The fourth round argument will have as Chief Justice the Hon. John Biggs, Jr., Chief Judge of the United States Court of Appeals, Third Circuit, and the Hon. Arthur S. Lane, Judge of the Federal District Court, Third Circuit, and the Hon. Gerald Flood, of the Pennsylvania Superior Court, as his Associate Justices.

Noche Española To Feature Music, Farce Friday In Vasey Hall

"A Mother-in-law's Gift" is the name of the one act farce which will be spoken in Spanish and English. Kay Uribe and Pat D'Alonzo, sophomore nurses here, and Judy Rodziguez, a student of Cabrini College, have the featured female roles. Armando Berriz, Juan Luis Galatas, have the featured male roles. Others in the play include Henry E. David and Juan Gamern.

First of Two Functions

Noche Espanola, the first of two major annual Spanish Club functions, was started twenty-seven years ago by the Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, the former moderator of the club. It is held every year on the first Friday of December.

Theater In D'Alonzo's View

Quite evident to the watchful eyes of an interested audience are the tasks of actors and actress, and director. Less apparent are the responsibilities of audio, lighting, and other effects men. But among the least known and most underrated men connected with the successful production of drama is the business and backstage man, such as Mike D'Alonzo, president of Belle Masque.

D'Alonzo, a native of Oakmont, Pennsylvania, has labored for four years with Belle Masque. Aside from this, he has been with the Homecoming Committee for Nick Basca Weekend for the past two years, and has been Secretary of Alpha Psi Omega Fraternity for the same length of time.

A senior general arts major who really has the backstage theatre in his veins, D'Alonzo has been taking graduate courses in theatre as elective, in addition to his duties both with Belle Masque and Graduate Theatre shows.

'Realistic Set'

The setting for "Detective Story," Belle Masque's late fall production, takes place in a police precinct. D'Alonzo said that for the first time, a "realistic set" will be used in Vasey Auditorium. Elaborating on this, he described the set as a multi-walled room, complete with ceiling, windows, desks, and doors.

Commenting on the unusual set, he said, "the audience will more easily appreciate the emotional strain of the characters through the removal of the fourth wall."

Projecting his thoughts even further, D'Alonzo announced his personal goal and that of the younger members of Belle Masque: a full-scale musical production by the spring of 1963. This would be a precedent in the history of the Villanova undergraduate theatre.

Ugly Man Will Reappear

The Ugly Man contest, an integral part of the annual Charity Weekend, has once again appeared on the Villanova campus. Initiated and executed by the Junior Class for the first time last year, the contest gained great popularity and was an overwhelming financial success. At a penny a vote, anyone is eligible to cast a ballot for his idea of the "Ugly Man," either enemy or friend. All proceeds from the Ugly Man contest will be contributed towards making this year's Charity Weekend a financial success.

Beta Gamma Society To Host Debate Meet Next Week In C&F

The Second Annual Villanova Debate Tournament will be held on December 9, 1961. The headquarters of the Tournament will be in the Commerce and Finance building. It is expected that there will be a representation of from twenty to twenty-five colleges from Pennsylvania and neighboring states.

The topic for the debating season this year is "Should labor organizations come under the jurisdiction of anti-trust legislation?"

Tournament Plans

The tournament is scheduled for three rounds. There will be four representatives from each school which will comprise an affirmative and negative unit of two persons each.

Last year Villanova placed third in the contest, but the team did not receive a trophy because tournament etiquette states that a winning host-college allows the next lowest competitor to receive the award. Trophies will be awarded to the three highest scoring teams.

Villanova University's Beta Gamma Debate Society has over twenty active members. President Terrence Stratman has extended an open invitation to the entire student body to audit the debates. He also asked that any student at Villanova who would like to act as a Chairman or a timekeeper in the events report to the Beta Gamma meeting at 10:30 Thursday in Room 203 Vasey Hall. Stratman forecasted that the club's plans for next year will be a two-day, five-round tournament which will place the Villanova competition on a level with the finest tournaments in the nation.

Council Art Exhibit Opens 4th; To Show Sculpting, Paintings

Between December 4 and 11 the Student Council Cultural Affairs Committee will sponsor an art exhibit by the students of the Philadelphia Museum College of Art, under the direction of Mr. Hood, Director of Exhibits at the College.

Fifty pieces taken from the fields of sculpture, painting, graphic, and commercial arts will be exhibited. The exhibit, to be held in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall between 9:30 a.m. and 6 p.m., is a Villanova first. Attendance at the exhibit is free and all Villanovans are invited.

Co-chairmen Bill DiPaolo and Al Lamastra of the Student Council Cultural Affairs Committee have expressed a desire to sponsor exhibits of this type each semester with an emphasis on a particular artist, in lieu of many.

Missions To Be Topic At NFCCS Conference Sunday In Rosemont

On Sunday December 3, 1961 the Philadelphia Region of the National Federation of Catholic College Students will hold an Inter-Collegiate Conference on Lay Missions, at Rosemont College. The conference will begin at 1:00 p.m., with a key note address by Mr. Anthony Scialla, the Religious Affairs Vice-President.

Trapp Announces Dance Plans; Jazz Concert Replaces Prom

On Monday, November 13, the Senior Class Steering Committee held an emergency meeting to formulate plans for the evening of Friday, February 23, 1962.

Class President, Ray Trapp, had previously announced that the Senior Dinner Dance would be held at the Sheraton Hotel in Philadelphia on February twenty-fourth. Paul Judge, who played for the Junior Class Dinner Dance last year, will play again this year by popular request.

Staph Chairman

Mike Stapf, who is chairman of this year's Dinner-Dance Committee has selected several members of the Class to work on the Committee. Dan Peschio has been assigned to seek a new idea type of "favor" for the dance. Great interest will be placed in this favor since the Class did not have one last year. At present, several suggestions are being considered.

Other plans for this formal dance are being prepared by the Committee working with the Class Officers on the selection of the menu and various other phases of the Dance.

Jazz Concert

The plans for Friday night of Senior Weekend are now being finalized. An Inter-Collegiate Jazz Festival, similar to the one conducted during last year's Junior Week, will replace the Senior Prom which was usually held on Friday night.

The Committee decided in favor of this idea. They felt that almost everyone would prefer this less formal type of entertainment on the eve of the Senior Dinner Dance.

Jim Braithewaite and Joe Zawacki have been appointed co-chairmen of the Jazz Concert. They have already made preparation to contact several of the schools who participated in last year's program, as well as a number of new groups, who have expressed an interest in the Jazz Competition.

On Recreation

According to a recent Student Council poll nearly 94% of the resident student body feel that on-campus recreational facilities are inadequate. A rapid survey of the campus will show the observer the reason for the result of the poll.

At the present time the resident recreational facilities are limited to one TV lounge in Sullivan Hall, the Pie Shoppe, the outdoor fields and courts; the courts in Alumni Hall and the Field House, and the swimming pool. These facilities are required to accommodate nearly 2000 students who must be athletic or TV minded to enjoy them. When inclement weather forces the student indoors, the facilities become even more taxed.

The number of parents who wait outside dorms for their sons demonstrates the inadequacies of the Dougherty Hall lounges for entertaining visitors.

Pie Shoppe waiting lines after special events points out the need for at least temporary increases in facilities after such events.

One of the biggest needs at the present time is facilities for students not athletically inclined or not interested in television. There is a complete lack of game rooms at the present time.

87% of the day hops answered the poll by stating the facilities were not adequate. The crowded day hops' cafeteria and lounges, especially during poor weather, point out the need for expansion in this area. Though day hops don't need as many other forms of recreational facilities as the residents some provision should be made in this area.

According to the poll nearly three quarters of the students are in favor of using Student Council funds for expanding on-campus facilities. Because the funds of the council are to a certain extent limited, only small scale improvements can be expected from this quarter. The bulk of the financial support for improving these facilities will have to come from the university itself. A recreation building is tentatively slated for construction sometime in the future but something must be done now for the students presently at Villanova.

When the proper authorities take action on the need for recreational facilities they should keep in mind the strong need for game rooms on campus. These should not be centralized as are the lounges in Dougherty Hall, but should be located in several places on campus. One moderately sized room in each dormitory would help to alleviate the problem.

A reception room in each dorm for friends and relatives would be very convenient and relatively inexpensive to construct.

The day hops' cafeteria might be used on the same basis as the regular snack bar to alleviate overcrowding after special events.

If the administration can make only long range plans at the present time, the Student Council should be responsible to take action on the problem now, if only with temporary measures, until the adminstration can make the large scale recreational provisions so obviously needed.

Letter to the Editor:

To the Editor:

Just prior to the Thanksgiving vacation, nearly two-hundred students gathered in the Auditorium of Vasey Hall to take screening tests for the "College Bowl" Television program on which Villanova is to appear January 7th.

The fact that so many students were willing to represent their institution on a national television program seems to me to be a wonderful example of school spirit. Much like the program itself, the screening test was not a test of knowledge but merely of quick recall and no student should feel discouraged because he was not among the twenty-five finalists.

In behalf of the team of coaches for the "College Bowl," I would like to express my thanks to those two-hundred candidates who took the screening examination, and congratulate them for their self-confidence and school prile.

Intellectualism At Villanova

by Tom O'Connor

With the return of the mid-term examinations, the faculty has voiced its annual campaign about the lack of intellectualism at Villanova. Perhaps to a degree, they are right. However, a close observation will reveal that the faculty generalization overlooked a small but significant group of students who are practicioners of the idea that the major purpose of a University is to study, gain knowledge, and develop those academic talents with which God endowed us. To these students I say bravo. It is to the rest of the student body that I address this statement.

Most of the students here, myself included, study. They learn the fact and theories presented by the professor and the text book. For the majority, this seems to be the extent of a college education.

A student—but perhaps that's a misleading word, indeed, a person at this university comes as a freshman speaking trite phrases and slang, which is quite common in public and parochial high schools. Unfortunately most of these people have here after four years of organized memory work with no better vocabulary or discussion interests than they had when they arrived. If you don't believe me walk from Tolentine to C&F and listen to what others are saying and how they say it. Can you tell the Senior from the Freshman? Are these educated people?

Weekly Forum

Another point, have you ever seen someone get together a group of students for a regular weekly forum. Planning the topic of current events, researching the subject and holding the forum. Much worse, have you ever felt that you could get one hundred people to attend such a function weekly? And where else should such a function be held than at a university?

Recently a student had an interview at one of the better medical schools in the country. Among the quesions he was asked was, "What research have you done lately?" Fortunately, this was a student. There was no difficulty answering this question.

The people at Villanova seem to feel that a research paper is only something to be done when a professor demands it. Perhaps this idea has been promulgated due to the faculty's normal assignment of one paper per course per semester. Perhaps, the faculty might be able to stimulate an interest in research through the publication of lists of suggested and required readings in various fields. This, combined with an increase effort to assign research work would need several years of constant pressure by the faculty, but at the end of this time he would probably emerge with a student body that was being educated, and which was seriously interest in academic work. One which could do away with the single text for a course, and which would expect that a course consisted of class lectures plus research done by the individual. This would help to make the boys who come here the educated students of tomorrow.

These are not all the answers. I may have missed the problem completely. I may even be completely wrong. But have you done any research lately?

On the Military

Last April, a small magazine, catering to the American soldiers aboard, THE OVERSEAS WEEKLY, disclosed that Major General Edwin Walker was stuffing his troops with rightist rantings and indoctrinating them with the far-right tenets of the John Birch Society.

In the ensuing eight months, this article grew into national importance and developed the topic of allowing the military political responsibility into a vehement controversy.

During these months it was brought into the public light that many of those in the armed forces of the United States were quite active in a movement not unlike that in the French army which attempted to topple the elect government of Charles de Gaulle. These men don't so much attack Communism but rather denounces fellow Americans whose views they don't like. Communism is their excuse to smear liberalism.

In his final message to the American people on Jan. 17, President Dwight D. Eisenhower, a retired General himself, pointed out that the present alliance between the military and industry through military contracts was one of the most threatening problems this country faced. Already, his warning has taken on portentous importance.

There have been many other officers of high military rank stripped of their patriotic, solomn demeanors and revealed as ardent supporters of the ultra right-wing John Birch Society. Among these is Major P. A. del Valle, ret., and advocate of armed insurrection.

This United States officer, to whom we hand entrusted our safety and that of our country, has onimously suggested that if the public doesn't "vote the traitors out" there is "yet another course of action left: the organization of a powerful, armed resistance force to defeat the aims of the usurpers and bring about a return to constitutional government."

By "traitors" and "usurpers" he clearly meant the present elected government.

These are the same American men of command who have sworn to uphold the Constitution and the civilian government to which they are responsible. The situation was the same in France where rebel generals were stopped in their overthrow attempt when they had gained too much freedom of action.

John F. Kennedy is our elected leader and, thus, Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces. To him, the military owe their allegiance not to some subversive rightist society.

For the first time in many, many years, military commanders have been actively working behind the backs of their Commander-in-Chiefs in clandestine, undemocratic organizations. These war-mongering would-be politicians can ruin the United States with their utter lack of confidence in this country and by their hate preaching. Can we, as citizens of the U.S., tolerate this?

This Is A Democracy, Not A Republic

by Joe Massey

Dear Joe:

The "Rubbish Report" by you was, among other things, rubbish. In attempting to mock the John Birch Society you permit your own ignorance to show. You state, "And so I learned that democracy is a subversive and un-American activity." You make this statement in order to ridicule the Birch Society while believing yourself that we live in a democracy and that it is a good thing.

Our country is not a democracy. It is a republic. When we pledge allegiance to the flag, we pledge allegiance to the REPUBLIC for which it stands, not the democracy for which it stands. Our Constitution guarantees a republican form of government to each of the states but does not mention a democracy or a democratic form of government once. The Federalist Papers mentions democracy only a few times. One of these times is in Federalist Paper No. 10 by James Madison in which the disadvantages of democracy are discussed and not its advantages.

The founding fathers were wise enough to know the dangers of democracy and to provide our country with a republican form of government. This is wisdom you have not yet required. Please, Joe, do not condemn others for their correct beliefs.

William H. Kelley

This letter, received recently, stimulated my desire to investigate the "wisdom" of which Bill Kelly is speaking. I use as a starting point the definition of democracy and republic given in Webster's dictionary.

A republic, according to Webster, is " . . . a state in which the sovereign power resides in a CERTAIN body of the people (the electorate), and is exercised by representatives elected by, and responsible to, them."

A democracy is "Government in which the supreme power is retained by the people and exercised either directly (absolute or pure democracy) or indirectly (representative democracy) through a system of representation."

The difference between a representative democracy and a republic is, then, the location of supreme or sovereign power in the state. The electorate is the certain body of the people which retains that power in the republic. The electorate retains that power in the United States. Ergo the United States is a republic.

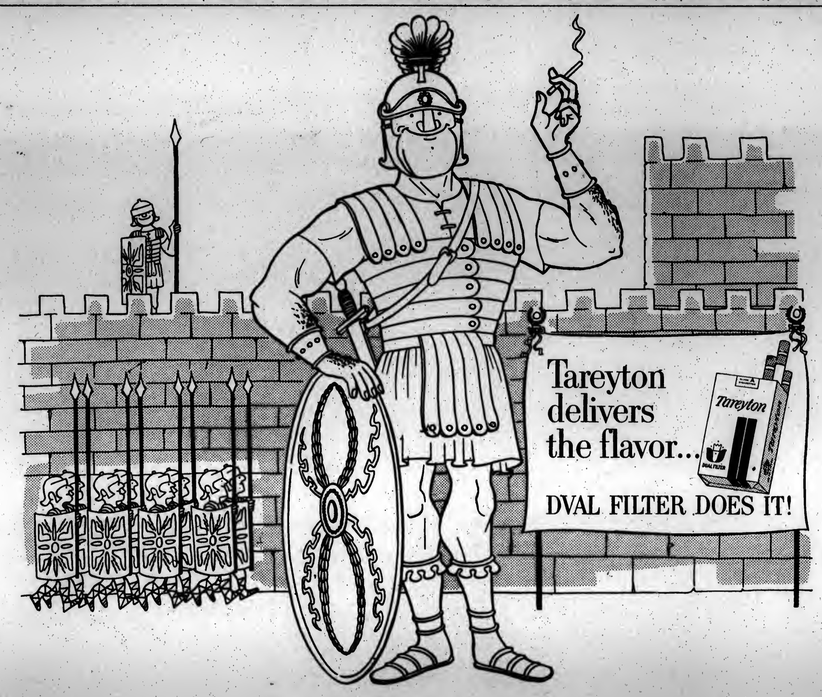
But the United States electorate is all the people. In a democracy all the people retain the sovereign power. Ergo the United States is a democracy.

To avoid the horns of the dilemma, I decided to investigate the writing of the great political minds. One of the founding fathers was a man named Thomas Paine. He said, in THE RIGHTS OF MAN, "What is called a republic is not any particular form of government. It is . . . literally translated, the public thing." But what is the American system of government? "It is on this system that the American government is founded. It is representation ingrafted upon democracy."

Montesquieu, in THE SPIRIT OF THE LAWS, says "There are three species of government: republican, monarchial, and despotic . . . a republican government is that in which the body, or only a part of the people, is possessed of the supreme power; it is called a democracy."

What have the founding fathers to say of the sovereign power's location? Thomas Jefferson said, "The will of the people is the only legitimate foundation of any government, and to protect its free expression should be our first object." Notice that he said "the people," not "some of the people."

"The Father of His Country," George Washington, said in the famous Farewell Address, "The basis of our political system is the right of the people to make and to alter their constitutions of government." Washington and Jefferson have both stated, is effect, that the sovereign power in the United States resides in the people, all the people.



It is paramount in any discussion of American government to understand that the United States has universal suffrage, that the elected officials of the government exercise their power contractually, at the discretion of the people, and that the Constitution, the supreme law of the land, recognizes the supreme power of the people when it admits the rights of the people to amend it, revise it, or discard it.

In America the power of the people, all the people, is sovereign and supreme. They exercise this power through representatives who are responsible to them. They are provided with the direct means of enforcing their will by initiative, referendum, and recall. In the immortal words of Abraham Lincoln we have "a government of the people, for the people, and by the people . . . "

It is, of course, true that the Constitution guarantees to each state a "republican" form of government, and that we pledge allegiance to the "republic" for which the flag stands.

But here the mistake has been made, as Thomas Paine points out, of confusing the business of government, i.e., the good of the public, with the form of government. Let us keep in mind the "People's Republic of China," and "the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics." Both are states in which the supreme power resides in a certain body of the people, namely the Communist party. They are republics. So was Plato's Republic in which only one group of the people would hold the power, namely the Guardians.

So to say "America is a republic, not a democracy . . . let's keep it that way" is actually to say "America is a democracy, it should be a republic . . . Let's change it." The first statement is false, the second undesirable.

The College Boy

(Reprinted Fournier News)

In reply to a recent article entitled "What Is A College Girl?" in the newspaper of a local men's college, the Fournier News attempts a parallel description of the collegiate male.

What is a College Man? The last word is misleading, and is merely the name which the creatures have ostentatiously applied to themselves.

What, then, is a College Boy? He is a strange compound of wolf and cherub, beatnik and stockbroker. (The proportions vary widely in the individual members.) He frequents mixers, but rarely dances.

Generosity flows from his soul. Quite willingly he will teach you all he knows about politics, cars, sports, love and women. He expects to be chased and admired, but scorns girls who flirt.

If he's handsome, he's conceited. If he's smart, he's too smart. And if he's sweet, thoughtful and witty, he's engaged.

"Joe College" likes girls, parties, beer, Marlboros, girls, Ahmad Jamahl, Fridays, girls, alma mater, football, the Kingston Trio and girls. He dislikes blind dates, work, crowded mixers, work, weeping women, work, Mondays, work, 12:00 p.m. curfews and work.

He's a combination Troy Donahue-Gardner McKay and a charter member of the Mickey Mouse Club.

'Round Midnight

Public, Critics Don't Agree

by Joe Zawacki

A cartoon in the papers last week pictured a gent leaving the theater with a sarcastic grin on his face. The caption underneath went like this: "I would have probably enjoyed that show if the critics hadn't panned it." Which prompts the oft-asked query, "Do we really need critics to tell us what to enjoy or not to enjoy"?

This of course is not a new conflict. It has been going on for centuries and as an argument, has just about been exhausted. However, a new twist has been added fairly recently. A critic of the theater, movies, and music is constantly searching for new "idols", preferably "discovered" by himself.

A Star Is Born

Reams of copy then pour forth from his desk about his new find. Other critics, quick to hop on the proverbial bandwagon, rush over each other in their haste to outdo each other in printing plaudits. Soon the beneficiary of all this publicity qnds himself in the public's limelight and in demand everywhere. His commodity, whatever it may be, suddenly is selling out everywhere. He is "a star".

Now the critic's brain (or reasonable facsimile) starts to function. Having made Joe Blow a star, he is horrified to find him a commercial success, the most heinous crime in the critic's ten commandments. His first move is to find flaws in the individual's performance that seemingly were never there before. These are exposed for the public's censure and the critic sits back, satisfied that his job as determinant of the public's opinion has been done.

Two Way Stretch

But John Q. Public is a strange breed of animal. He likes to be his own critic and is generally different from a "bonafide" critic in one of two ways. (1) He is smarter and prefers to reason out his likes and dislikes for himself or (2) he is dumber and will swallow trash, no matter how many times he is told that he is in danger of contracting "cancer of the brain".

Talking to George Shearing last week while he was appearing at Joe DeLuca's Red Hill, this discussion arouse and brought forth some amusing and enlightening comments. Shearing, the talented pianist from Great Britain, is a perfect case in point.

One of England's most popular musicians immediately after WW II, the blind since birth Shearing came to the U.S. in 1947 to try his hand at the American Jazz audience. For a while he was connected with a group comprised of Philly clarinetist Buddy DeFranco, bassist John Levy (now his personal manager and partner), and drummer Denzil Best.

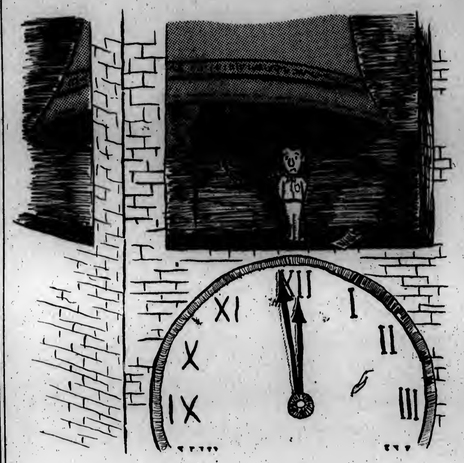
The Shearing Sound

George and Buddy went opposite ways but the pianist kept the rhythm men and in 1949 added Chuck Wayne on guitar and Marjorie Hyams on vibes for what was to be the first of many top-notch Shearing quintets and the originator of what has become internationally known as the "Shearing Sound".

The critics took him to their warm bosoms and in two years, George was rated among the top six pianists in the country. With it came commercial success in the form of sell-out appearances and then the advent of the LP.

True to form, it wasn't long before Shearing was being accused of repititiveness ans (sic) catering to the audience. Shearing is now a fallen (critic's) idol but he has gotten rich in the process, which after all is what the whole game is about.

The Sensible Way



Say Shearing: "By keeping the basic 'Shearing Sound' and adding to it over the years, I have been able to reach a far larger audience and bring them within the confines of Jazz. I feel that this is more sensible than playing a number of impressionistic pieces that reach no one."

Yet the affable pianist could not resist a chance to retaliate. In a loan deal with Riverside, he recorded an album with the rising Montgomery brothers, including guitarist Wes Montgomery, currently one of the critic's fair-haired boys. The album has just been released and after watching Shearing at the Red Hill last week, it won't be to surprising if George scores a point or two.

Swimming Team Captains

Swim Team Opens Saturday Face West Chester At Home

Villanova's varsity swimming team, already in its fifth week of pre-season training, is looking forward to a banner year. Their immediate goal is a victory over West Chester in their season opener at Villanova's pool on Saturday, December 2. Coaches and swimmers alike foresee performances that will equal or surpass any which have been exhibited by Villanova teams in the past.

There are many reasons for this general display of optimism. The new enthusiasm which is being displayed daily by both the varsity and frosh teams can probably find its origin in the new training program which has been initiated this year.

Rather than begin swimming immediately, Coach Geisz spent two complete weeks on conditioning exercises and endurance tests. The swimming program itself, which is under way now, has been modeled after Indiana University's "intense training" program which was successful in producing many Olympic and world record holders. Under this program, each swimmer is timed daily at regular intervals and equal emphasis is placed on building speed and endurance. A comprehensive weight-training program has also been worked out by Coaches Geisz and Jack Lumsden to supplement the swimming work-outs.

Senior Captains

Senior captains Don Boehmche and Don Reed both feel that this new program will be of great help to the team. They point to the strength of last year's squad with such mainstays as freestylers Mike Powers, Jim Primm and Ed Jensen; Backstroker Alex Hicks; and butterfly swimmers Mike Le Moult and Ed Brier as evidence of this fact. This team of veterans, all juniors, will be supplemented by the present sophs who earned the distinction last year of being the greatest freshman team in Villanova swimming history. This strong combination promises to do its utmost in meeting a schedule which rivals them against such imposing teams as Princeton, Army, Navy and N.Y.U.

Frosh Season Ends Lose To Army 16-14 On Contested Play

Villanova's Freshman team ended a 1-2 season with a heartbreaking, and controversial, 16-14 loss to Army on Friday, November 18, at West Point.

Spotting Army a six-point lead at the end of the first period, the Kittens showed their claws as Emmett Kelly scored on a fifteen yard pass from quarterback Fran Dougherty. The try for the two points was good. Nevertheless, Army took a 13-8 lead into the locker room at halftime by way of a touchdown.

Tight Second-Half

The third period was scoreless as both sides pulled off many sparkling defensive plays. With less than three and a half minutes left in the game Dick Sernyak scored on a Dougherty rollout pass. The extra points, which would prove to be important in the next few minutes, were missed.

Following Sernyak's TD, Army's drive was halted on the Villanova five-yard line. As the gun sounded, the referee noted that Army had twelve men on the field. Unable to refuse the penalty the Kittens watched as five yards were walked off against Army. From here the Cadets kicked a twelve yard field goal to give them a hard-earned victory.

Cats Go To Sun Bowl Dec. 30 First Team To Accept A Bid

Around eleven o'clock Friday morning November 17, Villanova accepted its first bid to a post-season bowl game since 1949. The Wildcats were the first team to accept a Bowl bid. Officials of the Sun Bowl later announced that Wichita University had also accepted an invitation to compete with the Main Liners on Saturday, December 30 in El Paso, Texas.

There have been only two previous meetings between the teams. The Wildcats topped the Shockers in 1957, 24-6 and lost the following year 21-6. Ted Dean, Eagle fullback, led the Wichita team in 1958 to this victorious performance.

Award For Season

Coach Alex Bell pointed out that the acceptance to the bowl constitutes an award for the players for a really good team. The squad will fly down to El Paso on either the 26th or 27th and will stay until the 31st. The early departure date allows the Wildcats to have at least two good workouts in the Texas climate. Game time is scheduled for 11:30 Texas time.

Rich Ross
. . . successful captain

The contest will be played in Kidd Stadium with a 15,000 capacity. Last year's game featured New Mexico State defeating Utah State 20-13 with a capacity crowd in attendance.

Wichita exhibits a 8-2 record, having dropped decisions to Arizona State 21-7 and Dayton 23-12. Coaching the Shockers is an ex-Army star of the mid 1940's, Hank Foldberg, who teaches a multiple T formation offense.

Philadelphia Television

In regard to the television rights for the game, Athletic Director Art Mahan explained, "If it is not nationally televised, the chances are great, almost closed, that it will be televised locally." The only other game being televised on that Saturday is the Gator Bowl between 1 and 3. The Villanova-Wichita game will be played at 3:30 Eastern time.

Practice for the Wildcats has begun and will continue up until game time with a break for the Christmas holidays. The players will not have the advantage of the training table as they did during the regular season. They will eat with the rest of the resident students.

Pro Quarterback

The bowl bid will be the first "major" post-season game for Wichita. Wichita has captured the Missouri Valley Conference title behind the quarterbacking of Alex Zyskowski, sixth in the nation in total offense. His favorite target is another pro prospect Ron Turner, a 6-2, 215 pound end. Turner is considered outstanding defensively and has caught more than 25 passes.

Basically Villanova will use their same defense and offense with adaptations. "There's no question in my mind," commented Alex Bell, "it is going to be a tough game. We are going to work as hard as we can."

Banquet For Gridders Next Monday Night; Stuhldreher To Speak

Harry Stuhldreher, former Notre Dame All-American quarterback who later coached at Villanova and Wisconsin, will be the principal speaker at the 40th annual football banquet of the

Harry Stuhldreher
. . . former mentor

Villanova Club of Philadelphia.

William Dwyer, dinner chairman, said the dinner honoring Coach Alex Bell and the Villanova University varsity football squad will be held Monday, Dec. 4 at the Drake Hotel.

The dinner will mark a reunion for Stuhldreher and Bell. Alex was a sophomore end on Stuhldreher's last team at Villanova in 1935 before he left to become head coach and athletic director at the University of Wisconsin. Stuhldreher spent 11 seasons at Villanova. He left Wisconsin in 1950 and is now assistant to the vice president, U. S. Steel Corp., Pittsburgh.

Dwyer said the dinner is expected to attract its largest attendance in recent history. Reservations are now being accepted through the university Alumni House, Lancaster Pike, Villanova.

Courtmen Open Dec. 2 At Palestra Face Scranton Five In Second Game

The 1961-62 Villanova basketball team will make its debut this Saturday night in the University of Pennsylvania Palestra at 9:15 p.m. Jack Kraft, Al Severance's successor will be at the helm for the first time in the college ranks. Kraft won't be the only new face adorning the Wildcat bench though. Only three lettermen, Hubie White, Joe Walsh, and Jim O'Brien, are back from last year's 11-13 club that drubbed Scranton 106-72.

Coach Kraft's Mainliners' offense will revolve around the brightest star on the Villanova horizon, Hubie White, a potential All-American. The major drawbacks of this year's Wildcats will be height and experience.

Kraft's offense will be built around Hubie White, Villanova's 6'4" jumping jack forward and pivot man. White, an All-American candidate and member of Villanova's 1000 point club, is the only returning player from last year's club.

Walsh Tallest

The remainder of the front court trio will be selected from O'Brien, Walsh, and Jim McMonagle. Walsh is the tallest of the three, standing 6'6". O'Brien and Walsh were used sparingly as substitutes by Severance last year. McMonagle didn't play last year because he is a five year NROTC student. Of the three O'Brien has shown the most scoring potential.

This year's backcourt duo will be sans Jimmy Huggard, the fiery backcourt leader for the past three years. Coach Kraft isn't exactly singing the Blues about his guard prospects however. Sophomores George Leftwich and Wally Jones, stars of last year's freshmen team, should give the 'Cats a terrific punch. The only problem these two may give Kraft is the possibility of too many personal fouls.

Six Lettermen

Scranton's Royal Purples have six lettermen returning from last year's 5-18 season. Coach Fiore Cesare has built his double pivot offense around 6'5" Joe Bartulli and 6'1" Tom Foley. John Jordan a 6'2" senior will team with Barlutti at guard.

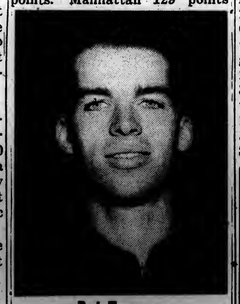
Other probable starters are 6'6" Ed Flowers and 6'4" Warner Stock.

This game is the first of a long hard twenty-two game schedule. (Dec. 2, Scranton; 6, Princeton; 7, Buffalo; 9, Niagara; 11, Iowa State; 13, Fordham; 1, St. Francis, Brooklyn; 20, St. Francis, Loretto; 26-30, Quaker City Tournament; January 3, Seton Hall; 6, West Virginia; 10, Temple; 13, Xavier; 20, Penn; 27, Memphis State; 31, Duquesne; February 3, Detroit; 7, Duquesne; 8, St. John's; 17, Canisius; 24, LaSalle; March 3, St. Joseph's; and 10, City Series).

Cross-Country Third In IC4A Frosh Take Freshmen Title

The first snow storm of the season played havoc with the IC4A Cross Country Championships and may have cost the Villanova Harriers the title. The championship race held on Monday, November 20th, over the Van Cortland Park course was not run under the most pleasant conditions. At the finish line the mud covered contestants who had sloshed through snow, sleet and mud were barely recognizable.

Machooka Winner



The winner was Stevie Machooka, a sophomore from Cornel, who won in 26:02. The 20 year old native from Kenya Province, in Africa, led virtually the whole way except for a short distance when our own Vic Zwolak took over.

Zwolak said after the race that the poor conditions didn't help him any, but that Machooka had to run in the same muck. Also noticeably affected by the mud and snow was Villanova's Angie Severio. Severio finished 33rd, much lower than was expected of him.

Following Machooka across the finish line were Gerry Norman of Penn State 26:12, Kevin Quinn of St. Joe's 26:17, Gerry Young of Michigan State 26:30, and Zwolak 26:39. Pat Traynor 27:00, was 10th.

Michigan State Team Winner

The team winner was Michigan State with 82 points. Defending champion Penn State was second, 90 points, and the Wildcats were third with 104 points. Manhattan 129 points and Army 189 points, rounds out the top final.

Law Forum Hosts Trial Expert, Berman, In Talk "For Defense"

by George West

The second meeting of the Villanova Law Forum was addressed by one of the most capable of trial lawyers, Emil Zola Berman, on Monday night last. The room may still resound with the phrase, "Courts are the place for the resolution of rights."

Jury Important

Mr. Berman noted that one cannot try a case, "without a concept of what the jurors are thinking about." He has found it best to apply psychology in looking into the minds of the juors while they are being selected. The best weapon a lawyer has, according to the trial expert, is an insight into the principle by which people think and react.

"Jurors are filled with the assumptions of the age," Mr. Berman explained. The lawyer must realize that the overall opinion is that the plaintiff is right. The plaintiff, after all, is the one injured and suffering. It is for the defense to attack the good faith and consistency with which his opponent tells his tale of woe.

Impugne Candor

The distinguished member of the New York Bar went on to cite cases in which the main job of the defense attorney is to impugne the candor of the plaintiff. But even before one is in court, jury selection must be done properly. If not, Mr. Berman said, the case is lost from the start.

"Look for an identity with the opponent's position," he warned. If the witness for the defense is not of the most desirable character, the lawyer should ascertain that the jurors will be objective in hearing testimony, despite that fact. He advised that every effort should be made to overcome these obstacles and if not the lawyer is defaulting.

Accident and Accused

Mr. Berman distinguished between being accused of wrongdoing. This distinction, he said, must be made clear to the jurors.

Monetary recovery for the plaintiff was briefly touched upon. The jury must be conditioned to accept a large amount in damages. He made it quite clear that the important fact was not the size of the monetary recovery but the justice which that amount must represent.

Annual Ugly Man Title Accorded With Trophy, To 'Villanova Nurses'

Spurred by great desire and considerable support, members of the Villanova Nursing Division vigorously campaigned to collect 16,026 votes, 3,000 ahead of its nearest opponent, as the nurses captured the second annual Ugly Man Contest.

Junior nurse Cecile Mugnier accepted the trophy last Friday night during the second intermission of the Charity Ball. The award was donated through John Bauman of the University Shop.

Charity Purposes

All the proceeds from the contest, some $490, are given by the Junior Class to St. John's Orphanage. Chairman Al La Mastra pointed out that the 49,000 vote cast is doubtlessly the largest election ever held in

Former Queen Accepts

Delaware County. One vote could be cast for each cent given to the Orphanage.

Second place was taken by Mike Thornton, junior Social Studies major, who notched 13,132 votes in the competition. Brian Sullivan, sophomore member of the football squad, and Bill Noto, junior engineering major, finished third and fourth respectively in the voting.

Members of the faculty and administration were eliminated after the first day of voting, thus halting the hopes of some students to support a selected teacher or professor. Only members of the undergraduate student body were deemed eligible for competition in the announcement.

WWVU To Broadcast 'Cat Cagers' Games

Radio Station WWVU will broadcast a series of Wildcat basketball games this season, it was announced yesterday by station manager Dan O'Mara.

The play by play broadcasts will commence this week with tonight's game against Princeton at 7:45 p.m., Thursday night at Buffalo at 8:30 p.m.; and Saturday evening's game with Niagara at 8:45 p.m.

The games will be broadcast under the auspices of WWVU's News & Sports Dept.

O'Mara did not say whether all games would be broadcast but he did say there was a good possibility.

Mike DiBenedetto appears fraught with emotion during a scene from 'Detective Story' which opens tonight in Vasey Theater. Looking on are John McCabe, John Putre, and Bob Hepnar.

Belle Masque's production of Sidney Kingsley's "Detective Story" opens a five night run in the Vasey Hall Theatre tonight and will continue through December 10. Curtain time for each show is 8:30.

Tickets for the play can be obtained either in the Pie Shoppe or at the door for $1.25 apiece. A special offer is also being made for anyone interested in attending as a group. Blocks of ten may be bought for one dollar each.

Direction of Drama

The play, a modern tragedy, will be directed by Bernard A. Coyne of the Graduate Theatre Department.

The plot of the play concerns itself with a detective who thinks that he is perfect. He is obsessed with the law and feels that, if justice can not be accomplished by law, he will then take it upon himself to carry out justice.

The story develops around his wife who is put up on a pedestal in his own self-centered, arrogant world. The illusion is shattered when he learns that she has had an abortion.

The leading character is Bill Di Paolo as Detective McLeod. DiPaolo is the secretary of the National Drama Fraternity, Alpha Psi Omega. The female roles of Mrs. Mary McLeod and Susan Carmichael are played by Penny Tormos of Cabrini College and Margie Stupak of the Villanova Nursing Division. Margie Stupak finds herself in love with a man, Arthur Kindred, played by Dick McIntyre, who involves himself in a web of circumstances that come to the attention of Detective McLeod.

The "Detective Story" had originally appeared on Broadway in 1949 and was ranked by many as a "tremendous success" with lead Ralph Bellamy receiving many accolades for his performance as Detective McLeod.

Frank Thornton dramatizes the part of Lieutenant Monahan, McLeod's superior, in the 23rd precinct.

Others working behind the curtains are Walt Grove as Crew Chief and Tom Nevins, who is engineering the realistic setting, a first for the Vasey stage.

Mike d'Alonzo, Belle Masque President, commented that "the cooperation of the girls from Cabrini has been outstanding. Those participating in the production are Penny Tormos, the female lead, and Lois Friel, the man-hungry shoplifter. Humor is added by Louise Arling, playing a real nut, while Kathy Harrison is a domineering housewife. Barbara Babicz and Sara Paladino do a fine job along with another Cabrini student, Pat Slattery, who portrays a frustrated chorus girl."

Orphans' Christmas Came Early With Juniors Charity Weekend

With the Charity Ball last Friday and the Orphans' outing last Saturday, Charity Weekend concluded yesterday, Tuesday December 5 in the Orphans' Party at St. John's.

In the setting of "Christmas in Versailles", the Charity Ball was held at the Field House with the Revelers entertaining. The highlight of the evening was the awarding of the "Ugly Man of 1961" to the Villanova nurses. Ceil Mugnier, junior nurse and homecoming queen last year, accepted. Besides being the Christmas dance of the year, the Charity Ball provided funds to cover some of the expenses of Charity Weekend.

On Saturday, the Villanova "Dads for a Day" took the Johnnies places. Leaving Dougherty Hall in buses, cars, and taxis, they picked the boys up at 49th and Wyalusing streets and proceeded to tour the 69th. st. toyland and to talk to Santa.

After having lunch at Kostick's Restaurant, the "Moms" and "Dads" had a private viewing of the "Seventh Voyage of Sinbad" and cartoons, in a theater which was bought for the occasion. After the show, the Johnnies were returned to the Orphanage.

Yesterday, Tuesday December 5, at St. John's gymnasium, the Johnnies had the opportunity of receiving their toys and Villanova T-shirts from Santa, who arrived in a helicopter. After the buffet dinner was served Kevin Shea performed his magic tricks.

About four thousand dollars were spent during the weekend in toys for the Johnnies. An additional seven hundred and fifty dollars were contributed by students to the scholarship fund for the orphanage. The money was raised by student solicitation and in the proceeds of the Charity Ball.

The second stage of the eliminations of contestants for Villanova's appearance on the General Electric College Bowl on January 7 was completed last week.

The twenty-three quarter-finalists, who were selected by merit of the grades which they achieved in an examination of over two hundred original applicants, have been diminished to twelve semi-finalists.

Semi-Finalists Selected

The coaches for the event, Dr. Henry L. Rofinot, Mr. Henry B. Cushing, and Dr. Felix M. Belduk, have announced the semi-finalists to be Gerald A. Goulet, Sophomore Electrical Engineer; Lawrence J. Rosintoski, Sophomore Chemical Engineer; Joseph A. Massey, Senior Arts and Science; Eugene d'Aquill, Senior Arts and Science; William D. Huttanus, Senior Arts and Sci-

Council Colored With Debates And Confusion on Two Motions

by Quince Scurvey

Last week's bi-monthly Student Congress meeting was highlighted by two brisk floor debates from which the contestants emerged swathed in the red tape and floundering in the confusion begot by Robert's Rules.

The two issues under debate were: a suggestion that resident students be permitted to dine on the weekends without being obligated to wear the regulatory coat and tie, and the opinion of the Congress regarding an appropriation of $125 to share the expense of bringing to the campus Mr. Frank S. Meyers, the Senior Editor of NATIONAL REVIEW.

The first argument revolved around a motion by Al LaMastra. This motion stated "That the students of Villanova be allowed to enter the resident dining hall on weekends without being obligated to wear jackets and ties. The time would extend from 4:30 p.m. Friday until 6:00 p.m. Sunday evening."

Vice Chairman Joe Tate, pinch-hitting for Chairman Tom Wall, asked for discussion on the motion. LaMastra explained that the motion was promulgated in order to permit the residents to be informal over the weekends. Jim Tate then suggested an amendment to the motion that would change the wording to "excluding Sunday Brunch." This motion was defeated after a discussion about whether or not students would go to Sunday Mass informally dressed if the amendment was not included.

After the defeat of the amendment, discussion on the motion continued. Jim McMonagle said that such a motion was useless. He contended that similar motions had been sent to the administration for the past three years and had not been acted upon. McMonagle was answered by Jim Howley, Vice President of Student Affairs and Tony Bateman, IRS representative. Howley said that McMonagle's reason was apathetic and that it was the duty of the Congress to make such moves.

Bateman answered a statement, made by Joe Little, Vice President for Student Government, to the effect that most of the legislation presented to the administration this year had been mature and worthwhile, and that this motion wasn't. Bateman stated that this sort of legislation was indeed worthwhile and, even if the administration wouldn't act upon it, the opinion of the students should be put on record. The motion was then voted upon and passed.

The next floor fight was in relation to a motion in front of the Senate by Bill Williams. It stated "That the Student Senate of Villanova University appropriate $125 to bring Mr. Frank Meyer to Villanova on December 11, 1961." Acting chairman Tate explained that this motion was up to the Senate, but that he wanted the opinion of the Congress on the matter. To facilitate this discussion the body went into a committee of the whole in order to suspend the rules of procedure.

Bill Williams then took the floor to explain that the Freedom Forum, of which he is President, could get Mr. Meyer, an Ex-Communist and now a leading protaganist of the Reds, to speak at Villanova if the Student Council would share the expense of $250.

Ron Klammer reiterated Williams feelings that this was a worthwhile project. Tony Bateman and Al LaMastra then questioned the soundness of the Student Council sponsoring another right-wing speaker. Bateman suggested that the Senate

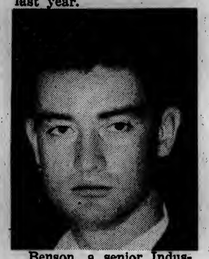
NewMagazineConcept Announces Sale Date For After Christmas

CONCEPT, newest of Villanova's magazines dedicated to stimulating thought, and discussion of intellectual standards, will appear the week following Christmas vacation.

First conceived in the early part of 1961, the magazine's purpose is to fill gaps for expression by talented students of Villanova in all areas of intellectual endeavor. The magazine, as approved by the administration, has no editorial policy, but allows rather for a discussion of a particular opinion on a wide range of topics.

The first issue of CONCEPT, to be released the week following Christmas vacation, will total about forty pages, with a printing of some three hundred copies. Topics to be covered in the initial issue will include: educational systems, communism, philosophy and science, modern morality in America, metaphysics of love, and critiques of music. Papers on the above topics will range from humorous commentary to pertinent student opinion on contemporary problems to serious analysis of scholarly material.

Gene d'Aquili, this year's Editor-in-Chief, has stated that those persons interested in working on, or donating articles to CONCEPT should contact Dan Martin, Copy Editor, or himself. d'Aquili also stated that articles for next semester are now being received from ALL interested students.



Senior Forms Needed

The Belle Air asks all graduating students of Villanova to submit their history forms to the Belle Air office in the basement of Vasey Hall. Over two hundred students have not turned in their forms and the Belle Air requests that these students turn in the forms at their earliest possible convenience.

PORTRETTE

Benson Active Bursar

One of the most energetic and industrious members of the Villanova student body is the Treasurer of the Student Council, Bob Benson. A member of the Council for a long and fruitful three years, he held another major office, as Secretary of the Council, last year.

Benson, a senior Industrial Administration major, has been connected with Council committees and dances ever since his sophomore year, when he became Chairman of the first Student Council Dance ever held at Villanova. Since then he has worked on the Social Affairs, the Ways and Means, and the Student Administration Committees, as well as the Student Senate and Student Cabinet.

This year Benson was in charge of the Sports Sampler, and is Chairman of the forthcoming Who's Who Banquet. He is also a member of the Senior Class Steering Committee.

Benson's record of spirited activity speaks for itself. As a sophomore he won the intramural hexathon, setting a few records in the feat. For two years he broadcasted his own show on WWVU radio. In addition to the Student Council dances, he has worked on the Nick Basca and Shamokinaki Dance Committees. He is also a member of the Society for the Advancement of Management.

Upon graduation, this native of Drexel Hill, Pennsylvania, will likely attend the Naval Flight School at Pensacola, Florida, for flight training.

Junior Week Plans Announced Jazz Concert Replaces Prom

The Junior Class of Villanova held its first meeting of the year last Thursday, November 30. Plans were announced for the annual Junior Week, April 29 to May 5. Activities of the week include a final performance of the Turf 'n' Tinsel which will be attended by the junior students and their mothers. In addition, the annual Junior-Senior Muff Day and class athletic smoker will take place.

Highlight of the week will be Mothers' Day, Monday, April 30. Junior Week will come to a close on Saturday night, May 5, with the annual dinner dance, which will be held at the new Downingtown Motor Inn, Downingtown, Pennsylvania. Music for the occasion will be supplied by the Paul Judge Orchestra.

Major Change

A major change in Junior Week was announced by Jim Tate, Class President. Tate announced that instead of the annual Junior Prom a Jazz Concert will be sponsored by the Junior Class. This is the first time that such a concert will be presented on the Villanova Campus by either the University or a separate class of the student body.

Jim Tate also stated that the concert will be open to the general public; however, Junior Class students will be entitled to special prices. Tate is withholding the identity of the two big name stars that are to appear at the concert, but he did state that their names will be announced in the next edition of the VILLANOVAN.

Tate Lauds Juniors

Stressing the need for participation of the class as a whole Tate also praised the class for its attendance at the Ring Mass, Communion Breakfast, and Orphans' Outing.

The next meeting of the Junior Class is tentatively scheduled for January 11, 1962.

Art Exhibit Debut Marks Council First In Cultural Program

The first Student Council sponsored art exhibit is in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall and will run through December 11. The lounge will be open from 9 a.m. until 6:30 p.m.

The exhibit features the works of students of the Philadelphia Museum College of Art which is a degree-granting college for artists, designers, and teachers.

The Council exhibit features fifty pieces taken from the fields of illustration, advertising, photography, graphics, painting, and fashion illustration.

Arrangements for the exhibit have been made by the Cultural Affairs Committee of the Student Council, under the co-chairmanship of Bill DiPaolo and Al LaMastra.

The Council has brought the exhibit to the campus for the benefit of the Student Body and as a service to them.

The Council has set a precedent with this exhibit and hopes to continue bringing such exhibits to the university in an attempt to acquaint the Student body with cultural affairs of this sort.

Representing the Student Council, Charles Labus has commended Dr. George Radan for the generous co-operation given by him in this undertaking and for the genuine interest he has shown in the cultural undertakings of the Council.

Sports Pictures

Pictures will be taken on Thursday, December 7th of the members of the following teams who are not Seniors: basketball, baseball, bowling, intramural Council, swimming, hockey, lacrosse.

These pictures will be portraits. All are required to wear a dark jacket and tie. Pictures will be taken in the Photo Lab in the basement of Sullivan Hall from 10 a.m.—1 p.m. Those who do not appear will not have their pictures in the 1962 Belle Air.

Reassigned Executive Officer To Obtain Sea Billet Soon

Captain Claude R, Frazier, USN, of the Villanova NROTC unit "will miss Villanova" when he leaves the area next summer for a sea billet as yet unassigned.

While at Villanova, Captain Frazier studied graduate drama, and will be remembered for his leading role in "Our Town", and the parts he played in "Brothers Karamazov" and "Twelfth Night".

On October 1 he was promoted from the rank of Commander to Captain.

Captain Frazier

A graduate of Bowdoin College, Captain Frazier has a son in his alma mater and a son in Conestoga High School. The Captain's hobbies include golf and flying, and he is also a PIAA basketball official.

Impressed By Catholic Education

"This was the first time I was placed in the medium of Catholic Education, with which I am tremendously impressed", stated Captain Frazier. He also observed "Villanova has a discipline which is lacking in some other schools. The boys are respectful, their behavior is outstanding, and they seem to have a mature, sensible outlook as to their obligations and their futures. These, I believe, are reasons why the Navy gets along so well at Villanova."

Captain Frazier completed Naval Flight Training in 1941, and was a combat fighter pilot during World War II. He was awarded two distinguished Flying Crosses, three Air Medals, the Presidential Unit Citation, and Navy Commendation Medal. He has since served as Executive Officer of two fighter squadrons, Commanding Officer of Air Anti-Submarine Squadron 24, and Navigator of the USS FORRESTAL. In addition to these operational duties, he was graduated from the Naval War College, Newport, Rhode Island.

"I made many friends among the priests and lay teachers, and Villanova was a refreshing change from Navy life", stated the captain. "It made me feel as though I were not in the Navy, but was a chance to work and to study in an academic atmosphere—a chance most naval officers don't receive.

VU Band and Singers Host Rosemont Club At Christmas Concert

The annual Christmas Concert given by the Villanova Band, the Villanova Singers, and the Rosemont Glee Club has been tentatively set for the evening of Tuesday, December 12. The concert, announced Villanova Band President, Bill Diepenbrock, will be held in the Field House.

One piece, to be performed jointly by the Villanova Singers, the Rosemont Glee Club, and the special Villanova Brass Choir, making its initial appearance, will be Gabrielli's "In Ecclesis."

2nd Annual Campus Debating Tournament Finishes Final Plans

Terrence Stratman, President of the Beta Gamma Debate Society, has announced the selection of the club's final panel to compete in the December 9th tourney to be held in the Commerce and Finance Building. Those competing will be, John Callaghan, David Galie, Terrence Cooney, and Joseph Rohrer.

The topic for the debate this year will be "Should labor organizations come under the jurisdiction of anti-trust legislation?"

To date twenty-two acceptances have been received from colleges in Pennsylvania, and neighboring states. Time keepers at the tourney will be Villanova student nurses. General tournament chairman, Stratman, has expressed his club's aspirations of placing high in this year's competition, with the possibility of bettering their third place position of last year.

Future debates for the Beta Gamma Society include the Cherry Festival, largest debate contest of the year, to be held sometime in April at Washington, D. C. The society placed in the top fifteen in last year's competition there.

Quitters Never Lose

Chester Bowles, the nemesis within the Democratic Party, is again a thorn in the side of the administration.

Replaced as the number two man in the State Department, Bowles accepted an invitation to become Special Presidential Representative and Advisor on African, Latin American, and Asian affairs.

Bowles, acting in his new capacity, will report directly to President Kennedy and to Secretary of State Dean Rusk on policies concerning long-range planning and methods of improving U.S. status in the countries involved.

Of course, Bowles will be much better equipped for this position than he was in his former, because he has demonstrated tremendous aptitude in matters of policy.

However, the dissension between Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Bowles will not entirely be ...inated by this public show of "forgive-...ess." For President "Jack" still becomes red with embarrassment and flushed with anger when the Cuba fiasco is mentioned and the part Bowles assumed in publicly boasting his opposition to the abortive invasion into the infamous bay.

Now, President Kennedy knows how Caesar felt when he uttered, "Et tu Brute?"

And we, as American citizens, must enact the role of a man who regretted that he had one life to give for his country.

The most direct course of action to be pursued in this calamitous affair would be to release Bowles from all affiliation with the government. He was given an opportunity to prove his merit and demonstrated incapability. He was issued a vote of reliance and trust and returned it with undependability. There is no place in the U.S. government for a man of such vacillating character.

However, expulsion is quite an impossible solution; for the primary reason that Chester Bowles today, is receiving a salary from "Uncle Sam" is the important function he played in the 1960 presidential election.

But, to continue showering him with "created" positions because of rash campaign promises depreciates the people's faith in the administration and demonstrates to all that Bowles places a higher value on a "job" than on his personal integrity and the common good of the country.

Still, a note of optimism enters, for if the present trend continues before Chester Bowles is ever entirely erased from the political scene, MacArthur may become Commander of the Armies. After all the General said that he would return . . .

Counterpoint

Goldwater, The Conservative

by Joe McCarthy

Three men now stand in the political spot-light of the Republican Party in terms of the prospective candidate for the 1964 Presidency aspirations. Each have been mentioned at extreme length in the press.

These men have strong support in the various political arenas. Richard Nixon, the unsuccessful 1960 candidate has pledged himself to the California governorship, if elected, and positively stated that he does not consider himself as a candidate.

Nelson Rockefeller, has in the same vein, tremendously handicapped himself in recent weeks with the announcement of an impending divorce from his wife of 31 years. Both Nixon and Rockefeller have one thing in common, campaigns for governorship next year. If either should lose, he will be, for all practical purposes through.

Dramatic Guide

The other prospect for the Republican nomination is the junior senator from Arizona and the dramatic leader of the conservative movement in the United States, Barry M. Goldwater.

Goldwater is today riding the recent wave of conservatism on the many university and college campuses throughout the country. He is not faced with a 1962 election as are Nixon and Rockefeller.

A recent Gallup Poll shows that among those who can tell the difference in the American voting public: Conservatism 46%; Liberalism 41%; Undecided 13%. He has also gained the support of a ultra-right trend which might damage his chances. Goldwater is definitely right, but too talented a politician to be considered a far right extremist.

Favorable Survey

Another survey, conducted by the Washington newsletter, Human Events, reveals Goldwater running well ahead of Nixon and Rockefeller as the favorite of the delegates and alternates to the 1960 convention. The publication said that it received 1,360 answers to their inquiry or a return of about one half.

Thus, he is continuously bracketed as a leading possibility for his party's nomination. But, when questioned he candidly discounted the idea. "I expect to run for the Senate again. I like the Senate."

He is the most sought-after speaker in Congress. Last year alone he made over 400 speeches and has filled his speaking schedule through next July. He is also the most written-about man in Congress. Regularly, columns and articles appear in newspapers and magazines. One biography of Goldwater has already been published and two more are expected to follow soon.

Concrete Views

From the philosophical base of conservatism, he has spoken out on virtually every major issue confronting the United States. There is seldom any doubts as to where he stands. Many of his political proponents must have shuddered when he said, "Sometimes I think this country would be better off if we could just saw off the Eastern seaboard and let it float out to sea."

As a presidential candidate, this man deserves study. Goldwater has a number of gilt-edged political assets looks, an engaging, dramatic personality, an outstanding war record, an intelligent, versatile mind, driving energy, and popularity with his Senate colleagues.

He stands six feet tall and weighs a steady 185 pounds. Another characteristic is a habitual tan which accentuates his silvery hair. His eyes are blue and steadfast.

Fascination for Gadgets

His hobbies include golf, swimming, and hunting. He is also an amateur camera fan with a well-equipped dark-room in his luxurious home outside Phoenix. But his greatest fascination lies with gadgets, especially electronic gadgets.

Married in 1934 to a girl named Margaret Johnson, they have four children, the oldest 25 and youngest 16. Generally, Mr. and Mrs. Goldwater avoid the Washington social race as much as possible.

It seems unlikely and improbable that a decided Conservative

Crowds and Famine

In the short duration of our college careers, we have experienced many examples of crowds. The various genres of crowds include a sold-out Villanova versus West Chester football game in Goodreau Stadium, a varsity basketball game in the Field House, a meal-time crowd of 1,300 using facilities designed for one of 900, and a Pie Shoppe at 10:30 on Thursday crowd.

The Pie Shoppe at 10:30 on Thursday puts back the worry of being close. It is Villanova's version of a New York City subway at five o'clock. It is Times Square on New Year's Eve.

The stampede of the masses for the Pie Shoppe begins at the end of 9:30 classes. Its first wave comes from Vasey Hall, the Classroom Annex, and C&F. Villanovans storm from their classes and do a rare double time just to reach this haven of rest in time. The crowd swells. Chairs are quickly filled. Groups converge around tables. The coffee line forms. At this time, the second wave arrives. It comes from the Chemical Engineering Building, Tolentine, John Barry, and Mendel Halls. The capacity crowd surges to excess. Movement of any form approaches impossibility.

Recently, the Student Council, in an effort to remedy this malady, considered a motion to open the Day-Hop Cafeteria at 10:30, an hour earlier than the usual time. The motion was passed on and proposed to the management of the facilities. The management, however, declined this proposal and cited "economic" reasons. But in making this decision, it appears that the management had believed that its patrons had requested the use of the lunch counter in the Day-Hop Cafeteria also.

May we suggest that the partition separating the Pie Shoppe and the Day-Hop cafeteria be opened at 10:30 on Thursday and that the lunch counter remain closed as usual until 11:30. This would eliminate any increased demand for manpower in the kitchen. It would also provide the much-needed relief to the people-jam in the Pie Shoppe by giving access to the chairs and tables in the Cafeteria.

Radicals' Rise

The sudden rise of the Radical or "Rampageous Right" in the past several years is rapidly becoming a matter of concern for moderate politicians, both right and left of center. It is certainly becoming an issue that the whole public is becoming increasingly aware of.

Studies and observations made recently seem to have done little to discover the basic causes of this surge. The most that they have been able to do is to reveal that these extremists seem to be afraid of everything that is unknown to them, a category that would appear to include their own minds. Perhaps the wisest course of action would be to leave the analysis of the causes to competent psychiatrists.

Irregardless of what childhood traumas have created this new witchhunt, the fact remains that it does exist and is an annoying political headache. Both the moderately liberal Administration and what we prefer to call the intelligent conservatives are rapidly learning this.

The recent dilemma of the Administration involving E. A. Walker, reveals the education of the one side. A general of the U. S. Army by his own testimony was obviously deserving of prosecution for violation of regulations prohibiting the biased indoctrination of troops. But this course of action could only serve to further alienate a group of congressmen who have already hampered the President's legislative program. Only a stroke of luck and the general's resignation provided a graceful out for the Administration and allowed the general to retire quietly to dreams of martyrdom.

For Conservative Barry Goldwater, these extremists pose as a threat to his personal political ambitions. By their extreme and irresponsible statements and policies, they have antagonized a large portion of the majority they claim to despise and from whom Goldwater must gain favor. Any identification with these irrational conservatives can only hurt Goldwater's future. The time is approaching rapidly when he will have to

by Al LaMastra

This year, above all others, Hollywood has outdone itself. The producers of celluloid have concentrated their efforts on screenplays claimed to be moral indictments of the nation; or, if on a grand-scale budget, divinely inspired historical fact. In reality they have taught audiences the finer points of being upstanding, patriotic, all-American, moral degenerates; or, if on that same grand-scale budget, to ignore truths of proven authenticity. In many cases if the picture had been produced with sincerety and an attempt had been made to observe time-tested tradition, criticism would not be necessary; but when fallacy in production and content are exploited, for the benefit of the many, under the guise of A-1 products, then harsh evaluation becomes necessary.

To mention but a few flaws in the film weave, we have been shown the spiritual rewards of love in a corncrib, the virtues of climbing the ladder of success via the bosses' daughters, the idea that the Bible is a good book to read but not to consider seriously.

Fine Education

We are taught how to assault women and get away with it and how to cheat on aging crippled husbands and be happy in doing so.

We see that dumpling-cheeked Pollyannas, complete with acting stylized in Pollyanna's heyday, are to be enjoyed, that virginity is passé, and that parents are passive tools in the clutches of their all-knowing offspring. Obviously the addicted public is enjoying the problems of others, for box-office receipts are higher than ever.

Someone Pass the Scissors

KING OF KINGS — Jeffrey Hunter playing God a la Dr. Spock in the MGM version of the Bible is enough to incense even the most liberal of moviegoers. The Jews didn't do it, the Romans didn't do it, the crucifixion was a political stunt promoted by nonpartisan lobbyists in the local Sanhedrin.

BY LOVE POSSESSED — Lana Turner cheats on her thirtieth husband in her thirtieth pic. The James Cozzens novel has been mutilated beyond description in this glossy, Hollywoodized, sensationalized, confession-type small-town, shallowly-directed scandal. Lana, try character parts, i.e. Whistler's Mother, Wicked Witch of the West, etc.

TWO LOVES — Laurence "Letch" Harvey, acting like Francis X. Bushman, looking like Bela Lugosi, and speaking his lines like Fabian, tries to convince Shirley MacLaine that bedtime stories are not found in first grade primers.

WILD IN THE COUNTRY — Elvis is back and the twist has got him. Sporting a brand new page-boy and nose bob, he manages to grunt, groan, and scratch his way through 100 minutes of pure bathos, proving that the youth of today are the slobs of tomorrow.

SANCTUARY — If William Faulkner wrote the novel "for pocket money," 20th Century Fox produced the movie for the same reason. The moral of this badly written and miscast film is to sow your wheaties while you're young for all will be forgiven in the end. Lee Remick proves sanctuaries are for birds in this tale of Southern Discomfort.

THIEF OF BAGHDAD — Steve Reeves flexes his way through this Joseph E. Levine import which should be enough to resurrect Errol Flynn, Doug Fairbanks, and John Barrymore from the crypt for the sake of revenge. This is by far the crudest version of the Arabian tales. The main title should read: "Dubbed by a cast of thousands."

RETURN TO PEYTON PLACE — The sequel is a horrible example of how Hollywood can push a good thing too far. Everything is phony about this one, with more sown in the script than on the set.

PARRISH — Nicotine rising from Connecticut tobacco fields has definitely clouded the writing ability of Delmer Daves who, in trying to prove that American youth is neither beat nor lost, actually tells us that they are sullen, sadistic, and sex-obsessed.

BACK STREET — Susan Hayward, who has announced her forthcoming retirement from the screen, staggers through this one as if the Actor's Old Age Home and not the comforts of suburbia will be her final destination. Formula: Pretty clothes plus pretty technicolor equals dull actress. But authoress Fannie Hurst shouldn't cry yet because she has lots of novels ready for the Hollywood Butcher Shoppe.

TOWN WITHOUT PITY — Inept melodrama prevails in this Kirk Douglas starrer, which tells us capital punishment is okay for civilians but not for our poor, misunderstood, sometimes "rowdy" troops abroad.

ATLANTIS, THE LOST CONTINENT — One of George Pal's lesser efforts, in which his papier-mache kingdom comes crumbling down as it is carried away by the wildly racing current of the bath tub. Appropriate title: "Atlantis, The Dead Issue."

TAMMY TELL ME TRUE — Sandra Dee gives with the goga-go baby talk in this sugary, slushy sequel. Miss Dee speaks like Baby Snooks, roles her eyes like Eddie Cantor, and looks like a five day case of mumps in this cornmeal pie.

Bright futures in data transmission at W. E.

New engineers with initiative who can meet Western Electric's high standards are offered many exciting career opportunities with our company in data processing development work as it relates to communications.

For example, Western's engineers—working closely with Bell Telephone Laboratories—have solved development and manufacturing problems connected with the Bell System's new DATA-PHONE Data set (made by Western Electric). DATA-PHONE service lets business machines, such as computers, "speak" to each other in a language of numbers and symbols over existing telephone communication networks. This represents a tremendous boon to business; and consequently, it is estimated that some day there may be more machine talk than people talk using telephone lines.

Of course, data communications is only one of many rewarding career areas that await you at Western Electric. Here are just a few of the others: electronic switching . . . solid state electronic devices . . . microwave radio relay . . . computer-programmed production lines . . . solar cells . . . optical masers . . . futuristic telephones.

We need high-caliber, forward-thinking engineers now to help us transform these plans into realities or to work with us in scores of other key communications areas. Your future, the future of Western Electric, and the future of America's communications—could well depend on your first career connection.

Challenging opportunities exist now at Western Electric for electrical, mechanical, industrial, and chemical engineers, as well as physical science, liberal arts, and business majors. All qualified applicants will receive careful consideration for employment without regard to race, creed, color or national origin. For more information about Western Electric, write College Relations, Western Electric Company, Room 6106, 222 Broadway, New York 38, New York. And be sure to arrange for a Western Electric interview when our college representatives visit your campus.

Philadelphia Opera Produces Puccini's 'Madame Butterfly'

by Bob Lombardo

Giacomo Puccini, the master of little things, is the composer of an opera which has become the most popular opera ever written.

"Madame Butterfly," based on a play by the American dramatist John Luther Long, is one of the most poignant works ever written. It abounds in beauty semi-impressionistic melodies, and it is a story with plenty of drama and pathos.

The Philadelphia Grand Opera Company will stage this work on Thursday, December 14, 1961. The announced cast is a fine one. Elaine Malbin, young American soprano, will take the role of Cio-cio-san, as Butterfly is called in the opera.

Miss Malbin has sung with the NBC Opera Company, the New York City Center, and other leading companies in the United States. Outside of Madame Licia Albanese, a world famous Butterfly, I cannot think of another soprano so perfect for this particular role.

Small Voice

Barry Morell, a young tenor from New York, will sing the role of Pinkerton, Cio-cio-san's faithless husband. Mr. Morell has a small but clear voice. He knows his limitations and never have I heard him use his voice badly.

Frank Valentino, another Metropolitan singer, will take on the rather narrow role of the American Consul, Sharpless. Thelma Altman will sing the mezzo role of Suzuki, Butterfly's handmaiden.

All in all this promises to be a rewarding evening. Tickets for this performance are still available and range in price from $2.50 to $10.00.

Lyric Will Give "Manon Lescaut"

In keeping with the Grand's "Butterfly" the Philadelphia Lyric Opera will present Puccini's first successful work, "Manon Lescaut" on December 15. Dorothy Kirsten of the Metropolitan will sing the role of Manon. Miss Kirsten is a national favorite, and along with the Met she has sung with the Chicago Lyric Opera and the San Francisco Opera. She has sung extensively in Europe and South America.

Miss Kirsten is well known for her portrayal of Puccini heroines so this "Manon" should indeed be well worth hearing. Earlier this year it was this writer's good fortune to hear Miss Kirsten in another Puccini role, that of 'the Girl' in Puccini's western-opera, "La Fanciulla del West," which opened the Metropolitan Opera season.

Both Lyric and Dramatic

In the role of Des Grieux we have American tenor Richard Tucker. It seems that anything Mr. Tucker tackles turns out for the best. He is the only tenor alive today who can successfully sing both lyric and dramatic roles.

His voice is big, yet well controlled and natural. I am sure that his "Donna non vidi mai" and "Guardarte! Pazzo Io Son!" will bring the house down as they always do at the Met.

Tickets for all these performances are at the Academy of Music Box Office at Broad and Locust Sts. in Philadelphia.

JUNIORS PROVIDE JOHNNIES WITH EARLY CHRISTMAS!

Beginning the weekend Friday night was the Charity Ball which financed the Orphan's Party held Tuesday. Here the "Revelers" perform one of their numbers.

Many Eliminating Factors

Dr. Rofinot revealed that this number will be reduced to eight next and then to the five finalists. He stated that "the determining factors used in the eliminations will continue to include scores achieved in tests, aggressiveness, competitiveness, speed, and ability to get along with the other contestants."

The eight students who are chosen in the third phase of the eliminations will participate in practice sessions using a panel-buzzer system similar to the one which is used on the television contests. The panel was constructed by the Electrical Engineering Department.

Mr. Cushing stated that WWVU will broadcast the practice sessions slated for December 5, 7, and 12. These sessions will take place in the Dougherty Hall Lounges and will be open to members of the Student Body.

Faculty Aid Requested

Father President has requested "the cooperation of all Faculty members in helping them (the coaches) to prepare for the program by providing additional test questions, assisting in the administering of the tests, etc."

The five finalists, who will be chosen before the beginning of Christmas vacation, will return to Villanova on December 27. They will be housed on campus and "will work day and night," Dr. Rofinot said. The finalists and a coach will travel to New York City on January 6 and will lodge at the Biltmore Hotel.

lend the required money to the Freedom Forum. Debate went back and forth on the issue until Tate called for a straw vote on the issue. The vote was in favor of allocating the money, but was in no way official or binding on the Senate.

The big mixup occurred later when Parliamentarian Joe Massey requested a roll call vote on the allocation question. At this point parliamentary fur began to fly. A vote was called for to decide on the roll call after much discussion. Chairman Tate said that those in favor were in the majority, but his decision was questioned by McMonagle. A vote was required on this challenge to the chair.

McMonagle claimed that injustice had been done and finally the vote was counted by a show of hands. Most of the council were so confused by this time that the chair had to explain the issue being voted upon and what an "aye" or "nay" vote would mean. Finally, after a half hour of argument and confusion, the assembly permitted itself to go on record in what many consider an important matter. The result was 31-4½ in favor of appropriating the money.

Against the motion were Al LaMastra, Dan Grove, Joe Massey, Terry McStravick, John Ferrazanno, Tony Bateman, Isadore Cappozzoll, and Dan Peschio.

Trophy Awarded Villanova In Fisher Body Models Contest

Mr. Donald Brown will present a trophy to Villanova University at a ceremony honoring Robert L. Booth, Jr., sometime soon.

Booth, a student at Villanova from Westbury, New York, will receive the trophy on behalf of the school for honors won in the 1961 Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild model-car competition.

He won the senior division first place state award for New York and received $150.00. He also won the top regional honors for New York and received an expense-free trip to the Craftsman's Guild four-day convention held in Detroit.

Reward for Talent

The Fisher body program is designed to interest men in creative designing and craftsmanship and to offer them opportunities for their practice. Generous cash awards and university scholarships serve as powerful incentives for boys to enter its annual model car-building competitions.

Awards for the best models entered in the Guild competition include eight university scholarships for the national winners of the junior and senior divisions of the competition. In each age-group the awards will be: first, $5,000 scholarship; second, $4,000; third, $3,000; fourth, $2,000. In addition, ten $1,000 scholarships are awarded to boys showing exceptional designing ability.

Sons of General Motors employees (including dealers and their employees) are eligible to enter competition. Duplicate awards are made if the son of a GM employee wins. Competition ends June 8, 1962.

Rejects, 5N's Meet To Decide Intramural Football Champions

On December 6, the Intra-Mural Football season will come to a close as the 5n's and the Rejects clash.

In the Austin Field playoffs, Jody's Raiders defeated the Finks on November 28, 12-0, while the 5n's beat the Avonallinis by the same score on the 29. On November 30 the 5n's defeated Jody's Raiders by an impressive 18-0 score as Quarterback Bob Queen tossed two touchdown passes to Harry Mitchell and one to John Meakim. This victory gave the Austin Field title to the 5n's.

Rejects Win

Moving to Mendel Field, Sapienza's Raiders shutout Bravo Company 13-0 on November 28. In the other semifinal contest the Rejects blanked the Night Owls 12-0 on the 29th. For the Field title and the right to face the 5n's, the Rejects edged by the Raiders, 6-0. At the half the game was scoreless; yet, the Raiders led in the all important first downs 3-1. In the second half the Rejects began to move.

Following a Marty Whalen pass interception, Quarterback Rich Radziak skirted right end for a 40 yard touchdown run. The try for the extra points was missed. With eight minutes left to play in the game the Raiders were unable to move the ball against the rugged Reject defense. Nevertheless, the Rejects agreed that this was their toughest game in nearly two years.

New Eligibility Rule

There has been a new ruling made in regard to varsity players participating in intramural basketball. With the coaches' permission, each team will be permitted to have one varsity athlete on its roster. Ramsey used 11 men in the romp over the Bisons who somehow were rated a threat to the MAC crown. Backcourtmen Harry Booth, Jim Lyman, and Billy Hoy repeatedly forced the inexperienced Bucknell ball handlers into errors and when the Hawks didn't stop their pressing tactics, the Bisons just seemed to give up completely. The St. Joe fans, however, enjoyed every minute of it, probably because it helped them to forget a similar romp last Spring against that club from Columbus, Ohio in the NCAA.

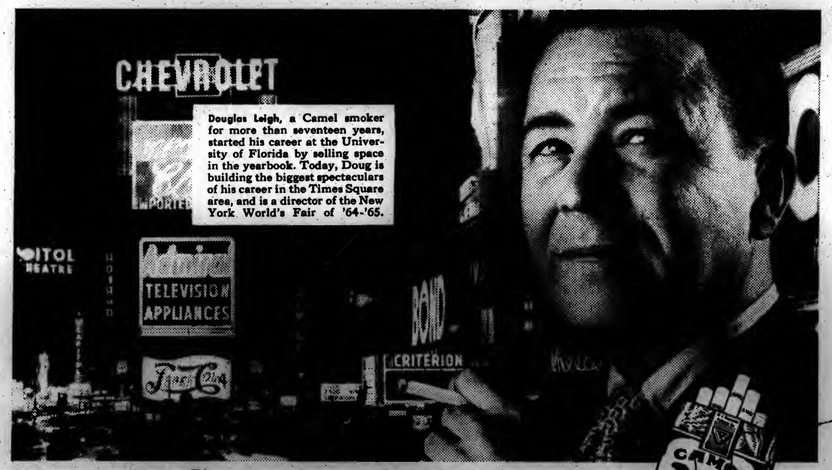
Career Cues



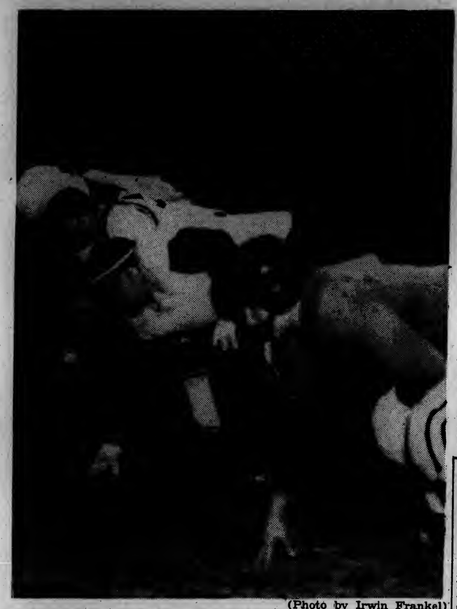
"Hitch your wagon to a 'growth' industry— and grow with it!"

Douglas Leigh, President
Douglas Leigh, Inc.

"A growth industry is a new industry that is on the way up — moving quickly, expanding fast. When you join a company in one of the growth fields you have something extra working for you . . . you grow up with it. To find out which industry is right for you, try this: Ask someone in a good investment office to give you a list of the industries he considers 'growth industries'. Data Processing, plastics, and electronics are a few examples. Then pick the one you have a leaning toward, and get the names of the most progressive companies in that field.

One thing I'd like to point out from my own career is . . . a growth industry may also be an old business that's on the verge of new development. Shortly after leaving college I found this situation in the Outdoor Advertising field. What my associates and I did was to employ color, action and motion to dramatically personify the product, brand or services being advertised. In doing so, we developed the modern type 'Spectaculars' that talked, blew smoke rings, soap bubbles, etc. . . . signs that changed the face of Broadway and the famous Times Square area.

This is just one example. The really important thing to remember is this: When you set your sights on a career, aim for an industry that is going to grow, so you can grow with it. It's the difference between a rocket that blasts off, and one that just sits there. Good luck!"



Douglas Leigh, a Camel smoker for more than seventeen years, started his career at the University of Florida by selling space in the yearbook. Today, Doug is building the biggest spectaculars of his career in the Times Square area, and is a director of the New York World's Fair of '64-'65.

Plan your pleasure ahead, too.

Grid Squad Prepares For December Trek To Texas Sun Bowl

This Christmas the Villanova varsity football team will have the opportunity to celebrate a Christmas south of the Mason-Dixon line by virtue of their invitation to the Sun Bowl in El Paso, Texas.

As a reward for completing a 7-2 season, the team will participate in the post-season bowl just across the border from Juarez, Mexico. Thus many local Wildcat supporters are planning to accompany the team on December 30, 1961.

The Wildcats have resumed practice for this engagement which will be with the University of Wichita, the Missouri Valley champions. Practice will cease on the twenty-third of December. The team leaves for El Paso on December 26.

Bowling Team Halts Hawks And Rams For Third And Fourth Win

Sweeping to their third and fourth successive victories in league play, the Villanova varsity Bowling squad moved into second place in the Philadelphia Division of the Eastern College Bowling Conference, with last Sunday's wins over St. Joseph's College, 2-1, and West Chester State, 3-0.

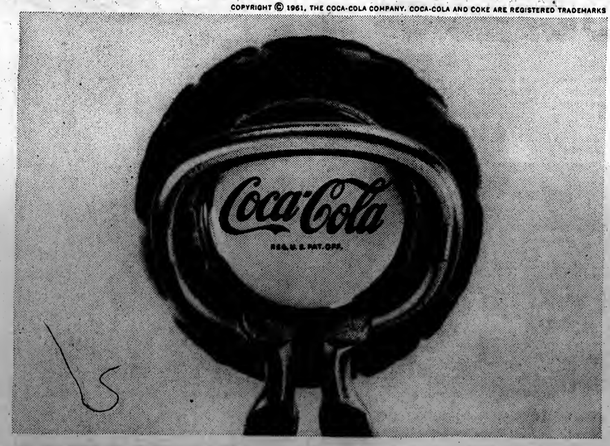
The Wildcats were led by the efforts of John McCarthy who posted a 236 single game and a 589 for three games. Charlie Murphy paced the St. Joe's squad with a 235 single and a strong 625 triple.

Previously the team had defeated Lafayette 2-1 and Lehigh 3-0 (by virtue of a forfeit). The Main Liners' record to date stands at 10-2 with first place La Salle leading with a perfect slate of 12-0.

Captain Sal Rico Vice-President of the League, commented that the second game with St. Joe's was extrmely tight with Villanova winning 903-902. West Chester, however, provided little difficulty as the Wildcats powered themselves to victory.

Rugby Squad Routs St. Joe's; Guinan, St. Onge Score 23

A strong Wildcat rugby squad raced to a 41-0 score while trampling a newly-organized St. Joseph's team in a match last Saturday.



Wildcat Richie Guinan paced the Villanova assault in scoring with seven out of nine conversion attempts for a total of 14 points. Luke St. Onge followed with three trys for nine points while Tom Kane and Frank Maguire each gained two trys apiece for six points.

Others joining in the scoring laurels were Captain Ralph Lewis and Harry Tucci, each with a try. The Villanova defense found no difficulty in containing the Hawk attack and continuously pressed their goalline.

The victory was the sixth for the 'Cats who have also lost three times and tied once. Next week the Wildcats sojourn to Baltimore to compete with the Baltimore Rugby Club at John Hopkins University Field.

Previously Baltimore succumbed to the Wildcats during Homecoming weekend but afterwards won the annual 7-a-Side Tournament in New York with little trouble. Captain Lewis commented that the game would really need a concerted effort for a Wildcat win.

'Round Mid Court

A Thin Wisp Of Reality

by Joe Zawacki

Dear Hubie,

I guess we've known each other about six years now and although we're not the closest of friends, I figure that we've gotten along pretty well together. And it's because I think as much of you as I do that I'm writing this open letter to you rather than talking it over with you alone. I know you'll realize that there's a good reason behind it and that I'm not just trying to "sound on you."

You see, you're about the only reliable entity the basketball team has this year and when I came down to the Palestra on Saturday night, I was expecting a lot of you in terms of this year. If I thought you were letting me down, I wouldn't bother mentioning it but I have to figure that you're letting yourself down, after the Scranton "game."

Three Foolish Things

Although Saturday's games were two large farces, quite a few things that happened set me to thinking. Three of them were things that you did. One was distressing, the second was foolish, and the third was more foolish.

Joe Zawacki

The first is perhaps something that you can't change at this late date, but it sure is a kick in the pants to see you fake your man out, drive, and then just when you're set for a layup, stop and "reach" with the ball, instead of laying it up for an easy deuce. Did you see George Saturday when he drove? With your talent, I have to figure that you're capable of that type of ball control.

The second thing was when you stole a ball in the first half and went for the basket with a man trailing you. Instead of laying it up you had to dunk it. Why? When you did, the guy clobbered you and came down flat on your back. Do you realize that you could have been seriously hurt and ruined what could be the best year of your career? Was it worth the risk of an injury just to give some fans who don't know any better a thrill? If they're that naive, let them go watch Wilt do those things. He hasn't brought the Warriors a championship yet.

Not Worth It

What made the third thing bad was not the fact that you missed that backward dunk in the second half, but that you even had the temerity to try it after that fall in the first half. I think you're smart enough to know that dunking the ball doesn't demoralize the opposition, despite what Joe Fan may think. You know as well as I do that if you try that against Don Nelson and that Iowa crew in the Holiday Tournament that they'll just laugh at you. Why take that chance of injury just for some clown in the stands who doesn't know any better? You remember what Al used to say about them.

The team needs you, Hubie, and you need yourself in top-notch shape. You've got to stop yourself from doing these things. It's two points when you lay it up. It doesn't have to be fancy. I've always given you credit for a lot of sense; for your sake, use it now.

Yours truly,
Joe Z.

The idiocy of the Big Five was never better exemplified than last Saturday night. Some 6000 plus fans paid their way into the Palestra to watch two mismatches that better belonged in the respective host school's field houses. Granted the fact that schools need "breathers" to open with, why saturate the Palestra schedule with comedies like Saturday?

A Bulletin reporter pointed out the utter irony of it last year when he noted that while our schools play the likes of Muhlenberg, Albright, Scranton, St. Francis, etc., the perennial powers (Kentucky, West Virginia, Cincinnati, St. Louis, etc.) are playing each other and sharpening for the opening of their leagues. What happens is that when tournament time comes around, the powers get the bids even though our players and coaching are equal to theirs. Consider, for example, St. Louis, with 12 bids in the last 14 years. Of course, the reporter was criticized as an enemy even though he is one of the Big Five's staunchest supporters.

Good Sportsmanship

NOTE TO THE FANS: No one can tell you to root for, or how to root, but consider the following. (1) A good play is a good play, no matter who makes it, and it is worthy of applause. (2) Every victory by a Big Five team reflects on your school and team as well as the Big Five itself. (3) Wouldn't it be a show of class to stand and greet our visiting opponents as they come onto the floor prior to a game, or when one of their players fouls out after a particularly fine game?

Be sure to watch the Frosh when they open their season next week. They've got two little guys named Ericson and Kenney who could very well be the best two all-around backcourtmen this school has seen in some time.

SPORTS Villanova

Villanova, St. Joseph's Open Seasons With Easy Victories

Villanova and St. Joseph's opened 1961-62 basketball campaigns Saturday night with easy victories over hapless Scranton and Bucknell.

The first of 29 Palestra dates drew a surprising turnout of 6712 for the twinbill which in the end gave little indication of the respective merits of the Hawk and Wildcat teams.

Strong Debut

The Main Liners won by 81-64, aided greatly by the 30 point debut of sophomore backcourtmen George Leftwich (16) and Wally Jones (14). Earlier in the week, Coach Jack Kraft had stated that he would like to see a 20 point spread in his debut and he would have gotten his wish had he not let up towards the end and substituted.

Such was not the case with Jack Ramsey of St. Joe's. Realizing that this year's edition of the Hawks is not as strong in height as last year, the successful mentor obviously is planning on using harassing tactics at the half-court stripe and before it.

However, with less than three minutes left in the game and St. Joe's leading by over 30 points, Ramsey refused to let up on a thoroughly beaten and disgraced Bucknell group. Despite the coach's obviously sincere intentions, the exhibition did earn the title of "bush" by more than a few observers.

Cats Breeze

After ties at six, eight, and ten, the Main Liners went ahead to stay and were never seriously threatened. After a few moments of understandable nervousness Leftwich put on a fine display of ball control in his drive toward the basket. The Cats made use of their height advantage, something they won't enjoy too often this year, and ran freely in the controlled fast break that Kraft hopes to use successfully in thwarting his lack of board strength.

Obie O'Brien gave good indication that he will serve well against men his own height and weight while adding twelve points on six buckets. Hubie White, Villanova's only returnee with experience, was high man with 19 points, on 7 for 21 from the floor and five fouls before fouling out himself.

If Jones and Leftwich improve with each game, they could team with White and run a few teams to the wire but their running will be predicated on their getting the ball off the boards and in fairness to McMonagle, Walsh, and O'Brien, it would seem proper to give them until January to

14th Place Finish Nets Vic Zwolak All-American Honor

Villanova's Vic Zwolak placed 14th in the NCAA Cross-Country Championships held in East Lansing, Michigan last week. The top fifteen finishers are automatically accorded All-American honors. Zwolak, a Sophomore, is the first Villanovan to receive such an award. Villanova finished 14th in the meet.

Oregon State, the champion 68 points, was led by Sophomore Gale Storey who ran the four mile grind in a credible 19:46.6 time despite a 32 degree temperature and a 20 mile per hour wind.

Zwolak, when asked if the weather affected his running, simply stated, "The other fellows had to run in it too".

Glueck, Cutroneo And Ross Take Awards At Annual Grid Banquet

Junior halfback, Larry Glueck, last Monday evening accepted the annual National Alumni Award as the "Most Valuable Player" on the bowl-bound Wildcat football squad.

The award was determined by a vote of the members of the team and presented by Frank Solis, President of theVillanova Alumni, at the 40th annual Football Banquet held in the Drake Hotel of Philadelphia.

Glueck led the team in rushing with 400 yards in 60 attempts for a 6.7 average, scored 50 points, and caught 19 passes. He has also been voted to the All-American Catholic team and voted All-East by the editors of Extension.

The annual presentation of the Martin J. McLaughlin Memorial plaque was awarded to team captain Richie Ross for his leadership and initiative as team leader. Ross had gained Second Team guard honors on the All-East team.

Selected by his teammates as "Most Consistent Performer," another junior, end Joe Cutroneo, was presented with the Cyril J. Burke Award. Each senior member of the team were also presented with an inscribed football tie clasp by the Villanova Club of Philadelphia, sponsors of the banquet.

The principal address of the evening was given by Harry A. Stuhldreher, Assistant to the Vice President of the U.S. Steel Corporation. Stuhldreher is a former Villanova coach between 1925 and 1935 when Villanova became a team of national prominence.

Cat Cagers Start Long Trek; To Face Tigers, Bufs, Eagles

Coach Jack Kraft's hardwood five starts tonight at Princeton and finishes up Saturday at Niagara in what might be the toughest road trip that the 'Cats will take all season. Opening at the home of the Ivy League champions tonight, the Mainliners will bus to Newark after the game from where they will fly to Buffalo for their game on Thursday. The team will stay over in Niagara Falls till Saturday night when they meet the powerful Purple Eagles. After three games in four days the 'Cats will return to friendly ground where they host Iowa State at the Villanova Field House.

Princeton Tigers

Princeton will field an experienced five led by all-Ivy Pete Campbell (19.1) who led the Ivies in scoring the past two seasons. Al Kaemmerlin, who grabbed 355 rebounds last year, Jack Whitehouse and Art Hyland are three other returnees who helped the Tigers compile an 18-8 record last season. Bill Hearlow and Rich Wright are fighting for the fifth spot on the starting club. Noted for their outside weave, ball control, and the good shot, Princeton with Don Swan the only graduate, will be a tough hurdle for the inexperienced Wildcats. To make the night longer, the game will be played at Dillon gym where the Tigers have a habit of winning. They downed Temple there last year.

The Wildcats will take on Buffalo Thursday night with revenge in mind. The Bulls, who averaged just over six feet in height last year, surprised the 'Cats, 63-62, at the Palestra. Buffalo lost their starting five by graduation and have just six lettermen returning. Junior Bill Hojohn, expected to lead the team this season, will be out with a knee injury. UB will have its problems with height but with good speed and hustle, the Bulls could be tough to beat on their home floor. Gerry Filipeki and Bill Fulton will be battling for one of the forward spots while Jim Krawczyk will handle the other. Bill McElvey and Nick Shosho will be at guard while Earl Thiele, the tallest man on the club at 6-4, will be playing at center. Villanova will have an advantage in height for one of the rare times during the season and should have its best chance for a victory at Buffalo.

Tallest Team In School's History

Niagara, showing strong in the NIT last season, will have the tallest team in the school's history and a definite advantage off the boards against the Main Liners. Luckily for Villanova, Al Butler graduated and Joe Maddrey, rebounding ace, will be ineligible until next semester due to scholastic difficulties. Ken Glenn at 6-5 averaged over 17 points a game last season and will be expected to team with Captain Ed Ladley in leading the scoring column. Sophomore Al Payne averaged 23 points a game for the freshmen last season and at 6-7 will be hard to handle under the boards. Veteran Andy O'Connell will serve as the Eagles' playmaker. Niagara stopped St. Bonaventure's home winning streak at 99 last year after having dropped a close one to the Wildcats. Villanova will be playing on one of the toughest courts in the country at Niagara before a partisan crowd, thus making a tough game tougher.

First At the Field House

Returning to the Mainline, the 'Cats will get a two day rest before hosting Iowa State at the Field House in the first of three campus games. State, 12-13 last year, has an experienced club and the height to give Villanova a few headaches. Bob Storey, 6-8, and Marv Straw, 6-4, will alternate at center, with Gary Wheeler, who averaged 13 points a game last year, and John Ptacek returning to the guard positions. Vinnie Brewer, State's high scorer two years ago, has rejoined the club this season. Gary Klevin, 6-5, and Dave Groth round out the returning letterman.

The Wildcats take on Fordham, St. Francis of Brooklyn, and St. Francis of Loretto the following week before the Quaker City Tournament on December 26.

Eight College Bowl Semi-Finalists Rehearse Under Show-Type Conditions

by Joe McCarthy

The second appearance within eight days of a Villanova group on national television will feature the acceptance of a invitation to the College Bowl sponsored by General Electric on January 7, 1962 in New York City.

Following the varsity football squad's contest for athletic accolades on December 30, four representatives of the university will vie for scholastic honors before a Sunday afternoon audience of millions against another team of four collegians from an unannounced college.

The number of candidates for positions on the team has been narrowed to nine in the past week. Eight of the prospective contestants have contended against each other on Radio Station WWVU of Villanova. Each program has been conducted under the actual existing conditions of the College Bowl itself.

Previous to diminishing the group to nine, there had been two other cuts, an original from 250 to 23 and then another from 23 to 12 quarterfinalists. One more final cut will determine the five who will travel to New York. The fifth man in the squad will act as an alternate in the event that some member of the other four can not appear.

Also accompaning the finalists to New York for the show will be one of the three coaches, Dr. Henry L. Rofinot, Mr. Henry B. Cushing, and Dr. Felix M. Beiduk.

Competing in the three radio programs were James T. Murphy, Freshman Chemical Engineer, Gerald A. Goulet, Sophomore Electrical Engineer, Lawrence J. Rosintowski, Sophomore Chemical Engineer, William D'Arcy, Sophomore Arts and Science, Peter A. Murphy, Sophomore C & F, Jerome F. Harvey, Junior Arts and Science, Gerald F. West, Junior Arts and Science, William D. Huttanus, Senior Arts and Science and Joseph A. Massey, Senior Political Science.

The five finalists will be selected before the beginning of the Christmas vacation and will return to the campus on December 27 for further practice and tutelage. From that date until their appearance, they will be recommended books and periodicals which should aid them on the program.

All expenses for the trip will be handled by General Electric. The Villanova team will stay in the Biltmore Hotel for the weekend. Rehersals for the program are scheduled for both Saturday January 6 and Sunday January 7.

Dr. Rofinot, Acting Chairman of the History and Political Science Department, disclosed that the five finalists will be selected on the basis of "scores achieved in tests, aggressiveness, competiveness, speed, and ability to get along with other contestants."

He also thanked the faculty for their assistance in providing questions and answers for testing the candidates. When questioned as to just how well the team can be expected to do on the program, he commented, "I think that they will do creditably. They all deserve a lot of thanks for many sacrifices of time and study, and for their very cooperative attitude."

Art Exhibit Fails To Excite Unimpressed Culture Seekers

by Jan Dyroff

Culture came to Villanova. Last week the Cultural Affairs Committee of the Student Council presented an exhibition of art by the students of the Philadelphia Museum College of Art.

Culture was seen by Villanova. Being more unfortunate than the usual run of "veni, vedi, vici," it is doubtful if culture, this time in the form of art, made too much of an impression at Villanova, much less than a conquest.

Watching the people viewing the works was nearly as engrossing as the works themselves. Giggles, grins, and wisecracks were predominant. Apparently reading is not one of the talents of Villanova's art critics. Maybe they thought the ubiquitous "Please Do Not Touch!" signs were just another offering for their pleasure. But if some good was gained and some of the Pie Shoppe hangers-on do gain a small amount of appreciation for "the finer things in life," then all was not lost.

General Criticism

A general aura of pointlessness and shallowness of meaning was the general criticism of the show. There was one piece, on the abstract side, with something that seemed to be a little brown jug in the middle. Characteristics such as this justify the criticism.

The whole exhibit was divided into seven sections; painting, drawing, graphics, fashion illustrations, illustrations, advertising, and photography.

The illustrations division was the best. It made up in clarity and depth what was lacking in the rest. Two untitled works stood out above the rest. The first was a scene of primitive aviation by R. B. Dance, and the second was a war scene of Negro soldiers in a blue composition by William Campbell.

To All Villanovans:

May the Blessings of the Christmas Time be enjoyed by all of you this year!

Our peaceful enjoyment of this time is marred somewhat by the cloud that looms over the horizon, threatening to enslave the entire world in the servitude of atheistic communism. But we want no enslavement; we want freedom. When we are young, it may seem that freedom is found in the absence of all restraint, and so we rebel at restraint. But Our Divine Saviour in his coming at the first Christmas gives graphic illustration of the truth that the highest freedom is found in subjecting ourselves to the truth and love of Almighty God. For it is His truth and His love that will make us free—free from sin and error and fear.

May each Villanovan find this precious freedom at the feet of the Blessed Madonna and Child this Christmas and always.

Sincerely yours,
Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA

Penn, Scranton, Villanova Place In Debate Tournament

The University of Pennsylvania took first honors in the Second Annual Villanova Debate Tournament, held last weekend. Second and third place trophies were awarded to Scranton University and Villanova University respectively. The distribution of the trophies was conducted by the Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, who announced to an audience of 160 spectators and visitors that he was very favorably impressed by the tournament and particularly by the performance of the participating teams.

Mr. James McDonough, faculty advisor and coach, expressed his great satisfaction and pleasure at the team representing Villanova, and indicated his hopes that "this most successful tournament" would be the beginning of a long and substantial tradition at the University.

Topic for discussion was the National College Debating Topic: "Be it resolved that Labor Unions should come under the jurisdiction of federal labor laws." Each school had an affirmative and a negative team, each consisting of two members. Joe Rohrer and Terry Cooney were the affirmative team for Villanova, while Dave Galie and John Callahan spoke for the negative.

The tournament, begun last year, has greatly increased in size and importance. This year there were delegations from schools in New York, Delaware, West Virginia, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. A few of the schools represented were: Penn State, Rutgers, The University of Pennsylvania, Swarthmore; Gettysburg, Ursinus, Franklin and Marshall, Lehigh, Hunter College, The University of Delaware, Temple, Rosemont and Wilkes.

The main purpose of the Beta Gamma debating society, in organizing the annual event, is to provide an opportunity for forensic competition among colleges and universities. Society President Terry Stratman says, "It is hoped that this annual tournament will become one of the important and significant in the East." Future plans for expansion indicate that an entire weekend will be devoted to this activity, instead of the one day it now encompasses.

Awarding of Trophies

The tournament, consisting of three rounds, started at 10:30 Saturday morning. Trophies were awarded after the final round, at 4:30.

Terry Cooney, Secretary-Treasurer, said "From the comments of the attending teams, the Second Annual Villanova Debating Tournament appears a complete success. This further encourages us in our destination to make the Villanova tournament one of the top debating tournaments."

Professor Hans Kohn Delivers Lecture On Germanism, Slavism

Tuesday afternoon in Dougherty Hall the History and Political Science Department sponsored its first major lecture of the fall semester.

Professor Hans Kohn of City College of New York (City University of New York) addressed the student body on "The Struggle for Central Eastern Europe (Pan Germanism and Pan Slavism)."

Very Reverend James A. Donnellon, OSA, Provincial of the Augustinian Province of St. Thomas of Villanova, presents Decree of Affiliation in the Augustinian Order to Mrs. Frances E. Haag of Greenwich, Connecticut. This Decree of Affiliation is extremely rare. Richard Cardinal Cushing is the only person in this country similarly honored. Presented for zeal and assistance to the Order, the Decree entitles the recipient to participate in the same spiritual benefits received by regular members of the Order.

Reimel Moot Court Finals Host Distinguished Judges

The final argument in the annual Reimel Moot was held in the courtroom of Garey Hall at 8 p.m. on Thursday evening, December 7. The final argument was the match of two teams, survivors of a series of moot court debates between teams entered by each of the eight law clubs at the School of Law.

The bench sitting to hear this year's culminating debate was a distinguished one, presided over by the Honorable John Biggs, Jr., Chief Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Judicial Circuit. Presiding as associate judges were the Honorable Arthur S. Lane, Judge of the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey, and the Honorable Gerald F. Flood of the Superior Court of Pennsylvania.

Winning Team

The case argued this year was of contemporary interest. Basically the fact situation involved a reverse twist of the "Silver Platter Doctrine." Defendant was convicted in a state criminal trial; the keystone of the prosecution's case was a confession secured by federal officers during what might amount to an unlawful detention under federal law. If the detention were federally unlawful, the problem remained whether this afforded any grounds to exclude its use before a state tribunal. Fraught with the brooding omnipresence of fair play and substantial justice, and yet complex with practical details, the arguments were most interesting.

Campus Critics Chide Shallow Art Showings

graphics bogged down in a sea of attempted modernistic mire. However, an aggregation of indeterminate forms on canvas by Frances Boyer was outstanding. This and "The Lonely Tree" by Joseph Ruggerio were the saving factors in what would have been an otherwise unoutstanding section of the collection.

Madison Avenue should have come to view the advertising section. This group was a refreshing insight into what the spots and full page spreads of the future could be like if the mass media boys would concentrate on quality rather than quantity. As for fashion illustrations, what can you say? Drawings of women in nighties are drawings of women in nighties no matter where you go.

Nothing Risque

Photography lined one wall and there was a general feeling of being "let down" in that nothing "risque" was exhibited. No overt concentration on sex, no ladies reclining on grassy plots, and no shots of the ridiculously-posed angle were to be seen, just sensible photography.

It is very easy to sit on a sofa chair in the lounge of Dougherty Hall and criticize the work of others. One wonders how the simpering critics of the exhibition, those who ridicule for the sake of ridicule, would do if they were given a chance to exhibit works of their own? Would they be the contributors to the hypothetical Villanova Exhibition of Art? Or would they be those whose attitudes would keep the hypothetical contest hypothetical?

Christmas Readings

Dr. Joseph C. Reino, Assistant Professor of English, will present a program of "Readings for Christmas" on WFIL-TV, Channel Six, Wednesday, December 20, from 11:30 a.m. to 12:00 noon.

Dr. Reino has given two programs of Christmas readings in past years, and taught three television series of sixteen lectures on the subject of modern poetry.

WWVU Scores First In Area With Series On WDAS-Radio

Villanova's Radio Station WWVU, along with Temple's, has been selected by Radio Station WDAS to produce a half-hour educational series entitled "University Forum". On alternate Sundays between 6:00 and 6:30 p.m. WWVU will present some facet of campus life.

The half-hour series is presented in conjunction with the New York Times educational network QXR. Through the QXR network WWVU will reach some nineteen stations along the east coast.

Campus Life

Since October WWVU has highlighted campus life through the Glee club and Peace Corps movement on campus for the series University Forum. On Sunday, December 10, the emphasis was on dramatics and a scene from the Belle Masque's production of "Detective Story" was presented.

Christmas Program

Today Radio Station WWVU will present a special Christmas program from 2 o'clock until 11 o'clock. Besides the many standard Christmas songs and carols, the Villanova and Chestnut Hill Glee Clubs will be featured.

As another added attraction, all home and away games will be covered, except during Christmas. This has been made possible through the auspices of WWVU's News & Sports Dept. The lounges of Dougherty Hall will be open to students and faculty on campus who cannot attend the game.

WWVU Mgr. O'Mara Gains Director Post Of Regional Network

The regional convention for the member radio stations of the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System was held at Villanova on Saturday, December 9. WWVU station manager Dan O'Mara was elected director for the Middle Atlantic Region of the IBS network.

Richard H. Crompton, president and treasurer of IBS, Charles E. Quigley, vice-president and FM advisor, attended along with Dr. Charles B. Smith, faculty director for WWVU. The principal speaker, William Spry, gave a talk on FM stereo multiplex.

Chemical Society Holds Chem Carnival For High Schoolers

Villanova's active Student Affiliate of the American Chemical Society hosted high school students from the Philadelphia area at the Villanova Chemistry Carnival on Saturday, December 9.

Undergraduates and graduate students held demonstrations and lectures to show the future chemistry students what lies in store for them in the line of higher studies. Student guides took the prospective Villanovans for a tour of Mendel Hall, highlighting the modern aspects of Villanova University's science facilities.

Upcoming Lecture

Dr. Dominic M. Roberti, moderator of the Society, announced the completion of plans for a lecture on January 9 in conjunction with the current series of guest speakers. The January affair will feature Dr. Sallie Fisher on "The Role of the Chemist in Civil Defense." All members of the faculty and student body are cordially invited to attend.

Dr. Mulligan To Act As Liasion Officer

The Office of the President has given approval that Dr. John J. Mulligan of the Department of Modern Languages serve as Liason Officer for the Selection Officer of the Fourth Marine Corps Reserve District.

In this capacity Dr. Mulligan will give information and counsel to students on the various programs available which lead to a commission in the Marine Corps (Reserve).

Interested students may contact Dr. Mulligan in the Modern Language Office, Vasey Hall, Mondays, 10:30 to 11:15 and Wednesdays, 10:30 to 11:15 or by making an appointment.

Maxim Man Makes Mark

Extra-scholastic activities tend to effect a closer union between a student and his Alma Mater. A firm believer of this time-proven maxim is Chuck Kelly, president of the comparatively new Blue Key.

Kelly played a vital part in the establishment of the incipient organization and has worked with and for it ever since. A senior now, he has been president of Blue Key for the past two years of its three-year existence. The purpose of Blue Key is to assist visitors to the campus with directions, information, and anything else geared to making their visit both pleasant and rewarding.

With WWVU

A native of Buffalo, New York, Kelly has been actively associated with campus radio station WWVU for three years. Last week he took part in a precedent here at the University. In collaboration with fellow announcer Pete Nolan he began the current series of live broadcasts of the Villanova away basketball games. His regular show is the Sunday night "Digest," WWVU's answer to NBC's "Monitor."

A sincere advocate of extra-curricular activities as the best means to "rounding out the student," this PreLaw major has been closely allied to numerous campus activities. As a sophomore, he was Co-Chairman of the Soph Cotillion, as well as Secretary of the Sailing Club. And for two years he was a member of the Spirit Committee and the Pre-Law Society.

Two Possibilities

Upon graduation two roads lie open to him: he may attend O.C.S. school, or he may be employed in an executive training program with a major bank in Buffalo.

Returning to Blue Key, Kelly said, "It could become one of the finer organizations on campus, as far as relations of the student body to outsiders are concerned. It has already gained for itself a fine reputation."

Antique Biblical Painting Hangs In University Library

One of the more fascinating paintings that adorns the walls of the Villanova Library is that of David and Goliath, painted some three hundred and seventy years ago, by the Italian artist Pietro da Cortona.

The painting, a representation of David being presented to King Saul by Abnec (captain of the Israelite army) with the head of the Philistine Goliath, is from the Old Testament.

The painter Pietro da Cortona, born in Cortona, Italy, November 1, 1596, was of the Roman school.

The painting itself measures twelve by twenty feet and was presented to the University in 1950 by Prince and Princess Alexis Droutzkoy.

Other paintings of equal interest with equal history, hang in the library and it is hoped that the student body will take advantage of viewing these for themselves.

Reports, Projects Are Subjects Of Second Soph Class Meeting

Preliminary ideas for a spring class project highlighted the sophomore class meeting held last Thursday morning.

Opened with a prayer by Rev. Michael Gallagher, OSA, class moderator, the meeting was conducted by Marty McGuinn, class president.

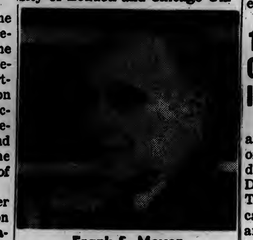
McGuinn then presented the idea of a spring project to the class. Among the suggestions offered were that of an on-campus picnic for underprivileged children and a carnival which would be held in the stadium. Neither of these activities would be profit making, but would have as its purpose the bringing together of the class.

The project idea will be discussed at a future class meeting.

DeWit Distinguishes Freudian Symbolism And Psychic Signs

Jack Weed, president of the Villanova Psychology Club, reported that on December 6 the club was addressed by Mr. DeWit of the Psychology Department. Mr. DeWit's address on "Freudian Symbolism," his doctorial thesis, distinguished between the idea of symbolism and sign, and the relation to the meaning and association of words.

Weed stated that on December 12, the club took an excursion to the University of Pennsylvania to visit the psychological experimental laboratories on campus.



Future plans for the club, Weed stated, will include an address by Dr. S. Asch on December 14. Dr. Asch is a world renowned experimental social psychologist teaching at Swarthmore College, and his address will be on "Independence and Conformity." Those interested in attending are urged to be at the center lounge of Dougherty Hall at 10:30 p.m., December 14.

Frank S. Meyer To Speak On 'The Reality Of Communism'

Frank S. Meyer, former Communist Party member and presently Senior Editor of NATIONAL REVIEW MAGAZINE, will speak Thursday night on "The Reality of Communism: the Illusion of Coexistence." The lecture, jointly sponsored by the Villanova Student Council and the Freedom Forum, will be held in Vasey Hall auditorium at 7:30 p.m. An unrestricted question and answer period will immediately follow the lecture.

Mr. Meyer will place particular emphasis on the almost universal misunderstanding of the world-enslavement goals of Communism, and will attempt to give a complete analysis of the strategy and tactics which Communist leaders have so successfully used in the past several decades.

Mr. Meyer was educated at Princeton and Harvard Universities, and did extensive graduate work at the University of London and Chicago University. It was during his under-graduate years that he became influenced by the Communist philosophy. One of his principle functions as a Communist was teaching doctrine and theory at the party school in New York City. Formally joining the party just prior to his tour of active duty in the United States Army during World War II, he withdrew from all association with the Communists after the war.

Frank S. Meyer

For the last decade, Frank S. Meyer has been an outstanding crusader against Communism. Besides his NATIONAL REVIEW col umn. "Principles and Heresies", he is the author of the authorative book "Moulding of Communists", and his latest work is "In Defense of Freedom: A Conservative Credo", which will be published this January. He has lectured at the National War College, Yale, Notre Dame, Oxford, Cambridge and has made numerous radio and television appearances.

Offered Lectures, Trips

This semester the Freedom Forum has offered lectures, literature campaigns, motion pictures, and a seminar at University of Pennsylvania. A continuance of the same plans are anticipated for next semester with the addition of field trips, rallies, and distinguished speakers.

100% For Law School On Bar Examinations In Surrounding States

Results for all of the Bar Examinations in which the School of Law of Villanova entered candidates have been announced by Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein. This year the School of Law had candidates who took the Bar Examinations in the following jurisdictions: District of Columbia, Delaware, Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.

All of the out-of-state candidates were successful, thus giving Villanova a 100% record in the five out-of-state jurisdictions. In Pennsylvania, with a much larger sample, results were still above average. The passing rate for candidates taking the examination for the first time was 78.3% or about 13% above the average for the state.

The Honest Student

This is to be our last issue before Christmas. In keeping with tradition and our own desire, we sincerely extend to you our wishes for a holy and a merry holiday season.

Before rushing home to post office routes and last minute shopping, we'd like to offer a thought for your consideration. We hope that you will take a minute to think about it over the holidays.

There is an area of student life here at Villanova that is in critical need of improvement. It has to do with the amount of trust that is placed in us and the degree to which we can be counted on to be trustworthy.

The fact that the University trusts us in few of our own affairs became acutely apparent to all of us shortly after our arrival here. The restrictions in the library and the regulations in the classroom, dining hall, and evening chapel showed this to us all too clearly.

It is more clearly evident that the real cause of these inconveniences is ourselves. It cannot be denied that each of us in some way has helped this to come about. The amount of money lost because of student theft and malicious destruction would have increased greatly if these steps had not been taken. There is no need to speculate what academic honesty would have been like. Our lack of trustworthiness has probably caused the failure of a practical solution to the recreation problem here on campus.

The question that occurs to us is, why must this situation continue to exist when it is obviously painful and annoying to both parties? Is this to become a part of the Villanova tradition that is to be our legacy to the school?

Answers to these and to other similar questions can be found. A solution to this situation must be found if Villanova is to be great as we want it to be. We believe that it can and must be done. Traditions of honesty and trust are built slowly but a start on a definite course towards this must be made.

This first step must necessarily be twofold. First we, the students here, must realize that the existence of this distrust only hurts us. We must make up our minds to take the initiative and do something about it.

Second, the Administration must be called upon to give us an area of student life where we can prove our ability to accept trust. We realize that originally it must be an area where the University won't be hurt too badly if we fail again. But it must also be an area that is important enough to us to make our efforts seem worthwhile.

As a suggestion, we might take attendence at evening chapel. Perhaps if the Administration put us on our honor to attend, we could show that we do care and can be trusted. Or maybe we could use the dining hall or the classroom for our pilot project. Let's find and use any area we can to get the ball rolling.

To the Editorial Board of the Villanovan:

Sharing your dislikes for the radical right, particularly the John Birch Society, I must nevertheless take issue with your editorial concerning the current controversy over civilian supremacy "On the Military "(November 29).

After correctly stating the issue involved, that of the role of military personnel in politics, you choose to ignore it, devoting the majority of the editorial to irrelevant points and erroneous statements which constitute a gross extrapolation of fact.

The parallel which you draw between France and the United States has absolutely no basis. General Walker's methods cannot be condoned, but all intelligent commentary concerning the controversy proves that his intention was not to overthrow our present form of government, but to preserve it. The investigation conducted by Lieutenant General Frederick J. Brown shows clearly that Walker's action was public and individual. It was not clandestine, nor was it organizational.

At this time there is no evidence to justify the generalization that "many of those in the armed forces" are active in subversive movements.

Membership in the John Birch Society is not forbidden to military personnel and no military leaders have been "stripped of their patriotic, solemn demeanor" simply because they were members of this organization. General Walker was censured because he had violated Army regulations which forbid officers from engaging in partisan politics, not because he was a member of a right-wing group. Feeling that his personal convictions were incompatible with professional duty, he voluntarily resigned his commission.

Major P. A. del Valle, a retired military officer, is a private citizen and as such he may advocate whatever he please without violating Army regulations or the Hatch Act. His statements have no bearing on the issue of civilian supremacy and are therefore irrelevant to the topic of the editorial.

Former President Eisenhower did discuss the military-industrial alliance in his farewell speech, but he did not make any statements concerning the principle of civilian supremacy as it is interpreted in the present controversy. Therefore, any reference to this address is also irrelevant.

If Mr. Eisenhower may be mentioned at all, it must be in defense of General Walker. A directive issued by the President in 1958 urged military leaders to alert their men to the Communist menace. Influenced by this directive, and faced with the problem of maintaining morale among his troops in Germany, Walker understandably felt the need for an indoctrination program. Unfortuantely, his program turned out to be right-wing.

General Walker's actions may not be justified, but his well-intentioned, dedicated patriotism cannot be denied. As one of the finest military men of our day he deserves a better fate than to be labeled "war-mongering would-be politician" and to be accused of having "utter lack of confidence in this Country". Just as General Walker had no right to engage in partisan politics, the VILLANOVAN has no right to use the issue as a whipping post for far right conservativism, nor to condemn our entire military establishment on the basis of the indiscretion of one man.

Right Wing Acts

Two weeks ago the Student Senate allocated $125 to the Freedom Forum. This grant made it possible for that organization to bring Mr. Frank S. Meyer, a noted protagonist of Communism and the Senior Editor of the NATIONAL REVIEW, to Villanova.

Some students objected to this allocation of funds to bring another "right wing" speaker to a campus that has been exposed to the Conservative view almost to the point of saturation. They argue that an equal balance of conservative and liberal orators should be presented to the student body. This point is well taken, but a fallacy can be detected in their objection to the Student Council's approval of another "right winger."

What the Council has actually done is set a precedent. It has aided an active campus anti-communist group. The question before them was, "should we give money to a group that wants to bring a speaker to this campus?" Their answer was yes; they did not feel it necessary to quibble about the speaker's political convictions.

This decision seems to be based on the reasoning, "Why deny aid to an organization because it has been labeled right wing?" This sort of philosophy should make the campus liberals hang their heads in shame. It is sound and equitable, for now if the sleeping giant called liberalism that is supposed to be residing somewhere in this school, wakes up, it will realize that it too can have it's voice heard in some other tone than that of a negative dissenter. Instead of complaining, it can organize and solicit funds from the Student Council as their long lost brothers did. For now the precedent is set and aid will be available.

If the sleeping giant doesn't awaken then two conclusions can be drawn: either he doesn't exist, or he doesn't care. The first conclusion is false, the second . . . .

Crisis On The Hill

It seems to be quite evident that Representative John W. McCormick, of Massachussetts, shall be the next Speaker of the House. McCormick, who is not a New Frontier Democrat, has not received any disapproval from the White House, as was expected. Rather, it seems that he is to be accepted as the logical choice.

McCormick, in becoming Speaker, shall vacate the position of House Majority Leader. This post is of extreme importance at this time. The Speaker of the House is second in succession to the Presidency, and the new Speaker is seventy years old. This seems to indicate that he shall not be Speaker very long.

Now is the time for the Party leaders to develop potential future Speakers. They can do this grooming through the position of House Majority Leader and Party Whip.

What is being done?

The position of House Majority Leader is contested by two men: Representative Carl Albert of Oklahoma, the present party whip and leading candidate; and Representative Richard Bolling, of Missouri. Both men gave the administration's legislative program better than ninety percent support last year, but neither of the representatives is a New Frontier Democrat. The White House, thus far, has remained neutral on the two candidates.

To date, the only announced candidate for the position of party whip is Representative Hale Boggs of Louisiana, who is not of the New Frontier. It is the party whip position which is chiefly responsible for rounding up support for voting on bills that the party is pushing, and it is this position which would seem to be the most of interest to the White House.

It does not seem probable that President Kennedy will be able to successfully carry out his legislative programs without some backing from the party hierarchy in Congress. He has failed to influence the probable choice of majority leader. He has failed to influence the choice of Speaker. He cannot fail to influence the choice of party whip and still hope to have a largely successful legislative program.

In the long range, even more important, if he does not secure a voice among the party hierarchy in the House, Kennedy shall not have a voice in the selection of a successor to McCormick. This is suicide.

Spuckeye-ism

A Modest Proposal

by Joe McCarthy

The request for constructive, practical criticism has often been uttered by the authorities of this university.

It is in this vein that the following proposal for final examinations is offered. Most students at Villanova can readily recall the rancor aroused among members of the student body during the second semester last year concerning a proposed change in final examination procedure.

Many felt that the plan would be a poor replacement for the one in use. The plan was subsequently withdrawn.

The students object to the new proposal of last spring because it would be quite possible to end up with as many as four examinations a day. In the event of the acceptance of this plan, there would be little change in the procedure which the student now has to follow. There would be, in fact, more time left for study.

There is only one real objection raised against this proposal. It takes a little thought to understand it unless fully explained.

The suggestion originally came from Dr. Edwin Stack, former Chairman of the Modern Languages Department.

Basic Four Points

Four essential points must be made to clarify the diagram. 1.) Students are guided by the first class meeting of each course during the week in the examination schedule. 2.) Examinations are held in the regular classrooms. 3.) Examinations are scheduled for the customary three-hour period. 4.) Nine days are needed for a complete schedule as in the scale-drawing.

The last day, Friday, is not used.

For example, young student Astorick Specklewhat finds that his Monday schedule includes Religion at 9:30, Mathematics at 10:30, Worm Eating at 12:30 and Pinochle at 3:30. A glance at the examination schedule shows him that he will have his finals in Religion and Mathematics on Tuesday and Wednesday of the first week at 9:00 in the morning. He also sees that his finals in Worm Eating and Pinochle are going to be held on Monday and Thursday during the morning of the second week, as denoted by checks on the diagram in the middle of the column.

On Tuesday we find our young hero with three classes. At 8:30 he has a course in Ichthyology at 10:30 a mathematics commitment, and at 11:30 he wraps up his red apple in tissue for teacher while studying about Sordid Stitches.

EXAM WEEK I

	MON.	TUES.	WEDS.	THURS.	FRI.
Morning Exam 9 AM	MON. 8:30	MON. 9:30 ✓	MON. 10:30 ✓	MON. 11:30	Wed. Morning Classes
Afternoon Exam 1:30 PM	TUES. 3:30	TUES. 2.30	TUES. 1:30	TUES. 12:30	TUES. 11:30 ×

EXAM WEEK II

Morning Exam 9 AM	MON. 12:30 ✓	MON. 1:30	MON. 2:30	MON. 3:30 ✓
Afternoon Exam 1:30 PM	TUES. 10:30	TUES. 9:30	TUES. 8:30 ×	Wednesday Afternoon Classes

According to the diagram, he will be tested in Ichthyology on Wednesday of the second week. Since the first class meeting for Mathematics has previously been and the time of that meeting determines his examination date and time, he need only find when his Sordid Stitches examination is held. After locating "Tues. 11:30" in the boxes, he notes that he will take the test on Friday afternoon of the first week. The Tuesday exams are denoted by cross marks.

No Difficulty

We see, therefore, that six examinations have been taken by a student with no difficulty. The system is workable with each student's individual schedule.

Times have even been set aside for classes which might possibly occur on Wednesday for the first time during the week. Whether or not this schedule ever becomes a reality depends upon the same students who objected so strenuously to the other.

Bill DiPaolo and Penny Tormos enact a scene fraught with emotion during the Belle Masque production of "Detective Story" last week.

Belle Masque's Opener Impressive

by Dan Martin and Tom O'Connor

Last weekend Belle Masque sented its first offering of the school year, a 1949 play by Sidney Kingsley entitled Detective Story. By 1961 the play has lost some of its impact, for television has mass produced the character types which are realistically presented by Kingsley. Nevertheless, the play was notably impressive and engaging, if not particularly memorable.

Kingsley, who studied police work for a year before writing the play, took the humdrum of a New York police precinct headquarters as background for a psychological study of several of the older character one is Detective McLeod, a man driven by a consumptive urge stemming from the cruelty of his father, to personally adjudicate evil-doers. His vengence is especially directed at a fake surgeon, Kurt Schneider, who has previously been acquitted of abortion charges.

McLeod's world builds about him climatically until he is confronted with the fact that his young wife was operated on by Schneider. His bitter disillusionment is only modified by his need for her love. In a highly emotional sequence where McLeod is torn between love and his inherited malice, she determines to leave him. The action closes with an inane gunfight. McLeod is shot, and performs a final act of charity in releasing a young prisoner he treated harshly. The ending is melodramatic as he dies with an Act of Contrition on his lips.

DiPaolo as McLeod

"McLeod" was presented with sincere feeling and identification by Bill DiPaolo despite occasional lapses of quality during some emotional sequences. He showed more ability to put across the bad side of McLeod's nature than the good, which resulted in the closing sequence emerging as somewhat superficial.

Miss Penny Tormos performed creditably as "Mrs. McLeod," Kingsley's most disappointingly developed major character. Miss Tormos gave the available material a sensitive and skillful treatment, and also gave indication that she could have done more had there been more to do.

Superior Performance

A decidedly superior performance was given by Bill Diepenbrock, a newcomer to serious theatre at Villanova, as "Joe 'Yussel' Feinson," the seasoned precinct reporter and common-sense philosopher who is nearby when needed to add humor, sympathy, or counsel. Diepenbrock not only successfully presented the character, but made him come alive and never let the audience down for one minute.

McLeod's partner, "Detective Brody," the enduring symbol of charity which is Kingsley's main point, was well-portrayed by Gene Corcoran. Dick McIntyre was also very adept as "Arthur Kindred," a young war veteran forced to steal for what he wanted, only to find something better at a lower price. Both Corcoran and McIntyre added polish and maturity to the production.

The part of "Dr. Schneider" was an admirable bit of casting as Rolf Memming gave an authentic portrayal of this seamy character. Michael DiBenedetto and Bob Heenan as the "Burglars Charlie and Lewis" and Jim Smith as "Tami Giacopetti" were also well-cast and give convincingly realistic performances.

Other Newcomers

Two other newcomers to Villanova stage, Margie Stupak ("Susan Carmichael") and Lois Friel ("Shoplifter"), lacked some of the polish and presence of the others. Nevertheless, Miss Stupak showed feeling for her part and had flashes of brilliance. Miss Friel, called upon to remain onstage for most of the production, also showed feeling, and her comparative lack of ease actually served to make her portrayal more convincing.

Adequate performances were contributed in the roles of "Lt. Monaghan" (Frank Thornton), and Detectives: "O'Brien" (Pete Smith), "Dakis" (John McCabe), "Gallagher" (Denis McClain), and "Callahan" (John Putre) and "Patrolman Barnes" (Jim Dwyer). Others who appeared less adequate were Ken Resinski ("Endicott Sims") and Ted Michaels ("Mr. Pritchett").

The set showed meticulous attention to detail and thus added to the realism of the production.

Overall, the production was well-done and well-received, but suffered from the unwieldy size of the cast, inadequate facilities for presentation, and overemphasis of comedy. It is difficult to justify the inclusion of all thirty-four characters, many of whom add nothing to the action and little to the realism.

The limitations of Vasey Hall Theatre are well-known, and it would seem to be poor choice of material for presentation there. One might liken it to a cinemascopic production on a television screen.

Greatest Praise

Probably the greatest measure of praise for the success of the production is due Director Bernard Coyne. The entire production showed evidence of his mentorship, and he utilized every available resource in producing a good show.

Council Purpose Discussed By Wall; Problems Studied, Progress Noted

by Joe McCarthy

One question that appears on the majority of campuses of colleges and universities throughout the United States, both among students and its members, is "Just what does Student government constitute and what does it accomplish for its constituents?"

The President of the Villanova Student Council, Tom Wall, has been confronted with this question ever since the first meeting of the year last September. More than ever before, the Council leaders have felt the bite of stinging indictments of "too unwieldly," "too full of red-tape" and "greatly inopperative."

Wall, along with others, has attempted to defend the Council objectively and reasonably. Many of his arguments hold veracity.

"Students at all times," pointed out Wall, "question of existence of Student Government. They have the feeling that student government only exists for its own self-aggrandizement and that it in a way represents the desires of the students of the university. Indictments of this nature, although seemingly justified, are definite indications of ignorance of the status and position of government in general and student government in particular."

The main central difficulty which the Councils of many schools face is a lack of cooperation and a reticent attitude offered by many of the students. There are other areas of impediment and restraint but, if this problem of student inactivity and laconism were solved, the other hindrances could be more easily removed or alleviated.

It is doubtlessly improbable that student government could ever be fully effective. Even the United States government is far from 100% effecient.

The Villanova Student Government would still be confronted by problems of approval and implementation of resolutions from the University Administration. There would still be an inadequate amount of funds to supply all the benefits desired.

A certain number of members of the Council will themselves be inactive and merely attend the bi-weekly meetings without response to the necessity of fulfilling their obligations. In most cases these men are searching for nothing more than a title or false prestige. It is the fault of some out-going President or a disinterested electorate.

On the other hand, a great majority of the members seek to initiate programs.

Here they are entirely responsible to the Administration for the success or failure of it.

Another limitation is the very fact that any member of Student Council is first and foremost a student of the university receiving an education. In addition to the fifty hours of study supposedly required a week, one student can ill-afford to work for the Council another forty. But, if there were four other students with sufficient interest to help, the solution is quite obvious.

The annual staging of the Student Council Dance in the fall requires an exerted effort to be put over. This dance is about the only real money-making activity for the Council's treasury.

These funds must support the lecturers and speakers who are brought to campus, the activities of the Spirit Committee in attending away-games, and a sharing of the expenses of Parents' Weekend with the Alumni. The Council is actually stymied by the lack of money to complete desired operations which could benefits the student body.

In addition to the above, the Council also experiences an almost complete turnover in membership each and every year. There is as a result a period of several months in which no one knows what is going on and how to get going. The solution would be to have the freshman acquire an interest in the Council and be prepared to become members of the body.

This semester varied improvements were inaugurated. There has been the organization of a student trip to the Boston College away football game, movies of football games on campus, the opening of the Library on Sunday until 10:00 p.m., a tutor service to students, the selling of a Sports Sampler, valued at 90 dollars for $3.50, and the recent Banquet for the Who's Who students.

Communist Cuba Continually Attempts To Prevent Flight

Each day it is more impressive the amount of Cubans who abandon country, family, belongings, and with only a suitcase not heavier than 60 pounds, with nothing valuable in it, set out, penniless of course, to start a new life in a clime of liberty.

Minute Investigation

Besides the many requirements (which we listed in a former bulletin) to leave the country now, he must, making interminable lines, solicit his ticket at his nearest Police Station; declare before the Institute of Urban Reform, if he owns his home, make a minute inventory of all his belongings and then wait patiently for the telegram (paid in advance) that will asign him a day and time of departure. He knows, of course, that if he is not back in 29 days all his possessions will be seized.

In Havana Airport, the only one habilitated for international flights, he will forgo the most vexing search and interrogatory. For several hours before departure he will be locked in a glassed room listening through loudspeakers to the speaches of Fidel Castro.

Secret Flight

Those who do not obtain the permit to leave have to flee secretly in frail boats perhaps. Not only men but women, old men and above all children, the ones must be urged to be saved from Communist indoctrination.

Sometimes these boats are discovered and mercilessly shot at by the Militias. The lucky ones reach some nearby land or are picked up by foreign ships after being adrift for several days.

Birth in Flight

Recently a fugitive gave birth in a small boat where she was fleeing with 24 other cubans. Her own father-in-law assisted using a fisherman's knife. The new-born girl (christened Milagros — "Miracle") and her companions, were rescued by a patrol boat 2 days later.

It is a continuous arrival of boats at the U. S. coasts bringing: rich, poor, black, white, worker, professional or peasant. They are all obsessed with the idea of escaping the tragic Communistic atmosphere in Cuba.

'Round Midnight

A Letter Home For Christmas

by Joe Zawacki

(The following is a departure from the usual "'Round Midnight" series. Although written with three specific people in mind, the author hopes that he is conveying the thoughts and feelings that most of the students hold toward those near and dear to them as the Christmas season approaches once again).

Did you ever consider that the best possible way to spell the word respect is D-a-d? That's right, Dad. You know who I'm talking about; the guy you bum the car and money off everytime you're short for a night out. When you speak of him, is he tossed off as your "old man", as someone who is always moaning about your grades or the late hour you came in last night? Or is he your buddy, the guy you turn to when you can't figure something out, your companion at the ball park?

The Debaters

Mine has been taking me to sporting events ever since I can remember, but except for our Cardinals and Stan the Man, I don't ever remember us rooting for the same team. My mother calls the first five minutes of a TV game the quietest in the house. That's because we're waiting each other out, trying to determine who's rooting for whom, so we can pick opposite sides and start arguing.

I guess if someone passing by heard us, they would figure that I don't have much respect for the old boy, but they couldn't be more wrong. By education standards, he didn't get too far along in school, like most kids during the depression. But the brains that he has and the things that he's taught me are more valuable than any sheepskin from college.

The Easy Way

When I was growing up and wanted to learn the various sports, I got good training, mainly because he took me out on the field himself and showed me how. He was 42 and playing industrial softball and touch football with kids half his age before his legs gave out. But his spirit never did, and I for one would never want to tangle with him.

M-o-m. What can you say about your mother that would show the proper appreciation? If we lack in appreciation for our fathers, just imagine how then we neglect to thank our mothers. Sometimes you think she should run in the Olympics, because everytime you turn around, she's doing something else. There are only three "monsters" in our domicile, but it has always amazed me how much we expect her to do for us.

The Swingers

But she does it, and without a word of complaint. Why, I'll never know. Mothers are like that, I guess. One thing I do know; we're spoiled. My mom had to get a waitress' union card when the Local found out the service we get over the weekends while watching the games on TV.

When Christmas, or any holiday rolls around, I can easily spot the kids who have sweethearts at home. They're the ones who usually cut the last few classes to get home faster. Can't say that I blame them though. A girl is a pretty hard habit to kick. The funny thing is, I guess mine was in love before she met me and I guess I have had my share of crushes too. Yet, she makes all the other ones seem inconsequental and insignificant, almost like they were just practice sessions. You know what I mean.

I figure she's got it harder than me; she has to put up with with me, and that's a pretty tall order. Like most couples, it's been an up and down thing with us. We were kids when we met and perhaps we still are. We've split, separated, and vowed never to talk to each other again. What a laugh! — She's got a bunch of guys hounding her and taking her to the places that I can't afford, but that's all right with me. That will just make her a better wife for me someday.

It wouldn't be a merry Christmas without them.

Penn Triumphs Twice 69-54, 62-58
Temple, LaSalle Also Show Promise

by Tom Bruderle

During the first eight minutes of play on Wednesday, December 6 Albright stayed right with the Explorers. Looking for a shot close to the basket, LaSalle continually passed into 6-7 George Freidrich who was tightly guarded by Albright's Norm Bausch, 6-4, and Bob Holzinger, 6-7 . . . One of LaSalle's hopes for the future, 6-7 Jim Flavin, who scales 235, fought for a loose ball the way Billy Joe shredded the West Chester line. Big Jim first blocked a shot, ran over an opposing player chasing the ball, and bounced a third hapless Lion into the seats . . . Unless 6-8 Wally Sampson, a cowboy from Texas, accustoms himself to the winters of the East, Coach Dudley Moore could have a lemon.

Frosh Bothers McAteer

Bruce Ricketts, one of three Albright frosh on the Lion's varsity, pestered Billy McAteer so much that the LaSalle star was called for "palming" three times . . . despite Freidrich's 210 pounds and Flavin's 235, Albright outrebounded LaSalle 45-36 . . . Albright and LaSalle were both 28 for 66 from the field for a 42.4% mark. However, LaSalle was 22 for 30 from the foul-line for a 86.6 while the Lions shot 72.2% 13 for 18 from the line . . . Albright's diminutive (5-8) Tommy Pearsall riddled a so-so LaSalle defense for 32 points . . . Soph Explorer Frank Corace was still tight despite his 18 points. By December's Tournament he should be averaging 20 per game . . . In the Big Five LaSalle is the team to beat.

Penn-Michigan

Penn's John Wideman hit only three of his nine attempted shots from the field . . . Referee Charlie Eckman received well-deserved applause when he offered his handkerchief to Michigan's John Oosterbann. The 6-4 Wolverine had something in his eye. Where else but in Philly would such a thing happen . . . Penn might be the only team in the Big Five without an outstanding scorer. The Quakers are an evenly balanced team . . . Penn had everything in its cheering section but a concert pianist.

Michigan Listless

The rebuilding Wolverines shot a mild 37.1% from the field while Penn was 43.1% . . . A comment heard after it was announced that Villanova had defeated Princeton: "Princeton any good?" . . . When John Oosterbann fouled out the score stood at 56-60 with Penn in the lead. With Oosterbann, who tallied 17 points, out, the game belonged to Penn . . . The Quakers had four men in double figures in an obvious team effort.

Penn-Navy

Navy had only 9 points after eight minutes of play . . . Sophomore Ray Caraza (6-0) appears to be Jack McCloskey's number six man . . . Navy led from 11:50 in the first half until Jeff Strum sunk two foul shots to make the score 56-56 with 2:14 left in the game . . . Navy's Forrest Sieburt at 5-6 was the smallest man on the court . . . Even though 6-5 Dave Robinson and J. D. Graham 6-4 fouled out, the Quakers still looked good.

Temple-Mulenburg

Mike Gold started in place of the injured John Koskinen . . . Temple scored its first goal after six misses and 2:43 . . . The Mules had a 20.6% from the field in the first half . . . Bruce Drysdale had 23 points in the twenty minutes he was in . . . Twelve of Temple's Owls played and each one scored . . . Mulenburg hopes to move from the University division of the MAC to the College division . . . The halftme score was 43-13 with no press!!!!

Wildcats Travel To Fordham, Return For St. Francis Games

Villanova travels to New York Wednesday to take on the Fordham Rams and then returns to the Palestra to face St. Francis of Brooklyn on December 16 and St. Francis of Loretto on December 18.

The Wildcats will face a much improved Fordham five at the New Yorkers' campus where Coach John Bach touts 6-4 junior Bob Melvin as the man to watch. Melvin led last year's club in rebounds, assists, and scoring with an 18.7 ppg average. The Rams expect a big lift from 6-4 backcourt star Jim Manhardt who averaged 30 points a game last year for the Fordham yearlings. Captain Joe Dempsey, 6-5, and 6-4 Sylvester Coalman will be tough to handle off the boards. With 6-5 sophomore George Kozinor, Bill Shendan and Bob Lowry on the bench the Rams are a sure bet to improve on their 7-16 showing last year.

Saint Francis of Brooklyn lacks the needed big men but has the experience and bench to make the team go. The New Yorkers' attack will be based around 6-3 junior cornerman Jim Raferty who owned an 18.5 average last year. Dave Lopez. John Jasiel, Ray Nash and Tom Kurowski will round out the starting five. Since 6-7 Vic Smilowiez dropped out of school and 6-10 Richie Weston lacks experience, the Cats will probably control the boards.

Saint Francis of Loretto, Pa., will field another small squad with Cal Fowler, 20.5 ppg, sparking the team. The Frankies count on 6-7 senior Bob Hall to get the rebounds and Fowler to make the club go. Sophomores Sandy Williams and Gene DeBerardinis, both 6-3, will be called to carry part of the load. The last time the Cats met St. Francis was two seasons ago when a one-sided victory sent the Cats on their way to the NIT.

Grown-Up White Leads 'Cats On Road; Trip Nets 3 Wins, Iowa State Easy

by Joe Zawacki

What a difference a year makes! At this stage of last year's basketball season, Villanova's highly rated basketball five had fallen ingloriously to Buffalo and Toledo in their first four games. That was the club that was supposed to rank among the nation's top ten. This year's club will readily admit that they're nowhere near the top ten, but don't try to tell them that they're not a pretty good ball club.

The Main Liners proved it the hard may, by winning three in a row on the road in such famous snake pits as Princeton and Niagara. Coupled with wins against Buffalo, Scranton, and Iowa State Monday in the Field House, the 'Cat Cagers stand loftily today with a 5-0 mark, somewhat better than the experts tabbed them in the preseason picks.

The final scores were 72-66 over Princeton, 68-53 over Buffalo, and 64-55 over Niagara and if a cliche may be used, the scores do not tell the story. Perhaps Coach Jack Kraft summed it up best when he said Saturday night that "a few kids grew up this weekend." This was after the stubborn 'Cats refused to give up when Hubie White was derailed with personal foul troubles early in the first half.

Stall

Somehow Villanova managed to hang on to a 26-24 deficit at the half. Then trailing 41-39 with eight minutes to go, the visitors outscored the Purple Eagles at the rate of 19-4 to go ahead 58-45. From there, they ran their stall pattern well and despite the whistle-happy refs, were home free. When the game ended, White and Wally Jones were out on fouls, Jim McMonagle had four and George Leftwich had three.

McMonagle, being left open, capitalized on his opportunities and led all scorers with 16 points. However, more important than the victory was the fact that the young inexperienced cagers proved that they could play well and together, unlike past Villanova teams. They overcame the loss of White. the racuous Niagara crowd and the two officials who were determined not to give Villanova any judgment calls.

P.S. The nicest thing about winning is that you can file a good report about the officiating in a game without it being labeled "sour grapes".

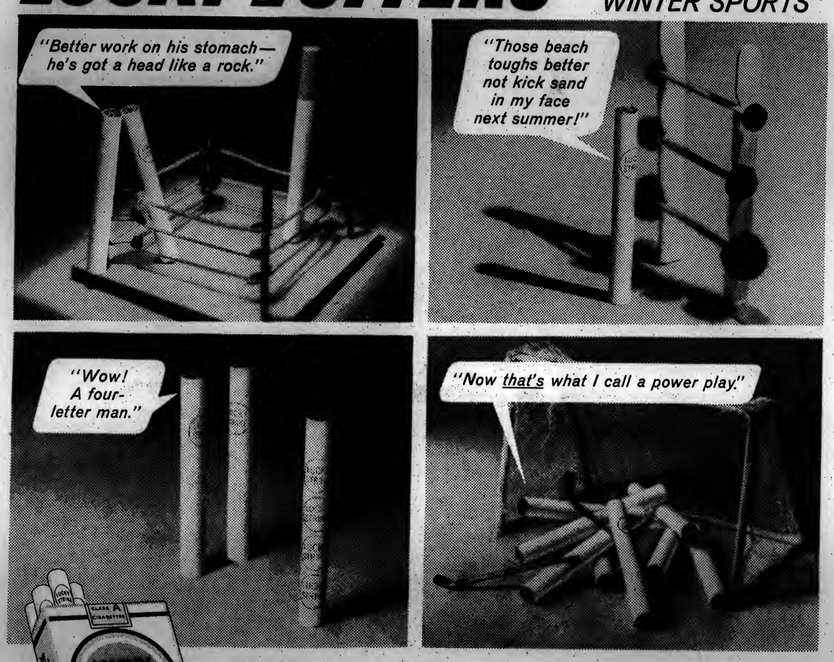
After a close first half, the visiting Main Liners ran away from Buffalo in the Auditorium with some fantastic shooting. Everything the 'Cats threw up from outside went in, and with VU's zone defense harrowing the Buffs' backcourtman, the 68-53 victory was the most easily attained of the trip.

White Well

It was even more notable for the fact that Hubie White assumed responsibility and leadership of the team in the contest. After trying three unsuccessful behind-the-back passes, in the second half, White jumped at the foul line on one play in an apparent open jump shot. But he didn't shoot instead he saw McMonagle underneath he gave him a soft pass for an easy duece. The box score showed him with 17 that night and only 9 against Niagara, but what it didn't show were the little things that bring a team victory, that make a good ballplayer better than good. From the point of that jump shot Thursday, White played brilliant ball. If he continues, Villanova will continue to win.

The Jones Boy

The Princeton game had the whole town talking about the Jones boy. The Sophomore from Overbrook, High, in his second varsity games, shot a fantastic 13 for 16 from the floor, mostly jump shots, in leading the team to its victory over a good Tiger quintet. Jones finished with 28 for the night and had the right answer time after time when Princeton, led by Pete Campbell, Art Hyland, and Al Kaemmerlin, erased most of the ten point halftime lead.



McMonagle had the straw that broke the Tigers' back when he converted a missed foul into two points with Princeton only 2 points down at the time, 65-63. Little did they know at the time that this was the beginning of a prety nice road trip.

Iowa Easy

Monday night, the Wildcats returned to familiar grounds and subdued the Iowa State Cyclones by a 74-53 score. The Cats were led by Huble White who amassed 29 points, 20 of which were tallied in the second half. Jim O'Brien playing an excellent game, scored 13 and pulled down 17 rebounds. George Leftwich contributed to the cause with 13 points.

The Main Liners face Fordham, St. Francis of Brooklyn, and St. Francis of Loretta in their next three games before entering the Quaker City Tournament. A review of the Quaker City Tournament teams is on page 10.

Rejects, 5N's Tie To Share Intra-Mural Championship

The Rejects and the 5N's battled to an 8-8 tie last Wednesday. The deadlock gave each team a share in the Intra-mural Football Championship.

The Rejects, exhibiting a rugged, heavy, line, entered the championship game with a perfect record of 9-0. The 5N's were also unbeaten and untied (8-0) and had managed to contain their opponents during the regular season without a point being scored against them.

In its opening swimming meet with West Chester State, the Wildcat mermen bowed 51-44 despite three pool records by sophomore Dick McDonough. West Chester took six out of eleven events with two of their entries setting pool records.

Dick Thieler took the 220 Freestyle in record time of 2:08.7 clipping :04 off the old record set by Bob Gora of Michigan. Teammate Rich Field also cut five seconds off the pool record in the 200 Breastroke in 2:32.3 (old record, 2:37.4, Sieck, Penn).

McDonough, undefeated as a freshman last year and a 1964 Olympic prospect, won the 50-yard freestyle in 0:22.7 (old record Frank Legacki, Father Judge, 0:23.4). He also took the 100 freestyle in 0:50.6 and the 200 butterfly in 2:24.6. Each triumph broke the old pool and Villanova records.

Captain Don Reed provided Villanova with its only other individual victory in the 220 Individual Medley. The 'Cats captured the 400 Freestyle Relay for their fifth win.

The Villanova Ice Hockey team swept to its second straight league victory with a 4-3 triumph over Lehigh last Sunday to tie for the Pennsylvania Collegian Conference lead.

Previously the Wildcats had defeated Lafayette 4-3 also on their home ice. The hockey rink used by the Main Liners is located behind the Howard Johnson's on the Lancaster Pike.

In an exhibition against a strong Rutgers squad the Wildcats succumbed 4-1, a day before their victory over Lehigh.

Four Villanovans were drafted in the annual ALF and NFL meetings in the past two weeks. The most unexpected was the drafting of sprinter Frank Budd, holder of the world record in the 100 yard dash in 9.2, by the Philadelphia Eagles in a seventh round selection.

Budd reportedly is pointed for the '64 Olympics and is not particularly interested in pro football at this time.

Three members of the football squad were also selected in the draft. End Ron Meyers found himself the only Wildcat drafted by both the AFL and NFL. The Cleveland Browns chose him in their 11th round pick while the Boston Patriots took him in their 16th round selection.

Sam Gruneisen, injured left end, was taken late in the draft proceeding by the San Diego Chargers as their 25th round draftee. Tom Kepner, 235 pound tackle, fared better as he was grabbed by the Baltimore Colts in the 13th round.

QUAKER CITY TOURNEY TO HOST EIGHT

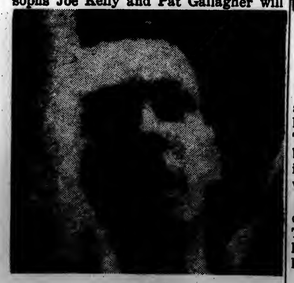
Duquesne

The Iron Dukes are finally back in the national picture for the first time since Dudley Moore migrated to LaSalle. Last year the Bluffs posted a 15-7 record and have this year their most exciting soph since Si Green in Willie Somerset.

Somerset, a 5-10 speedster from Farrell State High School Champions, shattered all Duquesne frosh scoring records while racking up 26.8 ppg.

In the front court Clyde Arnold 6-6, Paul Benec 6-6, and Terry Malloy 6-5 should pull down enough rebounds to please Coach Red Manning and the hungry Duquesne alumni.

Clyde Arnold



Manning's biggest asset will be his great bench strength where he has 6-5 soph John Cegalis (16.5 ppg.) who may win a starting berth when the smoke clears. If Villanova meets the Iron Dukes in the tourney it will mean three meetings for the teams in one season.

Holy Cross

Under the new tutorship of its alumnus Frank Oftring, 1949-1950 co-captain, the Crusaders of Holy Cross, Worcester, Mass., hope this year to make up for the loss of George Blaney and Tim Shea by a concentrated effort on team play.

The Cross' outstanding all-around player this year will be Jack "The Shot" Foley, 6-5, a deceptively frail looking forward with a deadly jump shot. Averaging 25.7 ppg and 10 rpg per game, during the last two seasons, Foley will be the pivot around which the Crusader offense will operate. Aiding Foley in the other forward slot will be 6-3 Dave Slattery while Ed Brecht will jump center for the Crusader squad.

Ken McClory, Pete O'Connor, and sophs Joe Kelly and Pat Gallagher will be rotating in the guard positions.

Ranked 9th in the nation last year with an 83.4 ppg average, the HC quintet will work their patterns to set up Foley for the shot but will be relatively weak under the boards.

Returning from a 22-5 NIT record last year, the Crusaders have already won their first two games and could very well be the dark horse of the ECAC tourney.

Joel Novak

Iowa

The Hawkeyes of Iowa, rated a preseason powerhouse and second to Ohio State in the Big Ten race, got off to a slow start when they were upset by Evansville College in this opener.

Iowa was caught in the scandal last year when freshman standout Connie Hawkins of Brooklyn was nabbed on a minor count. Hawkins led the fabulous Hawkeye Frosh which upended the varsity, who were ranked nationally last year.

Coach Sharm Scheuerman, only 27 years old, claims Co-Captain Don Nelson as his pride and joy. Nelson, an all-conference forward, is the most accurate field goal shooter in Iowa history.

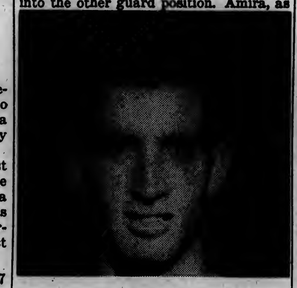
Matt Szykowny from Pittsburgh plays either forward or guard and 6-7 Doug Mehlhaaus, 6-8 Jerry Messick, and 6-6 Dave Roach will give the Midwesterners a big edge off the boards. Iowa should be a big contender for the Quaker City title by the time December 26 rolls around.

Kenn Glenn

Niagara

Veteran Coach "Taps" Gallagher has a tough rebuilding job to do but also has some real bright sophs to do it with. The 1961 Niagara five gave the basketball world a big thrill last season when it stopped St. Bonaventure's 99-game winning streak at home.

Only days after the game Gallagher called his team the "greatest Little Three team of all time". The biggest loss to Niagara is All-American Al Butler, one of the nation's leading scorers.



This year's club will feature 6-4 Joe Maddrey and 6-5 Ken Glenn. Soph Al Payne 6-7 should give added rebounding strength to the taller-than-average Eagles.

Andy O'Connell will be in the backcourt with one of three juniors — Bill Kennedy, Tom Brennan, or Jim Kuryak. Senior Ed Ladley is the top reserve up front for the New Yorkers who will be a serious contender for this first annual classic.

Penn

Most likely to challenge Princeton for the Ivy League title, Coach Jack McClosky's Red and Blue, host for the Quaker City Tournament, count on four juniors to lead the way to its first possible title since 1953.

Forwards John Wideman 6-2 and Bob Purdy 6-4 figure to start with 6-5 J. P. Graham at center and 6-3 Sid Amira at guard. McCloskey will have difficulty in replacing the graduated Bob Milvy, scoring and rebounding leader. Sophomore Ray Carazo at 6-0, who broke scoring records as a frosh, is expected to move into the other guard position. Amira, as the team leader, will try to help his backcourt partner to fill the shoes of Milvy.

Penn has height coming up from the soph ranks with 6-7 Joe Andrews and 6-5 Karl Vogelsang, but both need additional experience. The club is respected for its speed and strong defensive alignment along with a potentially explosive power.

Penn State

The Nittany Lions of Penn State seek to rebound from their disappointing 11-13 record of last year with the return of four of their starters who are also the only returning lettermen.

The returning starters are 6-3 Gene Harris, who paced last year's squad in scoring with 369 points or 15.4 per game and in rebounding with 244, 6-1 John Mitchell, 6-5 Earl Hoffman, and 6-5 Jake Trueblood. Trueblood will miss the first half of the slate due to scholastic difficulties.

Coach John Egli, in his eighth year at the State, will be hard pressed to find a replacement for backcourt ace, Mark DuMars, the second highest scorer in

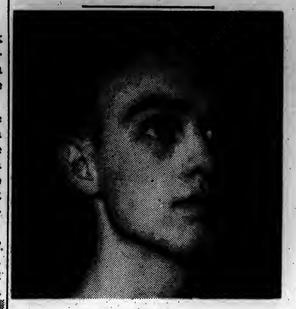
Earl Hoffman

Penn State history. The job will probably go to newcomer Bob Donato at 5-11. Donato is one of two sophomores who could crack the starting lineup. The other is Wayne Lundy at 6-6 who comes off scholastic probation.

Egli's teams play an aggressive defense with his own sliding zone, and a controlled offense. But, with a tough schedule, Egli feels that the team will do well to finish at .500.

Hubie White

Villanova



Among the teams faced with rebuilding this year will be the Villanova Wildcats. Coached by newcomer Jack Kraft, the Cats offense will be built around 6-4 prospective All-American Hubie White in one of the forward positions.

The center and other forward positions will be alternately filled by 6-6 Joe Walsh, Jim O'Brien, and Jim McMonagle.

Brightening the backcourt picture left vacant by Jim Huggard will be sophs George Leftwich and Wally Jones. Leftwich has demonstrated tremendous driving ability while Jones' jump shots have helped keep Villanova on the winning side of the ledger thus far this season.

The big deficient this year will be in the rebounding department. Walsh, O'Brien, and McMonagle will use hustle to help make up a height leanness in the squad.

The Cats will have a court familiarity over six of the other seven teams in the tournament. This may help the Cats to make a good showing in the holiday hardwood court battles.

Ken Rochlitz

Wyoming

After several poor seasons, the Cowboys enter the 1961-62 campaign with added experience by virtue of eight returning lettermen. The past two years have been spent by the silver-haired Coach Strannigan, a former All-American, in rebuilding a cellar squad with a 7-18 slate last year.

Starting in the backcourt are 5-10 junior Bob Hanson and 6-2 senior Curt Jimerson. Jimerson is expected to lead the squad in scoring. At center, junior Al Eastland gives the Cowboys their height for the rebound department at 6-8. Two 6-4 juniors, Fred Glah and Ken Rochlitz, figure to start at the forward positions.

In an opening game loss to Witchita 78-54, the Cowboys found they still need added talent. But Strannigan commented that Wichita is "a real tough ball club —we won't meet any tougher all season." With the return of injured Terry Lyon 6-5 to guard by tournament time, the Cowboys should present the Palestra fans with some good ball.

WILDCATS, SHOCKERS SET FOR CLASH

Carnival, Gala Events Await Arrival Of Rival Grid Squads

by Ed Lohr

When the Villanova University football team steps off their chartered air liner on December 27 in El Paso, Texas, to play the University of Wichita in the 28th annual Sun Bowl, they will find themselves in the midst of a gala Southwest Sun Carnival.

The highlight of the entire week festivities is the nationally televised grid classic which dates back to 1936 when "Slingin" Sammy Baugh led Texas Christian to a victory over New Mexico State in Kidd Stadium, home of Texas

National Coverage

John McFall, publicity director of the Sun Bowl, stated that the enthusiasm generated over the national television coverage given to the game by ABC is unmeasurable.

McFall continued that there are about 100 ABC Network stations in the country and that he expects about 75 to carry the game. This is the answer to a dream and five years of persistent work by Sun Bowl officals.

Subsidy

It was made possible this year when the Commission of El Paso County stated they would subsidize the program with $20,000 in case ABC could not sell all the rights.

Another reason the national T. V. breakthrough has excited the Texans is that next year the Sun Bowl game moves to a new 30,000 seat stadium. which is just west of the present site And ironically enough the stadium construction was the only referendum that passed out of six sent before the people. This also shows the tremendous interest shown by the people of El Paso in the success of this holiday classic.

Two Sections

The Sun Carnival program which extends from December 26 to January 1, is divided into two sections. Looking at the sporting part first, a $20,000 Bowling Tournament opens on the 26th as does an amateur tennis tourney with over 500 applicants already in from all over the Southwest.

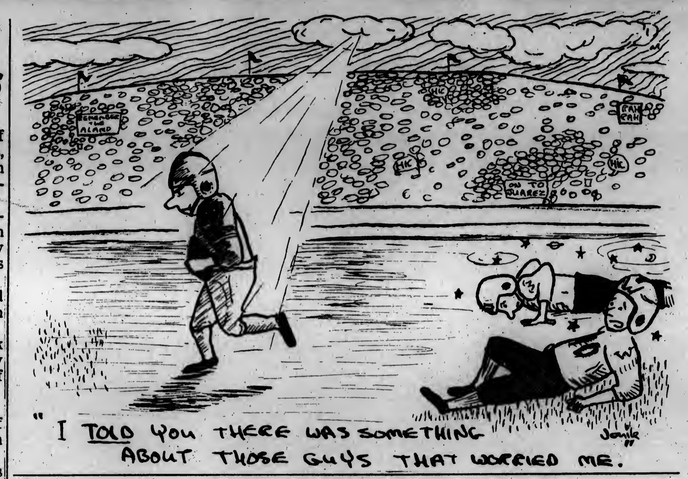
On Thursday the 2nd, the Sun Carnival Basketball Championship begins in the newly dedicated 4500 seat field house of Texas Western University. Competing in the floor classic will be Baylor, University of New Mexico, New Mexico State. and host Texas Western.

Friday sees a Touchdown Club Luncheon honoring both host team Wichita and the visiting Wildcats of Villanova. Saturday. of course is the big game.

Polo Game

Sunday features a Polo game in the morning and a visit to exciting Juarez, Mexico for a Bull Fight in the 10,000 seat Plaza de Toras. Monday the week of festivities ends with the gigantic three and a half mile long Sun Parade which is followed by a Rodeo.

The coronation of the Sun Queen and Cornation Ball takes place the 28th with the "Old South" as this years theme. Many more thrills await the thousands of visitors to this city along the Rio Grande and to quote McFall "also an endless round of parties."

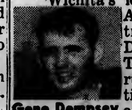


McFall Delighted

McFall said in closing. "I expect a real fine ball game I am delighted to have an Eastern power in the game, and the TV is the factor that sets this years game above all others.

He continued, "I welcome any and all Villanovans to a week in the warm sunny Southland (1947 was the only game in which it snowed) which they would never forget."

Carol Spinks, co-ed at Texas Western College, hopes the words "Sun Bowl" will be tanned onto her back by the time Villanova meets Wichita in the Sun Bowl on December 30.



How The Opposing Teams Shape Up

Wichita | Villanova

by Ed Lohr

The Shockers of Wichita supply the formidable opposition for the Wildcats in the Sun Bowl on December 30 in El Paso Texas. This team from the Midwest is the 1961 Missouri Valley Champion and finished the campaign with a 8-2 mark.

Gene Dempsey

Wichita's losses were at the hands of Arizona State 21-7 (who trounced Detroit 40-6) and Dayton in a big upset 23-12. The host team of the classic runs out of a tight T formation with multiple variations and mainly use the popular Oklahoma 5-4 defense.

1-1 Record

In the previous meetings of these two schools, Villanova won the initial encounter in 1957, 24-6, and lost to a Ted Dean-led Wichita Aggregation 21-6 the following year.

Shocker coach ex-Army star Hank Folberg stated that 21 out of the 33 man squad are sophomores and that represents the greatest weakness of the team. The strongest points are the tackles, guards and centers.

LeRoy Leep

All conference selections from Wichita were Ron Turner and Jim Maddox at ends, guard Charles Wright, center LeRoy Leep, from West Hazel, Pa., quarterback Alex Zyskowski, and hb-qb Bill Stangarone, from Turtle Creek, Pa.

Lineup

Ron Turner

Folberg said about the 'Cats, "They have a real fine ball club with great all around play and we are looking forward to a tough ball game, but we will show up—don't worry". The following is the probable starting lineup for the Shockers:

LE	Jim Maddox	6-2	190	Jr.
	Co-captain
RE	Ron Turner	6-1½	196	Sr.
	Co-captain
LT	Gene Dempsey	6-2	222	Sr.

LH	Alex Zyskowski	5-11	185	Sr.
RH	Bill Stephens	6-1	188	So.
FB	Adolph Wilson	6-1	190	Jr.

Art Leonard

Villanova University's Wildcats roar into post season bowl competition for the first time since 1949 when they travel over 2200 miles to the cliffs of the Rio Grande River in Southwest Texas for the 28th Sun Bowl.

Alex Bell's chargers finished the campaign with a 7-2 record, best in many a year on the Main Line. Their losses were at the hands of Boston College 22-6 and Detroit 20-6.

Multiple T

Rich Ross

Villanova runs out of a multiple T offense with flankers, belly series, and rollouts very common. Alex Bell and staff returned home from Army some nine months ago after a study of defense and came up with a "monster" defense which lived up to its name and devoured opposing attacks.

Junior halfback Larry Glueck, who recently has been voted to the 1961 All-American Catholic team led the team in scoring with 50 points and should pose as the team's greatest threat to hit paydirt.

Rich Richman

Quarterbacks Richie Richman and Ted Aceto pass well both long and short and will use pro-draftee Ron Meyers and Joe Cutreneo as their main targets.

For power the Cats hold the edge with Billy Joe, Lou Rettino, and Jim Thomas in the backfield along with Nick Russo. Villanova's line is heavier and also a little slower but should contain the Shockers because of depth.

The following is the probable starting lineup for the Cats.

Larry Glueck

LE	Joe Cutroneo	6-1	205	Jr.
RE	Sam Gruneisen	6-1	210	Sr.
LT	Charlie Johnson	6-1	230	Jr.
RT	Tom Kepner	6-3	230	Sr.
LG	Al Calligaris	5-11	210	Jr.
	Captain
RG	Rich Ross	6-2	215	Sr.
C	Rege Magnus	6-0	205	Sr.
QB	Richie Richman	5-11	193	Jr.

Villanova Enters Two Bowls: Win, Loss Crown Busy Week

by Mark Quinn

Villanova University achieved the distinction of competing twice in Bowl events within an eight day period when a four man team appeared Sunday on the General Electric College Bowl. The program is nationally broadcast over the CBS Television Network. The specialists of quick recall of academic facts did not meet with the success which their gridiron counterparts had merited last week in the Sun Bowl at El Paso, Texas. Villanova in its College Bowl debut, bowed to an experienced and talented team of scholars from Brigham Young University by a score of 260 to 155.

The team which was chosen to represent Villanova was composed of Gerald F. West, Junior Arts and Science; Gerald A. Goulet, Sophomore Electrical Engineer; Lawrence J. Rosintoski, Sophomore Chemical Engineer; William D. Huttanus, Senior Arts and Science; and Peter A. Murphy, Sophomore C&F, who travelled as an alternate with the team. Mr. Henry B. Cushing of the English Department appeared as coach of the team.

Experience Major Factor

Villanova seemed to be off to a good start when Brigham Young answered the initial toss-up question of the game incorrectly. The team capitalized by answering the query correctly and by adding ten bonus points. From this moment, however, the Villanova offensive bogged down and lost the lead and did not regain it. Questions on such topics as economics, architecture, geography, current events, philosophy and the classics were machine gunned at both teams. The Salt Lakers held a distinct advantage in the speed-of-recall department which was probably a result of their victory on the program a week ago. Before the team could catch its second breath, the bell sounded ending the first half.

'Cats Come Back

Brigham Young widened its lead at the beginning of the second half. As the contest continued, the 'Cats staged a comeback under the lead of Gerry West. This resurgence, however, was not great enough to overcome the lead which Brigham Young had built up. The final buzzer sounded while the chairman was asking the Villanova team a bonus question.

Villanova received a $500 scholarship grant for its apearance on the College Bowl climaxed almost two months of eliminations and preparations. Five team members were carefully selected selected from over 270 original applicants. This number was then reduced to twenty-three, to twelve, and then to five. All preparations and eliminations were conducted under the auspices of the team's coaches who were Mr. Henry B. Cushing, Dr. Henry L. Rofinot, and Dr. Felix M. Belduk.

Senior Weekend Set For February 23-24; Jazz, Dance Planned

The final weekend sponsored by the senior class will feature a Friday night Invitational Jazz Concert and the traditional Saturday evening Dinner Dance. Senior Class President Ray Trapp is currently conducting the class effort as General Chairman.

February 23 and 24 are the scheduled dates for the weekend. Last year, the senior class, then the juniors, inaugurated a jazz concert as part of their Junior Week activities. The idea is being continued this year. It was pointed out by Trapp that the class is simply following a trend to drop the Friday night prom for a concert.

Future Hope

Trapp also contended that, since the previous concert was well received, there should be no reason why this year's effort can not be even more successful. It is hoped that the concert can become an annual affair on the Villanova campus.

Co-Chairmen for the evening, Joe Zawacki and Jim Braithwaite, are organizing the concert for the second straight time. They have invited sixteen groups which represent almost the entire Eastern Seaboard.

Winner Returns

These groups will be narrowed to the final six by the Chairmen and will compete against each other for winner's honors. Last year's winner, the Jeff Haskel Trio of West Chester, is the only group now definitely selected for the competition.

Interest in the Jazz Conncert has also been further stimulated through coverage by DOWNBEAT magazine and several local radio stations. DOWNBEAT'S editors have received an invitation to review the concert in their next issue.

Possible Star

Judging the competition will be representatives from Capitol records, several radio stations, and a possible known celebrity. As a basis for their idea, the senior class is working the concert along the same lines as that of Notre Dame where it is a two-

University Education

Justice Musmanno received his B.A. and M.A. at George Washington University and his LL. B. at Georgetown University. At the National University he earned his LL.M. and Master of Patent Laws, later earning his Doctor of Jurisprudence at the University of Rome.

The Forum will begin at 8:30 p.m. at Garey Hall.

National Federation Meets; Adopts Future Program Topic

From December 29 to January 1, 1962 the Second Session of the Nineteenth National Council of National Federation of Catholic College Students convened in Chicago, Ill. Acting as the representative voice of the Catholic College students of the country, this Council reviewed the present activities of the Federation.

Simone Represents

Representing Villanova and the Philadelphia Region was John Simone, a senior arts student and President of the Philadelphia Region.

Concerning the present program, which on this campus is centered on the topic of Racism as related to Freedom and Responsibility in a Democratic Society, the Council urged that all campuses attend some sort of local student action appropriate to the needs of the community in the coming semester.

The National Council also tentatively adopted the following topic for its Contemporary Issues program for the coming year. The program entitled "The Social Encyclicals — A student translation for society," is intended to involve many students in an active study and survey of the socio-economic aspects of our society. This topic was chosen in light of the great emphasis placed on social progress by the Church and recently redefined in the encyclical "Mater et Magistra."

Committee

Also established by the Council was a National Resolutions Committee for the purpose of obtaining the student opinion on questions of National importance through the presentation of resolutions to the Student Governments of its affiliated Colleges and Universities.

In line with the need for an active student voice the Federation will, during the coming semester, circulate to all Catho-

Muddled Oratory Slows Pace As Council Plods Ever Onward

by Joe McCarthy

The presentation of seven constitutional amendments for approval by the assembly proved the focal point of the muddled oratory and sensation-seekers of the last Student Council meeting just previous to Christmas vacation.

The first amendment, to allow the Secretary of the Council to be either a junior or senior instead of a sophomore or junior, was passed. Two other amendments regarding the appropriation of Council funds under $15 were also passed.

The next amendment, to give the Parliamentarian a seat on the Senate, involved tangles of debate and parliamentary rule was finally defeated. The subject did arouse several of the body in the arguments which followed on the next three amendments.

Major Achievement

The major achievement of the evening was the establishment of the Student Senate meetings to be held at least one week previous to the Congress meeting. This would give the representatives an opportunity to speak to their constituents and find out their views on a particular motion.

The final two amendments were defeated and withdrawn.

Variety Marks Shows As Council Cinemas Appear For Spring

Dick Billon, the chairman of the Student Council Movie committee, announced plans for the continuation of on-campus movies for the Spring semester. A tentative schedule has been compiled featuring seven movies with the emphasis on variety. "Gunfight At OK Corral" and "Teahouse In The August Moon" are two representative selections.

On nights of the movies, two separate showings are run, one at 7:30 and the other at 9:00. This innovation will make it possible for a greater number of students to take advantage of the opportunity of seeing cinema hits at reduced prices.

There are no restrictions on attendance and the shows are open to the general student body. The Villanova Nurses are especially reminded that they are always welcome.

While its major decisions are subject to the approval of the National Congress to be held in August, the National Council passed a resolution concerning Extremist Organizations and Irresponsible Anti-Communism. The following statement will be made known to all affiliated student governments:

"We the XIX National Federation of Catholic College Students believe that the various anti-communist groups which stress to an extreme domestic subversion may unwittingly be aiding the Communist cause. We furthermore deplore the extremist practices of these groups and urge that communism be fought positively. Emphasis on the negative aspect of fighting against communism rather than the positive aspect of fighting for the Christianization of society, will, in the the long run do more harm than good."

day affair with nationwide scope.

The annual Dinner Dance will again be hosted by the Sheraton Hotel in Philadelphia on Saturday between 6:30 p.m. and 1:00 a.m. Trapp, however, speculated that the cost for this year's ticket will be somewhat higher than the $12.50 charged last year.

The increase, he explained, is the result of a more expensive dinner and favors for the couples. Last year's orchestra, the 12-piece Paul Judge Band, has again been contracted for since many of the class had asked for his return.

All seniors intending to enter their dates in the contest for queen of the Senior Weekend are required to have a 5" x 7" glossy print of their date submitted to Terry Donnelly in Room 19, Sheehan Hall previous to February 10.

Dr. Roberti Is Panel Member At Seminar

Dr. Dominic Roberti of the Chemistry Department was one of five Philadelphia professional men who acted as panelists and counsellors at the Seminar for African Leadership Training in Washington recently. Sponsored by the Foreign Visitors Office of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, the Seminar was held for 25 African students studying in this country and included religious exercises, various addresses and a reception at the White House.

Villanova Designated As Testing Center For Law School Test

Villanova University has been designated as a testing center for the nationwide administration of the Law School Admission Test on Saturday, February 10, 1962. The test will be administered in Garey Hall, the Law School building at Villanova University.

The test is required by the School of Law of Villanova University, and by most other law schools. It will last a full day, morning and afternoon. The afternoon session will include a test of writing ability and a test of general background, both of which are achievement tests. Prospective applicants should consult the law school of their choice to be advised whether they must take the test.

The next test will be administered in April, 1962. Candidates must file their completed applications with the Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, New Jersey, at least ten days before the date of the examination.

First Dance of New Semester Planned By Villanova NFCCS

The Villanova National Federation of Catholic College Students will present the first dance of the second semester on Friday, February 9, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. The announcement was made by Jim McErlane, Chairman of the Publicity and Tickets Committee.

Valentine Theme

The dance will feature a Valentine theme, with Gene Felch in charge of decorations.

Gene d'Aquili, general chairman of the dance, said that although a band has not yet been signed, it is possible that the Eddie Bigham Band, familiar to many Villanovans, will play for the event.

Not Student Council

The dance will be under the auspices of the Student Council, but McErlane said that the event is not to be confused with the annual Student Council Dance.

He voiced the belief that, through its dance, the NFCCS will be able to pay its own dues this year, freeing the Student Council Treasury for other expenses.

Open To All

McErlane stressed the fact that, except for Shamokinaki, this is the only dance held during the whole semester which is open to the entire student body. He explained that others are open only to specific groups and organizations, such as classes and fraternities.

Headed For Success

"Because the dance is the first of the semester, and because it is open to everyone, many students will probably attend," said McErlane. "Furthermore, tickets are reasonably priced at three dollars per couple, and the dance will be held at the Field House. With these factors, plus the help of Pete Federico and others of his caliber, it looks as if the NFCCS Dance is headed for success."

Cultural Captain

The captain of the team that represented Villanova University on General Electric's College Bowl in New York last Sunday is a man of many talents and avocations. Bill Huttanus, a junior who is majoring in English, lives for the love of art and nature.

Acting, writing, and teaching hold a special fascination for Huttanus. Last year he had a featured role in Rosemont's production of Willian Shakespeare's "As You Like It." He also appeared in his class play as a senior at Lansdale Catholic High, in his home town.

During his first two years at Villanova, Huttanus was an active member of the French Club.

Close to Nature

Always close to nature, he has been hunting and fishing with a marked regularity for the greater part of his life. But his favorite hobby lies in collecting guns.

From the Wednesday following Christmas Day to the Saturday before New Year's Eve, Huttanus was in training here at the University along with the other four members of the Villanova College Bowl team. These scholars were tested daily and nightly during this period for their knowledge, their quick recall, and their ability to work as a team.

'No Idealists'

"There were no starry-eyed idealists among the members of our team."

As to his own part in the College Bowl, Huttanus Huttanus said, "I'm working my way through college, and I was happy to be able to participate in a program that brought scholarship money into the school." Upon graduation, he will seek a fellowship, and he itends to do graduate work in English.

$45,000 Grant To Help Professors In Summer Sessions

The National Science Foundation has announced that Villanova University will receive a grant totalling $45,000 to conduct summer sessions for teachers as part of the Foundation's efforts to enhance the ability and increase the classroom effectiveness of teachers.

For participating in the Foundation's grant, Villanova will offer teachers study opportunities in specially designed courses to renew their knowledge of fundamentals, acquaint them with recent developments and advancements, and familiarize them with new approaches in the presentation of their subject matter.

Tuition and Stipend

Villanova University, as part of the Foundation's arrangements, is to use the grants in the fields of Chemistry, Mathematics, and the earth sciences. Tuition and fees are paid for the participating teachers by the grant. They will also receive stipends of not more than $75 a week for the duration of the training, plus allowances for travel and allotments for dependents.

Administrator

The Administrator of the Villanova grant will be the Reverend J. Bernard Hubbert, OSA, of the University's Physics Department.

Villanova, by participating in the National Science Foundation's Grant, will be among 274 colleges and universities recently named as recipients.

Council, Freedom Forum Join, Present Meyer As Lecturer

by Tom Finan

A most heartening and welcome manifestation of student interest was evidenced at the University, shortly before the Christmas holidays. It represented a salient charge against the long-standing banners of apathy and disinterest supposedly prevalent among the majority of the student body of America's colleges.

The occasion of this demonstration of enthusiasm was the lecture given by the prominent right-wing spokesman, Mr. Frank S. Meyer. The Student Council and the Freedom Forum, in jointly sponsoring the endeavor, gave the opportunity to interested students to greatly enhance and further their personal education.

Significant Innovation

The lecture marked a significant innovation on the part of the Student Council, in cooperation with other campus organizations, in bringing prominent speakers in the fields of politics, science, industry, and the liberal arts to the campus.

Mr. Meyer, senior editor of the Conservative publication National Review, spoke on "The Reality of Communism: The Illusion of Co-existence." A renowned authority on the subject, Meyer was formerly a member of the Communist Party hierarchy. Now an avowed enemy of Communism, he has spoken at almost all of America's leading colleges and universities.

Publications

After attending Princeton and Oxford, Meyer did extensive graduate work at London University and the University of Chicago. Author of the definitive text, Moulding of Communists, Mr. Meyer's next book is In Defense of Freedom: A Conservative Credo, which will be published this month.

The address, given Thursday evening December 14, attracted not only students from Villanova, but also from several other universities in the Philadelphia area.

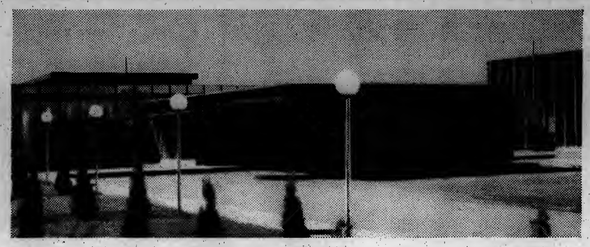
One of the interesting aspects of the lecture concerned the present state of American foreign policy. Mr. Meyer leveled effective criticism at the present ineffectiveness of the State Department in regards to their soft and liberal attitude on the deadly threat of international Communism. In view of the alarming advance of the Communist aggressors, Meyer stated that a more intelligent and forceful organ of policy formulation is necessitated.

Marines To Cuba

Speaking of the current situation in Latin America, Meyer referred to Cuba as "that Kremlin-dominated island of subversion ninety miles off the coast of Florida." Reiterating his stand of December 5 at a similar lecture at the University of Pennsylvania, Meyer stated that Cuba must be restored to democracy by definite and precise military action. He offered several plans of action: the use in a full scale invasion of the island of United States Marines; giving complete support to a Cuban guerilla movement; or an all-out economic embargo of the island country, to be backed up by a tight naval blockade.

Cold War Situation

With regards to the Soviet satellites, Meyer cited the need of a skillful plan calling for military and economic action to aid and equip rebel movements behind the Iron Curtain. Instead of wasting hundreds of millions in foreign aid on "friendly" Communist Poland and Yugoslavia, the money should be spent with regards to the true nature of Communism.



Following the lecture an animated question and answer period developed. A topic of imminent concern was why Frank S. Meyer had joined the Communist Party. In reply to this, Meyer stated that he felt in his undergraduate days the Communist philosophy fulfilled a definite vacuum in the contemporary realm of political and economic activity.

After seriously examining the situation, Meyer continued, he rejected this godless philosophy and was determined to rectify his past activity by an intense drive against that malevolent force.. At the end of the evening Mr. Meyer received an enthusiastic ovation from the audience, thus marking the end of a significant evening.

Only The Beginning

Seldom in the relatively short span of eight days does a college or university rise from the obscurity of regional distinction to a position of national prominance overnight. Eleven days ago, Villanova apparently did by achieving a rare double feat in athletics. The school surprised a nation, captivated a press, and rose in national standings. But the praise reaped was not the result of a crammed all night session or a feat of good timing. Rather, it was the result of a far-sighted program carefully blending a new and feasiable athletic program with a well balanced and noted academic program.

Last year Alex Bell's eleven plodded through a tough and miserable 2-8 season, the spirit of the students and the prestige of Villanova ebbing greatly in the process. The court Wildcats in Al Severance's swan season threw salt on the ever-deepening wound as they compiled an unimpressive 11-13 record, good for fifth highest in the Big Five. Only the baseball squad prevented wholesale wrist-slashing.

But Villanova, never a slouch athletically was not meant for such a fate, and set about to rebuild. Taking heed of Virgil's sound behest: "Yield not to misfortunes, but press forward the more boldly in their ace," the varsity coaches and their teams worked, aimed higher, shot well, and won. Result: the sports success story of 1961.

The football Wildcats, retaining the momentum of a successful 7-2 season and a renewed student spirit, shocked the Shockers from Wichita, 17-9, at El Paso's Twenty-eighth annual Sun Bowl game. The game was televised, giving the nation its first look at a school destined to dominate the news for more than a week.

The Wildcat five, riding the crest of a wave of eight consecutive court successes, stretched their streak to eleven, winning decisive victories over Niagara, nationally ranked Duquesne, and Iowa to take the champion's crown in the first annual Quaker City Tournament.

Banner sports headlines screamed across the country from El Paso to Philadelphia, from Los Angeles to New York. For the first time in history a major college had won both a bowl game and a basketball tourney in one day.

The following weekend, Villanova was again on the nation's television screens, this time as a challenger on the "College Bowl". After a winning preliminary round, Villanova's team lost in the televised game to the defending champions from Brigham Young University. Even though the team did its best, the loss was a disappointment. But if misery loves company, Villanova found eminent company in the ranks of the defeated "College Bowl" teams which they joined.

After reflecting on all of the accomplishments of these few days, one can not help speculating about future possibilities, and new headlines. The only conclusion many see is that this was not our zenith, but only the beginning.

Counterpoint

MISSED THE POINT

by Joe McCarthy

The following is in answer to Mr. Joseph Willmott, '62, whose Letter to the Editor was published in the preceeding edition of the VILLANOVAN, December 13, 1961. Due to spatial limitations, an adequate answer was prohibitive. Mr. Willmott makes a few definite assertions in his letter which can be discerned if one manages to plow through varied and amusing invectives that continuously abound.

Throughout his letter, Mr. Willmott brings into the discussion the question of "civilian supremacy." There has been no effort to discuss this question in the editorial. Rather it contains itself to the point at hand, whether or not the military should be allowed to take part in politics while pledged to support their Commander-in-Chief.

It is also maintained by the letter's author that the editorial correctly stated the issue and then proceeded to ignore it. Why, then did he find it so necessary to dissect the editorial point by point and fruitlessly attempt to malign each particular assertion?

His contention that the majority of the editorial devotes itself to "irrevalent points and erroneous statements which constitute a gross extrapolation of fact," can only be the result of a biased and ignorant point of view.

At no time is the editorial in error. Each one of its statements can be substantiated. The charge of irrevalancy can be refuted with a careful reading (those who take care to write Letters to the Editors at least should have the good grace to read the topic of their discussion thoroughly).

The main premis is correctly stated in the second paragraph, the first acting as a means of introduction to uninformed readers. Each subsequent statement emphasizes the view of the paper and is developed from the main premis. They are hardly "irrevalent" f they establish and accomplish this purpose.

Those military officers preaching the tenets of the far right are in fact violating their oath to uphold the Constitution and its legally elected officials. Mr. Willmott claims that General Edwin A. Walker's actions were not clandestine nor organizational.

The distribution to his soldiers of John Birch literature, which is obviously ultra-conservative, when his allegiance should be given to a Commander-in-Chief, who is noted for his liberalism, certainly will establish Walker as acting in a "clandestine" fashion.

At the time, Walker was doubtlessly a supporter of the John Birch Society. His action in distributing their literature is consequently "organizational.' He definitely did not act as an individual would, but in the interests in a organization directly opposed to his superiors.

The use of analogy of this tendency among the United States military toward the right as compared to the French movement and attempted overthrow merely indicates just what dangers such a policy whould have among military politics. If the military were allowed to get out of hand, it is even conceivable that the United States could become merely another military dictatorship with complete disregard for individual freedom.

Eisenhower's directive to the military asking leaders to make known the threats of Communism to their personnel was no personal dictum to Walker to interpret that directive as pretext to preach the facist doctrines of the John Birch Society which condemns not only cleric, teachers, and scientists, but also condemns the very author of that directive, Eisenhower himself, as a dupe of the Communist conspiracy.

Just as the extreme right accuses the extreme left of wrapping itself in a Constitution that it would rather see destroyed, so too, Walker, who wraps himself up in the cloak of the Presidential directive, preaches a mysticism that condemns his protection's author.

We'd ask Mr. Willmott to take another look try to recognize this fundamental incongruity of his position.

Precarious Position

A strong indication of the possible failure of the United Nations was seen recently when Portugal announced its intention to "refuse them (the United Nations) our collaboration in everything that is not in our direct interest."

This announcement came on the heels of the UN's failure to aid Portugal during India's invasion of Goa, Damao, and Diu last month. Also included in this bitter message was the announcement that Portugal would be among the first to pull out of the United Nations.

The UN's failure to act may very well have been a serious blow to the hopes of the world organization's proponents. If any other countries decide to assume the same attitude as Salazar's regime, the UN will find its existence in peril.

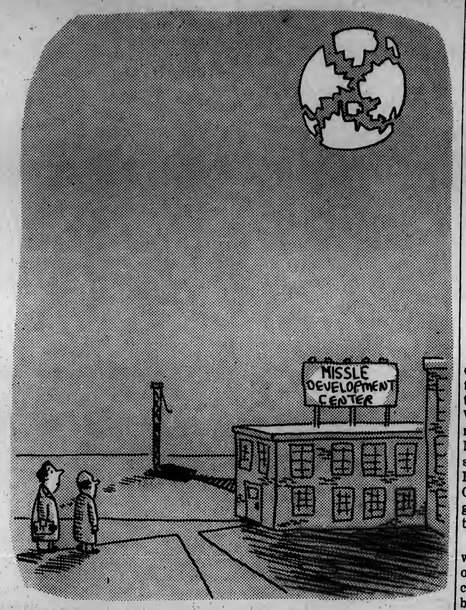
The Goa fiasco may be the result of the relative lack of forceful means of control in the all-important Security Council. India has observed the stalemates which have been so prevalent in the United Nations due to the veto regulations in the council.

If India had taken its case to the United Nations a decision would certainly have been long in coming from that body, if it would have come at all. Thus India went ahead on its own.

This inherent weakness may bring about similar cases of a country ignoring the United Nations and resorting to its own resources to attain its desires in relation to other countries. If this disregard of the UN becomes too widespread, the entire organization will become merely symbolic, much as the present state of the World Court. With the UN in this state it will rapidly deteriorate until it disbands altogether.

Coming Council

To many Catholic college students Pope John's convocation of the Second Vatican Ecumenical Council means little more than just another widely publicized news item. The failure to grasp the full import of this event on the part of those who should be the best informed certainly does little to help the cause of religious unity so dear to the Pontiff's heart.



In keeping, therefore, with one of the stated aims of the proposed Vatican Council, that of striving for a union of all Christians under the Roman Pontiff, college students should, indeed must, actively imbue themselves with the Ecumenical spirit.

What does that mean? It means simply that what has come to be called the Catholic—non Catholic dialogue, the friendly discussion of divergent views with non-Catholics, must become a part of the intellectual and spiritual life of every American Catholic college student. It means that he cannot afford to avoid any opportunity to explain his faith on an elevated level, to listen respectfully to other theological opinions, and above all to attempt to suppress all vestiges of that emotionalism which has obscured the real differences as well as the similarities for the past four hundred years.

The need for Catholic students to exercise an influence within their own environment is certainly imperative. The longing for religious unity is being felt in all quarters. Various protestant sects have already made overtures toward unity among themselves. It is becoming increasingly apparent to non-Catholics as well as to Catholics that the division among the followers of Christ is a scandal and an abomination. It is up to the well educated Catholic, particularly to the college student, to seize upon this atmosphere of tolerance and good will to help to win followers to the only unity which Christians can ever hope to achieve in this life, union with the Holy Roman See.

But he must not only utilize this brotherly attitude. He must take the fore in creating and helping to sustain it. In this way the Catholic college student can, in a very real sense, personally participate in the coming Council; only by action can he assume his burden in the ecumenical movement.

'West Side Story,' Sophia Loren Top Oscar Contenders For 1961

by Al LaMastra

The cream of the motion picture crop for 1961 is represented by the following ten films, which have been selected by this reviewer as the best pictures of the year:

"West Side Story"
"Judgment At Nuremberg"
"The Hustler"
"La Dolce Vita"
"Raisin In The Sun"
"Summer And Smoke"
"Two Women"
"Guns of Navarone"
"One, Two, Three'
"Ballad Of A Soldier"

"West Side Story" is the most exciting and original film to hit the screen this year, thanks to the brilliant direction of Robert Wise and the superb choreography of Jerome Robbins, Natalie Wood, and Rita Moreno, sure Oscar contenders; Richard Beymer, Russ Tamblyn, and George Chakiris contributed grace, beauty, and vitality to this musical.

"Judgement At Nuremberg," which is among the great films of this decade, is an engrossing courtroom drama, fictionally based on German war criminal trials. It is a story composed of superb collective and individual drama, excitingly presented and brilliantly acted. A memorable performance is given by the cast, each member of which is a sure award nominee. Particularly outstanding are Spencer Tracy, Judy Garland, and Maxmillian Schell.

"The Hustler," deftly handled by director Robert Rossen, is a tense, absorbing, excellently filmed, authentic drama of a small-town poolroom shark who tries to break into the big time; the gambler who stakes and tries to ruin him; and the girl who sacrifices herself for him. This is Piper Laurie's finest performance, with Jackie Gleason, Paul Newman, and George C. Scott handling their roles superbly.

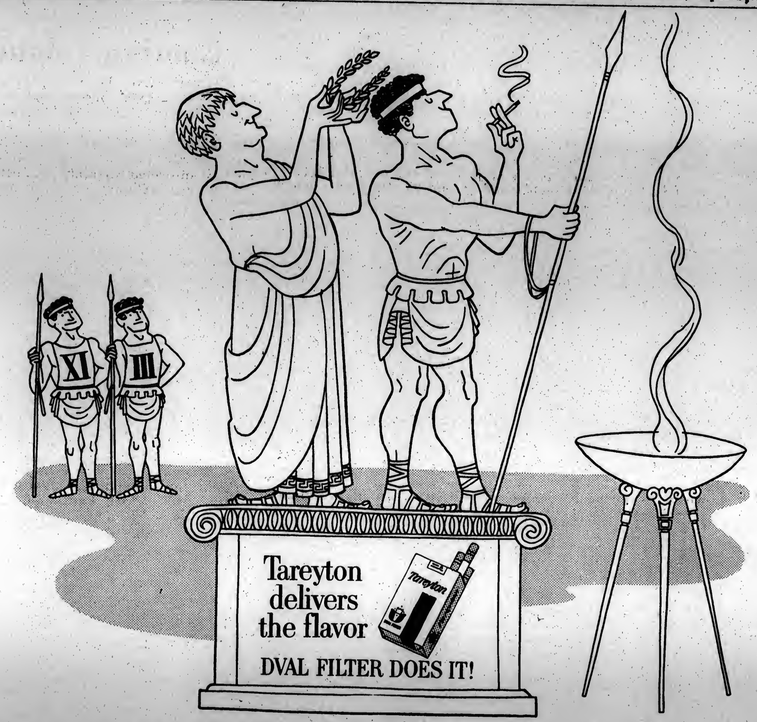
Romans Revealed

"La Dolce Vita," a Cook's Tour of sin, sex, greed, and selfishness, is this year's fascinating study in depravity. The absorbing three-hour motion picture morality play set in modern Rome is of epic proportion and bitter significance. The action revolves around a gossip columnist who sinks into the moral degradation of the cafe society life he sees, reports, and eventually learns to share. Again the performances, direction, and photography of Fellini's film are first rate.

"Raisin In The Sun" stars Sidney Poitier, Claudia McNiel, Ruby Dee, and Diana Sands in the absorbing, magnificent film version of Lorraine Hansberry's drama of a Negro family in Chicago. Among the best of any year and better than the play, the movie has been found rich in humor, warmth, meaning, and humanity by audiences.

"Summer And Smoke," a stirring psychological drama, was produced by Hal Wallis from a play by Tennessee Williams. Director Peter Glenville obtained fine performances from a cast headed by Geraldine Page, Laurence Harvey, Rita Moreno, and Una Merkel. Miss Page's enactment of a shy Southern girl is a work of histrionic art.

Sophia—Best Actress of the Year



"Two Women" was Vittorio DeSica's monumental contribution to fine cinema. It is a gripping dramatic version of a mother and young daughter trapped in the confusion of the final days of the War in Italy. Miss Loren's characterization of the shocked, shattered, and horrified mother is classic.

"Guns of Navarone," the most exciting adventure film to reach the screen during 1961, was written and produced by Carl Foreman and admirably directed by J. Lee Thompson. The excellent cast was headed by Gregory Peck, David Niven, and Anthony Quinn. For breathtaking spectacle, packed with thrills, this first rate cloak-and-dagger adventure tops anything on this year's screens.

Rowdy and Slapstick

"One, Two, Three" is Billy Wilder's contribution to the year's amusement film program. He has adapted a Ferenc Molnar one-act play into a bold bit of fooling that smacks somewhat of Wilder's earlier "Ninotchka." Full of funny gags, this picture presents James Cagney in a fast-talking role that will bring the star back to film prominence. Horst Bucholz, Arlene Francis, Pamela Tiffin, and Lilo Pulver play their roles in the comedy for all they are worth.

"Ballad Of A Soldier," our last film, is a Russian import — deeply moving, tender, touching, and tragic drama. It tells the story of a youth going home on brief furlough from the War, his first sensing of life, love, and loss. It is exquisitely acted, imaged, and directed with touches of beauty never before achieved by the up-to-now restricted Soviet film industry.

Carnival + Game + El Paso = Wonderful Week

by Ed Lohr

The following is a diary type report of the Sun Carnival in El Paso, Texas.

December 27, 7:00 am. Temperature 16°; Thirty-seven Villanova Wildcats were on hand at scheduled departure time as classcut leader Lou Rettino made an appearance at 7:30.

8:30 am EST. American Astrojet departs from Philadelphia and lands in Baltimore 20 minutes later. Eat breakfast after take-off then lose a game of chess to Jack Weed over Memphis.

Noon CST. Card games in full swing as "Bart" Merenda cleans up. Plane lands in Dallas. Tom O'Rourke's ears take a beating as we land with just three jets.

12:30 MST Cold platter lunch served on plane. Weed bets he can eat 20 of these lunches—then dozes off contented. One hour later land in El Paso, Texas, temperature 62°. Mayor extends greetings then a fleet of 1962 cars zoom us on a tour of the city behind the screeching sirens of a police escort. The Del Camino Motor Hotel—second largest of its type in the Southwest—was our quarters. Team goes to practice, returns to roast beef dinner, and on to El Paso—well, OK, Juarez!

December 28, 7:30 am. Awake to see Sam Gruneisen, who flew in from Louisville last night. "Star Heckler" Charlie Johnson comes alive as Rege "Chamber of Commerce" Magnus claims a national twist contest will be held in Pittsburgh.

8:30. Arrive at Sheriff's Posse Hall in New Mexico for an all-you-can-eat western style breakfast. Introduction of Jake Nevin as a "miniature Ike." Next a 238 pound "toro" from Coatesville awed the Texans with a version of the Twist that not even the Peppermint Lounge has seen. The wild affair was broken up as Hank David screamed Tom Dooley for what seemed like hours.

10:30 am. First look at mountain-shrouded Kidd Stadium for me — the only green patch in Texas (and it was dyed). Practice is over after two hours and the bus ride home sends hearts to throats as radio blasts "Wichita's team-carrying plane was forced back to the Kansas town in serious trouble." Johnson jests, "Suit up gang for Blue-White Day."

1:45 pm. Team off to Juarez on shopping spree. Richie Richman, Gruniesen, Mike Pettine, Dr. Lee, and myself head for the championship El Paso Country Club layout. Gruniesen hit three successive trees on no. six and Pettine sent ripples across the pond on no. 9 twice. Richman and I broke even in match play.

9:00 pm. FLASH — telephone call to Philly — 'Cats 78-Dukes 53. Gridders go wild. On to Juarez!

December 29, Noon. Arrive at Hilton Hotel for Lions — Touchdown Club's riotous luncheon. Art Mahan suggests they make the Sun Bowl a "three game series".

2:00 pm. Team off to practice, I to Juarez to buy boots and end up striking it rich. I happen to meet a nationally ranked amateur tennis player, Adon Lopez, and his companion, Sal Ramos.

December 30. 7:30 am. After team Mass we return to plunge into a 10 oz. filet mignon wrapped in bacon, eggs, potatoes — must I go on — a typical training table meal.

12:15 pm. The moment is here. Departure for the Sun Bowl game — I felt like Don Knotts.

5:00 pm. Alex Bell said, "I am so grateful to the players and coaches —we had a lot of fun but the purpose of this trip was to win this game and we did it." Billy Joe, who missed a movie Friday night, made movies and received the MVP award. Captain Rich Ross was named as Outstanding lineman.

An All-American Comes To Town

by Joe Zawacki

Something rare occurred at the Palestra over the Christmas holidays during the first Quaker City Festival . . . so rare an occurrence that many of the fans present didn't realize it until Saturday's final between Villanova and Iowa.

In plain simple words, an All-American came to town. A real one, too; not a great offensive shooter, not a "fancy-Dan" ballhandler, nor a defensive specialist . . . but rather a combination of all three. Thus is described Iowa's 6-6 center, Don Nelson.

Don Nelson

Calling someone an All-American usually generates some sort of an argument, since everyone seems to have his own idols and bias more often than not colors a rooter's judgment. But consider these three qualifications that considerably narrow the field of aspirants: (1) An A-A has to have great natural ability (brilliant deduction), (2) he should use his head as well as his God-given talents, (3) he should be consistent.

The last named is the stickler and for those who saw Nelson pick a harried Hawkeye team off the Palestra floor from a 41-23 halftime deficit and make the championship game a battle, there should be little doubt as to his qualifications.

Touch of Irony

It was ironic too that the Villanova first half blitz had the Iowa ball handlers so rushed that they threw the ball away 14 times in the first half without a shot and in trying to get the ball to Nelson, it was continually batted away by the quick handed Cats. Thus, 14 minutes had passed before Nelson scored his first points and some of the know-it-all's were starting to jeer at the tow-headed blond. The irony comes in when you think, "How do you boo a guy good enough to score 26 points against Jerry Lucas and average 23 per game against the likes of Lucas, Dischinger, Bellamy, and Rudometkin?"

The hoots quickly subsided in the second half as the Hawkeyes (despite the loss of ballhandler Matt Szykowny) whittled the VU lead to 7 points before Jack Kraft called time to settle the eventual champs down. The lead was shortened mainly because Nelson took charge, and when the game ended, he was game high with 19 points (6 goals on only 13 shots), 16 rebounds (9 more than the highest Cat), and, taking over defensive duties on Hubie White, he held the VU captain to 2 goals on 11 shots in the second half.

The senior from Rock Island is in good position to set a new Iowa 3-year scoring record, currently held by Chuck Darling, and has already set the single season scoring. A physical education major, Don is married and has a daughter. If you're thinking that P.E. is a soft major, remember that four of the five starters on the Iowa team flunked out last January. It was the very next week that Nelson led four sophs on to the court to do battle with Ohio State. The game ended with Iowa on the short end of a 62-61 count, but Nelson and company had given the Buckeyes a slight fright.

Positive View

How does it feel to play in the same conference with so many stars that you get lost in the headlines? The view that Nelson takes is typical of the kind of guy he is: "It's been good for me, because the experience I've gotten from playing against guys like Lucas can't be measured in newspaper space."

Oh yeah, that's another thing about All-Americans . . . they've got class off the court, too.

VU Varsity Swimmers Drop Second In Row To Army Powerhouse

The varsity swimmers dropped their second in a row to a strong Army squad 57-38. They had lost their first meet to West Chester 51-44 despite their establishing several new pool records.

At West Point the Cat 400 yard Medley Relay team of Filey Hicks, Don Boehmeke, Dick McDonough, and Jack Geoghagan also established a new pool mark, 3:59.1, by clipping eight-tenths of a second off the old record set by the Naval Academy eleven years ago.

Army Now 5-1

It was the fifth win for the superior strength of the Army team whose only previous loss had been at the hands of a powerful Harvard squad. A sweep in the last four events against the Main Liners provided Army with its needed points to take the win. In all, the Wildcats won five of the eleven events.

Sophomore Dick McDonough again led the Villanova contingent as a double winner in the 50 yard freestyle and the 200 yard butterfly. Also taking firsts for Villanova were Tom Feron in diving and Jack Geoghagan in the 100 yard freestyle.

Hardwood Five Cop Quaker City Tourney; Teamwork Credited

The local paper's front sports page headline on Dec. 31 had the effect of a thousand trumpets blaring in unison. Villanova had capped its greatest day in sports with championships in both the Sun Bowl and the Quaker City Festival.

Quaker City Festival

While the footballers were still drilling for the contest with Wichita, Jack Kraft's unheralded TEAM was giving the Palestra fans something new in VU basketball — teamwork and coaching.

Three times Kraft and Co. got together and the results were the same each time: one victim dead, caused by lightning. So quick was the lightning that the first half scores are maybe even more meaningful than the finals. In the opening round, Niagara trailed by 35-25, before succumbing by 72-45.

The semi-finals saw 7th ranked Duquesne left at the gate by the torrid shooting and ballhawking of the Cats and the 20 minute score was 42-19. The Dukes never recovered and lost by the final count of 78-53 (the Pittsburgh trip will be a beaut). Iowa fared a little better, but only because the Big Ten representative refused to quit. Also hit by 50% shooting, The Hawkeyes trailed by 41-23 before losing by 69-56.

Jones MVP

Kraft resorted to the old cliché about it being a team victory, but only because it was true. Iowa coach Sharm Scheuerman and star Don Nelson both agreed the Main Liners had the quickest pairs of hands that they had seen in some time. It would be useless to single out any one player on the team. All five deserved the MVP award in some way, though this is not meant to take away from Wally Jones, whose play in the last month has made him VU's most valuable and consistent performer.

Mountaineers Edge Wildcats, 88-82 For Mainliners Initial Setback

by Ed Lohr

Mountaineer Field House in Morgantown, West Virginia is comparable to Juarez, Mexico—you can't possibly believe it until you have seen it. Villanova was knocked from the unbeaten ranks there Saturday night 88-82 as history repeated itself.

Two years ago another unbeaten Wildcat contingent blew into this small basketball-crazed town and was beaten in much the same manner. It seems that neither team ever had a chance.

Cats Grab Early Lead

Villanova showed a hot hand from the start and jumped off to a 3-0 lead on Hubie White's jumper and Jim McMonagle's foul shot on the same play.

Villanova opened up its biggest lead midway in the first half 24-15 and that is when the Mountaineers and some odd calls came at the Cats with a double barreled squirrel gun.

Led by All-American Rod Thorn and Tom Lowry, West Virginia rallied for a 30-30 tie with 6:47 to go in the half and grabbed its first lead with 3:19 remaining. The Mountaineers hung on to lead 41-40 at the intermission. Thorn led all scorers with 29 points, but it was Lowry who broke the Cats backs. The big 6-8 sophomore tallied 17 points and grabbed 17 crucial rebounds.

The Wildcats' shooting was phenomonal as the sellout throng of 6800 screaming fanatics was left breathless at Cats shooting eye. In the first half Villanova sank 18 out of 35 for 51.5% as against the Mountaineer's 40.6%.

Overall Villanova was an even 50% as they made good on 34 of 68 attempts. White, playing by far his best ball game in three against the Blue and Gold, and probably the best of his life, lead the Cats with 28 points.

His flashy side kicks Wally Jones and George Leftwich kept the Main Liners in the game while adding 19 and 18 points respectively. Leftwich was a remarkable 9 for 14 from the floor. McMonagle also played a bang-up game.

The game was not lost, however, from the floor as West Virginia also made 34 field goals. In the first half the personal foul sheet read 13 called against Villanova, while the Mounties never reached the 1 and 1 position, as only 6 were called on them. The final stats showed the fouls 23-15 against Villanova including 4 called against West Virginia in the last two minutes.

Two Big Five Teams Included In Post-Honeymoon Campaign

by Bob Larkin

Villanova opens its Big Five competition tonight when it takes on the Temple Owls at the Palestra. The Owls, ranked seventeenth in the country, captured the Hurricane Classic in Miami, Florida, downing Minnesota 70-66 and host team, Miami, 85-67. Under the coaching of the old pro, Harry Litwack, Temple invaded Florida with a 5-1 record losing only to powerful Kentucky.

Bruce Drysdale led the club to a 20-8 season last year with 21.3 ppg. Ed Devery, Earl Procter, Russ Gordon, and John Koskinen round out the veteran starting five, all of whom averaged better than ten ppg. last year. The Wildcats, picked last in the Big Five this year, will be out to redeem themselves for their loss to the Owls last year. Philadelphia fans are anxious to see the Drysdale-Wally Jones duel tonight.

Five Musketeers

Saturday night the Wildcats travel to Cincinnati, Ohio, to meet Xavier. The Musketeers, off a 17-10 record last year, have beaten St. Bonaventure and Providence while losing to Dayton last week 64-48. Coach Jim McCafferty could field an all-veteran team, the first in the school's history to reach the NCAA tournament.

Paced by 6-8 senior center Jack Thobe and 6-5 Frank Pinchback, Xavier also has a group of five sophs including 6'4" Joe Geiger. Bob Pelkington, Billy Kirvin, and Leo McDermott are also slated to see action.

Villanova returns to the Palestra January 20 to face Penn in its second Big Five outing. Coach Jack McCloskey's Quakers, who dumped the Wildcats twice last season, have lost to LaSalle, Iowa, and Duquesne, the last two losses coming in the Quaker City Tournament.

The Ivies managed a fourth place finish in the tournament, dropping Holy Cross Crusaders, with defensive ace Bob Purdy holding Jack "The Shot" Foley to 13 points. Sid Amira, John Wideman, and Purdy and J. D. Graham are all back from last year's club along with sophomore backcourt star Ray Carazo.

South Invades Again

Memphis State invades the Palestra on January 27 for the second consecutive year. Last year the Tennessee Tigers outlasted the Wildcats while Wayne Yates showed himself to be the All-American he was. With Yates gone, Memphis State will have a rough time matching their 20-3 slate of last year. Frank Snyder, 6-6, is back, along with Larry Garber, Ted Lane, Hunter Beckman, and 6-7 Jim Ingold.

Return Engagement

On January 31 the Cats travel to Pittsburgh to meet Duquesne in their own backyard. Villanova dropped the Dukes from the ranks of the unbeaten in the semi-finals of the Quaker City Tournament, 78-53, holding their ace, Willie Somerset, to four points. Somerset rebounded agaist Penn in the consolation game with 33 points and is expected to give Coach Jack Kraft a long night.

Steel Dukes

The Dukes, finishing first in the Steel Bowl in Pittsburgh and third in the Quaker City Tourney, have clipped the likes of Bowling Green, Duke, and St. Bonavenature. Ranked third before the Villanova setback Duquesne is now rated at eighth in the nation. Clyde Arnold and Paul Benec, a pair of 6-6 seniors, handle the rebounding while Terry Malloy and John Cegalis hold down the forward posts.

Indoor Track Debuts Saturday; Veteran Squad Seeks Title

Villanova's indoor track team will open its 1962 campaign on Saturday, January 13, at the Knights of Columbus meet in Boston. Due to the holidays, the team will have only a week and a half of official practice. Nevertheless, Coaches Jim Elliott and Jim Tuppenny expected the team to work out on their own during the holidays.

Two Graduates

With the exception of relaymen Nick DeAngelis and Joe Manion who have graduated, this is the same team that placed in the controversial IC4A indoor title meet last year. Among the returnees are Olympians Frank Budd, Otis Drayton, and polevaulter Rolando Cruz. Cruz won the Bronze medal in the 1960 Games.

Joe in Shotput

Pat Traynor is expected to compete in the mile and Vic Zwolak will run in the mile and two mile events. Billy Joe is expected to be ready for the shotput by early February.

Frosh Runners

In addition to the upperclassmen on the squad, several freshman will also run. Don Webster, crack quartermiler, and miler Tom Sullivan lead the impressive list. In fact, on November 20 the Frosh won the Freshman IC4A Cross-country title.

Most Spectacular Victory

Little noticed, Jim Tuppenny calls this win "the most spectacular victory in Villanova sports history." Sullivan, Dave Hyland, and Marty Ferko finished 1-2-3 to capture 17 points out of a possible 25.

Unmatched by Delaney

Said Tuppeny, "This feat cannot even be matched during the times of Ron Delaney and Charlie Jenkins."

Jim Thomas (33) does a double take in an attempt to avoid a Wichita tackler but he heads into another Shocker guard during the Wildcat's victory in the El Paso Sun Bowl.

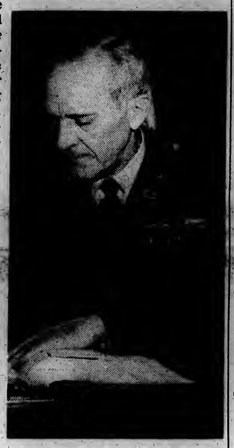
He has contributed numerous articles to professional legal journals, and was chiefly responsible for the last two manuals for Courts Martial.

Member of Many Courts



General Decker is a member of the Bar of the Supreme Court of Kansas, the United States Court of Military Appeals, and the Supreme Court of the United States. He has long been active in the American Bar Association. Presently he is the chairman of its Criminal Law Section, a member of the Council of the Section on Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar, and a member of the special committee appointed by the President of the American Bar Association to study financing in the field of legal education.

Plans Finalized For Senior Dinner Dance Amidst Dishevelment

The Senior Class has finalized its plans for the Senior Dinner Dance — the highlight of the class's four year activities at Villanova. The dance will be held February 23.

Tickets will go on sale Monday, February 12, at 9:30 in the Student Council Office, second floor of Dougherty Hall. The price is $15.00 per couple.

Arrangements Complete

Dance chairman Mike Stapf has completed almost all of the arrangements. Some of them include the contracting of Paul Judge who won such great approval at last year's Junior Dinner Dance, and the preparing of a new menu, which will include beef for the entree, as opposed to last year's turkey. There will also be favors.

Photographer to be Present

The committee has made arrangements for a photographer to take pictures of those couples desiring them. A price list will be placed on the class bulletin board.

Measurements for tuxedoes will be taken in Sullivan Hall Lounge in the East Wing on February 14, 15, 16. They will be delivered on February 21, the rental charge to be $6.00.

Parking will be available to students attending at a cost of 85 cents which includes Student Council discount.

Large Affair

Class president, Ray Trapp was quoted as saying that "the Dinner Dance is expected to be the biggest affair the class has run, and I am sure that every member of the class will find the entire evening both tasteful and enjoyable."

Working along with Stapf has been Dan Peschio, who is in charge of favors and invitations. Chip D'Ambrosio and Don Berry have helped on ticket sales.

Dinner Dance

Particulars for the Dinner Dance will be presented at a general meeting o fthe Senior Class which will be held in Room 110 of the Commerce and Finance Building on Thursday at 10:30.

Jeff Haskill performs during last year's Jazz Festival. Haskill will return Feb. 23 to try to repeat his win of last year.

Coss To Judge Jazz Festival; N.Y. Editor Of 'Down Beat'

Bill Coss, The New York Editor of DOWN BEAT, the internationally famous music magazine, will be one of the judges when good music returns to the Villanova Campus on Friday, February 23 at the SECOND ANNUAL VILLANOVA INTERCOLLEGIATE JAZZ FESTIVAL which will be held at the Field House as part of the Senior Weekend festivities.

The show, presented for the first time last spring during Junior Week, was such an artistic and financial success that the Senior Class voted out the Prom for the first time in the history of the class.

Best In East

The Villanova Jazz Festival will present the cream of college musicians in the East, competing for the favor of judges from the world of Jazz and also the people in the audience.

Co-chairmen for the event are again Jim Braithwaite and Joe Zawacki both of whom have promised an even higher level of quality than last year in both the music and the show. Considering the high calibre of last year's show, this year's event looks to be a great one.

Braithwaite again took care of writing to the various schools in search of groups; then, he and Zawacki auditioned them in person or by tape. Braithwaite said that "we contacted every major school in the Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York area and of those that answered, we feel that we have selected only groups of the highest calibre."

Visited Tradespeople

Zawacki, who will again emcee the proceedings, then spent last week visiting the various columnists in the area and the Disc Jockeys who program good music. He said that the co-operation "has been excellent." The VILLANOVAN's Sports Ed-

Bigham Stars At NFCCS Dance; 'Valentine's Day' Theme

Villanova's chapter of the National Federation of Catholic College Students will host the student body at their annual dance. The dance will he held in the Field House on Friday evening, February 9, from 9 to 1 a.m. The cost is $3.00 per couple.

Gene Felch, with the assistance of the nurses will provide the decorations for the event. The theme is "Valentine's Day" with the traditional red and white color motif.

Bigham Plays

The Eddie Bigham Orchestra, a well known area dance band, will provide the music for the evening. The Bigham group has been on campus before and is looking forward to another successful engagement.

Jim McErlane and Pete Federico, co-chairman of pubicity, announced that the tickets would go on sale in the Pie Shoppe this week. McErlane pointed out that this dance is the only dance during the second semester, other than the Shamokinaki, that is open to the entire student body.

NFCCS Activities

Gene d'Aquilli, general chairman, stated that the proceeds from the dance would go to the NFCCS for the chapter's annual dues. NFCCS is one of the few campus organizations that is granted a Committee status on the Student Council.

The dance is being held in association with the Student Council. NFCCS hopes to inaugurate its own treasury and be able to finance the annual dues itself without the aid of the the Student Council. Formerly, the burden of financing the NFCCS's year of activities was placed on the Administration and the Student Council.

McErlane added on a humorous note, "Come to the dance, enjoy yourself, help support a campus activity, and strike a blow for Human Dignity all at the same time."

Fr. Kelly To Conduct Junior Retreat Beginning Feb. 17

The annual retreat of the Junior Class of Villanova will be held this year on February 15, 16, and 17. The retreat which opens Thursday evening at 7:30 and is completed at noon Saturday, will be conducted by Reverend John J. Kelly, CSP, of the Paulist Fathers. All exercises will be conducted in the Field House.

At the same time, a separate retreat will be conducted for all nurses and all other undergraduate women. This series of spiritual exercises will be held in the University Chapel under the direction of Reverend Joseph F. Mahon CSP also of the Paulist Fathers.

Attendance cards for both retreats may be picked up at the Center Lounge Dougherty Hall on Monday and Tuesday, February 12, 13.

Scholarly Journal Provides New Voice For Villanovans

by Frank Quattrone

Making its initial appearance with an avowed purpose to stimulate student thought, CONCEPT became available to the student body of Villanova University last Monday, February 5. The first issue of CONCEPT, a scholarly journal which allows the interested student to voice freely his well-developed opinions on life and the world, contains much criticism of contemporary problems in addition to intellectual humor and philosophy.

This issue is dedicated to Frank McCormick, one of the founders and the first Editor-in-Chief of CONCEPT. His was the basic idea for this journal, which can now be purchased at thirty cents per copy.

Commenting on CONCEPT, current Editor-in-Chief Gene d'Aquilli, remarked: 'I am grateful to all the editors, especially to Dan Martin and Bob Moss, for their selfless and tireless aid in putting togother this thought-provoking publication."

d'Aquili, Martin Critics

Among the critical essays in the current issue, "Knowledge in the Twentieth Century," in which the necessity for a reapprochment between the humanities and the physical sciences is considered, was the work of d'Aquilli. Copy Editor Dan Martin contributed a long essay on "Music" in three parts: "A Discussion, An Exhortation, and A Mode of Attack."

Four other critical analyses are contained. In "Communism —A Student's Analysis," Rolf Memming raises some serious questions on the significance of the world Communist movement and the responsibility of the student in a Communist threatened world. Peter J. Galie's "Contra Nihil" attacks the nihilist tendencies of modern-day society. The titles of the other two, Joseph's Conlin's "Popular Music: A Critique," and McCormick's "Educating an Exploding Population," speak well enough for their topics.

Circulation Editor Anthony Coccia wrote the philosophical essay, "A Metaphysics of Love." Intellectual humor was the embodiment of "Life, Women, Pretzels," an essay written by Peter Argentiero.

Expansion Planned

CONCEPT is planning to expand to approximately ten articles for its next issue, set tentatively for the early weeks of May. Well-developed ideas and articles contributed by any student are considered for publication. Presently the editors are considering another source of material. One or two exceptional papers from the honors program, re-written especially for CONCEPT, may be printed if this can be arranged.

The cover of this issue is a striking tan with the bold-print title just above the center.

Library Cancels Sunday Eve Hours; Lack Of Use Blamed

During the latter part of the fall semester because of student demand, the library initiated a temporary open-hours schedule till 10 p.m. on Sunday nights. The reaction of the student body to this policy is rather disappointing and has resulted in the following action announced by an official memorandum from the administration.

"A study having been made on the use of the library on Sunday evenings, it has been found that this use has been so minimal that it is not worth the cost and time of the library staff to keep the library open. The library will not remain open on Sunday evening as of this date. An hourly count of people using the library and the number of books withdrawn was maintained every Sunday that the library was open last semester. The results were rather disappointing."

The only conclusion to be drawn from the above memorandum is that the majority of Villanova students neither care to use the library facilities on Sunday nights, and that they have more important things to occupy their time on Sunday evenings instead of preparing for the following week's assignments.

Unusual Occurrences Observable Tomorrow Pi Theta Chi Pledges

Women on campus refusing to speak to men, wearing no make-up, dressed alike—all this can mean only one thing. The nurses are pledging tomorrow.

Pi Theta Chi, the nurses' sorority, will hold its annual pledging during the day, followed by initiation at night.

About fifty girls, including several upperclassmen as well as many freshmen, will wear white blouses, skirts selected according to their pledging groups, and beanies decorated with ribbons and bows.

Worst of all, they must forsake that ever-present symbol of American womanhood, the combination suitcase-defense weapon —the pocketbook.

Notes of Infractions

The activities of the aspirants will be closely watched by their big sisters, the sophomores, who will make notes of infractions by their errant charges. Kay Urebi, chairman of the initiation committee, has stated that pledges will make reparation for their wayward actions during the initiation proceedings.

Since one of the major purposes of pledging and initiations is to help newcomers become acquainted with others, pledges will wear name tags. Their pictures have been on display this week on the sophomre bulletin board for the same purpose. Both ideas were instituted by this year's committee, which includes Carol Trevisan, Barbara Britt, Ginny Hengeveld, and Pat Blake.

The evening's actvities are scheduled to occur after the regular business meeting.

PORTRETTE

Lynx, Evans and Europe

In one of his frequent pensive moods, English empiricist and essayist, Sir Francis Bacon, once mused: "Travel, in the younger sort, is a part of education; in the elder, a part of experience." At least one Villanova student has already lived the former. And as he intends to live the latter, he becomes a classic embodiment of the traveler alluded to in Bacon's famous words. That student is Garrett Evans, Editor-in-Chief of the LYNX.

As a younger lad, Evans took up residence for five years in the intriguing atmosphere of the colorful European cities of Paris, France, and Heidelberg, Germany, where he also studied. Since those years, he has always felt a strong attraction for Europe and its people.

Literary Ends

Upon graduation, this junior English major plans to pursue his master's degree in English at Exeter College in Exeter, England. This is one of the three great provincial colleges of England, ranking academically high with Cambridge and Oxford. Projecting his thoughts and his plans even further, Evans intends to enter into the teaching profession, and will contribute his writings occasionally to various publications. He may also decide to teach in Europe.

At Villanova, Evans is directing his activities accordingly. As Art Editor of BELLE AIR and as Editor-in-Chief of the LYNX, he has taken active strides toward the fulfillment of his goals. He is also a member of Delta Pi Mu.

Garrett Evans

Evans, who currently calls Short Hills, New Jersey, his home, considers the LYNX "an instrument of the University which indicates the progress in the tastes and talents of its student body. It also points back to the English Department," he continued. "But there is always some room for improvement. And the time is now ripe for more substantial thought, more creativity in writing."

Musmanno Speaker At Law Forum On Eichmann Trial

The Honorable Michael A. Musmanno, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, addressed the third meeting of the Villanova Law Forum at Garey Hall on Wednesday evening January 10. The jurist discussed "The Eichmann Case."

The spectators who filled the room to capacity, represented many law students and interested laymen. The Justice was introduced by Harold Gill Reuschlein, Dean of the Law School.

Defends Right

The Justice defended Israel's right, both legal and moral, to try Eichmann and commented that her international respect was duly increased. The trial was conducted with all fairness, in "compliance with the most meticulous standards of trial procedure recognized by civilized nations throughout the world."

The manner in which Eichmann was apprehended was a matter for discussion. The jurist said "legalistic quibblers and hair-splitting pundits insisted that Eichmann should be freed because they said he had been kidnapped from Argentina, to which he fled. Is the law so deficient that it cannot try a murdered who seeks to escape over an ocean of blood which he himself has filled?"

Israel Was Right

He then defended Israel's stand by saying, "in spite of this violent opposition, some of which rested on stiff-necked pedantry, much on sheer perversity and not a little on inexcusable prejudice, Israel went ahead because she knew she was right."

The Justice then went on to describe the torture and what the Nazi government considered the "final solution to the Jewish problem."

After the speech which lasted nearly an hour, questions were taken from the audience. A slight man of the Jewish faith posed a question which he was unable to finish and other questions were also colorfully answered. In defense of the verdict, which had been announced earlier, the jurist refused to have his convictions shaken.

A careful driver approached the railroad tracks and quickly applied his brakes. He looked up and down the track and listened. All he heard was the car behind him crashing into his gas tank.

Lynx Winter Issue Arrives; Overall Innovation Is Seen

The winter issue of the LYNX is currently available in the Pie Shoppe, at twenty-five cents per copy.

As a semi-annual literary publication, the LYNX is a medium of expression for creative literary efforts of the undergraduate student body. It is comprised of fiction, short stories, essays, reviews, art work and poetry.

Innovation

The current issue contains an innovation in editorial standards. As expressed by Garrett Evans, Lynx editor, "... the policy of the staff of the LYNX this year has been to attempt to produce a publication evolving on a liberal university level ... a magazine of quality. I feel that this current edition of the LYNX very closely fulfills that ideal ..."

A complete alteration of the exchange system is being effected this year. Previously the LYNX was sent to local Catholic colleges, high schools, and convents, all of whom were members of the exchange mailing lists.

Outside Sales

The magazine is now being sent to the libraries of many of the leading colleges and universities in the East. Copies are also being offered on sale at Rosemont and Bryn Mawr.

Assisting Evans this year are Joe Ruggiero, Art Editor, and Brian Vachon Poetry Editor. The Spring issue of the LYNX is currently being prepared, and interested students are encouraged to submit manuscripts and articles to the editors for consideration for publication.

Club Del Rio Hosts DPE Dinner Dance

Rosedale Announces

The annual D.P.E. Dinner Dance this year will be held at the Club Del Rio, Eagle Road and West Chester Pike. Starting at 8 p.m. the music of Leroy Bostic and his band will be featured. President of Delta Pi Epsilon fraternity, Paul Rosedale, expressed hope that the top social event of the year would draw 125 couples.

Instrumental in the planning of this year's dance were Vice-President Dennis Strip and Secretary Richard Gleason, with encouragement coming from Mr. Langran, the fraternity's new moderator. Other faculty members to be present at the dance will include Mr. Pierce (past moderator), Reverend William E. Farrell, and Reverend Norbert W. Whitley.

Rosedale also noted that in past years the fraternity's activities have been looked upon with disfavor; however this year the administration has approved its policies. As an indication of attitude change Rosedale mentioned that the fraternity inducted 62 new members which is a greater number than in previous years.

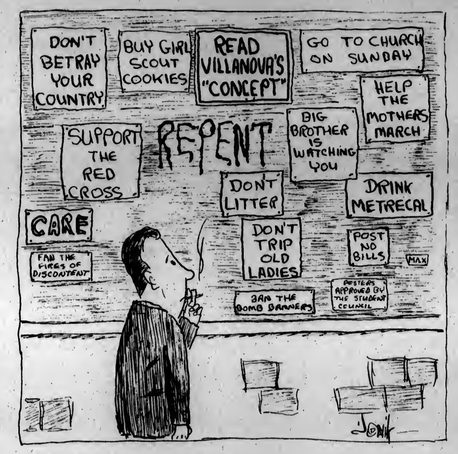
Cuba Quelled

There have been few instances of any country pulling off a completely successful diplomatic manuever. In recent history, Hitler's seizure of the Rhineland with a paper military force ranks as one of the most complete victories.



When instances of diplomatic manevers are recalled we can readily observe as a fact of life that the participants have had to be satisfied with a partial victory and a partial defeat. This has been true through all recorded history and undoubtedly will be true in all future histories.

It is beneficial to consider these points when trying to evaluate the results of the latest conference of the Organization of American States at Punta Del Este, Uruguay. It does relatively little good to judge U. S. efforts there, to persuade the conference to invoke economic and diplomatic embargoes on Cuba, in the light of total accomplishment or total defeat. A view of all or nothing toward the conference only prevents clear and accurate judgment of what is really happening. It could be totally disasterous to U. S. efforts to secure unified hemispheric opposition to Castro and Communism.

With certainty, it can be said that the U. S. did not get all that was publicized that it wanted at the conference. On the key provision of the declaration to exclude Cuba from participation in any function of the O.A.S., only a bare two-thirds majority was received. The six abstaining countries represent the larger percentage of Latin America, in both population and area. This is certainly less than was sought.

But all of the Latin American states, except Cuba, voted to declare Cuba's present Communist government incompatible with the Inter-American System. This, in itself, is a substantial diplomatic gain for the United States. For the first time since Castro came to power all of the American states have unanimously branded him an outlaw and an undesirable. This definitely indicates a growing sentiment of anti-Communism in Latin America and a shift toward the United States' view on the Cuban situation. It shows a greater faith among the Latin Americans in the vitality and strength of the democratic system of government. It shows a mounting adherence toward the suppression of freedom that Castro is getting away with in Cuba.

So, while the U. S. didn't achieve complete victory south of the border, she did improve her present diplomatic standing. If the Alliance for Progress program gives the U. S. continued strength in Latin America, hemispheric solidarity will be strengthened.

Counterpoint

Action At Last

by Ed Farrell

President Kennedy's placement of an embargo on all Cuban imports effective this morning is decidedly one of the most effective moves against the Castro regime since the sugar import limitation in 1960. This long overdue action will drastically affect Cuba's economic condition to the tune of some thirty five millions of dollars each year.

Add to this the exhaustion of foreign funds in Cuba since last fall, and a truly effective action results, with Cuba possibly getting near the brink of economic instability.

The move will not completely dry up Cuba's monetary exchange with the United States since about eleven million is realized by Cuba from Guantanamo Cuban employees' salaries, base fees, etc.

Mr. Kennedy's announcement came on the heels of the OAS meeting in Uruguay, at which Castro was voted out of the organization and unanimously condemned for his Communistic ties.

Others Should Follow

If other Western Hempishere nations follow the lead of the United States in economic sanctions against Cuba, Castro could be hurt in many areas of his regime. This would require the cooperation of countries, such as Canada, which at the present time carrics on a sizeable trade with Castro.

Though the majority of Canada's trade with Cuba is in the former's favor, the very existence of these dealings appears as somewhat contrary to what should be a policy of eventual isolation of the Communist infested isle.

In addition to being an effective economic move against Cuba, the embargo is a definite propaganda move against Castro and his cohorts. It will serve as an indication that the United States does mean business in determining to keep the Reds out of the Western Hemisphere.

Exercise of Care

In relation to economic dealings with Cuba, considerable care must be taken by the State Department in dealings with other Latin American nations which have not exhibited as adamant a get-tough policy as has the United States in recent moves. The heated debate in Argentina over that country's refusal to vote on certain issues at Punta del Este points to the need for extreme care in such dealings.

Only the First

The embargo is only the first in a series of carefully calculated moves to deal with the Communist menace in America. Air and sea patrols are being increased and plans are being made by Kennedy and the State Department to get as many other American nations to go along with similar toughen-up policies in relation to Cuba.

But plans and diplomatic dealings can go only so far. Action such as today's embargo must be taken if Castro is to be stopped.

Diplomacy has its place but if it is a question of whether Latin American feelings on a get-tough policy are going to persuade the United States to back down, then it must be realized that the primary consideration is the protection of freedom in the United States and its allies, while pacification of Latin American critics must come second.

Prevent Armament

A move that will have to be made, and made soon, is that of prevention of the shipment of arms and military supplies from other Communist countries to Cuba. Though the United States has imposed economic sanctions against the Castro regime, support from the Communist bloc, notably Russia and Red China, will be able to keep Castro on his feet and functioning as an active propaganda organ of Communism.

Drastic Measure

An effective, though drastic, solution to this problem would be a blockade around Cuba. Only strategic materials would be prevented from entering Cuba, and the blockade would in time reduce Castro to the role of an ineffectual noisemaker.

Time will tell what other moves like the embargo are necessary. But regardless of what the specific action is, the fact remains that decisive action, coupled with diplomacy if possible, will be the eventual downfall of Castro's communistic threat.

Progress In Thought

Another advance in the intellectual status of Villanova was made this week as CONCEPT magazine appeared on the campus.

In its eight articles, the neophyte publication establishes a medium of expressive thought for the undergraduate student body.

In a university of more than four thousand students, a journal of this type is certainly necessary for a continued atmosphere of political and intellectual maturity.

The type of creative exemplified by CONCEPT should have more than one outlet. Besides the predominantly serious thought expressed in CONCEPT, some form of a basically creative humor magazine is needed to round out cultural expression on the campus.

Another outlet could be a thought-discussion show on WWVU.

Increased open panel discussions on various thought-provoking topics also serve to stimulate interest along the lines of free thought.

The present editors and writers on the CONCEPT staff are to be commended for beginning an endeavor, which it is hoped, will set a precedent. The magazine's production required many weeks of laborious work as well as the initial task of writing the various articles and essays.

However, if the magazine is to survive, additional students as well as those now working on the staff must work to keep the magazine original and interesting so that future students will keep CONCEPT on the Villanova campus.

If such support from the student body is not forthcoming it is not beyond the realm of possibility that CONCEPT might follow the BUSINESS WHIRL into oblivion.

Thus a setback to thought and idea expression would be inflicted upon the campus.

The beginning of publication, initiated by undergraduates, was a step forward for the university. It is this type of initiative which causes intellectual advancement for any university and if further examples occur at Villanova, the last vestige of any intellectual vacuum will be rapidly eliminated.

Traditionalism

There is a vested interest in these United States. It is an evil, unjust, discriminatory monopoly that threatens to subvert the essential democracy of the American system of government. Its tentacles extend into our legislatures, state and federal, and choke the life from any piece of legislation that dares challenge its special privileges and perogatives.

This political cancer is neither Communism nor Fascism; it comes neither from the radical left nor the reactionary right. It is, in fact, accepted and traditional; the traditional, inequitable influence of the rural segment of this nation on the laws, policies, and other matters

According to the Census Bureau, 30.1% of the American people live in areas classified as rural, yet this minority is represented in the House of Representatives by 250 Congressmen, 58% of the total membership. This over-representation is notoriously worse in the state legislatures. Although almost 7 of every 10 Americans live in urban sections, the preponderance of power over decisions vital to their welfare rests with law-makers serving the interest of the rural minority.

It is impossible to promote the general welfare of the whole people when the instruments provided and the power available are controlled by but a small segment of the people. It is not too much to say that such a situation approaches a de facto oligarchy. But honest efforts to better the problem such as the administration's proposed cabinet-level Department of Urban Affairs are being constantly hampered and thwarted by tradition-mongering, specially privileged legislators.

The emphasis of American law-makers on tradition is rational only when and insofar as it does not interfere with the basic democratic nature of our revolutionary society. The American society today is largely urban, and to permit any group of minority representatives to deprive the majority of its right to governmental interest and assistance in solving what are perhaps the most crucial domestic problems of the times is to allow the eventual disintegration of our society.

Music Comes To Villanova; Chamber Concerts Scheduled

Announcement was made last week of a series of four chamber music concerts to be held on campus this semester. The series will present internationally prominent chamber ensembles performing compositions chosen from a three century chronology of chamber music.

The first concert, to be held Sunday, February 18, will feature the New York Sinfonietta in a program of works by the 17th century Italian masters Arcangelo Corelli and Antonio Vivaldi. Performing artists will be Michael Tree and Max Goberman, violins; Jean Schneider, cello; Eugenia Earl, harpsichord; Harold Jones, flute; and Anthony Checchia, bassoon.

The Marlboro Trio will come to Villanova as the featured artists of the second concert of the series on March 18. This talented young group, composed of Anton Kuerti, piano; Michael Tree, violin; and David Soyer, cello, was organized recently by Rudolf Serkin, director of the Marlboro, Vermont, Music Festival. Although this season marks the first tour for the trio together, the artists have won acclaim individually for their performances in this country, Canada, South America, and Europe. Their concert program will include works by Mozart, Schubert, and Schumann.

Mozart Featured

On April 8 a string trio composed of Michael Tree, Karen Tuttle, and David Soyer will perform chamber works by Mozart and the twentieth century Hungarian composer Ernst von Dohnanyi.

Final Concert

The final concert of the series on May 13 will feature the Orchestra of the Philadelphia Chamber Society under the direction of Dr. Herbert Fiss. Dr. Fiss is well known as director of the Villanova Band and the Villanova Singers. The program will include works by Bach, Mozart, Brahms, and Hindemith.

A Glance At Three Jazz Pianists

by Joe Zawacki

This is a short tale of three piano players. They have something in common with each other besides a better than average mastery of the 88's. Perhaps two of the names are not so familiar to you, but if good music pleases your ears, you'll find their work worth a listen.

Point One

The first was born in Toledo in 1910, blind in one eye and with only slight vision in the other. Early in life, he studied violin but gave it up at the age of 13 in favor of the piano. It wasn't long before he was doubling in night clubs and on Toledo radio stations.

The lure of New York drew him at 22 and he made his first records accompanying singer Adelaide Hall. A year later, he recorded his first solos and at the same time his reputation was growing on the famous 52nd street.

New Concept

His style was contrary to all previous standards for pianists and was identifiable by his conception of harmony and technique. Leonard Feather, in his Encyclopedia of Jazz, (from which most of these notes were compiled), traces some of his work to "Fats" Waller and Earl Hines.

1943 saw him form a trio with guitarist Tiny Grimes and ace bassist Slam Stewart. It is said that some of his greatest work was done with these two in clubs, but unfortunately these moments were never recorded. Much of his later great solo work was put on records by Norman Granz which is fortunate since he died in 1956 of uremia. His name was Ant Tatum.

Point Two

The subject of the second profile is probably the least known of the three to the general public. Born 1919 in Chicago, with defective eyesight, he was totally blind at 9. He also doubled on clarinet and tenor and led his own dixieland band. In 1946, bassist Chubby Jackson induced him to come to New York and he spent the next five years playing in combos and furthering his own concepts of harmonic variation.

Now world away from his original influence, Earl Hines, he found himself leading a new school of progressive Jazz, numbering among his followers altoist Lee Konitz, tenor Wayne Marsh and guitarist Billy Bauer.

Today he plays clubs and concerts infrequently, spending most of his time as a teacher in his own studio which he founded in 1951. Musicians from all schools of Jazz have come to him to exchange ideas. His me is Lennie Tristano.

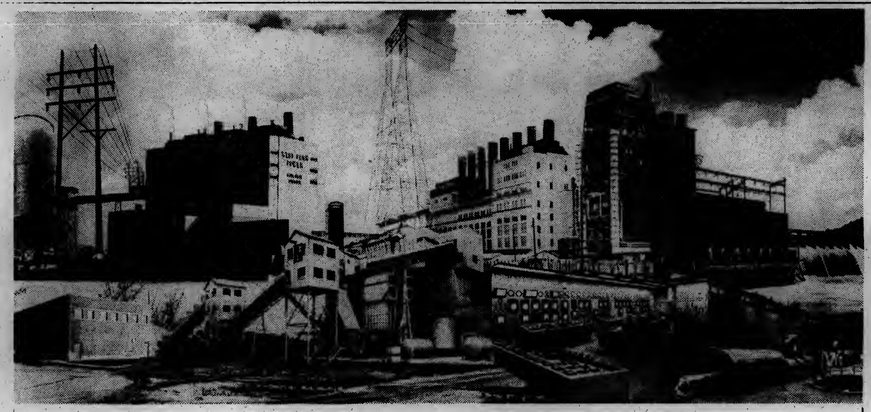
Point Three

The third ivory master is also probably the most popular. Blind since birth and born in London, he studied at a school for the blind. Hearing artists such as "Fats" Waller and Teddy Wilson, he started working clubs in England in 1935. It was Feather who arranged his first recordings for American consumption and who eventually helped him through immigration.

For 7 years, he was ranked as the top British Jazz pianist and in 1948 he came to America to stay, working for a time on 52nd street. The hand of destiny took form in a 1949 recording session for Discovery Records. Feather assembled the group which included drummer Denzil Best, bassist John Levy, vibist Marjorie Hyams and guitarist Chuck Wayne.

Big Draw

This became his permanent group and he rose to prominence with it the next year, using what he called the "locked hands" bop style. His first significant hit was "September In The Rain" and his most prominent composition is the famed "Lullaby Of Birdland."



In recent years, he has added conga drums, strings and even formed a band for a time; however, most of the time he draws capacity crowds touring with the quintet. His name, of course, is George Shearing.

So there you have it—three blind pianists. But don't waste any pity on them . . . they don't need it. All three were too busy making the most of what they did have to bother feeling sorry for themselves.

GOOD NEWS DEPT.. The champ himself, Duke Ellington, brings his fine band to the Red Hill this weekend, followed next week by the classy vocal duo of Jackie Cain and Roy Kral. Future class bookings at the Jersey Jazz Joint (7921 River Road, Pennsauken) include Gerry Mulligan, Mel Torme and Maynard Ferguson.

NUNS SERVED IN CIVIL WAR

About 800 Roman Catholic nuns served as nurses for the Blue and the Grey on the battlefields of the Civil War, says the Catholic Digest citing a government-approved survey made in 1918. As a result of the survey, Congress authorized a monument to the nun-nurses which was erected outside St. Matthew's Cathedral, Washington, D. C.

The Dry Well

Greetings To Nearly All

by Joe Noel

High in Dougherty Hall, not entirely untinseled, not yet appropriately attired, we pour forth belated Christmas and premature Easter greetings to our readers. First, however, and not nearly as spirited, we welcome all back from semester break, even those who broke nothing.

Remembered in near maudlin fashion are Santa Claus, the Easter Bunny, and the Budweiser Brewing Company, without whose frequent association this column would never have been written.

Seasons' Greetings

Greetings, then, to students that were never high, to the habitually punctual, and to Julian Calendar users. Freshmen who want to be Catchers in the Rye, Mendel Hall stairwell smokers, and the one man in four are remembered fondly. Big John is hardly forgotten.

"Merry Christmas," and "Happy Easter" wishes, carrying much warmth, are extended to one-upmanship practicers, to those naturally one-down, to those who succeeded in putting those eight great tomatoes in that little-bitty can, and to Eagle fans. Greeted with particular warmth, however, are pyromaniacs.

Maine residents who dislike lobster, Philadelphians who like Philadelphia, Irishmen who dislike whiskey, and students who like to study would have received a curious "Ho-ho-ho!" and are certainly in line for jumping rather than jelly beans.

Severe Censures

On the other hand, rapped on the knuckles, and shooed from 'neath the Christmas tree should have been right guards that never use Right Guard, juniors that missed the orphans' outing, and anyone that didn't send Christmas cards. Similarly, promising athletes that insist on using that greasy kid stuff, student politicians, and the nurse that has lighted her own cigarette nine times should be banned from the Easter Parade.

Holly thorns in the thumbs of the officials at the West Virginia game—no Easter eggs for those gentlemen to be sure!

Students that have never recited during a recitation, and professors that have never lectured are grouped together and admonished severely. However, along with women that do not drive, Botanists with hay fever, and geriatricians with young practices, they would have been included among those welcomed 'round our fireplace. We see, then, no reason for their being kept from the Atlantic City Boardwalk on Palm Sunday.

Severer Censures

Eschewed by all, though, should be dentists with poor teeth that nevertheless adamantly recommend a conscientious oral hygiene program, profs that skip their 3:30 Friday class, those that persist in lecturing on their thesis' work, and engineers that brought slide rules to their job interviews. Chemists who have forgotten the Gabriel Synthesis, physicists who have resisted reading Ohm's biography, name droppers, and Eskimos who have never tasted Baked Alaska are to be likewise shunned.

Unqualified Christmas, Easter

Greetings carrying the full import of both seasons are offered without qualification to those who have succeeded in business without really trying; to left-handed right wingers; to wins that are incompatible, and to psychologists that claim they aren't; to blondes that prefer gentlemen, and to gentlemen that have no preference; and to hepatectomy victims smug with the knowledge that they can never fully contract hepatitis.

Remembered in similar fashion are NROTC students who have had speeches censored. Doubly assured of our cheer are schizophrenics.

Tiring, we greet the naive, the insecure, the misinformed and the hasty. The indefatigable, wags, moss gatherers, escapists, the inspired, and the forgotten should not be forgotten.

In short, with nearly all of the exuberance of Santa Claus and the Easter bunny, we have greeted almost all.

Activities of Villanova

Knights Of Columbus Serve Faith

The Knights of Columbus is a fraternal society within the Divine Society of the Catholic Church. It was originated by Father Michael J. McGivney on March 29, 1882 and uses Christopher Columbus as its lay model. From its modest beginning the Columbian fraternity has expanded to include tens of thousands of Catholic men on an international scope.

Purposes of Order

ganization serves to render pecuniary aid to the members or their beneficiaries, and to afford mutual assistance to the sick, to disabled, and needy brother Knights. On the intellectual level, the fraternity encourages higher education and increased intellectual intercourse among the members. On the religious level, the Knights foster the charitable endeavors of the Church, and aid in the fight against communism, obscene literature and like influences; to support the immediate and local activities of the Hierarchy, or the Pastor, such as building Churches and Parochial schools; and to further the education of candidates to the priesthood.

Motto

The motto of the Knights of Columbus is "Charity, Unity, Fraternity, and Patriotism." To become a Knight it is required to be a Catholic, and all Catholics have received the great law of love—CHARITY. The Mother Holy Church is one, and in unity there is strength—UNITY. Men live in society and belong to a family—FRATERNITY. Every citizen is bound by the duty of loyalty to his country—PATRIOTISM.

The work of Catholic Action of the Knights of Columbus is represented on the Villanova campus by Council No. 4609 which was founded three years ago. It is composed of over one hundred members who are presently students, and also of many graduates. The Council is currently conducting its second membership drive of this year. All men who are interested in the ideals of the organization and its work should contact either the Grand Knight, Jerry Donovan, in Room 209 Sheehan or the Membership Chairman, Jim McErlane, in the office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

PIONEERING

Somewhere out there, beyond the realm of man's present understanding, lies an idea. A concept. A truth.

Gradually, as it comes under the concentration of disciplined minds, it will become clear, refined, mastered. This is the lonely art of pioneering.

In the Bell System, pioneering often results in major breakthroughs. Planning the use of satellites as vehicles for world-wide communications is one. Another is the Optical Gas Maser, an invention which may allow a controlled beam of light to carry vast numbers of telephone calls, TV shows, and data messages.

Breakthroughs like these will one day bring exciting new telephone and communications service to you. The responsibility of providing these services will be in the hands of the people who work for your local telephone company. Among them are the engineering, administrative and operations personnel who make your telephone service the finest in the world.

Where Lies Responsibility?

by Adam Wright

The time: mid twentieth century. The place: third planet of the solar system, continent of North America; the United States of America. The main ingredient: a problem, any problem, any problem so long as it is great enough to attract national interest. Sit back and relax folks. The pattern will emerge. Watch it carefully folks. It surrounds you. It controls you. It is you. We shall describe.

This is the modus operandi. A problem emerges. It grows. Its existence is apprehended and brought to the attention of the National legislature. The problem is defined. A solution is sought. A solution is found.

Solution—$ $ $

The solution is money. Money, in America, can solve all problems. We are concerned at the moment with a particular problem, but underlying this is a basic problem. We are forced to examine both.

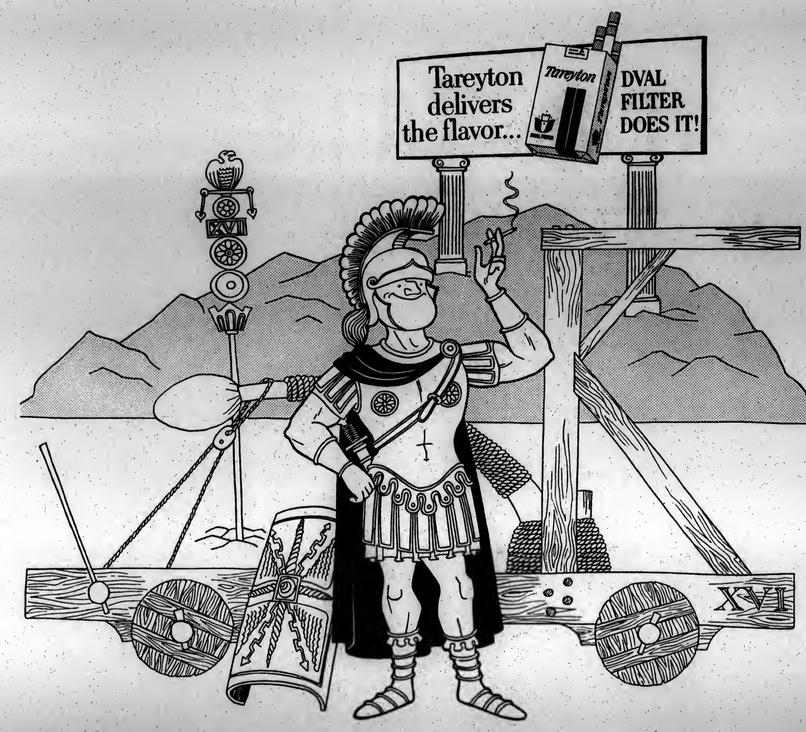
The particular problem reached its climax recently. It is a problem of cities, their decay and obsolescence, and their fate. It is a problem of slums and narrow streets and schools and segregation and crime. It is a problem common to unknown people and giant enterprises. It is many problems in one. But first and foremost, it is a problem of the cities.

Mr. Kennedy would bring the problem to the federal government. He would apply the universal solution. Money, legislation, a new cabinet post: these are the ingredients of the solution now brewing in Washington.

We cannot but fear that the President and his advisors have run off their well intended wayward journey. And in their haste they have failed to draw back and examine the true nature of the problem. They have failed, as government officials have often failed in the past, to ask whether the problem is proper to the federal government. They have assumed, as federal government officials are wont to assume, that all problems which arise in the nation are proper to the federal government.

Society is Pyramid

Our society is a pyramid. At the base is the individual, on this is built the family, the community and the local government. Then comes the state government, and finally the federal government rests on the top. Each level of this pyramid of society has its own problems and its own responsibilities. Failure at a particular level of society to accept responsibilities is both a cause and an indication of the degeneration of the society at that level.



The question arises, "Why does the federal government enter into fields, such as urban affairs, which are essentially local or state problems?" The answer is, most probably, that the states and local governments are not in a position to handle these problems. But it does not necessarily follow that the responsibility should be taken from the states and assigned to the federal government. The other alternative is to put the state and local governments in a position to accept responsibilities.

First Step

The first step in this is to transfer a larger percentage of the total tax dollar away from the federal government and back to the state and local government. The second is to obtain greater public interest in state and local government and a higher caliber of officials in these levels of government. This is not a simple process, but it is a possibility which has been almost completely ignored. It is not reactionary, for it is essentially the correction of a mistake.

A pyramid with a weak foundation will crumble. One which is resting on its peak will lose balance and fall. The nation cannot ride on the federal government and survive. Responsibility cannot be passed on to higher and higher levels, for with each responsibility that is surrendered, freedom and strength are also surrendered.

In government, each level has its own responsibilities. It is the responsibility of the people to demand that each responsibility of government is accepted at its proper level.

WWVU Changes Frequency Audio Improvements Expected

WWVU, the campus radio station of Villanova University, has changed its frequency from 645 to 690 kilocycles. Effective last Sunday, the transfer was made primarily for technical and economic reasons. In a recent announcement by the Federal Communications Commission, it was decreed that, to conform to existing governmental regulations, WWVU must purchase a large amount of important technical equipment, necessary to effect the installation of a Conelrad monitoring system. To avoid this rather expensive operation, the radio station decided to seek the more expedient solution, switching their frequency, a comparatively simple operation.

As a result of this change an increased excellence of audio quality is anticipated. Primarily this is so because interference from outside stations, noticeable before the change, will now be reduced to a minimum.

In explaining this major alteration, Charles Labus, personnel and public relations manager for WWVU, stated that the FCC regulation called for a complete revamping of the existing engineering structure of the station to the extent that WWVU would broadcast an audible signal in time of a Conelrad alert or test. In case of a national crisis, particularly a nuclear attack, the radio station would automatically be shut off so that the Conelrad system may continue to function.

itor is also handling publicity for the show. He mentioned that a post office box (Box 322) had been procured so that the public would have a means of securing tickets for the show. Tickets are reasonably priced at $1.50 per person and the producers are both confident of tripling last year's crowd of 500.

Students will have first choice at tickets, which will go on sale sometime the week before the concert. Although the event is a Senior class function, it is by no means restricted to that class. "All students and their dates are welcome for this rare excursion into the world of good music," agreed both Braithwaite and Zawacki.

First prize is again nominal this year, with the emphasis on the competition; however, Zawacki promised that bonus for the first prize winner might be announced in next week's VILLANOVAN.

Among the competing groups are: The Kenny Delmar band from Drexel; the Bob Shemenek band from LaSalle; the Criterions, led by Bob Curnow, from West Chester; the Mike Gabriel quintet from St. Joseph's; the Bob Kindred quintet from Muhlenberg; the Wesleyan Jazz Singers from Connecticut and defending champ, the Jeff Haskell Trio from West Chester.

Zawacki also announced that Toby De Luca from WFIL and Bruce Davidson of Capitol records would return to judge again this year. He added: "We're very fortunate and grateful in having a man of Mr. Coss' stature come and join us. He is one of the better Jazz columnists around today. We also invited last year's two judges back not only for their great musical knowledge, but also because of their kindness and help last year when we were struggling to get started.

Many local DJ celebrities have promised to attend the show, attesting to their interest in the music and the show. Both Braithwaite and Zawacki hinted that they may have a surprise or two up their sleeves.

"the fight burned up a lot of nervous energy and interrupted our train of thought. It was all so unnecessary."

Record Toss

The towel throwing spree was reminiscent of an Abbot and Costello gag routine. Willie Somerset's heave would have broken all intercollegiate records if the sweaty terricloth's flight hadn't been stopped short by an unsuspecting fan in the second row. The return shot by a veteran courtside observer was a weak effort compared to All-American Willie's chuck.

The soft shoe routine by Leftwich was strictly unintentional. George's low-cut sneaker got jammed under his heel. Villanova had possession at the time, but the referees disregarded his request for a time out. So Leftwich hobbled down on the fastbreak like Fred Astaire with a charley-horse. The ball changed hands several times before the sophomore guard got reshod.

The second half wasn't as exciting; except for the final rush the Wildcats staged it was dull.

But what could they have done for an encore?

A big man is not one who makes no mistakes, but one who is bigger than any mistakes he might make.

'Mister Roberts' Preparations Undertaken By Belle Masque

An outstanding Broadway success, "Mr. Roberts," will be the next Production of the Belle Masque Society. The show will premier on March 7.

"Mr. Roberts" is the blistering, yet tender, saga of the men on a Navy cargo ship that monotonously plies from one Pacific port to another, thousands of miles away from battle areas. Its chief character is Lieut. (j.g.) Roberts, who is eating his heart out for a combat assignment, but whose captain continually refuses to authorize his transfer to a warship.

This commander is a hard-bitten sea-bully who hates college men like Roberts and drives his crew in the hope of getting a promotion for himself and so spreads misery and hatred throughout the ship.

Like "Mutiny"

The story in some ways parallels the tale told in the popular novel about another tyrannical captain in "The Caine Mutiny."

The play was written by Thomas Heggen and Joshua Logan, the former being the one who wrote the original novel on the basis of his own naval experiences during the war. Logan is the outstanding director and producer who has been involved in such shows as "South Pacific," "Picnic," "Annie Get Your Gun," and "Wish You were Here." The show will be under the direction of Mr. Richard Harshberger, a graduate of V.U.'s Theatre Department, and who is also the Assistant Dean of Admissions.

"Mr. Roberts" ran for almost three years in New York, to score the twelfth longest run in Broadway history, and it had such long and repeated professional engagements in other cities (54 weeks in Chicago, 26 weeks in Boston, for example,) that it had a greater total of box-office receipts than any other play in American stage history.

The scenes aboard the old AK-601 have been designed by Mr. Thomas Nevins who was assisted in their construction by Walt Grove, The cast and club membership remained on campus over the semester break for rehearsals. Mike D'Alonzo, President of the club, says that there are few shows written that would be more desirable to produce and has spared no expense to bring this "broadside of laughs and tears" to a near professional level.

Intramural Basketball Starts; Lifeguard Course Planned

The second half of the Intramural Basketball season got under way Thursday, February 1, with both leagues back in full swing. Statistics of the first half were not available at the time of the publication. Intramural Director Ed Geisz urges all teams to check the schedules for future games. The intramural bulletin boards are located outside Alumni Hall, on the first floor of Dougherty Hall near the lounges and in the Day Hop Cafeteria in the basement of the Commerce and Finance Building.

On Monday, February 5, the Intramural Council met to discuss plans for the American Senior Red Cross Life Saving Course. Students passing this course are certified life guards and may obtain employment on beach patrols, country club pools, lakes and public swimming pools. Plans were also discussed for the Amateur Night, foul shooting contest, plus a bridge and chess tournament. Results of this meeting were too late for publication but they may be obtained from the Intramural Department in Alumni Hall.

Palestra Roundup

Owls Top LaSalle In City Game

by Joe Zawacki

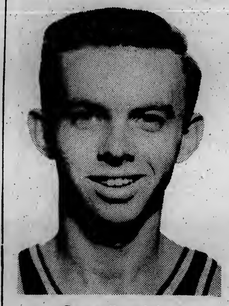
In a busy weekend at the Palestra, witnessed by a surprisingly low turnout of 8400 for the two important doubleheaders. Temple gave LaSalle its first City Series defeat, St. Joseph's upset previous Villanova conquerer Xavier, and Penn climbed back into the Ivy League race.

St. Joseph's 75, Xavier 68

Junior Billy Hoy, injured earlier in the week, came off the bench in the second half to break open a close game against the visiting Musketeers from Cincinnati who have yet to win on the road. Their record stands at 9-8 and they looked nothing like the team that romped over VU last month.

Bill Pelkington, who outrebounded the entire Wilcat team in their game, could only retrieve 4 on Friday and scored only one goal. Good defensive work by Bob Dickey, who contributed 11 points, limited high-scoring Jack Thobe to 15 points, all his field goals coming in the first half.

Sharing the spotlight with Dickey and Hoy were Tom Wynne and Jim Lyman. Wynne contributed 14 points and 8 timely rebounds while Lynam led the Hawks with 17 points, including 7 foul tosses late in the game when Xavier started pressing.



Temple 64, LaSalle 51

Harry Litwack's Owls got unexpected help from the bench and a big game from Bruce Drysdale as Temple remained in contention in the MAC fight for an NCAA tournament bid.

With Ed Devery having a bad night, Litwack was forced to bring in Soph Bob Harrington, who ironically was playing his last game due to scholastic difficulties. The slender 6'2" forward proceeded to make 5 of his 8 floor shots and grabbed 10 rebounds, including 3 in one skirmish under the Temple bench that saw the Owls get 5 shots at the basket before Drysdale converted.

In the end it was this rebounding edge (47-35) that made the difference. Also, the Explorers got little scoring punch from their front line of Frank Corace (12), Walt Sampson (5), and George Friedrich (0). Little Tony Abbot led them with 17 followed by All-City Bob McAteer's 16.

The Owls led 32-26 at the half and eventually increased it to 15 midway through the second session. LaSalle cut it to 10 and was still in the game when McAteer fouled out with 3 minutes to go.

Drysdale led Temple with 18 points but it was his pin-point passes that brought the crowd to its feet on a few occasions. It was one of his best performances of the season.

Penn 71, Yale 49. Penn 71, Brown 57

Jack McCloskey found himself a working combination Friday and it brought him two key victories. With the Quakers upsetting Yale Friday and Cornell being upset by Dartmouth Saturday, the Red and Blue are now only one game behind the leaders with two important road games this week against Columbia and Cornell.

6'7" Soph Joe Andrews, inserted into the starting lineup because of the ineligibility of J. D. Graham and Dave Robinson, gave the Quakers the needed board strength to run away from both the Eli and Brown. Showing better balance than recently, Penn got two more good games from Bob Purdy who continues to show improvement, and also from steady John Wideman and Ray Carazo.

CONTROL SYSTEMS:
ORDERS FROM A COMPUTER NOW CONTROL GIANT OIL REFINERY UNIT

Every 24 hours, the world's largest distillation unit separates crude oil into ten different categories which end up as six million gallons of finished products.

This involves continual monitoring of 250 instruments, followed by precise balancing of controls. To operate at peak efficiency, control directions are changed many times daily to compensate for a multitude of variables.

The IBM computer that took over this job now reads the instruments, makes the calculations, and issues the orders for the control changes. It is guided in its work by over 75,000 instructions stored in its electronic memory.

Just a few years ago electronic control of such a complex industrial process would have been impossible. But such is the progress in computer systems that in the sixties it will become commonplace.

This dramatic progress means exciting and important jobs at IBM for the college graduate, whether in research, development, manufacturing, or programming.

If you want to find out about opportunities in any one of these areas, you are invited to talk with the IBM representative. He will be interviewing on your campus this year. Your placement office can make an appointment. All qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, creed, color or national origin. If Severance Were Here

by Joe Zawacki

SOME REMARKS MADE AND OVERHEARD ON CAMPUS AND AT THE PALESTRA OFTEN ENOUGH TO MERIT COMMENT:

. . . . "In his first year, Jack Kraft has "coached" the team to a 15-4 record at this stage. If Al Severance was still coaching, VU would be struggling to stay above .500."

Untrue and unfair. Al Severance had coaching faults which he himself readily admitted, but let's not forget that he won over 400 games in his 25 year tenure here. In addition, he has to be one of the greatest recruiters in the history of the game.

Also, remember that this year's team is an unusual one in some respects. They possess a balance of talent, intelligence and court savvy that fooled all the pre-season experts. They are a rare breed of animal, somewhat like a pro team, in that they need an overseer rather than a coach. If the coach's name was Severance, Eddie Donovan, Jack McCloskey, or Ed Scullin, it is not at all far-fetched to think that these kids would have him hovering around the 15-4 plateau. Besides, remember that Severance recruited the starting team.

"Hubie White is a better ballplayer than last year."

Definitely yes. In fact, he is a far improved player than he was at the start of the season. His play is marked with more consistency now and with the evolution of his natural talents and maturity, he becomes a more complete ballplayer each game. Also, don't discount the effect of the Cats' teamplay. All the other starters have contributed in lessening the pressure and burden on him. Except for the Xavier game (in which the entire team was "off"), he hasn't played a subpar game since December. Right now, defense would seem to be his only "semi-weakness", but he cannot be entirely faulted here since he has played most of his college career in a zone.

"Villanova has shown a tendency to roll scores up on their opponents this season."

Yes. Although they are not the only culprits, this is no excuse. Earlier in the season, we accused St. Joseph's coach Jack Ramsey of this "bush" stunt. Of course, if you are strictly a Villanova rooter, you may enjoy seeing a score "rolled up". However, objectively there is no excuse for it, although the guilty coach generally has an excuse of sorts.

You can't blame the players either. They only know one way to play . . . to give their best at all times. After the Memphis State game, Coach Jack Kraft explained that after a week's layoff, he wanted to play his starting five as much as possible. This is a standard excuse and it's supposed to explain the "tremendous" difference involved in playing your first five for 35 or for 38 minutes of a game with a 30 point lead.

Fortunately, these things return eventually to strike in retaliation.

"It seems that better officials could be chosen for important games at the Palestra. Some of the better games were marred by incompetent officiating."

This is a sticky one. Officiating is nothing more than an official's interpretation of the rules. Many refs interpret the same different ways. We'll dwell on this year's rash of crying at greater length next week.

during the regular competition with a heave of 63-10¼. In an exhibition duel with O'Brien, who showed up late from the airport, the 19 year old giant bettered his earlier effort by an inch. Billy Joe, out of competition with a bad hand, returns to action next week.

Budd Remains Unbeaten

Herb Carper, former Pitt star and co-holder of the world's indoor 60 yard dash mark of 6.0 seconds had to settle for a second place finish in the two meets as Budd tied both meet records. Otie Drayton placed fourth in the 60 yard dash in New York.

Leon Pras, Charlie Hammock, and Bob Coffil were all eliminated in the New York 60 yard high hurdles. Pras, winner of the Boston K. of C. Meet, had to settle for third place in the 45 yard hurdles at the Boston AA Meet.

The Wildcats mile relay team took first place at the Millrose Games in 3:18.1, the fastest time run this year. Vic Zwolak set the pace in the Boston mile but finished third behind John Reilly and Ed Moran. Villanova's mile and two mile relay teams both finished out of the money at the AA Meet.

Freshmen Show Promise

Although the Mainline Yearlings failed to win at the Garden, their show of strength was enough to keep the fans on their feet.

Tommy Sullivan, second place finisher in the 1000 yard run at Los Angles, turned on the steam too late to beat Peter Close and Cary Weisiger to the tape in the Wanamaker Mile. Sullivan showed the New York fans he had the kick as he started his spurt at the beginning of the gun lap trailing by about two yards.

After trading elbows with Jack Yerman, Don Webster took charge of the 600 yard run but tired at the finish losing to Yerman and George Kerr.

Pistol Team Unbeaten In College Meets, Look For Best Season

In an otherwise winless weekend, the Villanova pistol team was the one standout. The Cat gun slingers stunned the U. S. Merchant Marine Academy, Kings Point, with a run-away victory. This continues the Pistol Team's unbeaten collegiate record, which now stands at four wins, no defeats. Despite the fact that one of the better shooters, Art Cebrowski, was plagued with gun trouble resulting in his not scoring, the rest of the team, led by its All-American co-captains Joseph Bader and George Sinclair, was easily able to make up the deficit.

Friday, the 'Cats had "warmed up" for Saturday by defeating two local gun clubs. Most of this year's outstanding record so far has been due to the return of the backbone of last year's team with such standouts as Joseph S. Hack, Al Deckert, Karl Ackerman and Mike Benson as well as its two All Americans, Bader and Sinclair.

The team looks forward to the most successful season since it was formed in 1953.

Burlesque Bounces Back

by dan grove

Whoever said that vaudeville is dead evidently didn't see the Villanova-Duquesne version of the burlesque last Wednesday night. Although the setting wasn't the Palace Theatre, Pitt's Fieldhouse added to the roundball histrionics. In this arena, built along the lines of a gothic airplane hangar, 5333 bloodthirsty eyewitnesses and an elite Philadelphia TV audience witnessed the zaniest show since Virginia Bell's suspenders snapped at the Troc.

The fun started early, when the loudspeakers blared an appeal asking the "people in general admission seats to please squeeze together". The reaction of the assemblage was rather hostile, setting the pace that kept the night interesting. What followed was a hodgepodge of incidents that included a soft shoe stagger by George Leftwich, a warm reception for the visiting team, two melees, one of which rose to riot proportions, a world record towel toss, and a cuticle chewing finale that terminated in Villanova's third loss of the season.

Raspberry Reception

The warm reception was initiated as soon as the Mainliners took the floor and exercised the visiting team's prerogative of goal choice. It carried over to the introduction of the starting lineups. The Wildcats were about as popular as Beverly Aadland at a P.T.A. meeting. The boobirds had a ball, especially when Hubie White was introduced. Rookie coach Jack Kraft was philosophical about the catcalls. "I didn't expect them to cheer us, but I can't understand the boos, we haven't done anything to them yet."

The fights were strictly a first half feature. The preliminary featured Clyde Arnold, a belligerent 6'6", 215 pounder and Hubie White a mild 6'3", 12 stoner who trains on chocolate chip cookies. The main event starred Willie Somerset, Wally Jones, Mike Rice and a cast of thousands. Villanova got the decision in the first bout; White was awarded a technical foul shot after Arnold elbowed him in the jaw. The second skirmish was a real donnybrook that started over a loose ball. Jones went to McMonagle's aid after Somerset had piled onto Mac. A split second later four Iron Dukes dove into the fracas and the whole pile of flailing humanity crashed into the radio table. As the table overturned with the Jones boy underneath it, the Duquesne bench sped out to even the odds and coach "Red" Manning stood helplessly by, muttering something about upholding Duquesne's national reputation (SI, January 26, 1962).

Alberts Arbitrates

Before the fun was over the TV monitor was on the floor and frantic Mal Alberts was making like Ruby Goldstein at a tag-team match. Finally police forced their way through the mob of kicking cheerleaders and frustrated Sonny Listons to restore order. It would have been a brawl equal to the tiff at the OK Corral, had Jack Kraft permitted his anxious athletes to join the fray.

Duquesne came out the winner in this mismatch. The 'Cats led by 6 points before the interruption and were beginning to move well against the Dukes' zone defense. Their play after that was disjointed and sloppy, except for a few spurts at the end of each period. According to one Wildcat,

Seton Hall, Penn Bow To Villanova Mermen Princeton Cops 'Cats

By Matt Moore

After losing their first three ontests by close decisions, 'illanova's Varsity swimmers ounced back with wins over eton Hall and the University of Pennsylvania merman. The victory against Seton Hall on 'anuary 10 came rather easily vith Sophs Bill Gallagher and Dick Feron and Junior Jim Grimm contributing individual irst place victories in the 220 yd. free, diving, and 50 yd. freestyle events. Frank Keim and Ed Brier also added first place points to the final 62-28 score.

In their next encounter, the Wildcat swimmers traveled to Penn's Hutchinson Memorial Pool to meet a strong Penn team which had beaten them four times in the past five years. Jack Geoghegan started Villanova on its winning way by capturing the 220 yd. Freestyle in record breaking time.

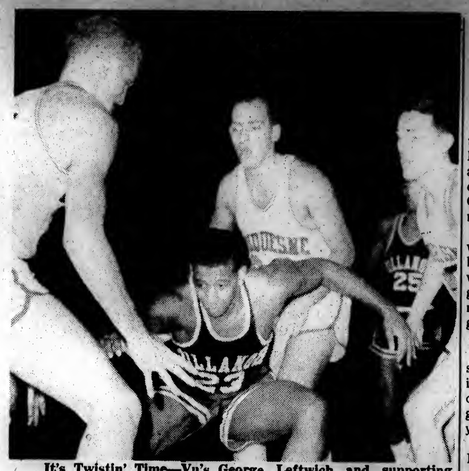
Geoghegan, the muscular sophomore, led all the way as he stroked to a 2:10 clocking, breaking the Villanova Varsity record which he had set earlier in the season. Dick McDonough, Villanova's All American candidate, continued his string of victories by capturing the 200 yd. Butterfly title. Dick's time of 2:04.9 set a new Penn pool record as well as a new Villanova school record.

More Records

The Wildcat's onslaught against the record book continued in the Freestyle Relay, when the team of Geoghegan, Grimm, Mike Powers, and McDonough combined to turn in a 3:31.5 clocking which was good enough to beat the old Hutchinson Pool record previously held by Yale.

The biggest victory of the day came in the Individual Medley event when Senior Co-Captain Don Reed upset Penn's Jim Slater. Slater, who represented Canada in the last two Olympic games and who is considered one of the top swimmers in the East, was unable to hold off Reed's fast finish. Don's time of 2:14.7 was a personal best as well as a new Villanova record. The final score of the meet gave the 'Cats a comfortable 57-38 edge.

Strong Princeton Squad



In their latest encounter, which took place last Saturday in the Field House Pool, the swimmers lost to a strong Princeton team by a 55-40 score. Princeton lived up to pre-meet speculation of being the strongest team ever to come to Villanova by setting five Villanova Pool records in the course of their victory. Princeton sophomore Jed Graef set new standards in the 220 yd. freestyle and backstroke events, winning both contests easily. Dick McDonough, Jack Geoghegan and Don Reed were the only individual winners for Villanova.

In a preliminary meet, the Freshmen team boosted their season record to 7-2, with an easy win over Princeton's Frosh. Paul Winn posted a double victory, including a creditable 22.6 win in the 50 yd. Free.

Kraftmen Lose Two Close Ones As Dukes And Titans Triumph

by Dan Grove

Jack Kraft's high flying Wildcats traveled 2200 miles last week but came home empty handed and bruised. Duquesne administered the first of two defeats and most of the bruises last Wednesday night at Pittsburgh. The final score of the basketball brawl was 53-51. Saturday night, the Mainliners continued to find road games hard to cop as Detroit's Titans dumped the East's top-ranked club 93-89 in an overtime.

The Duquesne tussle was marred by two first half incidents that seems to affect the play of the whole game. The Cats sprinted to an early 21-15 lead, despite a hustling Duquesne zone and a small fistic exchange between the Dukes' Clyde Arnold and Villanova's Hubie White.

Golden Gloves

The lead was shortlived, however. Willy Somerset, the Iron Dukes' star guard, turned the game into a Golden Gloves affair sans Marquis of Queensbury rules (see In the Groove page 11). After the Pittsburgh gendarmes restored a semblance of order, Duquesne ran off six straight points with the help of senior Mike Rice who continually outmanuevered the Villanova front line for twisting layups. Hubie White's last second jump shot spotted Villanova a 29-27 lead at the end of the first round.

The Wildcats were visibly rattled after the second Duquesne attempt at mayhem and never seemed to regain their poise or shooting eye, even after the half-time rest period. The Iron Dukes quickly shot into the lead after the intermission and maintained a three or four point bulge for most of the second half.

Heart Failure

With two minutes remaining, Duquesne's Rice socked in a pair of foul shots to give his team a 53-49 lead. White scored on a jumper to give the Cats new life, and their hopes soared even higher after Arnold missed the first of a one plus one foul shot. Villanova got possession with 10 seconds and immediately called time out. With nine seconds remaining the ball went into play, Leftwhich passed to Jim McMonagle who drove across the key and fired. The shot bounced around and fell away as the game ended.

Detroit Difficult

The story was different Saturday night in Detroit. Villanova's offense clicked successfully against a loose Titan man-to-man defense, but the defense gave away too many easy shots to the slower but taller Motor City quintet. Wally Jones sparked the Mainline offense to a 39-38 halftime lead.

Jones hit eight of twelve from the field to give the Cats their first half boost. Detroit, who shot poorly in the first half (16 of 50), turned All-American Dave DeBusschere loose in the second stanza. DeBusschere went wild, making 19 points and dragging down 16 rebounds. The Titans as a team shot a hot 54% and dominated the boards.

Villanova, although playing below par defensively, almost pulled the game out of the fire. George Leftwhich and Wally Jones made three charity shots in the final minute of regulation play to spot Villanova a 79-77 lead. With eighteen seconds left to play, DeBusschere then showed his All-American ability by bulling his way in for a short jumper that missed. He followed the missed shot perfectly for the game tieing basket. The overtime period saw Villanova sprint into a four point lead, and then lose White and McMonagle with five personal fouls.

Detroit scored at will in the overtime to nail down a 93-89 victory.

Frostbits-Hubie White scored 21 and 26 points in the past two games to raise his season's total to 409. Villanova players slept in four different beds in five nights during the away binge. Wally Jones was the leading scorer against Detroit with a career high of 32 (15 of 29). Prior to the Duquesne game the Cats won two City Series games. They beat Temple 60-53 and whopped Pennsylvania 81-54. They also dumped Memphis State 109-84 while losing to Xavier (87-66) on the road.

Convention Hall Hosts Track Stars Uelses, Irish Are Major Attractions

Villanova's globetrotting track team returns to friendly fields Friday night as they head an all-star cast in Philadelphia's only indoor track carnival at Convention Hall in the 18th Annual Inquirer Games.

Thirty-one Wildcats, many of whom have been pounding the boards during the last four weeks from Boston to Los Angeles will compete as one of the most powerful collegiate contingents in track history.

'Cats Share Top Billing

The Main Liners will have to share the limelight with a Marine and the Irish as the City of Brotherly Love is set for its greatest indoor circus in four years.

Last Friday night Marine John Uelses became the first man to pole vault 16 feet, ironically it was 20 years to the day that Cornelius Warmerdam became the first 15 ft. vaulter. Uelses duplicated his feat Saturday night in Boston and is set to go higher this Friday against a good field that includes Villanova soph Rolando Cruz.

Delany Returns

Even more attractive for the track fans of this area is the rerun of Villanova's greatest distance runner, Ron Delany of Ireland. Delany, 1956 Olympic 1500 meter champion, anchors a visiting two mile relay team from the Emerald Isle that has thus far coasted to victories in New York and Boston. Also on the team are Derek McCleane, Basil Clifford, and Noel Carroll of County Logue, who is reportedly headed to V.U. Carroll has already run a 1:48 half mile. Delany will not defend his fantastic streak of 40 indoor mile victories until February 24 in the AAU Championships.

Budd to Defend

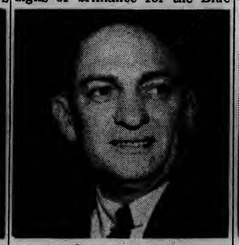
Villanova's National AAU sprint kings, Frank Budd and Paul Drayton along with ex-Pitt star Herb Carper are the top contenders for the 50 yard dash title. Budd is undefeated in the indoor circuit for the past two years and was last beaten in the 1960 Inquirer Games by Hayes Jones.

Jones, now a Pontiac, Michigan school teacher, will be the heavy favorite in the 50 yard high hurdles. Competing for the 'Cats in this event will be Leon Pras, Bob Coffil, and Charlie Hammock.

Villanova's Frosh thinclads, who are trying to grab the headlines away from the upperclassmen, are running in full force. The nation's fastest schoolboy miler in history, Tom Sullivan, who has already shown signs of brilliance for the Blue and White, will compete in his specialty. Don Webster, another exciting freshman, who runs those rugged turns like a pro, will for the third straight week be taking on Olympians George Kerr and Jack Yerman in the 600.

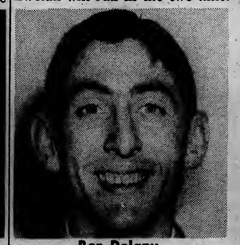
Running also for the Frosh, better known as the Villanova A.A., will be two fine middle-distance men Jim Orr and Marty Ferko in the 880 and 1000 respectively. The Wildkittens are also fielding a Mile Relay and a Distance Medley Relay team.

Billy Joe and Jerry Donini will heave the big ball in the only other field event in which Villanova will compete. Running in the 100 yard handicap race will be Frank Hagerty and Robert Collins.



Relay Teams Set

Villanova's regular quartets will be out to improve after a stormy weekend. Running on the mile relay team, which has the best time of the season—3:18.1, will be Alan Jackman, Carl Wagner, Bob Raemore, and Drayton.



Passing the baton for Villanova in the two mile relay will be Pat Nicastro, Jon Dante, Al Adams, and Jerry Hackett. Completing the huge Villanova roster, Pat Traynor and Vic Zwolak will run in the two mile.

16' Pole Vault Mark Steals Show, Record During Millrose Meet

by Bob Larkin

Jumbo Jim Elliot's track men competed in the Millrose Games in New York on Friday and the Boston A.A. Meet on Saturday for the busiest indoor weekend of the season. Although Frank Budd's winning streak remained intact and the Wildcat freshmen showed promise in many of the events, the spotlight was stolen by two world record performances by John Uelses and Gary Gubner.

Uelses, the German-born U.S. Marine, cleared 16 feet ¾ inch in the pole vault at Boston to break Don Bragg's indoor record of 15 feet 9½ inches. On Friday night in New York, Uelses, the fiberglass king cleared 16½ only to have it disallowed when an eager photographer jarred the bar loose before AAU officials could take a final measurement. Rolando Cruz, Villanova's sophomore ace, also had his troubles in the Garden as the officials disallowed his 15-4 effort when his pole fell under the bar. The next night Cruz copped third place with a 15-4 vault in Boston.

Gary Gubner, NYU sophomore, broke Parry O'Brien's indoor shot put record of 63-1½

VU Cagers Face Dukes Tonight, St. John's In Garden Tomorrow

Villanova's basketball Wildcats swing into the back-stretch of their weird schedule this week with the unappetizing project of playing two top-ranking teams in the space of little more than 24 hours.

The Palestra is the scene of "battle" tonight as the Main Liners and the Iron Dukes of Duquesne wage the third and final round of a series that has developed into one of the more bitter rivalries in the East.

In The Garden

Tomorrow night, the Villanova crowd journeys to New York and famed Madison Square Garden to face Joe Lapchick's St. John's team, always a top threat, and the sometimes hard to please New York critics. In the past, the Wildcats have more often than not left the Garden crowd cold, but Hubie White, Wally Jones and co. do not figure to be overawed. Probably the biggest obstacle to them will be to remain fresh for 40 minutes after Wednesday's game.

Duquesne, having satisfied the Pittsburgh people with their cliff-hanging win over VU last Wednesday, will be out to show the large Palestra crowd that the December, 78-53 lacing given them by the Cats was a fluke. To do so, they will have to get top performances out of Willie Somerset (who has been ineffective in the first two meetings) and Clyde Arnold (sick last week with a cold). Mike Rice, the other Duke threat, is a consistent ballplayer and figures to be as tough this time as the last two outings.

Refs Could Decide

The Dukes slowed VU's running game with a zone last week and it will be interesting to see what Red Manning plans this time. The outcome of the game could be dependent on who officiates. If they call them tight early, it could be a good basketball game; but if they call under the "boys will be boys" theory, there could be a repetition of last week's donnybrook.

St. John's, always tough in the Garden, will be out to improve their ratings at the expense of the Cats. Lapchick has a tall team which can run or play possession ball. They are led by 6' 10" LeRoy Ellis, one of the more improved players in the East this year, and little Donnie Burks, who hounded Bruce Drysdale to distraction in Temple's earlier 52-51 squeaker over the Redman. The other VILLANOVAN News Editor Mark F. Quinn meets with Gov. David L. Lawrence during the Second Collegiate Press Conference, held last Thursday in Harrisburg.

Governor's Press Conference Highlighted By Clark's Visit

by Mark F. Quinn, Jr.

The Governor of Pennsylvania, the Honorable David L. Lawrence, hosted the second college editor's press conference of the year in the capitol last week.

The conference was highlighted by the surprise appearance of Joseph S. Clark, U.S. Senator from Pennsylvania. Questions ranging from education to politics were fired by reporters at both the Governor and the Senator.

The Governor revealed a proposed master plan for education which would function primarily on the levels of community colleges, state and private colleges, and universities. The major point of the program would be the establishment of an extensive system of community colleges throughout the state. They would operate on a two year basis and would exist for students who have a strong motivation to attend college, but who do not have the record to be admitted to a regular college.

Federal Program Pending

Senator Clark stated that there is a proposal pending in the Federal legislature which would allott fifty million dollars on a matching basis for the initiation of a community college system. Further expansion of colleges and universities is also being contemplated in the plan.

On the level of state politics, neither the Governor nor the Senator would comment on their choice for the Democratic candidate for Governor in the November elections. The Chief Executive of the state said that a caucus of party leaders was scheduled for February 14. He expressed the hope that the Valentine's Day meeting would be an additional aid in smoothing over the differences of the Par-

Junior Jazz Concert Features Four Lads, Trumpeter Ferguson

The usual Junior Prom this year will be replaced by a concert featuring Maynard Ferguson, the Four Lads, and a vocal accompaniment by the Swingin' Nine minus Three, announced Junior Class President Jim Tate. The Concert will be held Friday evening, May 4 at 8:30 in the Field House. The price is, as yet, undecided.

President Tate feels that the reason for the failure of Junior Proms in the past has been due to the fact that two formals on two successive nights discouraged attendance. He also revealed that most juniors felt that two formal dances were expensive and tiring, and instead of attending both, chose the highlight of Junior Week, namely, the Dinner Dance.

"By doing away with the prom and having a concert", stated Tate, "we have an entirely different type of entertainment available, which will not be formal, thereby doing away with the expense of tuxes and flowers".

Committee workers for the Concert include: General Chairman Jim Tate, Publicity director Tom Sumner, Programmers Rocco Guidice and Frank Girbride.

'Revamp Criminal Trial Procedure' States Decker At Fourth Law Forum

by Frank Quattrone

Exceedingly inclement weather failed to discourage an unexpectedly large turnout for the fourth meeting of the Villanova Law Forum on Friday night, February 9. The speaker was Major General Charles L. Decker, judge advocate general of the Army. A capacity audience filled the mock courtroom of Garey Hall.

After a brief, semiformal introduction by his old law teacher, Dean Harold Gil Reuschlein, the distinguished general proceeded to put the spectators at ease with his sharp wit, and stated the subject of his address: "Streamlining the Administration of Justice."

"Not A Sound System"

General Decker quickly clarified the wording of his topic: "When I say 'streamlining of justice' I mean the reshaping of the organization which administers justice." He meant criminal justice in particular and believes that at the present time, it is "not a sound system". But he asserted that he is "opposed to any streamlining which would sacrifice even the slightest right properly due an accused."

In the course of his address the judge advocate cited numerous cases to prove his contention. He spoke out against the "persecuting prosecutor", assuring the audience however that this is not the general case, and discussed the defense attorney and fees for criminal lawyers. But he did make clear the purpose of the trial to which most lowyers, both civilian and military, are directing their efforts —"the quest for truth."

Stressing his argument, he drew a detailed diagrammatic chart of the current civil service system, and compared it with a streamlined system devised by himself.

Red Hill Inn To Book Jazz Champion; Noted Pianist Peiffer, To Be Judge

Joe Zawacki, publicist and co-chairman of the second ANNUAL VILLANOVA INTERCOLLEGIATE JAZZ Festival, announced to the VILLANOVAN this week that the noted French Jazz pianist, Bernard Peiffer, has agreed to join the panel of judges at the competition to be held at the Field House on February 23.

It was also announced that the value of the first prize had been increased in that the winner of the VJF will receive a booking at the Red Hill Inn, the popular Jazz room located in Pennsauken, New Jersey (7921 River Road).

Class Acts

This was made possible through the co-operation of Joe DeLuca, owner of the Red Hill, who books such class acts as Ellington, Kenton, Torme, Ferguson, etc. Said Zawacki, "This booking is a vote of confidence in the Villanova Jazz Festival and the calibre of the competing musicians."

At the same time, co-chairmen Jim Braithwaite stated that tickets for the event, priced at a low $1.50, will go on sale tomorrow (Thursday) in the pie shoppe.

Braithwaite added that "the event is not restricted to the Senior Class. Rather, it is open to the entire school and also to the outside public, so the students would be wise to purchase their tickets early since a heavy outside sale is expected and only a certain amount of tickets would be sold due to the fact that only the downstairs of the field house will be used."

Best Sound

Bill Koch and Terry Donnelly, who are setting up the stage, noted that the reason for this "is to insure only the best possible phonetics for the audience. The curtain will be draped from the ceiling as in the case of a dance."

Co-chairman of the VJF, Joe Zawacki, will visit with Sid Mark tonight at 8:00 PM on the latter's popular Jazz show on WHAT-FM (96.5) in order to promote the Jazz Festival.

On Friday, Ted Jackson will host him on his all-night show on WCAU-AM (1210) and FM (98.1) which runs from 1:00 AM to 5:00 AM.

On Tuesday, Zawacki will host a four hour Jazz show on WWVU, the campus radio station. The program will be a recorded glance of some of the highlights in Jazz for the past 40 years.

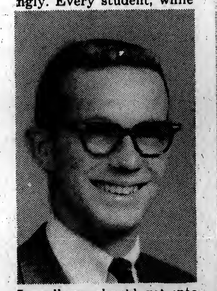
PORTRETTE

A Well-Balanced Man

What is more elusive to man than time? To capture it would place the world in one's pocket. Occasionally, however, man does this. One such rare individual is Chip D'Ambrosio, whose well-balanced activities encompass every major aspect of academic and extra-scholastic life.

D'Ambrosio, a product of Yeadon, Pennsylvania, has been manager of the basketball Wildcats for four years. Among his responsibities with the team, he handles all expense, makes arrangements for accommodations and use of the courts, picks up airplane tickets, et al. For the same length of time he has competed in the intramurals.

Student Council Worker



As an active organizer he has been co-chairman of various committees of the Student Council, also the Junior Dinner Dance, and the Blind Date Committees. All this is in conjunction with his duties on the Social Affairs Committee of the Student Council.

D'Ambrosio has by no means neglected the student publications. He is the University and Homecoming Editor of BELLE AIR, and has contributed numerous articles to the VILLANOVAN.

Extending his interests and influence to the religious aspect of campus life, D'Ambrosio has become an active participant in the Knights of Columbus. He is also connected with the theatrical arts and Belle Masque. And as a sophomore with the Orientation Committee, he lent his assistance to the incoming freshmen.

'Gage Your Capabilities'

Commenting on his ability to remain active in so many vital student organizations while maintaining close to a 3.00 cumulative average, D'Ambrosio answered in general: "It is not too hard if you appropriate your time accordingly. Every student, while

In college, should get into some extra-curricular activities and he can if he rages his own capabilities."

Continuing in this vein, he remarked: "Development of the mind takes in not only knowledge from books, but also the knowelge of experience."

This senior history major eyes law as his life"s work. He intends to go to law school, possibly Villanova, upon graduation.

are setting up the mikes and other audio facilities.

Mr. Peiffer, whose last album received a five-star (top) rating in Down Beat, is relatively underrated outside of the trade but is highly regarded by many of the top critics. Leonard Feather, in talking of his piano style, said, "He overwhelms the ear with blockbusting cascades of brilliant harmonic exploration while continuing to swing implacably."

Feather also adds that "Peiffer, in many respects, is the greatest living Jazz pianist." Mr. Peiffer came to America from France in 1954 and now resides in Philadelphia. His addition to the panel of judges makes the group a completely well-rounded set of experts.

Judges

Seven groups from six different colleges, including defending champs, the Jeff Haskell Trio, will compete for the favor of Mr. Peiffer, Mr. Coss (from DOWN BEAT), DeLuca (from WFIL), Mr. Davidson (from Capitol Records) and the special incentive of the booking at the Red Hill, which could lead to bigger things.

Braithwaite and Zawacki expressed little concern over the switching of the holiday from the 22nd to the 23rd and the possible loss of students going home for the weekend. Both agreed that the Jazz Festival, coupled with the LaSalle game on Saturday, makes this one of the most attractive weekends of the school year and that a student would be foolish to go home that weekend unless he was going to bring his girl back to the show with him.

Tickets can be obtained by non-Villanovans by Mailing a check or money order to the Villanova Jazz Festival, Box 322, Villanova, Pa.

Class Election Dates Changed During Busy Council Meeting

In its first meeting of the second semester, a seemingly refreshed Student Council attempted to begin anew with several promuglations regarding changes in the yearly dates for the election of campus and class officers.

Included in the announcements is the date being set for the annual Freshman Representative posts. Nominations are scheduled for Thursday February 15, at 10:30.

Joe Little, Vice President for Student Affairs, also pointed out that all the other elections, which had previously been held during the first or second week of May, are now rescheduled for April 12. The new date is during the week previous to the Easter break.

Reasons for Change

Nominations for all posts have also been tentatively selected as March 22. This new system was effected as the result of the dissatisfaction in the difficulty of transferring the control of Student Council over to the incoming officers and the intention of bringing the election week out of the range of final examinations.

The election of Student Council officers will consequently be held on April 17. The new Council members will have the opportunity to be orientated in their duties and responsibilities.

Blood Drive

Other projects, the progress of which was noted, were the annual visit of a Red Cross Blood Mobile to the Villanova campus and the improvement in the quality of movies offered in Vasey Hall Auditorium on weekends.

The drive for blood will begin on February 14 and 15 when members of the Red Cross unit will take the names of those desiring to give. Two weeks later they will return for the actual donation. The quota for Villanova was announced at 300 pints for which one full year's need for blood will be guaranteed to the University. The donor will also receive a guarantee of one year's supply of blood for his immediate family.

Free Day

A motion to consider the possibility of determining the annual free day was tabled. Three dates were suggested, Friday March 16, Monday the 19th and Wednesday April 25.

Senior Week Plans Finalized During Recent Class Meeting

At the Senior Class meeting of February 8, held in room 110 C & F during the activities period, final plans for Senior Week were disclosed to the members of the class.

The Annual Jazz Festival, the first event of the weekend was stressed by class president Ray Trapp as an open event for all students and asked the cooperation of members of the Senior class in promoting the show as such. To Trapp, the "Festival" was an activity of the University as a whole and added that "coupled with the LaSalle game Saturday night, the weekend should provide all students with an excellent time. The Friday night opening should start everyone's weekend, and on Saturday the Seniors will have their Dinner Dance, and the rest of the student body will attend the LaSalle game."

Dance Arrangements

The next topic on the meeting's agenda was the Senior Dinner Dance arrangements. Trapp disclosed that two "package deals" will be available to the seniors. The first of the two was the arrangement made for seniors to rent tuxedoes. The price will be $6.00 and measurements will be taken for the suits on the fourteenth, fifteenth, and the sixteenth of February in the lounge in the basement of Sullivan Hall. The tuxedoes will be delivered on campus on the twenty-first of February.

The second of the two "deals" concerns prices and the availability of a photographer at the dance. The photographer will be Jack Bradley and couples de-

Redistricting Problem

The Governor stated that he would call a special session of the State Legislature in an effort to set the number of national congressmen at 28 instead of 27 if the national legislature acts on a modified redistricting bill before the filing date for the primaries.

When asked about his intentions after he leaves office, the vetern politician said that he has "no definite plans." He added that he would like "to write a couple of books, one on politics and one on the renaissance of Pittsburg," both of which have occupied most of his life's work.

Middle Of The Road

Two items in the News during the past week are of special interest to those concerned with Communism. They are especially significant when considered in the light of the recent activities of the extreme Right and Left in the U.S.

Mikhail A. Suslov, a leading Communist ideologist, has recently reaffirmed the intention of the Soviets to carry out a ceaseless ideological war with traditional Western thought. He indicated that the Soviets would not stop until the whole world carried the banners of Marx and Lenin. He said the Soviets considered military warfare unnecessary and avoidable but that they held an ideological conflict to be historically determined.

These statements are extremely important to the West. They indicate that the Soviets continue to believe that their chances for success in an agressive military action against the West are negligible. It shows that they believe that the West's most vulnerable area is its ideology.

Since the realm of ideas is to be the declared battlefield, it is important that Western ideology be reinforced and strengthened. There are many groups of the extreme Right and Left in the U.S. that claim to be working effectively to do this. Irresponsible statements from both the American Civil Liberties Union and the Birchites show that these groups are incapable of doing so.

But finally, the long unknown, middle area is begining to assert itself and to do what is necessary to protect our freedoms. At long last, a responsible organization has started a program to educate sensible Americans about the dangers presented by Communism. It is to be a program that awakens the great American majority while answering the lunacies of the extreme Right and Left.

During the next eighteen months, the American Bar Association will carry out "Project Bar Leadership." This is the name of the program that in all of the fifty states, will try to provide intelligent, sophisticated instruction on Communist tactics. Under the leadership of the local bar associations, it will help America to reject the emotional hysteria of the extremists and to exercise their rationality in their attempt to learn about domestic and international Communism.

A program of this type, providing sensible anti-Communism, has been long overdue. Grass-roots anti-Communism has been in the hands of insecure, hate-filled, irresponsible fanatics for too long a time. A return to sanity and rationality is welcome indeed.

Counterpoint

Accent On Military

by Mark F. Quinn, Jr.

The Congress of the United States is at the present time investigating the subject of civilian "muzzling" of the military. The topic has appeared to become of great significance especially since the conservatives have spread the alarm about the internal and external threat of communism. These theorists have exalted the role of military leaders to the position of political commissars and policy-makers. Major-General Edwin Walker has been transposed into a modern-day political martyr. Political education of the enlisted man in the evils and danger of communism has become a requirement for victory.

Before we allow ourselves to become chauvinistic about the claims of the Minutemen who judge themselves with sun dials, let us investigate the historical role of the military. That the military has been controlled by the civilian has become the traditional relation between the two groups. The Constitution states that the President (a civilian) is to be Commander-in-Chief of the armed services. He formulates the official policy which the military and the State Department are to follow. The latter groups implement his policy. One remembers the old saying "Ours not to reason why . . ." The meaning of this statement has become beclouded to many high officers.

Marines Counterattack

Our modern-day Paul Reveres are not the only ones, however, who regard this danger. Every American knows of its existence. The disputed issue is how shall the situation be handled. When the Commandant of the Marine Corps was called to testify, he stated that the tradition of the Marine Corps has been to train soldiers to fight for something (for example American freedom) rather than against something (for example the evil of Communism). The judgment of the Commandant is much more authoritative than an arm-waving, armchair general.

A second issue of major significance has also been revealed by General Eisenhower and President Kennedy. The military has been accused of a most dangerous collusion with big business manufacturers. At the present time over forty billion dollars, almost sixty per cent of our national budget, is being allocated for defense. This monetary outlay is the biggest business transaction of the nation every year. The very existence of these large corporations depends on the allotment of many billions of dollars by the federal government.

Officers Influential

If the need exists, there is no question as to whether the money should be spent. But if less costly methods can be developed for the production of arms and if haphazard research can be eliminated, present expenditures could be reduced or more effective use of money could result. The requirements of our armed forces are to a large extent determined by high ranking officers who testify before Congressional finance committees. If the accusation is true and this collusion exists a great amount of money may be wasted on unnecessary or outmoded arms.

The President has attempted to provide a solution to this problem by proposing a revamping of the Armed Forces. It appears that the major objective of this program is to bring the Pentagon more under the control of the Department of Defense. It is likely that the alliance between the military and the manufacturers will be broken. It is also possible that the fear hysteria which conservative officers tried to infuse in the men in their ranks-the same fear that many conservative businessmen have—will be replaced by positive beliefs.

Reverse of Coin

It has been the contention of many conservatives that the only effective safeguard against communism is a strong military. But let us not overexaggerate the admittedly important role of this group. If their duties are overmagnified, we also could make a prediction—the situation will evolve into a society dominated by a Prussian-like militaristic organization.

"ALGERIAN CAN-CAN"

Foreign Observer

A Look At The Algerian Situation

by Bill Cercone

A suspicious looking character sneaks furtively around the corner, looks about warily and then stands, screams "Algerie Francaise," and runs toward the police station. At that exact moment he whips a grenade from his pocket, pulls the pin and lets it fly. His aim is true and the explosion takes its toll, but as the assassin turns to flee, there is the deathly chatter of a hidden machine gun dictating its message to this defier of peace. After this, silence prevails and the nightclubs of Pig Alle are a active as ever and even the Left Bank is unaffected as the "beats" sit down to discuss existentialism and the esoteric works of T. S. Eliot.

In Paris

These occurrences take place not in the primitive backcountry of the Congo, but in highly developed cities; the killing is not done by savages, but by men who claim to be members of the French civilization. This is Paris!

There is murder, torture, the explosions of bombs, knifings, and terror reigns supreme in this grief-stricken and bullet-ridden country. And why? What is the reason?

It is because people living in the twentieth century are so ignorant, selfish, and unwilling to compromise to arrive at a mutual understanding. They demand all or expect nothing.

Fail to Give

It is because these killers—whether they support ex-general Raoul Salan's Secret Army Organization or the Moslem F. L. N.—refuse to give in a little and demand so much. It is because these groups support their causes, not with words, but with indiscriminate death.

The basic problem precipitating these atrocities is that DeGaule desires Algeria to be independent and the SAO wishes Algeria to remain a dependent of France. Of course, the Moslem FLN rebels advocate complete independence for Algeria. The inevitable result of this conglomeration of interests is—Murder! And it seems as if this situation shall continue in the near future.

A Waste

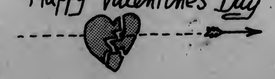
It is a shame that in this day and age when man could be channeling his endeavors towards means and methods for promoting the human welfare, instead his efforts are directed to the unjust taking of his fellowman's life. If incidents on this comparatively small scale can not be solved, then the greater differences existing between countries are insurmountable. Mankind is doomed to perpetual strife . . . doomed . . . doomed . . .

Peace?

The Champs' E'lysees' is quiet once more and then a bomb explodes near the Arch of Triumph, there is a burst from a machine gun, a flash of light exposes a mangled form lying in a pool of blood, screams are heard reverberating from Monte'marte, and then there is a deathly silence. The rain starts to fall softly, as in the distance the police sirens howl and every Frenchman realizes that there has been more killing. The blood mixed with the rain runs freely in the streets reminiscent of "Tales of Two Cities" only this is not a story. Why is this happening? So man can live in peace.

To The Editor

An article entitled "Musmanno Speaker At Law Forum On Eichmann Trial" appears in the issue of the Villanovan on Feb. 7, 1962. The writer states in the last paragraph—"A slight man of the Jewish faith posed a question which he was unable to finish and other questions were also colorfully answered."



The "slight man" was Mr. David Levenson. a prominent Philadelphia attorney. He was unable to finish his question because of several interruptions by Mr. Justice Musmanno who was rude beyond description to Mr. Levenson.

THE CASE OF KATANGA

LIBERAL

by Joe Massey

Independence came to the Congo in July of 1960. Chaos followed five days later. The former Belgian colony. which had so recently been proclaimed sovereign and independent in a joint declaration of the Belgian King and the Congolese President, suffered the calamity of an army mutiny. It was the misfortune of the Congo to have been greatly lacking in the structure of local institutions necessary for internal peace and stability.

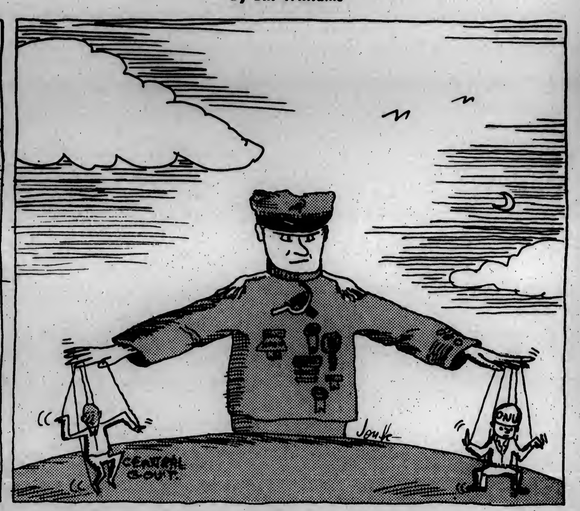
Between eighty and one hundred thousand Belgian nationals resided in the Congo and to protect their lives and property as well as to restore internal order the Belgian government was forced to send in paratroopers. The resentment against the troops caused many of even the more moderate Congolese leaders to take extremist, even anti-Western stands. To add to the chaos many tribal leaders proclaimed their independence. The situation was in danger of evolving into a head-on clash between U.S. and Soviet interests, with all the dangers and difficulties such a show down would bring for world peace and an independent Africa.

U.N. Responds

Recognizing that dire probability, the Government of the Congo appealed to the United Nations for help. The late, great Dag Hammarsjkold answered the Congo's call by asking the Security Council to approve the formation of a U.N. force to replace the Belgians. The U.S. backed this as it was completely in line with the objectives of our foreign policy: the absence of super-power intervention in Africa, and the development of free and stable African states. The United States was facing a choice between three means of dealing with growing Soviet influence. We could do nothing and thus lose the Congo and perhaps the rest of Africa to Communism. We could intervene unilaterally and risk the danger of a face-to-face confrontation with the Soviets in a brush-fire warfare that could escalate into a general war and in any case would not help the emerging African nations torwards true independence and political maturity and stability. The third alternative was to support the multilateral intervention requested by the legal authorities of the country which would enable the new nation to regain its stability without danger of succumbing to the old colonial imperialism or the new Soviet imperialism.

The Wrong Right

The events and actions that have recently occurred in the Congo have largely been stimulated by the Katangan secessionists. Tshombe, their leader, has gained support from the American right which has clamored against an American policy backing the Central Government's claim to legal authority which Tshombe himself admitted prior to Congolese independence when he agreed to the country's constitution. Such support is peculiarly unfounded if one considers that Tshombe, in negotiations with Premier Adoula, signed an eight part pact which included a reaffirmation of his acceptance of the Congo Constitution (Loi Fundamentale), recognition of the need for a unified Congo, and a promise to turn over the Katangan gendarmerie to the Central Government.



It is obvious that there is no question of self-determination involved in the Katangan secession movement, just as there was no question of self-determination involved in Communist Antoine Gizenga's attempt to set up his own regime in Stanleyville. No clamor was heard from the right in support of Gizenga. Tshombe has no more basis than the Communists for his claim to independence. Gizenga, by the way, was deposed from the government and the Communists are no longer a threat to the integrity and stability of the Congolese government.

Seeds of Defeat

U.S. policy in the Congo has been completely in line with our ultimate objective of the establishment of a world environment in which democracy can flourish. To adopt a policy that would leave the Congo impoverished, that would cripple the only legitimate government of the Congo which has shown itself to be in composition, philosophy, and policy firmly anti-communist, and to oppose the concept of non-intervention by the great powers as embodied by the presence of the United Nation's emergency force, would be to contravene everything for which we stand and would contribute to the rapid enclosure of Africa behind a new Iron Curtain. Tshombe has no case. As Under-Secretary of State George W. Ball points out, "The absurdity of such a notion (secession) is clear if the Congo were split into seperate states with populations equivalent to the population of the Katanga Province, we would wind up with twenty governments; indeed Katanga itself would split in two if the concept of tribal separation were given full play. There is simply no legal case, no political case, no economic case, and no moral case for Balkanizing the heart of Africa."

CONSERVATIVE

by Bill Williams

Anti-Communists around the world have been deeply shocked by the U.S. decision to fight President Moise Tshombe of Katanga and to support the U.N. invasion of his territory. It will be a long time before the world sees another African leader as dedicated to freedom and cooperation with the West as is President Tshombe.

To understand the situation in the Congo and the case for Katanga we must go back to mid-1960 when the Belgian Congo was given its independence. Independence day had been set for June 30. Less than one week after this day stories of terror and chaos started to come out of the Congo. As mobs of Congolese, citizens and soldiers alike, roamed through the streets, whites fled for their lives by the thousands. White refugees from the interior of the Congo brought stories of the rape of white women by drunken Congolese soldiers. Within two or three weeks much of the Congo had fallen into anarchy.

As a direct result of the flight of thousands of whites the economy of the country quickly collapsed. By the end of July whole cities stood abandoned. Congolese soldiers continued to run wild, beating, torturing, and raping white women; Premier Lumumba having absolutely no control over his so-called army. This was the tragic situation in much of the Congo only weeks after the Congo had received its independence.

But let us switch our attention to Katanga Province in the Southeast corner of the Congo. By the end of July business had begun to revive in Elisabethville, the capital of Katanga; the mines were at working capacity again; and the banks were functioning normally. Order had been restored and the situation was well under control. The contrast was very striking after only a few weeks; while Katanga was an orderly and peaceful state, the rest of the Congo was in a shambles.

It was at this time that the Katanga government declared its independence from the Republic of the Congo. This was the only logical thing for Katanga to do. And the only logical move for the West was to support President Tshombe and his Pro-Western government.

President Tshombe during these crucial weeks had announced that he wanted to maintain close economic ties with the West. He realized that for operations to continue to run smoothly the white man must remain. In the rest of the Congo because the white man had been driven out, mass unemployment and starvation were setting in.

Some of our leaders in this nation seem to be obsessed with the idea of unity in the Congo. Whoever said that the area previously known as the Belgian Congo had to be one country? Before the Belgians came to Central Africa this area previously known as the Belgian dozens of tribes which had no social or political connection with each other.

I think we can better understand why Katanga wants to be free and independent if we take a look at the political tone of the central government. The first leader of the Congo was Pro-Soviet Patrice Lumumba who was killed in 1960. The present leader is Cyrille Adoula. According to such reliable men as Senator Thomas Dodd, proven Communists or hand chosen designees of Antoine Gizenga have the following positions: Minister of Justice, Minister of Interior, Commander in Chief of the armed forces, the Minister of Defense, Ambassador to the U.N. and the administrator of Katanga Province. Is it any wonder Tshombe doesn't want to merge with this lot?

Another important aspect of the Congo crisis has been the U.N. operation there which has been a strange one indeed. The U.N. troops were first called into the Congo by the Central government during the first weeks of chaos to help restore order. But why did they insist on entering Katanga? President Tshombe had restored order with the help of the Belgian forces and did not need or want U.N. help. The U.N. invasion has only led to more bloodshed strife in a once peaceful state. Numerous eyewitness reports testify that the U.N. troops have fired on innocent people and on Red Cross ambulances. Can any fair-minded person say that the U. S. is bring peace to Katanga?

A Glance At The Duke

by Joe Zawacki

(Second of five articles)

Someone described the band thus: "They walk up to the bandstand like a listless group faced with a long evening. But when the piano player sits down and the band begins to play, all traces of tiredness disappear . . . and you gotta hear it to believe it."

The band he was referring to is the Duke. Yes, Duke Ellington is the band and every member of this ominous machine reflects his personality. After 35 years, the Duke is still King, and like the man said, you've got to hear it to believe it.

Still At Top

Not that you wouldn't expect him to still be good, but how many greats in any field are on the scene for 35 years, let alone sitting at the top of the heap

Listening to the band last weekend at the Red Hill, an observer would see the same old faces occupying the stands with their trusty instruments, yet the music, even the old Ellington standards, sounds now . . . as if just written and recorded a week ago.

And don't get the idea that the master is resting on old laurels. In his own words, "I think that I write more today than ever, and the music is more academic, more emotional than ever before. It shows the effects of combinations worked on through the years."

Master of Convenience

"The band is my instrument and I like to hear it play. I guess that's why I stay in the band business. If I write something today, I can hear it tomorrow."

An observer asked Duke the difference between fronting a band today and when he started in the 1920's. "Well," said he, "It costs 5 times as much today as it did then. I guess that's the main reason there is no band business to speak of anymore. However, you can make it pay. We work at it 52 weeks a year."

The 52 week grind would seem to call for a large turnover of personnel but a look at the trenchant figures in the band denies this. Harry Carney (35 years), Johnny Hodges (30), Lawrence Brown (30), Cat Anderson (15), Ray Nance (20), Jimmy Hamilton (15). What makes them stay on so long? There are two different views which add up to one answer.

Two Versions

The Duke says: "I have a gimmick. I pay them more money and I get the kicks."

Harry Carney, who does such an outstanding (but often unnoticed) job of anchoring the reed section with his baritone, phrased it this way: "One, the money's good; Two, the gang gets along swell together; three, you couldn't find a better guy to work for than Duke." By 1918, he was fooling around Washington with such sidemen as drummer Sonny Greer and altoist Otto Hardwick, later to be in his first band.

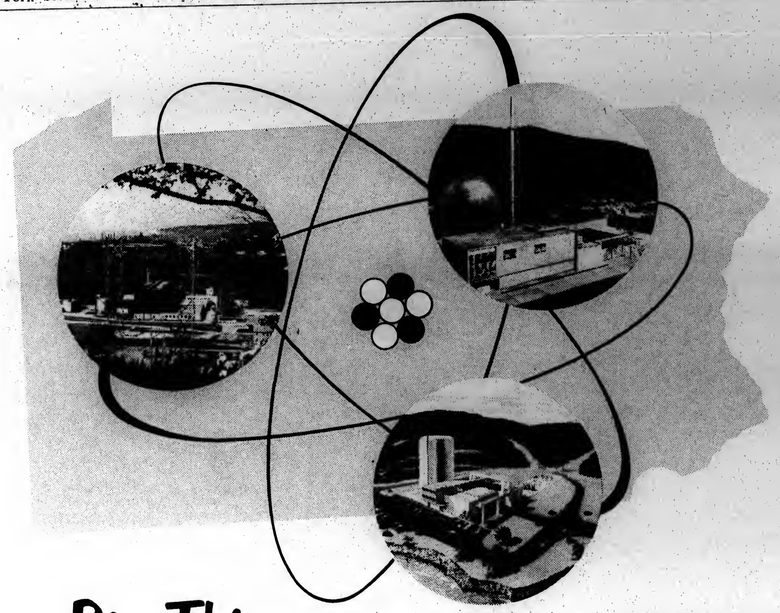
New York beckoned in 1922, but it was not a great success. "Fats" Waller advised Duke to return again in 1923. By 1926, the first great Ellington band was formed, with the likes of Carney, Joe Nanton, Bubber Miley, Greer and Wellman Braud.

His first significant popular hit was "Dreamy Blues," later to become famous as "Mood Indigo." The rest is, to put it tritely, history, and the pages are filled with the names of Jimmy Blanton, Ben Webster, Juan Tizol, Billy Strayhorn, Johnny Hodges, Cootie Williams, Barney Bigard, and such famed Ellington hits as "Solitude," "Sophisticated Lady," "In A Sentimental Mood," "Take The A Train," "Chelsea Bridge," "Jack The Bear," and countless others.



Those are the days of the past. The tunes, the men are older. Only one thing in unchanged. The Duke is still King.

Big Things are happening here...

Pennsylvania investor-owned electric light and power companies take the lead in nuclear power progress with three of the nation's 17 plants, in operation, under construction or planned.

The aggregate capacity of these three Pennsylvania nuclear power plants will be 145,000 kilowatts. In contrast, in all of Russia there is only one nuclear plant devoted to power production, and that has a capacity of only 5,000 kilowatts!

SHIPPINGPORT ATOMIC POWER STATION—the world's first large-scale nuclear power station devoted solely to peaceful uses. In addition to producing power by means of the pressurized water reactor, this station has provided extensive invaluable information on uranium oxide fuel element performance, core reactivity changes and associated control factors, and on problems of health physics, radio chemistry and waste disposal.

SAXTON NUCLEAR POWER PROJECT—now under construction. This is basically a research project which will explore the most promising concept of the pressurized water reactor for economic production of nuclear power. This facility has been designed and constructed so securely that it is extremely unlikely that storms, floods, earthquakes, fire, or even a missile hit would produce a nuclear accident. The Saxton plant is being built at an estimated cost of $8,520,000 to participating investor-owned electric companies.

PEACH BOTTOM ATOMIC POWER STATION—scheduled for completion late in 1963. High Temperature Reactor Development Associates, Inc., including 53 electric power and light companies in the country, have contracted for this nuclear power project at a cost of $26 million. Employing a high temperature, helium gas-cooled, graphite-moderated, solid-homogeneous reactor system, this project represents the first application of a new high performance concept. Its purpose is to serve as an effective prototype for future full-scale plants designed to produce electric power competitive in price with conventional power.

Big things are happening throughout Pennsylvania's progressive electric industry; and there are exceptional opportunities for the capable engineering graduate to be a part of this vital movement.

Fall LYNX Out In February Falters Completely In Values

by Joe McCarthy

The rhymes used by students to characterize the inferiority of that student publication, the LYNX, during recent years are not in the most elegant or refined taste. This last issue, it appears, seems to have taken these rhymes as its ultimate objective and goal.

Such a crude manifestation and disfiguration of human experience can hardly be termed representative of the undergraduates of Villanova. Much, if not all, of the material has one common factor acceptance is based merely upon whether the author is a member of the clique comprised mainly of the Editors.

Thus, a publication, supposedly a function of the student body, is merely a vehicle whereby a few can see their names in print. No apparent literary requirements are even considered as necessary.

Two Months Late

The issue in question usually comes out during the fall and is usually referred to as the "Fall Issue." Whether the editors consider the middle of February as part of fall, we do not know but the blame belongs to their procrastination and inefficiency.

Six examples of prose and ten selections of quasi-poetry are contained between the drab white covers of the publication. Several of these selections do contain promise; most contain nothing but words, poorly chosen and ill-used.

Of its 48 pages, only 38 are actually used for the literary efforts of the undergraduates. Much of this space is furthermore half empty. The preceeding issue of the LYNX had 68 pages. This fact infers that, rather than a lack of material, this is only an indication of Inactivity and disinterest on the part of the present editors.

Poor Cover Art

Even the illustrations leave much to be desired. No semblance of thought appears to have been given the work and the results distinctly remind one of little more than childish sketches.

The opening prose selection, "Maecenas, Anon," finds itself lacking any responsible substance or character. It is further marked by triteness, redundancy, and a too obvious attempt at imagery which results in a murky, sticky flow of words.

The same is true of another effort by the same author, H. Patrick Voelcker, in "Souel" where he attempts to treat a minor topic in an important manner and in terms that are unfamiliar to both himself and his reader.

Minor Successes

Both "Lemmings" and "Moon, Grow Cold" are two well-written pieces, treated in an adult fashion with a comprehensible insight. The other two prose additions, "From the Booth" and "Sunset Blvd," have varying degrees of achievement. The former exhibits a succinct glance into two personalities and is successful in starkiy showing class differences.

The latter, however, is tedious and entirely too obscure. Its very theme and portent is almost missed and its very place in a literary magazine should be questioned due to its contemporary content.

Poetry Quality Low

Taking the poetry as a whole due to spatial limitations and the fact that much of it deserves no mention, only the very last poem shows any indication of actual ability. The others are generally obscure attempts to imitate the style of the contemporary poets.

Their verses are merely prose divided into verse, hopefully called "poetry," and purposely vague to thus avoid the necessity of being concrete. These would-be poets are needful of not only ability but also the initiative to study and perfect any talent they might possess.

The editors of this publication would do well to broaden their scope, yield their adolescence, and realize their responsibilities to Villanova. Their recent laconic efforts deserve little attention and, more probably, contempt.

Dinner Dance, Mixer Planned By Pi Theta Chi Sorority

The Villanova nurses will hold a mixer on Wednesday, February 21, in the C & F Day-Hop Cafeteria. This decision was announced at the meeting of the Pi Theta Chi Sorority last Thursday evening.

Admission to the mixer is free, and refreshments will be served. Miss Judy Jones, president of the sorority, has stated that all Villanova students are cordially invited.

Dinner Dance

The sorority also completed plans for its annual dinner dance, which will be held Saturday evening at the Falcon House in Merion. Anyone still desiring tickets should contact the chairman, Miss Gloria Ferraro. Music will be provided by the Revelers.

The sorority meeting followed a day of pledging and initiation for Pi Theta Chi hopefuls. Besides following specific regulations and orders of upperclassmen throughout the day, the pledges were required to provide entertainment in the form of a variety show as part of their initiation.

After their reception into the sorority, the new members supplied refreshments for their sorority sisters.

Villanova Alumnus Succeeds O'Toole As Assistant Law Dean

The Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., President of Villanova University, and Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein of the School of Law, have announced the appointment of John J. Cleary as Assistant Dean of the School of Law.

Mr. Cleary is the first alumnus to be appointed to a full-time faculty position at the School of Law.

More recently, Mr. Cleary who resides at 229 Rockingham Road, Rosemont, has been serving as law clerk to Judge Gerald A. Gleeson of the Court of Common Pleas No. 7 and has been giving the course in Family Law at the Law School on a part-time basis. Mr. Cleary will assume administrative duties formerly handled by Professor Thomas J. O'Toole who has been relieved of administrative duties at his request, in order to devote his full time to teaching and to the work of the Institute of Church and State at the School of Law.

Department To Split In Arts And Science At Start Of Fall Term

The School of Arts and Sciences has announced that the History and Political Science Department will be divided into two individual departments. The change will become effective in the fall semester, September 1962.

Dr. Fritz Nova has been appointed acting chairman of the newly formed Political Science Department; Dr. Henry Rofinot will head the new History Department.

In a statement to the Villanovan, Dr. Nova gave a favorable reaction to the change. In comment he said, "With both groups separate we will both grow faster." He continued, "We will continue to co-operate." Dr. Nova is "interested in both fields" although "the purposes are quite different from each other."

This separation of departments seems to be the trend in many of the colleges and universities throughout the country.

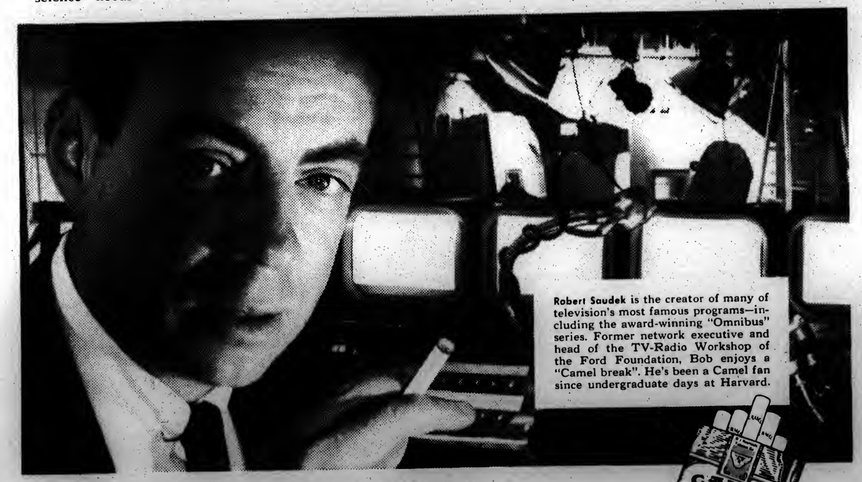
"This age of specialization opens special opportunities for the well-rounded man!"

Robert Saudek, President
Robert Saudek Associates, Inc.



"The more specialists society creates to cope with its complexities, the easier it can be for a non-specialist to achieve success.

If that seems paradoxical, look at it this way: the more men who go out for specific positions on the ball club, the more chance you have to wind up as manager!

Today's world — in government, business, the arts, even science — needs the well-rounded man. He's the man who can see the entire picture...the man who can draw on a broad background of knowledge, evaluate the problem, then assign the details to specialists

The world of entertainment may seem somewhat special, but it's a case in point. These days, it demands more of its people than ever before. Today's musical comedy score is often as sophisticated as grand opera. Drama draws heavily on psychology and history. Television productions are concerned with nuclear science and political science. If you've ever watched 'Omnibus' you may have seen how our productions have run the gamut of a wide range of man's interests.

So I suggest to you that even though you may concentrate on one special field of interest, keep your viewpoint broad. Keep your college curriculum as diversified as possible. Attend lectures and concerts, the theatres and museums. Above all, read and read, and listen and listen! But pay scant heed to the oracle who says there's no route to the top but that of specialization. I don't believe it!"

In The Groove

Selections Soon

by dan grove

Last week Villanova's unpredictable ball bouncers contributed their erratic bid for a postseason tournament bid. They annihilated the East's number one quintet by 19 points, and then lost to second ranked St. John's the next night. The loss to St. John's was no disgrace. The Redmen kept the pressure on the weary Wildcats until they cracked, shortly before the end of the first half. A hot Leroy Ellis. and a cold offensive drive led to the second half collapse.

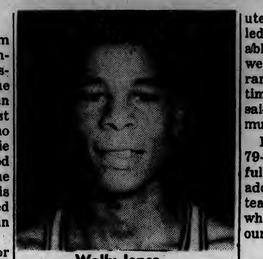
Still Eligible

Although the Mainliners have lost five of their last nine games, they are still very much in contention for an invitation to either of the major college tournaments. The NCAA eliminations is by far the greatest prestige event, because it has first choice in selecting the conference champions and most of the best independent teams.

N.I.T. Nice

The N.I.T., has several features that would attract an eastern independent like Villanova. The whole shebang is held in Ned Irish's Eighth Avenue Hippodrome, and coincides with that greatest of all religious celebrations in New York—St. Patrick's Day. Every cosmopolitan collegiate knows that Madison Square Garden, the mecca of basketball, and St. Patrick Cathedral, the focal point of the celebration are equidistant from the home of the free lunch, the Taft Taproom.

The invitations will be sent out soon, probably with Villanova on both mailing lists. The official announcement of acceptance should be in next week's edition.



See you at the Taft.

'Cats Wreck Dusquesne In Rematch; Rapped By Redmen In Garden 79-66

by Joe Zawacki

Shooting at a 55% clip from the floor, Villanova overwhelmed the Iron Dukes from Pittsburgh last Wednesday at the Palestra (82-63), breaking to an 11 point lead late in the first half. From there, it was no contest. Soph hot-shot Willie Somerset played his first good game against the 'Cats, but he received little support from his teammates before being ejected for unsportsmanlike conduct in the second half.

The stars were numerous for the home team. Huble White and Wally Jones flashed incandescent while tallying 25 and 20 points respectively. George Leftwich (14) and Jim McMonagle (10) were the other 'Cats in double figures. What made the victory so satisfying was the overall team play of Jack Kraft's boys as they showed little of the standing around that was so evident the week before in Pittsburgh.

Wally Jones

The game benefited by the presence of referee Len Toff who showed from the very beginning of the game that he meant to control it. Not only did he do just that, but he also saved both teams from possible injury from an incident.

Thursday's loss to Joe Lapchick's Redmen could be attributed to two factors. St. John's, led by LeRoy Ellis, is a formidable team when functioning well; and Villanova obviously ran out of gas after the half-time break which Coach Kraft said could have tightened their muscles.

Kraft refused to alibi for the 79-66 loss. He gave the Redmen full credit for their fine play, adding that "this is the first team we've played all year whose backcourt could stay with ours."

Too Much Height

St. John's shot just below 50% from the floor, with Ellis being the leading culprit with 15 for 20 from the floor including at least 6 tip-ins. White tried his best to hold him off with the help of a collapsing defense, but the 8 inch difference was too much to completely thwart.

All five 'Cat starters hit double figures, led by their Captain's 19, 15 coming in the first session. In the second half, Willie Hall (who did not start because of recent lacklustre performances) did a good job of keeping White's total down.

Kevin Loughery contributed 20 to the home team's cause, including some key baskets in the first half when the 'Cats threatened to run the game out of the Garden. After trailing most of the first half, St. John's rallied to tie at 33-all, then went ahead, 39-33 before VU tied it at the buzzer.

After a tie at 45-45 early in the second half. St. John's broke away for good, keeping the lead around ten points till the end against the Main Liners, obviously too worn out to put up a successful press.

Tournament Time

A win could have put Villanova in the big tournament, in which a few good shooting nights might win them the Eastern Regionals. Some might scoff at their chances, but remember that the same "experts" didn't give this Team a chance of reaching .500 this year. No one's talking yet about it, but a win at Buffalo Saturday could mean an NIT bid and a few greenbacks from the lucrative Garden tourney.

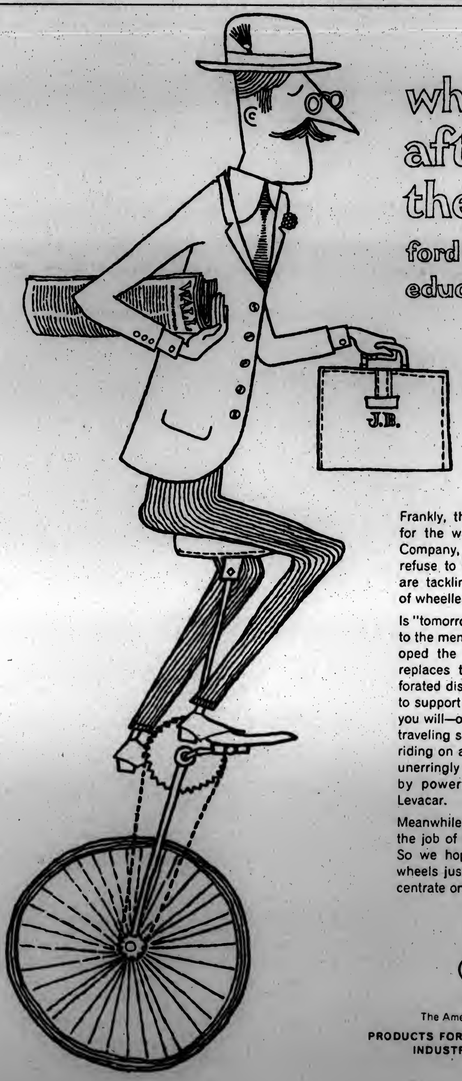
they know I won't take any trouble. I don't need it. If they hate me in Morgantown, I can always go to Greensboro.



"Each game is different and you react differently. When I goof, I just try to keep it from happening again. No one accuses me of being a homer. I'm not going to ride 500 miles to be a homer. Where is home, anyway? Why don't they sign the same refs for home and home?"

When are you satisfied that you have done a good job?

"I strive to have the losing coach tell me, 'nice game, Charlie.' When I hear that, I'm satisfied."

Charlie Eckman is a pretty satisfied referee.

Cheer up. No man is completely worthless. He can always serve as a horrible example to someone else.

what comes after the wheel?

ford motor company's educated guess

Frankly, there is no practical substitute for the wheel today. But at Ford Motor Company, our scientists and engineers refuse to give "no" for an answer. They are tackling, among others, the problem of wheelless vehicles for tomorrow.

Is "tomorrow" really far off? Not according to the men at Ford. Already they've developed the Levacar as one possibility. It replaces the wheel with levapads, perforated discs which emit powerful air jets to support the vehicle. Air suspension—if you will—of an advanced degree. Imagine traveling swiftly, safely at up to 500 mph, riding on a tissue-thin film of air. Guided unerringly by a system of rails. Propelled by powerful turboprops. This is the Levacar.

Meanwhile we've still got the wheel. And the job of building better cars for today. So we hope you won't mind riding on wheels just a little longer while we concentrate on both tasks.

Eckman Speaks

ref. is breaking in? They pick him apart until he retreats to the security of his job. It's a perfect example of grown men playing narrow-minded games. If coaches were as broad-minded as refs, it would be a great world . . . but they can't be. Remember, they're prejudiced.

"All officials breaking in should get a set fee, a worthwhile one. Then after a certain period, they should be graded according to their ability, like in other walks of life. Men like Len Toff and Lou Bonder in this area should get top drawer. I'd work with them anywhere.

"Speaking of this area, Philadelphia is one of the best hotbeds in the country. With New York slowly fading, this could be the place in the future that teams will want to visit. The fans here know more about the game, too. I believe that there are more potentially good refs in this area than anywhere in the country. However, they're not going to be developed unless it is made more inviting."

Many of the complaining remarks state that it is useless to go on the road anymore, it's so hard to win because of the officiating. Is this true?

"I haven't found it to be true in my travels. Don't forget, the team playing at home has a definite psychological advantage, due to the crowd support, feeling for the court, etc. (ed. note: Len Toff calls it "homer psychosis"). A player's talents are magnified at home. He can do no wrong. On the other hand, the average club isn't loose in a lion's den.

"You know, if the refs are being accused of deciding the outcome of games, then we should be treated like kings. We're more important than the stars. The latest thing is to use the game films to point up an official's mistake instead of the coach correcting his own and his players."

"It's gotten to the point that someday, before I retire, I'm going to blow a whistle at a crucial play, go to the microphone, and tell the crowd, 'An important play has just occurred, so important that I won't be able to make a judgment until the game films are developed.' With 12,000 fans in the place, I bet that will put a stop to it."

How can there be less misunderstanding between coach and referee?

"I believe that the refs should at least be on speaking terms with the coaches. At the end of the season, it would be a good idea for all the coaches in the conference to get together at a banquet with all the officials assigned to the conference, and air all their beefs and get to know each other better. Don't forget, this involves a matter of personalities, and this sort of thing could alleviate some of the hypocrisy and bad feeling.

Does Eckman have any preference for any particular area?

"I don't mind working anywhere. If you start thinking about tough and easy games, you have to crack. I don't see why the interpretation should be different in Morgantown than in Philly. (ed. note: West Virginia has lost two games at home in the past five years. Eckman worked both).

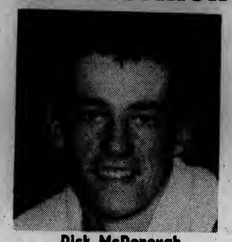
Learning never stops for engineers at Western Electric

There's no place at Western Electric for engineers who feel that college diplomas signify the end of their education. However, if a man can meet our quality standards and feels that he is really just beginning to learn . . . and if he is ready to launch his career where learning is an important part of the job and where graduate-level training on and off the job is encouraged — we want and need him.

At Western Electric, in addition to the normal learning-while-doing, engineers are encouraged to move ahead in their fields by several types of educational programs. Western maintains its own full-time graduate engineering training program, seven formal management courses, and a tuition refund plan for out-of-hours college study.

This learning atmosphere is just one reason why a career at Western Electric is so stimulating. Of equal importance, however, is the nature of the work we do. Our new engineers are taking part in projects that implement the whole art of modern telephony, from high-speed sound transmission and solar cells to electronic telephone offices and computer-controlled production techniques.



Should you join us now, you will be coming to Western Electric at one of the best times in the company's history. In the management area alone, several thousand supervisory jobs are expected to open up to W.E. people within the next 10 years. And our work of building communications equipment and systems becomes increasingly challenging and important as the communications needs of our nation and the world continue to increase.

Challenging opportunities exist now at Western Electric for electrical, mechanical, industrial, and chemical engineers, as well as physical science, liberal arts, and business majors. All qualified applicants will receive careful consideration for employment without regard to race, creed, color or national origin. For more information about Western Electric, write College Relations, Western Electric Company, Room 6206, 222 Broadway, New York 38, New York. And be sure to arrange for a Western Electric interview when our college representatives visit your campus.

Boehmcke Breaks Last Old Pool Mark As Mermen Defeat LaSalle, Fordham

Dick McDonough

by Matt Mone

Don Boehmcke joined the elite group of record breakers last Wednesday evening when Villanova's Varsity Swimming Team defeated the mermen of La Salle College in the Field House Pool.

The senior Co-Captain, a converted freestyler who only began concentrating on the breast stroke this season, turned in a time of 2:32.4 in the 300 yd. breast stroke event to establish a new school record.

Oldest Record Broken

The previous record, held by Jim Gregory, was the oldest one on the books and the only one unequalled by Villanova's current group of Varsity swimmers. Don's record performance came as a climax to a meet that saw Villanova come out ahead by a 60-35 score.

Dick McDonough and Don Reed both contributed double victories to Villanova's winning effort. McDonough won the Butterfly event defeating teammate Ed Brier, and then captured the 50 yd. Freestyle title in a "come from behind" victory over La Salle's Bruce Trainor.

Lowers Mark

Reed lowered his own Villanova record for the Individual Medley event for the second time in two weeks with an impressive win over La Salle's Neal McDonald. Don completed his double by winning easily in the 440 yd. Freestyle.

The win over LaSalle, only the second in Villanova swimming history, came as a personal triumph for coaches Ed Geisz and Jack Lumsden since the losing coach, Mr. Joseph Kirk, was also their mentor during their own collegiate days at LaSalle.

Fordham Falls

The Wildcat swimmers added Fordham to their victory list with an easy win over the Rams on Friday, Feb. 9. Overall strength proved too much for the Fordham team as the 'Cats swept every event in compiling their 72-18 victory.

slate. The 'Cats have only to win one of the three matches to cinch the title. In their only previous meeting, they shutout their second-place rivals 3-0.

Seniors Sal Rico and Chuck Capone have each qualified for the semi-finals in the Doubles Tournament. Rico scored a 1532 for a 193 per game average and Capone 1523 for a 192 average. They will compete next Sunday for the finals in the Eastern Collegiate Bowling League.

Last Sunday the 'Cats registered victories over Philadelphia Textile, 3-0, and St. Joseph's, 3-0. The latter win is counted towards the second half championships. Sal Rico paced the team with a 586 with Capone two pins behind in the Textile match. Church Williams with a 642 was high in the St. Joe's meeting.

In two recent games, the Main Liners topped LaSalle and Penn by identical scores of 2-1. In both matches, the 'Cats set league records for high score. During the second game with LaSalle they knocked down 1017 pins and followed in the final game with 1037. Their total was also the league record, 2899. Capone with 633 and Rico with 599 led the 'Cats in individual statistics.

While defeating Penn, the 'Cats further augmented their record with a 1040 single slate. Sal Rico and Danny Henderson took one-two in personal games with 613 and 584 respectively.

The Villanova varsity Hockey team maintained their first place holding last week by defeating their two league opponents, Lafayette 9-8 and Lehigh 5-2. Their record now stand at 4-0 in league play and 4-4 including non-league play.

Mike Clemente accounted for a double hat-trick in the Lafayette contest with Kevin Shea, Dick Thackerey, and John Clemente each scoring once.

Irish Run Again

by Ed Lohr

"The 1000 yard run in Los Angeles was my determining race—in the Wanamaker Mile at the Millrose Games, I started my kick too late—but in the Inquirer Mile last Friday, I ran my type of race," says Villanova's personable freshman miler, Tom Sullivan.

The diminutive Sullivan, 5'-7" tall and weighing in at 137 pounds, ran a 63 second first quarter at Convention Hall and was hanging much closer to the front than in his first mile effort at Madison Square Garden.

"I wanted to stay up there so I wouldn't have so much to make up at the end. Close had beaten me by inches last week so I know what I had to do to win."

He continued, "I was fourth when I started my kick with a lap and a half to go and I thought that when I passed him that he had faltered but the last turn I touched his foot and I thought I'd better get a move on."

Sullivan, who is 19 and won't ever get served in Kelly's, even with proof, said, "I plan to run against the field during my freshman year, but after that I'll run against the clock—that is the only way to tell how good you are." That was his comment on Delany's tactics of running only to win.

The Inquirer Mile was Sullivan's all the way and he has a 19 jewel Elgin to prove it. Not as strong as he will be, his :63-2:07-3:10-4:08.5 pace was perfect.

The next assignment for the ever smiling Irishman is to team up with three other Americans of Irish descent to run against the visiting two mile relay team from Ireland in the New York A.C. meet this week.

Young Sullivan first came in contact with his track coach, Don Amidei of St. George's High in Evanston, Ill., on the basketball court as Amidei doubled as a coach. However, he gave up the hoop sport on his coach's advice.

Sullivan, a pre-med student who lives on Chicago's north side, was a half miler in his freshman and sophomore years, and ran only two miles his junior year—one a slick 4:11.5. It was then that his long road to Villanova began—without his knowing about it.

An Augustinian priest, Father Burkart, watched track practice every day in a Villanova jacket and one night called up Sullivan's mother and asked if he could take Tom to the IC4A Championships at Villanova in May of 1960.

Tommy recalls, "My mother did not even know that Villanova was Catholic and all that I knew was that it was in the East—I didn't know in what city."

"She let me go to the meet and all I did was to shake hands with Mr. Elliott and to chat with Mr. Tuppeny for a few minutes—they barely knew that I was a runner."

"I didn't hear from Villanova again until November and had all but crossed them off my list, but Father and Tuppeny kept me deluged with clippings from then on. After my second visit at Easter of last year I made my decision to come here," Sullivan, who is the fastest schoolboy miler in history, explained.

Sullivan, who is extremely modest, came out with his biggest smile when asked about his choice, "Real glad to be here. Jumbo turned Delany into a great runner—I hope he can do the same with me."

Tommy's goal—what else?—the 1964 Olympic Games in Tokyo. Judging from his attitude and desire, he is a much better bet than Silky was to win the Derby.

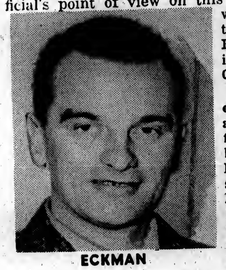
'Round Midcourt

The Other Side Of The Coin



by Joe Zawacki

This has been the year of the "big cry" in basketball on the college level. On occasion, the flow of tears has reached flood proportions and the basketball official has attained such a high level of villain status that if he were to go to Hollywood, Rod Steiger might be out of a job.

While the players are pounding the b-ball floors across the country in perhaps an attempt to erase the memories of last year's scandals, the adults go their merry way trying to dissuade the fans who have given the game a vote of confidence by repeatedly packing halls such as the Palestra.

Why has there been such an epidemic of complaints this season? Is it merited? What can be done about it? Everyone has been asked for an opinion except the referee himself. For an official's point of view on this trend, this writer went to one of the top officials in the East, (and perhaps in the country), Charlie Eckman.

ECKMAN

Mr. Eckman is one of the more colorful and controversial officials. You either love him or hate him. He is outspoken and says what he thinks. Many call him a "nut" He agrees, saying that "anyone who does this for a living has to be a nut." . . .

Controversial or not, Eckman is in great demand. He works as often as six important games in a week, covering as many as 2000 miles in the process. He controls a game, as an official should, with his high fidelity voice and hustle. The day a coach or a crowd intimidates him, he will probably quit.

Working so often in so many important games, it seemed natural to ask him why there has been so much moaning this year. His rapid speech was laced with logic as he answered all the questions with the bluntness that is characteristic of him.

"Unfortunately, it's a trend that is snowballing. At least 9 out of 10 coaches are prejudiced and their minds are made up before a game even starts. A scout goes to a city to spot a future rival and then reads in the paper that the coach says that he was jobbed.

"Then they make up their mind that if they get beat, they will gripe. This trend is making the thing look 10 times as bad as it actually is. This year above others, a coach should hold in his belt and not cry to the papers. He should take his beef to the proper authorities."

Yes, but when coach files a bad report on the officials after losing, he's accused of crying and sour grapes. . . . . .

"Well, what do you call it when he beefs in the papers?"

Because of the numerous complaints, traditionally great series are in danger of being terminated. How can this be avoided?

"Everyone knows that there are strong officials and weak ones. There are no "homers" anymore, as there were 15 years ago. Today, the conference commissioner hires the officials, not the coach. If a Jack Kraft and a George King are involved in a crucial game, they should go to the commissioners, demand the best officials and pay them above scale for it.

"There aren't enough top men to be at every crucial game and they can't work every night nor can they travel extensively because of their jobs, so they must get an added inducement to make them do it for a living and thus be available for all these important games."

Is this why more officials don't work at it for a living?

"Definitely. There is no future, no security in refereeing for a living. A ref. takes abuse from coaches, fans, writers, and this year, it's worse than ever. It's getting so that the ref. is wondering where the abuse is going to come from next."

Does this abuse bother Eckman? Not at all, says he.

"I'm a player's ref. I don't give a damn about the coaches, writers or fans. The kids are the ones that play the game and when they're left alone by the people, they do a pretty good job. I talk to a kid on the floor, tell him when he makes a good play. It relaxes him and makes my job of controlling the game easier. I get more cooperation out of him this way."

Getting back to paying officials extra for important games, isn't this unrealistic?

"Not right now, it isn't. At this time, it's the only answer, until we get more top officials. A coach has maybe 10 crucial games on his schedule during the year. A good referee has maybe 50 of them. He hasn't been sitting home all week waiting for a big game. For his traveling, he should get more than he has been receiving."

Where are these top officials going to come from, and how are they going to be trained? Why are there not enough top officials around?

"Taking the last first, the lack of good refs is due to the fact that the old timers are going out and the new kids are just starting. The only way that they'll be properly trained is through game experience. And what happens when a new

Sullivan, Budd, Cruz, Joe Relay Team Win In Inquirer Games

by Joe Zawacki

Villanova's track team gave another beautiful exhibition last Friday at the Philadelphia Inquirer games, adding still another chatper to the book of evidence attesting to the coaching and recruiting genius of Jim "Jumbo" Elliot and Jim Tuppeny.

A look at the following list of accomplishments attained at Convention Hall before a storm-defying crowd of 10,659 will suffice: Frosh Martin Ferko, 4th in the 1000 yard run; Leon Pras and Robert Coffil, 2nd and 4th to Olympian Hayes Jones in the 50 yard high hurdles; Rolando Cruz, 1st in the pole vault, winning at 15' on the basis of fewer misses; Frank Budd, 1st in the 50 yard dash, celebrating the official recognition of his 9.2 100 last spring.

Frosh Tom Sullivan, destined to become Villanova's next fair-haired boy, first in the mile; Freshman Don Webster, second to defending champion Jack Yerman in the 600; the Villanova Mile Relay team, holding off a Morgan State challenge through all four legs to set a new Inquirer record of 3:19.8; Charles Hammock, first in the college 50 yard hurdles; and Billy Joe and Gerald Donini, first and third in the shot put.

From the crowd's standpoint, the most exciting race was the mile relay. Paul Drayton led off with a 50.8 leg, followed closely by Morgan State's John Bethea. Robert Bagley's 50.4 was .2 of a second better than Allan Jackman's of VU, which made things close at the change of baton.

Here, a New York sports-writer opinioned that Morgan's Hubert Brown would "blow down Villanova's Carl Wagner." However, it was not to be. Wagner, running a very smart quarter in 48.4, held off Brown on three successive turns, forcing Brown to try to pass him on the turn instead of when he came off.

Some observers did not think this too smart a move, but as Tuppeny explained it; "When you're behind and can't overcome the leader by orthodox measures, you have to try the unorthodox." With Bob Raemore running a 49.3 anchor, Villanova was home free with a new meet record, bettering their own existing 3:20.3.

Sullivan, who had waited too long to make his move in his previous races, didn't waste time on this occasion. He made his move with a lap and a half to go, then held off Lt. Peter Close of the U. S. Marine Corps at the end by five yards. He was timed at 4:08.7 but looked like he had energy left as he hit the tape.

With the absence of 16 footer, John Uelses (home sick with the flu), sophomore Cruz was one of three men to vault 15 feet. The other two were John Belitza (Maryland) and Mel Schwartz (U. S. Marines).

One of the nicer features of the Meet was the handling of the Press Box by Inquirer sports-writer Frank Dolson. Results and times were given as soon as possible and there were enough seats for everyone. Maybe he should take over the same duties at the Palestra.

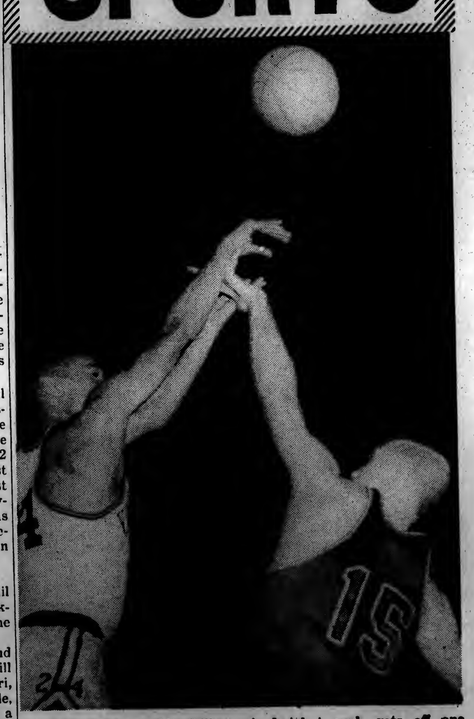
Golden Griffins Meet Traveling Wildcats In Buffalo Contest

The Wildcats return to Buffalo on Saturday to take on Canisius coached by Bob MacKinnon in his fourth year at the helm. The Golden Griffins featuring a strong offensive game have already taken the measure of Xavier, the tall conquerers of Villanova.



Featuring the shooting of Bill O'Connor, 6-5 forward, Canisius has the height and hustle to make their offensive game go. O'Connor, who scored 22 points in the first half against Villanova in a losing cause last year, wound up with a 23.2 average as a sophomore and has raised that this season to become one of the top scorers in the East.

Board Height

Tom Chester, 6-4, and Phil Skilnik, 6-7, give the New Yorkers added height under the boards.

Playmaker Pat Turtle and sophomore Tony Gennari will start in the backcourt. Gennari, who likes to hit from outside, averaged 22.4 last year as a freshman. Bill Slicks, 6-4, will serve as the sixth man again this year.

Grad Theatre Comedy Opens Tonight; Satire On Contemporary Life Of 30's

The Graduate Theatre Department will present its second production of the 1961-1962 season this evening at 8:15. The winter production entitled The Man Who Came To Dinner by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart is the well known comedy and satire on the life and times of the late Alexander Woolcott. It is a play which has consistently delighted its audiences since its first appearance in New York in the Fall of 1939.

The production is under the direction of Mr. George Herman of the Graduate Theatre faculty. He is assisted by Patrick Caffrey, a graduate assistant in theatre. The set for the show is designed by Thomas Nevins, also a graduate assistant in theatre. Nevins was the set designer for Belle Masque's recent Detective Story.

Nevins Stars

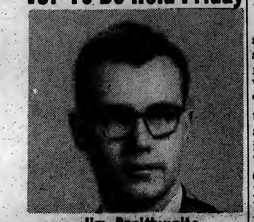
The role of Sheridan Whiteside, the wheelchair-ridden Falstaff of Hollywood in the 30's, a role made famous by Monty Wooley, will be portrayed by Tom Nevins. Other members of the cast include: Micki McDonald of the Theatre Department in the role of Maggie Cutler, Whiteside's secretary; Tom McCoy as the patient Dr. Bradley; Marge Stein as the delightful homicidal maniac, Harriet Stanley; Elizabeth Meagher as Mrs. Stanley; Jane Anderson as the long-suffering nurse, Miss Preen; and Frank Thornton, newly admitted to the Graduate Theatre, in the role of Beverly Carlton.

Comical Love Story

Basically, the plot follows this general outline:

While Whiteside is on tour he unfortunately breaks his hip and as a result, is forced to remain at the Stanley residence. Margie, Whiteside's secretary, in the meantime falls in love with a local newspaper editor, Bert Jefferson. Whiteside, in a effort to keep his secretary with him, calls in a sex-kitten, Lorraine, to woo Jefferson away from Margie.

Finally, however, Whiteside finds out that the love affair between Bert and Margie is for "real". He has his friend Banjo drop in and they manage to ship the sex-kitten off to Nova Scotia in a mummy case. The story ends when Whiteside is about to leave the Stanley residence and again breaks his hip.



Intellectual Paar

Within the play there is a constant flow of off-beat characters. The satrical sex-kitten is the personification of Jayne Mansfield according to Mr. Willard of the Speech Department. In addition, it was also noted that Whiteside may be compared to an "egotistical Jack Paar with an intellect." Other characters include Banjo, who may be compared with Groucho Marx, and also Carlton who is a "vagabond Oscar Wilde".

Drawing upon the services of the Undergraduates of Belle Masque, The Man Who Came to Dinner employs Bill DiPaolo as stage manager and also in the role of Mr. Stanley. Joe Stybor-

WFIL To Rebroadcast Festival Excerpts; VJF To Be Held Friday

Jim Braithwaite

The SECOND ANNUAL VILLANOVA INTERCOLLEGIATE JAZZ FESTVAL continued to gain outside recognition this past week. The show, which will bring the finest collegiate musicians in the East to the Villanova Field House this Friday at 8:00 PM, will be taped by radio station WFIL and highlights of the concert will be aired Saturday night at 8:00 PM, prior to the station's broadcasting of the Villanova-LaSalle game. WFIL is ABC's outlet in Philadelphia.

The announcement was made earlier in the week by Jim Braithwaite and Joe Zawacki, co-chairmen of the VJF. Zawacki, who is doing publicity for the event, finalized the plans last week at the station with Bob Klose (Program Manager) and Toby DeLuca (head of the music department and one of the judges)

Both co-chairman expressed thanks to Mr. DeLuca for his help Zawacki also cited Bruce Davidson, one of the other judges, for taking the time to appear on radio twice last week with him while promoting the VJF.

Braithwaite also announced that ticket sales are progressing at a better rate than expected and urged those who expect to attend to purchase their tickets today, in case the supply runs out. A heavy door sale is expected Friday night. Tickets are priced at only $1.50.

Gratitude was also expressed by the co-chairmen toward Bill Koch and Terry Donnelly for their work on the signs on Lancaster Pike; to Ed Johnston, Jack Wilkinson and Mark Devaney for their time spent on audio; and to Mal Carton, Jack Nolan and Joe Noel for the many hours they have spent toward making the event the success

Contest For Queen, New Cocktail Hour Spark Senior Prom

Of four young ladies nominated by the Fashion Editor of Town and Country magazine, one will successfully emerge next Saturday evening at the Senior Dinner Dance as Senior Queen. The Dinner-Dance holds forth at the Sheraton Hotel in Philadelphia and opens with a cocktail hour beginning at 6:30.

The final selection of the queen will depend upon Paul Judge, leader of the orchestra which will entertain the class later. His decision will be based upon personal interviews with each entry.

Picture in Issue

The finalists are Maude Potten, date of John F. Kennedy II, Rosie Crouche, date of Mudcake Faces, Scuzzy Nodsheads, date of Phillip Ludlow, and Trackshoe Scarred, date of His Rotundicy. A picture of each appears on page 5 of this issue.

Terry Donnelly, Chairman of the Queen Contest, pointed out that many dates were entered and, so that an objective judgement could be given to each, their photographs were submitted to Frank Quattrone of Town and Country. The final selection, according to Donnelly, will be crowned by Sharon Hurley, Junior Week Queen and date of Class President Ray Trapp. She will also receive an "appropriate gift to remember the occasion."

Innovation

The cocktail hours are a new innovation on the part of this year's officers. A dinner of braised European-cut beef will be served at 7:30 in an effort to make a decided improvement over last year's meal. Flowers will be distributed previous to the dance.

Mike Stapf, Chairman of the Dinner-Dance, pointed out that the return of Paul Judge was due to the many requests of seniors for his music. Two deals on behalf of those who are attending are going to be offered.

The first will allow an 85c discount per car on parking fees and the second will have representatives from the Jack Bradley Studio for those desiring photographs.

Publicity

Heading publicity for the Senior Dinner Dance was Mal Carton, chairman of the Senior Publicity Committee.

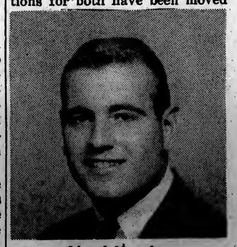
Freshman Nominations Held For Day Hop, Resident Reps

Nominations for Freshmen representatives to the Villanova Student Council were held last Thursday, February 15.



Those nominated were James Mitchell, John Galante, Charles Quirk, Frank Donnelly, Dale Roddy and John Strzlecki. These students are the nominees for the day-hop post. The residents proposed the following candidates: Robert Strong, James Donahue, William Fath, Frank Matricardi, Joseph Samarco, Greg Shorten, Fred Belfonti, Thomas Furst, and Brian Condon.

From these candidates, two students representing the residents and the day students respectively will be elected tomorrow by the Freshmen class. Polls will be located in Dougherty Hall and are open from 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.

Those elected will then be the designated representatives of the Freshman class to the Student Council, which is the official instrument of student government at the University. The Student Council also, in its capacity as a legislative and advisory body, serves as an intermediary between the Administration and the student body. Primary requirements for candidates are a minimum scholastic average of 2.5, approval of the Administration and, a passing grade in the qualification test given by the Council itself.

The official list of those approved by the University was posted on the General Bulletin board last Monday, and the test was then given to those certified nominees on Monday evening.

Upperclassmen are reminded that the official dates for nominations and elections of Student Council and class representatives have been changed for this semester. The date for nominations for both have been moved

Members of the Council Elections Committee, Lloyd Nearing and Vinnie Bohn, have announced that the elections for new representatives to the Student Council Senate will be held April 17. The election will be limited to members of the Council.

Villanova's Freedom Forum Hosts Father McFadden's Talk

by Jan Dyroff

"From now on there will be no excuse for anyone, not even a Communist, for knowing Communism, as there will be no excuse for a reasonable person being a Communist — for Dr. McFadden has made it synonymous with anti-rational." These words were spoken by Bishop Fulton J. Sheen in praise of Rev. Charles J. McFadden, OSA.

At its first lecture of the semester, Villanova's Freedom Forum presented Father McFadden in a talk on "The Philosophy of Communism." Father McFadden, a professor of philosophy, has been teaching at Villanova University since 1936. Receiving his doctorate in philosophy from the Catholic University of America, Father followed a suggestion of Bishop Sheen and did his dissertation on the philosophy of Communism, thereby filling an existing void in that field.

Noted Author

Father McFadden has published a number of works in the field of ethics and philosophy, including such pieces as The Philosophy of Communism, Metaphysical Foundations of Dialectical Materialism, Medical Ethics, and Medical Ethics for Nurses.

In dealing with the subject of the philosophy of communism, Father dwelt on the aspect of

Seniors Plan Retreat To Be Held In March

In accordance with the new retreat policy of the administration, this year's Senior Retreat will be conducted on the weekend of March 1-3. Starting Thursday night at 7:30, retreat master, Reverend John J. Kelly, CSP, will open the exercises, followed by Benediction and Confessions.

Friday, March 2, at 8:00 a.m. Mass will be held for all seniors. After Mass, conferences and Confessions will follow until 3:00 p.m. when Holy Hour will start. The day's exercises will conclude with night prayers for resident students at 7:30.

On the last day of retreat, Saturday, March 3, conferences will be held from 9-12:00 p.m. with a concluding Mass and closing exercises.

Reverend Norbert W. Whitley, OSA, has urged that all seniors pick up their retreat cards on February 26 and 27 in the Center Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Fraternity Weekend, Nominations, Phones Discussed By Senate

At the last meeting of the Student Senate, it was proposed by Mal Carton that any student who was caught tampering with or destroying the telephone equipment on campus was to be liable to explusion. His motion was forwarded to the Dean of Men for further action.

The main motion of the evening was voiced by Sophomore Jim McErlane, "that in planning the social calendar, one weekend in the second semester be designated as Fraternity Weekend. This is to be set aside as the time for the major social events of the fraternities during the second semester.

McErlane Speaks

In an interview, McErlane stated that he hoped this would bring another tradition to Villanova and that the weekend would alleviate the confused condition of the social calendar. In his words, "Conflict would be eliminated and such a change would be worthwhile for the fraternities."

A change in the time of nominations and elections was brought to the fore by Joe Little. In difference to the present system, spring nominations are to be held on Thursday, March 22, and the elections will then be held on April 12. This motion was approved and passed by the cabinet.

Who's The Wildcat?

It is a metaphysical truth that all analogies limp. With this in mind, one can draw a reasonable comparison between the grotesque comic relief of Shakespeare's tragedies and the gametime activities of Maurice McCarthy, Villanova's human "Wildcat."

In Shakespeare, the overwhelming tension built up to fever pitch during the climactic tragic scenes is relieved in much the same manner as McCarthy's comic antics on the field or court put the spectators at ease following the tension which naturally occurs during every game. Maurice might gyrate the twist, shoot "fouls" at halftime, steal an ice-cream cone from a vendor to give it to a youngster in the stands — anything within bounds to make the crowds laugh.

A native of Bronx, New York, McCarthy is an energetic sophomore who loves working with people. As the "Wildcat" he receives many opportunities. In his own words, "Every time I get into the suit, something new happens, and the experiences are all refreshing and often heart-warming."

Has Fan Club

The mascot is quite popular with the youngsters. He even has his own "fan club," organized by a five-year-old and a number of the youth's friends who come to every Wildcat home game. The good-natured sophomore remarked: "I'm especially fascinated by the reaction of the little kids when they see the costume. The suit is silly, and not really like a wildcat, but this adds even more to their fascination. It represents a world," he continued, "which is set aside from the realities of the tense situation of the game."

Upon graduation McCarthy, who intends to major in sociology, would like to attend law school. He is also co-captain of the cheerleaders, and a member of the Sanctuary Society, the Glee Club, and the Spirit Committee.

Belle Masque Opens March 7; Gene Corcoran As Mr. Roberts

Engaged for the past several weeks in a schedule of rehearsals and practices, Belle Masque the theatrical society of Villanova University is making final preparations and arrangements for its forthcoming production, "Mr. Roberts". The play, which will open on March 7, is under the direction of Mr. Richard Harshberger. The members of the cast remained on campus during semester break in order to hold rehearsals and they have devoted many hours to practice.

Gene Corcoran has the main role of the play, as the engaging young Lieutenant of the AK 601. Ensign Pulver is being played by Bob Heenan, while Gerry Ponessa is cast as the captain. Finally the role of Doc is being handled by Bill Diepenbrock.

"Mr. Roberts" was a tremendous sucess on Broadway, and it enjoyed record-breaking audiences across the country in its road company production. Brooks Atkinson, theatre critic of the NEW YORK TIMES praised the play as being "the ideal romantic play of the war. Walter Winchell stated: "the Broadway champion." TIME magazine said "uproariously funny."

Written by Joshua Logan and Thomas Heggen, the scene of "Mr. Roberts" is a dilapidated old cargo ship, whose sole function in World War II is to convey supplies to various islands in the Pacific. The protagenist in the story is Lieut. (j.g.) Roberts.

Council Introduces Spring Book Selection

The Student Council is initiating a "Spring Book Selection" program this semester.

Under the supervision of the Student Council Academic Affairs Committee and the History Department, the program shall include the voluntary reading of a chosen book by as many students and faculty members as possible. This will be enriched by the presentation of lectures and forum discussions during the month of April.

The Spring Book Selection for 1962 is Barry Goldwater's Conscience of a Conservation.

Writer Laments

To the Editor:

I daily give thanksgiving that I have not the job of critic. It is one of the most difficult jobs I have within the realm of my thoughts and conversations envisioned. It certainly carries with it more responsibility than the job of the average journalist, for not only does it encompass the necessity of reporting the facts correctly as one sees them (that is to say there should be no personal feelings of prejudice, either malice or benevolence, or of counteracting a perhaps latent feeling of inferiority), but also, and perhaps more important, it bears with it the indubitable responsibility of being capable of presenting specific proof concerning the general remarks which seem to flow freely from the speedy typewriter of the rather more than prolific reviewer of the late issue of The Lynx, Joe McCarthy. (I sympathize with one who has so much to write that he has not time to think.)

Fully cognizant of the fact that "due to spatial limitations" a review of a magazine such as The Lynx can not be specific, I asked the reviewer to elaborate in conversation upon such remarks as: "Such a crude manifestation and disfiguration of human experience . . ." and "attempts to treat a minor topic in an important manner . . ." The review having been written fully three days prior to my request, the reviewer claimed an attack of partial amnesia as to the specific points he claimed to have had in mind at the time of the writing.

It also has occurred to me that a writer, writing for a paper with as relatively wide a circulation as The Villanovan, should understand his subject. Aside from the fact that this reviewer seemingly has had only three semesters of college English (two semesters of which were Freshman composition), it appears that he has acquired negligible understanding on his own in regard to either any sophistication concerning symbolic unity, or the use of a common English dictionary. So sure, was he, that Maecenas was the husband of Helen that he did not bother to discover that there were several centuries separating their respective lives. This, indeed, would be quite a unique marital relationship, even for the Greeks, and Maecenas, incidentally, Joe, was not a Greek. A momentary consultation of any standard dictionary would readily clear up this intellectual confusion on the part of a reviewer, and may have also aided him in an understanding of the "substance and character" of the work he was so ravishingly attacking, which would have permitted him to offer his aid to an unskilled reader (this being a practice of some reviewers of a slightly higher standing). But, alas, the reviewer seems himself unskilled, unless he might consider an exhibition of the eternal "chip" a type of skill.

The reviewer seems to have little regard for either his own name, or for his by-line which is a puzzlement to anyone who has labored to produce not only his near best, but, also, a piece which he can (at least to some reasonable degree) defend with some semblance of specification; and this should be especially so if the work is to be included in a publication like The Villanovan or The Lynx which will represent his school on foreign grounds.

Many people psychologically project their own shortcomings upon others. I will only say "perhaps" in regard to the point in question, but the temptation to end this letter with a quote from the reviewer himself is irrepressible. In regard to the majority of his review (aside from the malicious falseness juxtaposed with a precious few lucky truths, but rather with the lack of conviction he seems to have for either) I might restate his words: "No semblance of thought appears to have been given the work and the results distinctly remind one of little more than childish sketches." Indeed upon reading the McCarthy review, one can well imagine a child having recently been rejected as a staff member, rolling on the floor and crying at the top of his young lungs: "The Lynx stinks! The Lynx stinks!" (This, I understand, was to be the first line of the McCarthy review.)

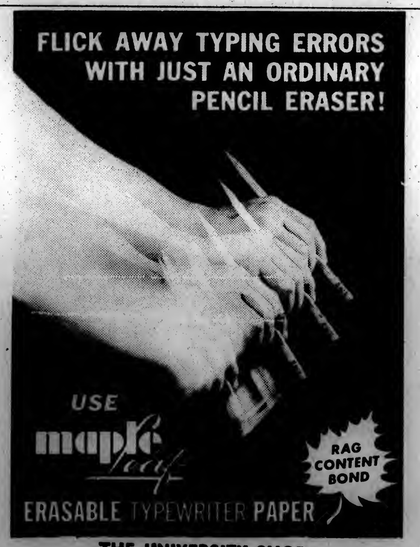
The furor created by Mr. McCarthy's review of the Lynx, that seldom published campus "literary" magazine reached the nadir of ridiculousness last Wednesday in the Villanovan office. Interspersed threats, demands for another review, and other profound statements reminded some of Carrie Nation at her hellraising best.



The situation reached sensible proportions upon the reciept of the letter printed on this page. Although Mr. Voelcker's complaints are somewhat unrelated and vague some are legitimate questions. Although Maecanas' national origin isn't too important as far as the review is concerned, the ability and the rights of the reviewer are.

The editorial staff of this newspaper chose Mr. McCarthy to do this article because he is well read and capable. The inference that the reviewer used his column to get even with the Lnyx is tripe. Mr. McCarthy never sought a position on the magazine, it did however seek him as a staff member upon my recomendation, he agreed to take the job if he was needed, but the editors changed their minds and appointed someone else, much to McCarthy's relief.

It might be pointed out in passing that the letter's author himself uses deception and exaggeration to emphasize his views. At no time was Mr. McCarthy called upon to discuss the first quotation in the second paragraph of the letter nor did he ever claim to suffer from the so-called "attack of partial amnesia."

In the final analysis a review is just this, it is one person's opinion of another's efforts. Any review therefore is a combination of subjective and objective criticism or praise. Mr. McCarthy simply did not find Mr. Voelcker's literary effort of any exactable value.

Adequate Facilities

A Student Council motion to increase the number of paperback books in the University Shop has met with favorable comment from many segments of the University.

It must be noted at the outset that the interested parties have met with extensive co-operation from those University administration and book store employees directly concerned.

We have ascertained that the essential problem is not an apathetic attitude toward the University Shop and a satisfaction with existent conditions, but rather a resignation of the administrators to the theory that the present space facilities are inadequate. This seems apparent.

However, we might re-examine several concepts. Is the primary duty of a University to give a liberal education? Is it the purpose of a liberal education to aid the student to teach himself? Is it not the duty of a university, if it provides a university shop, to supervise the shop and direct it to the proper end, a university's liberal education,—the supplying of the primary needs of an academic environment? Is it then not the primary duty of this University Shop to supply the primary needs of this University to the limits that it is able with respect to its physical limitations?

Now let us re-examine the present facilities of the University Shop. We find that it accomodates adequate textbooks (even after the beginning of each semester) and a small amount of paperback books of general interest as well as a complete set of Modern Library Books. The majority of the University Shop, however, is concerned with non-academic supplies such as records, studio cards, sweaters, underwear, socks, etc.

Could not this space be more valuably used for textbooks and a good supply of worthwhile paperbacks which would stimulate student acquisition and digestion, and thus help students to teach themselves?

A motion before the Student Council to increase the number of paperback books in the University Shop has met with favorable comment from many segments of the University. It has been ascertained that the Student-Faculty Committee as well as the Faculty Committee, have endorsed this idea.

This wide spread interest has developed into a more complete re-examination of the University Shop facilities. The Editorial Board will present its views in two successive editorials, concerning the idea of a university shop and the text book problem.

Objections to the creation of a pure book store are plausible and to some extent justified. There are other basic services a University Shop can perform.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

Congratulations are in order to the Villanovan for the recent issue that devoted one whole page to a serious theme, re. "The Case of Katanga." There were, however, the usual four pages out of twelve devoted to sports. Villanova is a track power, as Time aptly noted recently. But perhaps a start has been made, I hope.

Both Mr. Massey and Mr. Williams should be thanked for entering into the general area of debate and controversy. Whether they should be thanked for the articles, per se, is another question. I wonder how long they took with articles since in both pieces there is, at times, rather shallow thinking.

Two points in Mr. Massey's argument which were left dangling are these: granted that the U.N. is an organization for peace, is it also an organization which has the right to determine the boundaries and divisions of states? If South Carolina wished to secede from the U.S. or, better, a part of a Communist country from the rest of that country because they didn't like Communism, would the U.N. have the right then to impose its will on that section of the Communist country and say to them "You stay Communist,

The second point in Mr. Massey's article where there is room for more development is this: Tshombe signed the paper, therefore he must remain part of the Congo. Must he really? It seems that Tshombe signed the paper because he thought that the Congo was to be an anti-Communist, orderly country. In a few weeks he found out differently. Does he then have to stay? This is a question not easily answered. There is nothing eternal about states. There is no sacred mark on them.

Mr. Williams' argument is the harder to deal with as are most arguments emanating from the right these days, since we have emotion involved and emotion is at best — irrational. His first sentence "Anti-Communists around the world have been deeply shocked . . . " implies that if you do not like Mr. Tshombe you not anti-Communist, which is a non-sequitur if I ever saw one. He then mentions the word "rape" twice which is rather unfortunate. Once would suffice. Using Senator Dodd for authority is only that and no more—Senator Dodd, but no argument.

His arguments seem to be the same as Mr. Massey's but in reverse and much less clear. Tshombe is pro-Western, the central government is not, therefore secede. There is disorder in the rest of the Congo but none in Katanga, therefore . . . The central government is Communist, therefore, etc. Tshombe is pro-Western, we are in the West, therefore back him up—whether he is a tin-dictator or not.

In both of these articles there is a start at some real thinking but it is only a start. I think these gentlemen should now get down to the real issues such as what is a state, how does it start, by what authority, etc., etc. Maybe the Villanovan could devote two pages to this, I hope.

An Interested Alumnus

To the Editor:

I am sure that all those who attended the Chamber Music Concert in the West Lounge, Dougherty Hall, on February 18, 1962 were as pleased as I was at the fine participation enjoyed by this first in a series of such concerts. Perhaps the future success of the remaining concerts, which seems assured by the attendance at the initial attempt, will prompt the University to schedule a more extensive program for next year. This is just another step toward the intellectual and cultural improvement of the Villanova student body.

My congratulations to the Administration and to the Villanova Music Society for their fine accomplishment in initiating this latest concert series.

Misplaced Emphasis

Has America become disillusioned with President Kennedy's inaugural request for personal sacrifice? Have Americans come to scoff at the words, "Ask not what America can do for you; rather ask what you can do for America."

The reasons why these questions are now significant lie in a misplaced emphasis on one aspect of sacrifice. When Kennedy told Americans that they would have to sacrifice during the next few years of the cold war, most of them immediately stressed the material sacrifice. Americans thought of and were willing to suffer rationing, increased taxes, and a lower standard of living in order to protect our democratic processes.

It was heartening to see such a positive response and a widespread willingness to take these concrete steps. But when these measures were not requested of them, Americans expressed their disillusionment. They failed to realize that the nature of the cold war demands much more of us than a mere giving up of a few dollars.

In order for a democratic government to operate well, a well-informed electorate is vital. In an ideological war, such as we find ourselves today, it becomes all the more important. A well-informed public support of our foreign policy would make that policy decidedly more effective in combatting communism. England's possession of this public knowledge and support is one of the reasons for her historic strength in world affairs.

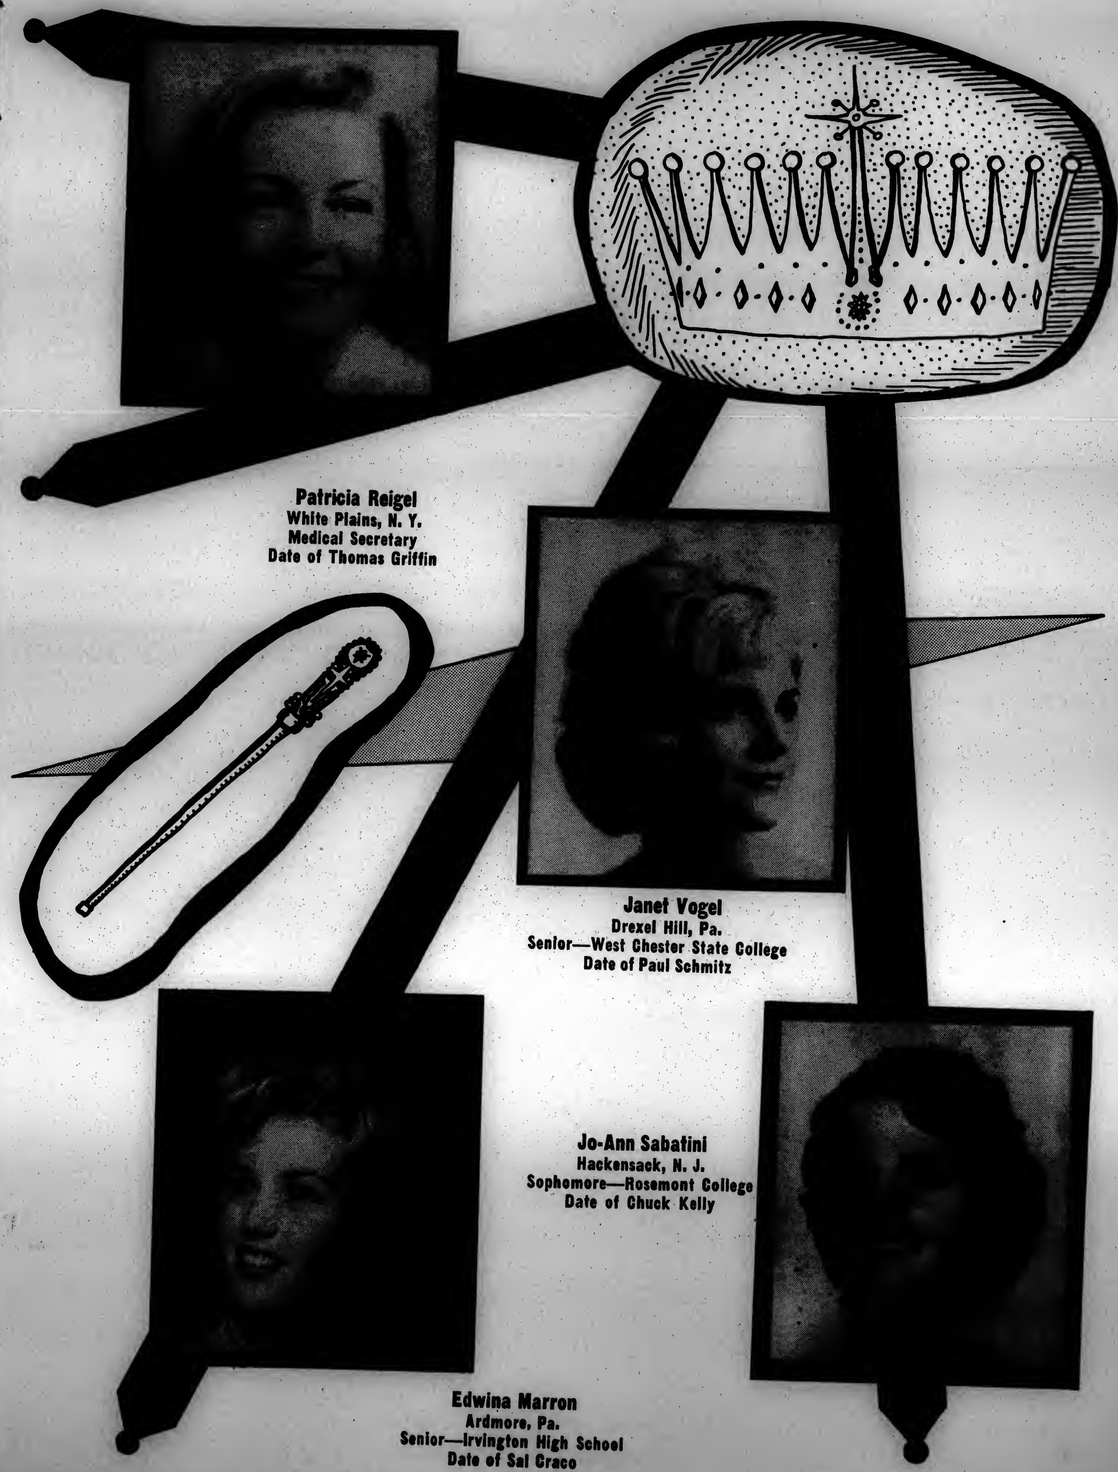
Acquisition of this knowledge demands the element of sacrifice that President Kennedy requested. However, it is a different sacrifice than most Americans are willing to make. It involves giving part of yourself rather than part of your possessions. It demands your time and personal effort in reading the newspapers, magazines and books that provide this knowledge. It necessitates rational thought and discussion. Totally, it involves awakening yourself to the events of the day that affect you and your country.

These sacrifices have been requested of all. But it is the college student that must respond with the greatest effort. The student with his great educational advantages must take the initiative in making these necessary sacrifices. The student is the one that helps to make America realize that it is as important to make an intellectual sacrifice as to make a material one.

A Great Revival

Recently there has been a great revival of political interest on the campus of Villanova. In connection with this desire to be better acquainted with politics, the student-faculty committee, in conjunction with the student council, has proposed the plan of selecting a book per semester to be read by the student body. This book would be one of national interest and in some cases controversial.

During the course of the semester it is also tentatively planned to have lecturers present both sides of the issue. In this manner students will be able to read the book and hear men of prominence present conflicting opinions.



This plan for aiding the politically conscious student and elevating the comic-satisfied student has been reviewed with approval.

We are sorely in need of political enlightenment, topics for discussion and the appearance of distinguished men as lecturers. This program seems to be a step in the attainment of this end and if accepted favorably by the students should explode into an intellectual atmosphere which ought to prevail on this campus.

It is in asking questions that man discovers; it is in seeking knowledge that man attains; so too, it is in reading that man becomes learned. It is our sincere hope that the reading of one book will stimulate the student to read another and so on.

The book chosen for this semester reflects no purely personal political convictions of the committee members and should greatly please all conservatives and earn the extreme wrath of all liberals. It's Barry Goldwater's Conscience of a Conservative. See you at the lectures . . .

Old Silents Gain Stature

by Joe Zawacki

One of the fascinating aspects of our culture is the constant vendetta waged between the devotees of the old vs the disciples of the new. Whether it be Babe Ruth against Roger Maris, modern vs traditional Jazz, or the quality of automobiles now and then, both camps are sure to have their howitzers trained on the neutral, trying to lure him into their respective camps.

As we've stated previously, the intelligent neutral wants to make up his own mind. To do this however, he must see both sides of the argument before he can make an honest choice.

The Golden Age

One of the more current arguments being provided by "esthetic" critics is the low quality of films being produced in Hollywood today. If he is tired of citing the safe example of the foreign film, he generally resorts to a cry of "bring back the old days, the golden age."

Until three years ago, this was a pretty safe argument, since there were few chances to view the products of the silent era of film history. For this area, the change came when Barney Sackett took over the reins of the Wayne Avenue Playhouse (4910 Wayne Ave., just off the Roosevelt ext. of the expressway).

The idea of showing classic films from the 20's was not a new thing with Sackett. Many years ago, he tried the same thing with his parents and sister at a theater in Germantown. It was successful enough to warrant an experimental try at the Wayne, already known as an "art"theater.

Chaplin and Chaney

Combining a smart business eye with a good sense of timing, Sackett introduced his now popular "Nickelodeon Nights" to the public and weaned them adroitly with such sure-fire attractions as Charlie Chaplin (both in two-reel and feature form), and Lon Chaney. To this, he added gag slides, free peanuts, piano accompaniment (by himself) and a general devil-may-care attitude.

Since he now schedules the Nickelodeon nights once a month month, it is obvious that the public has accepted them. Is it because of the novelty value? Or are there enough people around who are interested enough to go out of their way to see the great works of yesteryear?

A Lot of Trouble

Sackett doesn't venture an answer. He's too busy trying to find enough films in one piece and in good enough shape to show to his coterie of followers. "You'd be surprised at the number of places I have to go in order to piece together one film," he told this writer on one occasion. Then there is the usual amount of dickering before another package winds its way to the Germantown house.

Many of the films shown in the Nickelodeon nights are owned outright by Sackett himself. Besides the business angle of it, he considers it a labor of love and a hobby of sorts. A rather profitable hobby, one might add.

This weekend, the February edition of the Nights will be held. The main feature is the 1922 Rudolph Valentino production of Blood and Sand. This feature will be shown at 8:30, 9:00 and 8:00 PM on Friday, Saturday and Sunday respectively. Drive-in devotees will have an opportunity to watch the master at work in one of his more celebrated entries.

Special Treat

In addition, Sackett will provide a few one and two reel comedies not shown for some 30 years. Also, the peanuts and gag slides will be evidence. A special treat of the evening is when the projector supposedly breaks down and a resulting mishmash of clips from various films prances across the screen. It's a lot of fun. In fact, the whole evening is.

FOR ESTHETICS ONLY: A beautiful film entitled "The Nights of Cabiria" just finished an engagement at one of the local art houses. It stars Guiletta Masina, remembered for her performance in the 1956 Academy Award winner, "La Strada," which also starred Anthony Quinn and Richard Basehart.

A detailed description of the film wouldn't do it justice. Suffice it to say that it is a classical example of what one actress can do for a film. If ever there was a female Chaplin, Miss Masina is the personification of the Master. Only a heart of stone could resist her charm . . . . maybe.

Reports filtering back from the Grees Hill indicate that Serena Brothers have another winner at their British-flavored stronghold. This one is entitled "Bachelor Of Hearts" and it's a spoof on another staid British institution, the University. Stars are Sylvia Syms and the German actor Hardy Kruger.

A recent attraction at the Overbrook Art Theater in West Philly cast a few worthwhile views at the directorial art of Fritj Lang, the noted German genius. The movie was the "M".

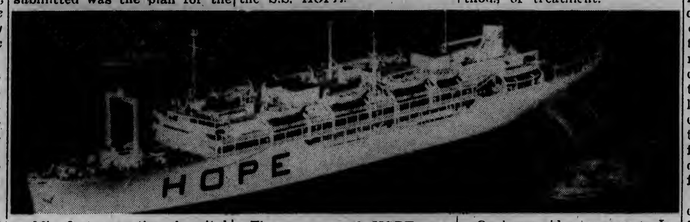
Where There's Hope, There's Life

by Joe Massey

"To those peoples in the huts and villages of half the globe struggling to break the bonds of mass misery, we pledge our best efforts to help them help themselves, for whatever period is required — not because the Communists may be doing it, not because we seek their votes, but because it is right. If a free society cannot help the many who are poor, it cannot save the few who are rich."



These words are taken from the inaugural address of John F. Kennedy. They are heard again during the film, "Project HOPE." "Project HOPE" is a half-hour documentary which describes the purposes and activities of the main project of the People-to-People Health Foundation.

What is HOPE? It is, first of all, an acronym whose letters stand for "Health Opportunities for People Everywhere." Basically, HOPE is a people-to-people mission of mercy. It began in the fall of 1958 when President Eisenhower asked a prominent Washington, D.C. heart specialist, Dr. Wm. B. Walsh, to form a medical committee for the Eisenhower sponsored People-to-People Program and to furnish that committee with a worthy project.

S.S. HOPE

The project which Dr. Walsh submitted was the plan for the world's first peacetime hospital ship. Ike agreed to provide a de-commissioned Navy ship if the medical committee could produce the funds and the staff to operate.

The response of the American public was immediate and enthusiastic; applications arrived from medical people in all fields, industry and labor made contributions in kind and in cash. The practicability of the venture thus assured, the Navy turned over to Project HOPE the U.S.S. Consolation which was refitted and rechristened the S.S. HOPE.

The purpose of HOPE was not merely to traverse the globe treating the sick. As Dr. Walsh observed, "There are too many sick. So we concluded that we should go with a different purpose—one of teaching and training." HOPE's real purpose is to share this nation's modern medical knowledge and skills with newly developing countries. Consequently, the ship was fitted out largely as a floating medical school. She would be used primarily as a means to bringing native medical personnel into contact with the latest methods of treatment.

On her maiden voyage, to Indonesia and South Viet Nam, the HOPE fulfilled this purpose admirably. In Indonesia 200 native doctors and 300 nurses participated in the medical program of training and treatment. At the same time the joint Indonesian-American committees managed to treat 18,000 patients, of whom 8,000 were selected for special treatment on the ship itself or at shore facilities and 700 underwent major operations who might otherwise have had no hope of recovery.

In Viet Nam the service rendered by HOPE to that nation's medical profession and to her sick was equally invaluable. To mention just one representative instance, HOPE initiated and carried out the first mass inoculation program for children.

The next voyage of the S.S. HOPE will take place this coming April when she sails for Peru. There her staff of medical experts will continue their training and teaching that will eventually enable our neighbor to the south to better help herself in the fight against disease.

Communism's Demise

Much has been said recently about the threat of communism. But it is not in this nation, blessed as we are with affluence and comparative freedom from ignorance, poverty, hunger, and disease, that communism will either succeed or fail. That eventuality will largely be determined in the less fortunate countries of the world. It is up to us, in our capacity of world leadership, in our Christian charity, and in the interest of the freedom and welfare of our fellow men, to bring to the rest of the world those four essential freedoms.

Actions, like HOPE, which contribute materially to our efforts to help others help themselves achieve human dignity and well-being will, by freeing men from the slavery of the body that Communist propaganda exploits, contribute more to the eventual defeat of Communism than all the wasted words, money, and energy spent in anti-communist "seminars" and "crusades" could ever hope to.

"Love Thy Neighbor"

Plans are being made to bring the Project HOPE exhibit, now at Wanamaker's Department Store in Philadelphia, to Villanova. When it comes I urge you to give an hour of your time and a little of your cash. You can do more than talk about making this world a better place in which to live, a world free of the unnecessary disease and poverty in which Communism breeds. Christian charity and common sense dictate that you take advantage of this opportunity to act for the benefit of mankind which is, in the last analysis, the Christian's only possible self-interest "because it is right."

The Dry Well

It's Happening At Villanova

by Joe Noel

Is there anything significant doing this weekend?

A question has been proposed; unlike some questions it has an answer—we will present our version in an analogical fashion, turning to mythology because a problem of a similar nature arose in the time of ancient Greece, immediately after the fall of Troy.

Troy Trojanless

At that time, then, the Trojans found themselves Troyless. For want of something better, they undertook a Mediterranean cruise, having Italy in mind as their ultimate destination.

Their leader was called, among other things, Aeneas the True, and, while he wasn't the worst navigator in the world, he wasn't much better. Blaming his inefficiency on Destiny, Fate, and the Gods, he made an emergency landing at Carthage, where he met Dide the Doll.

At Carthage, the Trojans were wined and dined; they were more than amazed, however, at all the activity which they witnessed.

The Carthaginians, it seemed, were preparing for a singular social weekend, the likes of which no one had seen ever before—on the outskirts of the city was situated the impressive Villanova University.

Students Seen

Students were seen everywhere, and those who were fortunate enough to have reached the campus social center safely (many had perished en route because of the treacherous ice condition that persisted) were noted reading a new journal of fact and opinion, called, appropriately enough, CONCEPT. The endeavor was edited by Gene the Editor, who was prompt enough to develop a firm friendship with Aeneas the True, and with the Trojan nymphs as well.

Later, another magazine, the LYNX, was made available, and its fame was known even in Sicily, as was Wine, God of Bacchus.

In due time, an edition of the University's weekly newspaper appeared. Dido the Doll introduced Aeneas the True to two of its editors, Dan the Grove and Massey the Messy, and they persuaded him to stay in Carthage for a time, at least for the weekend.

Banquet and Festival

Then Mike the Stapf arrived, announcing the opening of ticket sales for a Banquet which would serve to culminate the weekend. At this point Ray the Clapper led in sacrificing fifty-two bullock to insure the Banquet's success, then announced that all interested were invited to a meeting in the amphitheater to discuss details. He noted that publicity had been adequately taken care of by Malcolm the Cartoon.

Aeneas' men attended the meeting and were astounded by the late arrival of Zawacki the Colorful, inventor of the Rainbow, making quite an entrance, he made haste to inform all that a Villan Ova Jazz Festival had been planned by him and Jim the Ireless.

What can we say?

Scholarly "Concept" Stimulates Thought, Campus Controversy

"Concept" the newly initiated medium for students' articles of fact and opinion, will be published for the second time in May of this semester. The first edition of the magazine met with sufficient success to insure its future as a permanent campus publication. Almost two-hundred copies were sold, and several hundred will be circulated to other institutions as evidence of intellectual activity at Villanova.

Copy editor of the journal, Dan Martin, stated in a request for new articles that "copy will be accepted from students with something to say if it is said well." Also Martin feels "a wide variety of opinions and subjects are essential for ensuing issues."

Articles for Concept can deal with topics from all the liberal and fine arts, education, politics, current events, and social sciences. Creative writing such as poetry and fictional stories are not published in the magazine. Articles are usually a minimum of one-thousand words in length.

Students who are considering writing anything for Concept should signify their intention to the editors at any of the periodic meetings which are held in the Belle Air office.

the philosophy of history. The path that Communism took, from the earliest times, was traced — from slavery, to feudalism, to capitalism, to social welfarism, to the proletarian dictatorship, and finally to the perfect state of communism. Thus can be seen the development of the theory of exploitation.

Marxian Definitions

The theoretical Marxist supplies Marxian definitions of basic concepts familiar to western thinking, among them the State and Religion. He defines the State as the unjust preservation of the status quo being, in reality, a class weapon.

Religion is the preserver of the State, says the Marxist. It promotes the obedience of the suffering masses to the State in order to gain the eternal reward of spiritual life. He claims that religion stymies progress by preventing the overthrow of an unjust class system.

Marxians maintain that all facets of society are products of a basic mode of economic production. There are two aspects to this basic mode of economic production, the static and the dynamic.

Paparella Publishes Article Concerning Mankind's Problems

An article entitled, "A Current Problem Is Everyone's Problem," which appears in current issue of the Benedictine Review, has been published by Dr. Benedict A. Paparella, assistant professor of philosophy at Villanova.

In the article, Dr. Paparella states that human problems are rarely new problems. "Although the environmental, social, political, economic, and cultural conditions about man are in a constant state of change and continually affect his present status, truly human problems are seldom unique or absolutely indigenous to any particular era of human history."

The sporadic human problem which is at the center of the exposition of the article, is the announced threat to future world survival discussed under the term of "population explosion."

Dr. Paparella points out several of the logical fallacies which are involved in the proposals of those who would advocate the use of immoral birth control measures. The purpose of the article is to cause man to come to the realization that "the problem of one man or group of men may very well be his own problem."

Dr. Paparella also has a review of Herbert Johnston's, "Business Ethics," a textbook that is used here at Villanova in the course in Business Ethics, in the January, 1962 issue of The New Scholasticism.

Annual Concert Series Opens With Sinfonietta Renditions

The New York Sinfonietta opened the Villanova Chamber Concert Series last Sunday with performances of three sonatas by Arcangelo Corelli and four concertos by Anthony Vivaldi. In a brief opening statement Rev. John A. Klekotka, President of the University, expressed pleasure at seeing the interest the concert series had generated among the student body.

Throughout the program the Sinfonietta justified their reputation as one of the finest chamber ensembles in the nation. Capably led by Max Goberman, violin, they displayed individual technical excellence as well as the coordination which is responsible for their success as a group. Goberman and Michael worked well together in the violin dialogues of the Corelli sonatas.

Spirited Performances

Anthony Checchia and Harold Jones gave spirited performances accented by moments of brilliance, although Jones was inconsistent, at times experiencing difficulty with the more rapid passages. Jean Schneider's cello blended so well as to be almost unnoticeable and Eugenia Earl's harpsichord was clear and crisp, but not brilliant. Together these two instruments, carrying the figured bass parts, provided a firm basis for the work of the featured instruments.

The best performance of the program was Vivaldi's Concerto in F major. Here the Sinfonietta achieved a harmonic blend and dynamic balance that produced a rich ensemble sound to support the solo voices of the flute, violin, and bassoon.

Fine Series

Rev. Henry Syvinski OSA, Mr. Herbert Fiss, and Michael Fallon are to be congratulated for organizing such a fine concert series, and it is hoped that the success of the first concert will insure the continuation of the series in future years.

Triple Honors Highlight Bowling; Monsignor Bonner Takes Swim Meet

The Villanova varsity Bowling squad, paced by its Captain, Sal Rico, captured three distinct honors over last weekend. Two third place finishes in the Penn State Tournament, their clinching of the Philadelphia division Championship for the first half of the season, and high score in the qualifying round of the Eastern United States Intercollegiate Doubles Championship for a synopsis of their weekend achievements.

Three events were held individually in the Penn State Tournament: team, doubles and singles. In the team event, the Wildcat quintet failed to place due to primarily poor lane conditions, but in the doubles and singles, the 'Cats gained two third place finishes.

Senior Sal Rico and Chuck Capone each combined to take the third place double medallion while the other Villanova doubles entry gained a thirteenth finish out of a field of thirty teams. In the singles competition, Rico took third place in a field of sixty. A teammate, John McCarthy, copped a strong twelvth in the same event.

Permanent Awards

Plaques will be awarded to the university for the placings in tournament and medallions and plaques were awarded to both Rico and Capone for their efforts.

The Sunday meet with second-place Temple ended in a tie as the Main Liners took the second game to clinch the championship after dropping the first match. The 'Cats only needed one win out of three matches to gain the championship.

The 3055 pins knocked down a week and a half ago by Rico and Capone in the first qualifying round of the Eastern Doubles Championships stood up last Saturday as the high for the six qualifiers. Rico and Capone now bowl Saturday against five other teams and last year's champions from LaSalle.

Monsignor Bonner High, with 45 points, captured its third straight National Catholic Swimming and Diving Championships held is the Villanova Pool last Saturday. Carl Robie, world's record holder for the 200 meter butterfly, was also the recipient of the Martin Gill Award as the meet's outstanding swimmer for the second straight year.

In a home meet with New York University last Wednesday, the Wildcat mermen etched out a 55-37 victory for their fifth win in nine outings. Sophomore Dick McDonough again paced the squad with two new pool records.

The Wildcat varsity Hockey team dropped their first league game of the season last Saturday to Layfayette, 7-4, to slip into a first place tie. Previously the 'Cats had defeated the Generals 5-4.

Shot-Put Mark Falls Thrice; Cruz Wins During NYAC Meet

by Ed Lohr

A massive NYU sophomore, a viscious one mile relay with only one finisher, a stringy Irishman from Loyola of Chicago, and a persistent group of Canadians emerged as the stars of the 94th NYAC Indoor Track Meet Friday night in Madison Square Garden.

Gary Gubner, who weighs 260 pounds and looks like he has shoulder pads under his skin, broke his own pending world indoor shot put record three times with throws of 64-01¼, 64-4, and 64-11¾. Gubner, who throws the 16 pound ball on a line drive, only last week broke Parry O'Brien's mark with a toss of 63-10¼.

Joe Breaks Villanova Mark

In the same event, Villanova's IC4A Champion, Billy Joe set a new school record when on his second throw he heaved the shot 58-3¼, which was good for second place.

The Baxter Mile had the near capacity crowd roaring. The world's only sub-four minute indoor miler, Jim Beatty claimed before the meet that the field was too weak to push him to another great time. He was right. The field was too weak—that is all but for Tom O'Hara, a sophomore out of Loyola of Chicago, who pushed the Californian almost to his limit before bowing.

O'Hara came to run and pushed Beatty to a three-quarter time of 3:01. It looked like a four minute race but O'Hara faded just a bit and the small Beatty cruised home in 4:00.9, which broke Ron Delany's record of 4:01.4 but not his pending world mark of 3:58.9.

Sad Day For The Irish

Canada's two mile relay team had been beaten badly four times this season and had taken a lot of criticism for not supplying any competition for the visiting Irishmen. But Friday night they showed up as usual and promptly handed the star-studded Irish team its first defeat of its American tour.

For the first three legs the Irish, who were supposedly in a duel with the Villanova Freshmen team — a duel that never came off — led by two yards. Then Delany took over and it looked like another Big Green victory, but 500 winner (less than an hour before) Bill Crothers passed Delasy with 1½ laps remaining and held off Delany's formerly invincible kick to pull the upset.

The opening start of the mile relay was called back because the Maryland runner was knocked down on the opening turn. That started a disastrous series of events that led to a battle with a lone finisher-Maryland State. On the second leg Villanova's Frank Budd, who previously had run three 6.1 60's to win the event, collided with a Morgan State runner and down he went never to return, leaving only two teams.

Then on the final leg with Bobby Raemore gaining ground on Md. State's Rodgers, the Villanova runner pulled a muscle and went down leaving Rodgers to scamper home alone.

Villanova's Rolando Cruz won the pole vault with a 15-4 leap. In the hurdles Charlie Hammock grabbed off a third place and the two mile relay team took second behind Holy Cross.

Obeck Stresses Fitness

by Joe Zawacki

Have you glanced at your waist recently? Have those frequent "field" trips to Kelly's brought an increase to the size of your midsection? Do you lack sufficient time to properly exercise away the inches. Well, fear not. For $3.98 (or whatever discount you can wrangle), you can chop off an inch or two from your waist in a month without leaving your room. All it takes is "100% concentration and effort."

Member of Fitness Committee

The quotemarks belongs to one Professor Vic Obeck, Professor of Education and Director of Athletics at NYU and a member of President Kennedy's Youth Fitness Committee. This amiable chap was in town last week to promote his recording (Riverside 7521) describing the latest sensation in the field of athletics, ISOMETRIC EXERCISING.

Vic Obeck

And if your attitude borders near the "so what" area, consider the following: (1) Football teams such as Notre Dame, LSU, Columbia, the pro 49er's, the baseball Pirates and prominent shotputter Gary Gubner use Isometric Exercising. (2) Major independents such as Riverside don't waste valuable time and money on "fads". Fran Murphy, who works for Riverside's Philly distributor, Edward S. Barsky-Inc., maintains that "there is a considerable market for records of this type."

What Is Isometric

By this time, normal curiosity should demand an explanation as to what Isometric Exercising is, and why haven't we heard about it up to now?

As Obeck explains at the beginning of the record, "this is about how to exercise without moving a muscle". The last part is the key. Up to now, most of our exercising has been built around movement (namely Isotonic). However, tests show hat Isotonic exercises involve only about 40 or 50% of our muscle fibers.

On the other hand, Isometric exercises stimulate 100% of the muscle fibers. Essentially it is static contraction of the muscles against an immovable object and its primary use is in building up strength. "Tests conducted here and overseas have been fantastic in their results," says Obeck, "and this success has perhaps hindered the public's acceptance."

Use What We Have

Since we do not add any muscles during our life span, the obvious answer should be to utilize what we have. The Professor defines strength as "the ability to use all the power you have in your muscles.

Obviously, Mr. Obeck practices what he preaches. If he didn't, the schedule that the Riverside people mapped out for him would do him in within a week. He has been interviewed by Time, Newsweek, and other mags; visited cities such as his own New York, Philly, Chicago, and Montreal; sppent numerous hours on radio and TV for interviews. Since the record company isn"t in the business for their health, it should be obvious that they consider this project worthwhile.

Russians Have It

Obeck expects the word Isometric to be common in a year or so. "The reason for the delay in its spread has been due mainly to the fact that many of the "higher-ups" kept it a secret, thinking that it would give our athletes an advantage in international competition," he states. "However, during the competition last year, the Russians were seen with Isometric racks."

Since Isometric exercises can be done at home, work, or almost anywhere, Obeck thinks that it should be a success. "Let's face it. This country isn't in top physical shape," is the way he puts it. "It doesn't have to be. But with just five minutes a day, you can improve your strength 5% a week. Then when you reach maximum strength, you can maintain it by exercising 5 minutes, once a week."

Pot bellies of America, arise.

Canisius Surprises Kraftmen 80-76 White Hits for 21, Jones Tabs 20

by Tom Bruderle

For the second time in nine days, Villanova's touring Wildcats suffered a stinging defeat at the hands of an Empire State Team, as Canisius conquered the Cats 80-76. Tom Chester and Bill O'Conner, who scored 22 points in the first half of last year's game, led the scoring parade for the Griffens hitting for 26 and 23 respectively. High man for Villanova was Hubie White who had 21 followed by Wally Jones who tallied 20. Although Chester was high man, some markers by O'Conner were the fatal blows.

With the Cats ahead 63-60 Jim O'Brien fouled O'Conner who made a three point play. Seconds later Bill Slicks (17 points) hit on a rebound but O'Brien tied it up with two free throws. Canisius began to take over as Slicks, O'Conner, and Chester all made baskets.

Following a rebound, O'Conner drove down the lane for a basket but there was a whistle. After ruling the basket no good, the referee changed his mind ruled the shot good and handed White his fifth personal. Despite an O'Brien jumper and a Joe Walsh foul shot, the Griffs padded their lead on two baskets each by Chester and O'Conner plus a two-pointer by Frank Slazyk.

Tight First Half

After six and a half minutes Villanova had an 11-7 lead. With hot shooting by Slazyk and O'Conner the Griffs took a lead until George Leftwich and O'Brien hit to give Villanova a 25-24 lead. Nevertheless, Canisius took a 33-31 margin into the lockers.

White White Hot

The Cats began to go in the second half as Hubie White hit his first three jumpers. After an exchange of several baskets, Wally Jones made two free throws to tie it at 48 all. The score remained tied after Jones and White matched two Canisius baskets. Hubie hit on two more jumpers and the Cats led 56-52. Instead of providing the Cats with the beginnings of a good lead, the four point spread set the stage for Chester and O'Conner. Villanova was 30 for 71 from the field for a 42% mark. Canisius, with a torrid 66.6% mark in the second half, shot 33 for 64 for a 51.5%. Off the boards Villanova was outrebounded 40-38.

Random Notes: O'Connor could pass for a fullback with his build . . . Even some of the Buffalo diehards were shocked into silence at the official's change of call. The Bonaventure crowd was more inclined toward the Cats' cause, letting loose with a number of catcalls . . . Jones looks tired.

LaSalle, Hawks To Test 'Cats In Two City Series Contest

Villanova's basketball Wildcats, recognized for their fine record with an NCAA bid, will spend the next two Saturdays trying to wrap up their first outright Big Five crown since the inception of the City Series.

LaSalle, under the tutelage of Dudley Moore, will try to secure their own post-season tournament bid with a win over the Mainliners this Saturday at the Palestra. The Explorers, led by Captain Bob McAteer, have been on the rise in the past month and with Moore getting more consistent performances from George Friedrich, Walter Sampson, Frank Corace and Tony Abbott, the Olneyites cannot be discounted as a threat to VU's City hopes. Only La Salle remains in the running now, due to their upset of St. Joseph's last Friday, 72-71.

Jones vs. McAteer

As in most City Series games, past performances mean almost nothing. Last year, unheralded Gene Park did a fine job of guarding Captain Hubie White in the Explorers' win over the Cats. This year, White will be out to keep it from happening again, with the aid of Wally Jones and Co. An interesting highlight of the contest is the possible head to head matching of Jones and All-City McAteer.

Another Sellout

The annual melee with the Hawks will produce the usual sellout and though the injury-ridden St. Joseph's team is out of the running for the City title, they would like nothing better than to tag a loss on the Cats with their often effective full court press.

They will probably play without the services of frontliner Jim Boyle, hospitalized after the LaSalle game with appendicitis. In Ramsey's scheme of things, he may attempt to wear down Villanova with a steady stream of substitutions and the absence of Boyle would hamper this strategy somewhat.

Not as Deep

Whatever the outcome, it's a pretty safe bet that the Hawk mentor will come up with something effective. The Hawks are led by consistent Tom Wynne, who is their leading scorer and rebounder. If Ramsey can get good games out of John Tiller, Larry Hoffman and Bob Dickey off the boards, it could hurt the Cats, whose bench strength isn't as deep.

The Hawk backcourt is one of the few on the VU schedule that are as quick-handed as Jones and Leftwich. Ramsey has credited Bob Gormley with having the quickest pair of hands he's ever seen. Harry Booth, Jim Lynam and Billy Hoy split the backcourt duties with Gormley and all are capable of being a thorn in the oppositions side.

Delany Mile Becomes Primary Attraction Of National AAU Meet

by Ed Lohr

For the second of four straight weeks, Villanova's track forces travel to Madison Square Garden, this time for the National A.A.U. Indoor Track and Field Championships.

The attention will be centered around the mile run, as ex-Villanovan Ron Delany comes out of retirement to go after his 41st indoor victory and he will have to beat the world's fastest indoor miler, Jim Beatty of the Los Angeles Track Club.

Will Delany Run?

Even as exciting as the race will be if it comes off, is the raging debate about whether Delany will even run after watching Beatty turn in two sterling performances in the last two weeks—both of which broke Ron's indoor mark. Delany says he is in great shape but last week was out-kicked on the anchor leg of the International two mile relay by Bill Crothers of Canada.

The other two biggest attraction will be the return of pole vaulter John Uelses who has been bed-ridden with the flu for two weeks, and failed to clear 14 feet in the Mason-Dixon Games at Louisville last week, along with newly crowned shot put king Gary Gubner of NYU.

Villanova's Frank Budd will go for his 14th straight indoor victory in the 60 yard dash. Also in the field will be American's 220 champion of Main Line fame, Paul Drayton, and world record holder for this event, Herb Carper, formerly of Pitt.

Tommy Sullivan, Villanova's Frosh sensation, will run in the speedy 1000 yd. run. In his first attempt at this distance he was barely nipped by Jim Grelle in Los Angeles. Don Webster will be in the always rugged 600 against Jack Yerman and George Kerr.

Joe, Cruz In Field Events

Villanova sophomore from Puerto Rico, Rolando Cruz, will go at Uelses in the "stick jump" and Billy Joe, who last week set a new Villanova record, will again try to crack the 60 foot barrier in the shot put.

In the hurdles will be the usual Villanova trio who seem to take turns outshining each other — Charlie Hammock, Leon Pras, and Bobby Coffil. The man to beat in this event is naturally Hayes Jones, probably the greatest hurdler of all time.

Villanova's mile relay hopes were dashed severely last week when Bob Raemore pulled up lame while running the anchor in the NYAC Games. Villanova's chances will be directly dependent on Raemore's recovery. The two mile relay team, which is steadily improving, will be out to stop Holy Cross and Georgetown.

Mainliners Headed For NCAA; Become First Team To Accept

Villanova became the first team in the nation to receive and to accept an N.C.A.A. basketball tournament invitation, according to athletic director Arthur L. Mahan. Mahan announced at 11 p.m. Monday morning that, "Villanova has accepted an at-large bid to play in the N.C.A.A. eastern regional playoffs."

Palestra Tripleheader

The site of the first round game is the University of Pennsylvania's Palestra on March 12. This part of the elimination will feature a tripleheader involving Villanova vs. the Southern conference champion, the Atlantic Coast Conference champion vs the Ivy League champion (an at large team), and the Yankee Conference champion, vs New York U. an at large team.

The three at large teams will play the conference champions. The winners of the three games at the Palestra and the Middle Atlantic champion which has a first round bye, will meet in College Park, Maryland, on March 16th and 17th. The victor of this playoff will face the other three regional champions in Louisville, Kentucky, the following weekend, to decide the national, collegiate basketball champion.

A Surprise

The invitation came as quite a surprise to many people at Villanova, especially since the Wildcats lost to Canisius last Saturday night. Villanova officials were prepared for a bid from either of the two major tournaments before the weekend, but the loss to Canisius seemed to eliminate an N.C.A.A. bid. When the invitation came by phone Monday morning Mr. Mahan accepted it immediately.

This acceptance marks the first time that Villanova has competed in the N.C.A.A. tournament since 1955. In that tournament Villanova won two games before losing to Canisius by 2 points. It also marks the Wildcats fifth appearance in that tournament, their overall record is 4-4.

First year coach Jack Kraft was overwhelmed by the invitation. In an interview immediately after the acceptance he said, "At the start of the season I set a personal goal of 500% for this team. The thought of a tournament bid didn't enter my mind. Being the first team chosen for this tournament is the greatest honor that could be bestowed on a first year coach. The fact that we were the first team invited shows that they were definitely interested in having us compete."

Mahan Jubilant

Athletic Director Mahan was almost as jubilant as Kraft. He said, "I am thrilled with this honor, mainly because the coach and players got the recognition they richly deserve."

Plans for ticket sales will be announced sometime this week according to "Red" Brown, the chairman of the N.C.A.A. selection committee. Brown said "all schools will receive an equal amount of good tickets, although in some cases I doubt if the number will be adequate."

Beta Gamma Starts Williamsburg Journey To Qualifying Tourney

Beta Gamma, the debating society of Villanova University, will travel to Williamsburg, Virginia, this weekend to compete in the United States District Seven Qualification Debate. The debate, which will be held on March 15, 16, and 17 will feature representatives from over sixty colleges and universities from New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia, and North and South Carolina. These states compose that geographic locality known as District Seven.

Villanova's delegates are Dave Galie, sophomore arts and science, and Terry Cooney, sophomore engineering. The debate will be composed of two-man teams, one from each school, and will consist of eight "switch-side" rounds. After each round the affirmative assumes the negative and vice-versa, so that a vigorous contest of forensic ability is afforded. The top five teams as determined by the judges will attend the finals to be held in the spring at the United States Military Academy at West Point.

The topic of the debate is the national inter-collegiate topic:—Resolved that labor organizations should come under the jurisdiction of anti-trust legislation.

Belle Masque Presents Navy Comedy 'Mister Roberts' Opening In Vasey

by Ed Graham

Several crew members of the AK-601 display their emotions during final rehearsals for the Belle Masque production "Mister Roberts", which opens tonight in Vasey Hall.

Gene Corcoran has been assigned the title role in the Belle Masque production of the celebrated comedy of naval life in the war, Mister Roberts.

Mister Roberts has been newly assigned to an old cargo ship, and is fearful that the war will pass him by before he can be transferred to a real fighting ship.

Since all the action of the comedy takes place aboard the fictional ship known as the AK-601, which monotonously performs its chores of carrying naval cargoes thousands of miles behind the battle lines, only a few women appear in the cast. One of these is an Army nurse who comes aboard the ship while it is in port and causes quite a stir among the crew who had become starved for the sight of a pretty girl. This role will be played by Margie Kean, a Cabrini sophomore.

Tyrannical Commander

Gerry Paonessa will be seen as the embittered, tyrannical commander of the ship, who dislikes his junior officer Roberts for his ability to get things done. Bob Heenan has been cast in the role of Ensign Pulver, whose efforts to distinguish himself result in some of the most hilarious scenes in the play.

Bill Diepenbrock will be seen as the sympathetic yet cynical ship's doctor, and some of the other members of the crew will be played by Pete Smith, Bill Burne, Ken Resinski, and Ross Anzold.

The production will run from tonight, March 7, to Sunday, March 11, and will be staged in the Vasey Hall auditorium. The show is directed by Mr. Richard Harshberger, of the Speech Department. Tickets may still be obtained in the Pie Shoppe.

WWVU Programs Panel Show To Air Current Controversies

by Frank Quattrone

Recently incorporated into the format of the WWVU Production Department was a new panel discussion program called "Emphasis." Its purpose is to bring the student body of Villanova into clear contact with topics of interest and importance.

Moderator Frank Sauers announced that "Emphasis" is to be produced on campus station WWVU every other Wednesday evening from seven to eight p.m. The first program, concerning the polemical John Birch Society, was heard last Wednesday evening.

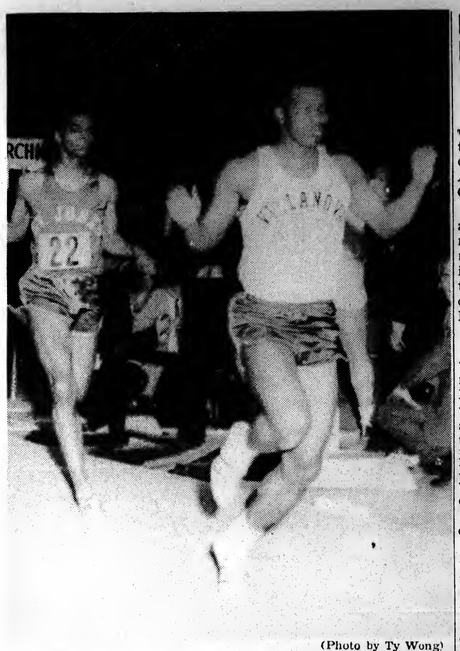
Sauers Speaks

Expounding on its goals, Sauers remarked, "We are planning to produce these programs on an inter-collegiate level through the participation of representatives from other area colleges. As a result, we believe the discussions will be enriched through varying opinions, and will contribute to the broader understanding of the topics by both the participants and listeners."

Frank Sauers . . . on WWVU

For the second program, to be aired next Wednesday evening, March 14, two representatives each from St. Joseph's College, Swarthmore College, and Villanova University have been selected to discuss the vital topic: Berlin—Past, Present, and Future. Joe Massey and Gene Felch will represent Villanova.

Concluding, the loquacious Sauers noted, "Above all, the programs will be devoted to the divergence of opinion, essential to the success of any free society." He also noted that any criticism stimulated by "Emphasis" would be greatly appreciated.



The Student Council announced today that Merriil Mueller, NBC news commentator, will be the speaker at the Third Student Council Forum on March 14 at 7:30 p.m. His topic will be the forthcoming Geneva Conference.

March 16 Proclaimed Free Day Vote Machine Move Discussed

by Ed Farrell

An important motion and a pertinent reminder were at the head of the business at the Student Senate meeting on February 26.

The motion was to move the voting machines for class elections from Alumni Hall to the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall. A consensus of senate opinion was that the move of the machines would cause too much confusion, and the motion was recommended for defeat. This motion will come up for action before the Congress tonight. Students are urged to attend the meeting in Dougherty's East Lounge this evening to voice their opinion on the proposed move.

Pete Federico, Council Secretary, reiterated that every organization planning a social function is required to submit an application at least two weeks before the event and a complete financial report afterward.

Congress Meets

Two main motions and the usual run of small order business occupied the time of the Student Congress at the last meeting.

The determination of March 16 as the annual free day was of primary importance. After fruitless argument by proponents of March 19 and April 25, March 16 won out. The second important motion was a recommendation to the Dean of Men that a ruling be made to the effect that anyone caught tampering with the telephone equipment in the dormitories will be subject to dismissal.

At this point the Council became entangled with the ever-present rules of parlimentary procedure. Rulings from the chair and the parlimentarian cleared the proceedings and a motion to enter the words "or suspension" to the end of the motion on telephone tampering was defeated while the motion itself was passed almost unanimously.

Student Attendance Urged

At the close of the meeting Federico restated the Council's position on student attendance at the Congress meeting; "The Congress wishes to have as many of the student body at the meeting as possible to voice their opinions on matters which related directly to them."

Frosh Go To Polls; Gallante And Furst Elected To Council

The members of the Class of 1965, the present freshmen, last Thursday elected to seats in the Student Council, Thomas Furst as their Resident Representative and John Galante as the Day-Hop Representative. Out of a class of approximately 1150 students, only 436 went to the polls to voice their support.

The percentage of 38% drew the comments of being a poor showing for the class as a whole from Elections Committee Chairman Lloyd Nearing and Vinny Bonn. In the past, most elections on campus have seldom fallen below the half-way mark.

Furst defeated five other candidates for the post with 133 votes. Runner-up to him was Greg Shorten with 109. Following Shorten closely was Brian Condren with 105. The other three nominees, Frank Matricardi, William Fath, and Bob Strong polled 48, 22, and 20 votes respectively.

The other winner, Galante, encountered considerably less opposition in defeating the two other candidates. The race was, however, marked by the closeness of the results: Galante 155, Charles Quirk 140, and James Mitchell 129.

Both new representatives are expected to attend the first meeting after the election (this evening). Their terms will run through the remainder of this year and until the following spring's elections.

Final Law Forum Held At Garey Hall; Address By Honorable James Quigley

The Honorable James M. Quigley, Assistant Secretary, United States Department of Health, Education and Welfare, addressed the fifth and final session of the Law Forum of the School of Law, Villanova University, on Monday evening, March 5. Mr. Quigley is a native of Mount Carmel, Pennsylvania, and received his A.B. degree from Villanova in 1939, and his Law degree from the Dickinson Law School in 1942. Shortly after graduation from law school he entered upon military service, serving with the occupation forces in Korea and China. He practiced law for some years in Harrisburg as a partner in the firm of McNess, Wallace and Nurick.

Mr. Quigley has had wide governmental experience, having served as administrative assistant to Senator Joseph S. Clark of Pennsylvania and as Deputy Attorney General of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. He served as a member of the House of Representatives from the 19th District of Pennsylvania in the eighty-fourth and eighty-sixth Congresses. As a member of the House of Representatives, he served on the Judiciary Committee, the Veterans' Affairs Committee and the Committee on Science and Astronautics.

Hon. James Quigley

Mr. Quigley entitled his talk "Inside Congress" and analyzed the working of Congress, its committees and its relations with constituents and other branches of the government. Mr. Quigley was introduced by Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein of the School of Law.

Tau Beta Phi Sets March 10 For Engineering Open House

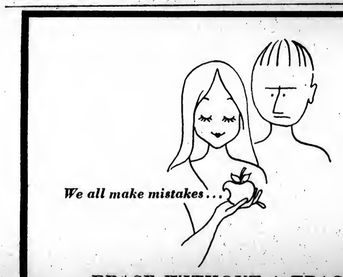
The Villanova chapter (Theta) of Tau Beta Pi, national engineering honorary society, this year will hold its second Open House March 10, starting at 9:00 a.m.

Open House this year as described by Frank Brzenk, Chairman of Engineering Day, will include tours of science facilities at Villanova and demonstration of various instruments used in the several engineering fields.

The program's aims are directed specifically towards interested high school seniors with ambitions of entering the engineering profession. Opportunity will be given those students with specific interests to talk with faculty members in related fields.

Discussion Groups

The availability of professors for discussion about engineering curricula at the university should allow students to form more definite plans for future specialization once at college. Open House will also try to familiarize the participating representatives with opportunities available at Villanova, and requirements for entrance.



Conducting this year's Open House will be Dr. Koliner of the Chemical Engineering Department, with Frank Brzenk, Chairman of Engineering Day. Brzenk stated that last year's Open House drew 150 students from about 25 high schools, and that this year there should be a visiting body of about 200 students.

Spritz Planetarium Operations Are Topic Of Astronomy Show

The first in the series of presentations by the Astronomy Department was presented last Friday in the Mendel Hall Planetarium. Conducted by Mr. George T. McCook of the Astronomy Department, the show demonstrated the operations of the Spitz Planetarium, as well as giving a general idea of the nature and purposes of astronomy.

After the show the observatory was opened and a sunspot formation was pointed out by Rev. Edward F. Jenkins, OSA, director of the Astronomy Department.

Future shows will be held on March 30, April 27, May 25, June 29, and July 27. Due to limited seating capacity, reservations for the remaining shows must be made by calling LA5-4600, extension 401.

Library Committee Sponsors Senior Book Collecting Race

At the suggestion of the Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, the Faculty Library Committee announces its sponsoring of a book collecting contest to be open to all seniors at Villanova. The contest is in collaboration with the Amy Loveman National award of one thousand dollars, to be given annually to one college senior for collecting the best personal library.

Local Rules Coincide

The local award rules will coincide with those of the national award, inasmuch as the winner of the campus contest will be nominated for the national contest.

Libraries will be judged on a basis of intelligent interest and the scope of imagination revealed therein. Rarity, bindings, and value will be of secondary consideration. Paperbound books and certain textbooks are acceptable. The judges of the Villanova contest will be noted book authorities, and the local prize will be provided by one of the leading book designers in America.

Final Judging

Final judging will take place in April, details of which will be published later by the VILLANOVAN. Seniors interested in participating are requested to leave their names and addresses with the Reverend Daniel P. Falvey, Librarian, Dr. Albert H. Buford, Graduate Office, Tolentine Hall, or Dr. Wilson L. Frescoln, Chairman of the Faculty Library Committee, Modern Language Office, Vasey Hall.

University President To Take First Degree

The Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, will take the First Degree of the Knights of Columbus from the Father Ludwig Council March 14 at the Ardmore Council Chamber. This announcement was made by Jerry Donovan, Grand Knight of the Council.

On March 26 the Second Degree will also be given in Ardmore. Plans are being made for a Communion Breakfast to be held in the Villanova Field House, at which time the Third Degree will be taken. Warren F. O'Donnell, State Deputy, will attend the breakfast.

Interviews Conducted For Marine Program

Students who wish an interview for the Marine flight training programs may contact Marine Corps Officer Selection Officer, Captain A.J. Kettering. On campus until March 9, Captain Kettering may be reached at Dougherty Hall.

Those seniors and graduates who qualify will attend a ten week Officer Candidate Course and then be commissioned. After commissioning they proceed directly to Pensecola, Florida, and undergo 18 months of flight training with full officer status. There are no training commitments whatsoever during the school year.

Sophomores Propose New Class Project To Feature Orphans

"A Day At Villanova University For Underprivileged Children" was the unanimous decision of the Class of 1964 as its spring project. The affair is to held on Saturday, May 5, from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

A schedule of activities for the day was drawn up, pending finalization by the administration. The schedule includes sports events for the children, possibly a movie, swimming in the pool, a tour of the campus, a talent show, science demonstrations, a hot dog roast at noon, and the offering of Benediction at the day's close.

Events Planned

The organization of the affair is such that there will be a ratio of about ten orphans to three Villanovans. The students will conduct the orphans around the campus to the points where the different activities will be set up. This will ensure a smooth flow of events and provide the opportunity for as many people as possible to help.

The Project Committee stressed the point that this is an affair run by the Sophomores and that this is their chance to really do something.

T'n'T Restages Smash Hit; Musical Satire Due In April

The annual production of Turf and Tinsel for the current year will be a repeat of its 1957 success, The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga. The musical-satire will be staged from April 26 to the 29. Twelve musical numbers will be done by the cast.

The story and music were written by Bob Schiller, a past member of the club who graduated in 1957. Mr. Schiller has stated that he is grateful to the club for re-staging the show. He believes that its potentialites were not completely exploited in the first production, and now feels assured that the second will be done in the tradition of Turf and Tinsel quality.

Club president Joe Ruggiero, who will play the lead role of the man in the toga, said that he was pleased with the turnout for auditions. An in the past T 'n' T production, several members of the football squad will be supplying the turf. Chief among these are Tom Kepner and Al Reinoso, both to be cast in significant roles.

Betty Green Directing

Producer and Director of The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga will be Miss Betty Green, who has worked with T 'n' T previous to this production. Miss Angel Barton will assist her with the choreography. Ruggiero also commented on the excellent assistance he has received from Paul Mirabelli, the business manager, and Dave Muir, the stage manager. Moderator of the club is the Reverend Raymond Geisser, OSA, now in his second year of directing the club's activities.

Annual Talent Night Features Seven Acts; Three Campus Combos

Once again Vasey Hall Auditorium will be the scene of the annual Talent Night. Entertainment next Tuesday, March 13, at 7:30, will be provided by seven high-quality acts and students are encouraged to arrive early since a repeat capacity audience is expected.

Guy Guarch, last year's winner, will return this year to tickle the funny-bone of Villanova students with some new sound effects. Vocalist Terence Cooney is expected to have students tapping their feet to his renditions of popular tunes. Pat Kenny will entertain with his "mellow" trombone. Appearing with an entirely new act and attempting to prove that it is fun to be fooled is Kevin Shea; he will also be Master of Ceremonies for the evening.

Campus Groups Spotlighted

Performing for the first time on the same stage will be Villanova's most popular groups—the Villanovans, the Revelers, and the Criterions, who are not competing.

Chairman Kevin Shea announced that Walt Grove of the Graduate Theatre will provide special lighting effects while Bob Haverlin will handle the stage management and publicity.

Everyone is invited for an evening which should prove to be full of fun and laughter.

Adequate Facilities

As the Editorial Board of the VILLANOVAN promised we are continuing to speak out with the hope of improving conditions in the University Shop. Due to a misunderstanding compounded by mechanical error at the printers a faulty representation could have been conveyed by the final paragraph of last week's editorial.

As we said last week, objections to the creation of a pure book store are plausible and to some extent justified. There are other basic services a university shop can perform. But these should only be supplied after the basic needs of a university are provided, and under the present conditions they are not.

It is assumed by many students that the University Shop is amassing huge profits. This is erroneous. The entire staff is salaried by the University. However, the profit motive for stocking auxiliary items is a strong one, and we realize that the profits now reaped from the University Shop are used to increase the income of the University, and in turn contribute to our education; but is this sufficent to justify the subjugation of the primary responsibility of a university shop in lieu of a more profitable stock of supplies? We don't think that it is. We feel that the dominance of the University Shop by worthwhile paperbacks would be of greater value and profit in the development of a liberally educated student.

In reminding the University of its obligation to scrutinize more closely the operations of the University Shop, we must also give some credit.

The statement by students that the University Shop is charging excessively for the cost of textbooks is erroneous. They are charging according to the list price as presented by the publisher. Any student who feels that he can obtain books more reasonably at an off-campus outlet is invited to do so.

While we congratulate the University Shop on its handling of the text book problem we do not approve of the University's allowing the shop to be cluttered by unnecessary auxiliary products. The need for good educational materials is great. We find upon a closer examination not one periodical of educational worth is stocked by the shop; whereas, it does stock eight other periodicals of only cursory interest.

This is an example of the problem. All anyone interested has to do in order to observe the situation is visit the University Shop. There he will see the present situation, and he can envision the changes that could be made within the same space. Such changes would adequately supply the university with its basic needs—those things which contribute toward the development of a liberally educated student. This should be the goal of a university shop.

Letters To The Editor

The following is a reply to an article entitled, " A Look At The Algerian Situation" which appeared in the February 14, 1962 VILLANOVAN.

To the Editor:

"There is murder, torture, the explosion of bombs, knifings, and terror reigns supreme in this grief-stricken and bullet-ridden country. This is Paris!"

This is NOT Paris!! It seems as though Mr. Cercone has been delving into the pages of Mickey Spillane and has manufactured a story bearing only the slightest resemblance to the truth. His information is as inaccurate as his spelling. "Pig Alle," "Champs' E'lysees'," and "Monte' Marte" exist only in his imagination. In Paris they are known as Pigalle, Champs-Elysees and Montmartre. More time spent verifying his "facts" would have been of greater benefit than the use of colorful language.

One is led to believe upon reading this article that Paris is in a constant state of chaos, with executions being staged at the rate of several a week. Such is most definitely not the case. To date only a few have been killed at the hands of the O.A.S. and even this was unintentional. The "suspicious looking character (who) sneaks furtively around the corner" is also a figment of the author's somewhat bizarre imagination. The O.A.S. is an efficient organization consisting of high military personnel and influential Parisian businessmen. Their purpose is not to bring death but simply to incite action on the part of government officials in reaching a decision—one which will keep Algeria French. Their "plastiques" (bombs) therefore cause little more damage than the breakage of windows and the confusion which inevitably results.

The "burst from a machine gun, flash of light exposing a mangled form lying in a pool of blood" is a non-existent sight on the Champs-Elysees (or any where in Paris) where Mr. Cercone so colorfully envisions it. Even if one were to view such a melodramatic scene near the Arc de Triumph he would not only need complete silence, but an extremely powerful hearing aid to be aware of "screams reverberating from Montmartre."

Mr. C. also insists that the efforts of mankind are misdirected and could be channeled "towards means and methods for promoting human welfare." It is that very interest in the welfare of his country which prompts the French student to demonstrate in the streets, whether in support of the O.A.S., the F.L.N. or of De Gaulle, instead of concerning himself with the outcome of next week's football game.

Yours truly,
An American in Paris

To the Editor:

Recently, the resident students have noticed a gross lack of one of those everyday items which we take for granted. The item of which I speak is known as the TELEPHONE.

Unfortunately there are a few "men" at this university who think that these instruments have been placed in the dorms to test one's strength. It seems that those who are the real "men" are able to prove their "strength" and "shrewdness" by dismantling one of these machines.

This problem is not only found in the phone booth but extends to the many food and beverage machines on campus. In this case it seems that one thin dime can cause a "man" to do many strange things. It appears that should one of these machines not operate correctly that the student must grab the nearest piece of artillery and proceed to seek revenge for losing that thin dime. Yet, there is an easier solution. All one should do is wait one day and obtain a refund from the service man and inform him of the machine's malfunction . . .

I only have one question, and that is why such quacks seek to gain a college education when there are many other MEN more worthy of an education than they? Of course, the ironic part of this whole problem is that the whole must suffer for actions of a few.

The present situation in the resident halls is dire. I only hope that these quacks will realize the inconvenience they have caused themselves and the student body. They may think that by their actions they are gaining retaliation for any injustices they feel have been rendered upon them by the University. On the contrary the phones have been placed here as a service to the student . . .

Let us hope that some people around here grow up and act like men.

Catholic Education

This is the first in a series of articles concerning Catholic education which will be presented by the Editorial Board of the VILLANOVAN.

Intellectual stimulation in Catholic colleges is at a minimum. Overobedience and lack of initiative are prevalent. In addition, the general American Catholic community does not know what scholarship is, and has produced all too few outstanding Catholic scholars. Its religious doctrine seems incompatible with the scientific spirit of skeptical free inquiry due to its parochial subject consideration and its shielding of undergraduate resources.

Catholics Criticize

These criticisms are often voiced against Catholic education not only by non and anti-Catholics but by some Catholics as well. Are these remarks unfounded or uncalled for? Is it resentment or misunderstanding on the part of the critic, or is there a real solid basis in fact for these statements?

Space does not permit us to take each of these criticisms in a point-by-point consideration, either for refutation or accreditation. We will attempt, rather, to handle the entire body of criticisms by an evaluation of the aims and goals of Catholic education which we believe, when presented, will lead the reader to the conclusion that there is more ground for agreement that disagreement between Catholic and non-Catholic educational goals.

What then is the goal of Catholic education?

Dual Function

Unlike secular education, Catholic teaching recognize that man has both body and soul, and educates both, thus fulfilling the definition of catholic, or universal, by educating the whole man. Of necessity and by definition Catholic schooling prepares man not only for an earthly profession but for an eternal life. More briefly, then, the aim of such an education is to prepare man to know, love, and serve God in this life and to be happy with him in the next.

Emphasis

One may ask, "But doesn't secular education also educate the whole man, teaching not only mathematics and sciences, but also philosophy, religion, and ethics in an attempt to teach truth to all students?" Indeed, many secular schools do offer such courses. The principal difference is in emphasis.

Secular education offers the student material meant primarily for a here-and-now use. Whether in serving this immediate end the student attains man's Ultimate Last End—recognized by most secular institutions—is incidental to the goal of education. Catholic learning, on the other hand, has man's last goal as its primary goal, while simultaneously preparing him for his life on earth, as a means of attaining this goal. Does this mean that academic excellence in a Catholic college is necessarily inferior?

Two Stands?

This statement presupposes the fallacy that there are two opposite stands present. Actually academic excellence is a first and parallel goal of learning based on absolute truth. Absolute truth can lead only to academic excellence.

But to get to the problem at hand—how does Villanova fulfill the lofty ideals stated above? On this campus the academic atmosphere has as its basis the principles of Catholic moral Truth—absolute truth as Catholics believe it. With this truth as our foundation, how far have we built upon it? The measure of our success, in light of our Ultimate Last End, cannot be known. Unfortunately it is read on the scale of secular achievements. Yet this scale must not be taken too lightly, for even thoughh the chief success of a Catholic education is not measured in a material world, the secular scale is still a practical evaluation of the intermediate means to the final end.

Capable Men

Since Villanova is putting men into a world of competition with other college graduates, it must produce men capable of being successfully measured by that secular scale. In other words, it must . . . and does . . . prepare its men to be as good as, if not better than, graduates of other schools in order for them to obtain and maintain jobs.

Second Villanova Jazz Festival Acclaimed 'Splendorous Affair'

by K. Stanley Mugler

Jazz made its annual visit to Villanova on February 23 and after being privileged enough to sit in on this splendorous affair the second time around one intial conclusion is drawn without hesitation; Villanova must take steps to make its intercollegiate jazz festival a permanent part of campus life each year.

Seven outfits vied for the coveted first prize award—a weekend at Joe DeLuca's Red Hill Inn—and any one of the seven would be a refreshing addition to that fine jazz emporium.

The distinguished board of judges was impressed by the class and good taste of the performers, in addition to their mechanics in arranging and presentation.

Headed by noted jazz pianist Bernard Peiffer, it included Toby DeLuca, Music Director of WFIL, Bill Coss, New York editor of Downbeat magazine and Bruce Davidson, Philadelphia Promotional Director of Capitol Records.

Originality was the keynote of the evening and Ken Delmar's Band from Drexel Institute got the bit underway in fine fashion with "Prelude to Percussion."

Modern improvisation was next in the form of Mike Gabriel's Quintet from St. Joseph's College. Lou Tobackin's work on the tenor sax was first rate.

Gabriel's trombone was forceful and the quintet's sound did justice to the very modern and progressive.

Jeff Haskell, West Chester's gift to music who took the festival by storm last year, was next. The defending champion again exhibited fine form and taste. His tender handling of "The Folks Who Live Up on the Hill", concluded a brilliant stint of vocal styling.

Then came the delight of the night—Bob Kindred's quintet from Muhlenberg College. From their first offering, it was apparent that this was no ordinary outfit. They were communicating . . . and how they did it was a classic example of improvisation at its apex.

Kindred blended his tenor sax beautifully with Skip Reider's crystal clear trumpet. Mike Shannon was a master bassist, handling his instrument with ease and grace. Pianist Dave Roper and drummer Jim Meyers added strength and foundation. Their presentation was a memorable one; memorable enough that the judges awarded them first prize and with it the weekend at the Red Hill Inn.

Bob Shemenek's experimental band from LaSalle showed good reason why there should be more experimental groups. Refreshing is the best word to describe their efforts. Third place was their reward for being bold enough to experiment.

Wesleyan's Jazz Singers followed and from the moment they made a smart entrance until they went out big with "Everyday", this melodious entourage impressed with smoothness and presentation.

Bob Curnow's "Criterions" from West Chester were a fitting finale for the show, displaying what the judges called "near perfection" with a second place plaudit.

Although three prizes were given, the real winners were jazz, Villanova and the audience. Messrs. Zawacki, Braithwaite, at al are to be commended for a magnificent three hours of beauty. No doubt 100 times that amount of time was needed to make this Villanova dream a reality. It was time well spent.

Recent Grad Theatre's Play Suffers From Poor Rewrite

by Gus Susnjara

When a work is aborted or shabbily imitated, there is usually some bit of talk about the artist's "rolling over in his grave." But poor old Moss Hart hardly had a chance to get settled before the Graduate Theater's production of The Man Who Came To Dinner lit the fuse and set off Moss's posthumous rumblings.

Originally Hart and Kaufman created a contemporary play about a contemporary character. Most of us know that Sheridan Whiteside is really Alexander Woolcott. The play is a lampoon and deserves to be presented that way. Perhaps it is not necessary that the whole audience know about the satire, but it seems a tremendous injustice to the playwright to disguise it. After all, were there no Woolcott, there would be no Whiteside.

The theory of bringing a play up to date does not hold for each and every drama written before the end of World War II. The television broadcast in the play was on radio before the "re-vamper" took hold of it. Perhaps the idea was that the audience would never understand anything so archaic as radio. According to this type of reasoning, one might conjecture that Othello should handle Desdemona with strychnine, Oedipus should will his peepers to the eye bank, and Odysseus should build the Trojan Horse with an Erector Set.

Consistency Needed

Finally, if the play does need some modernizing, the rewriter might at least be consistent. After all, having Katherine Cornell as reigning Queen of the American stage, Walt Disney's Babes in Toyland playing at the Bryn Mawr theater, and Woolcott going to the Villanova Theater Festival — all these at the same time, mind you—is a bit like watching Abe Lincoln congratulate John Glenn on the moon. If the viewer did not know the play, he might see Hart and Kaufman taking on shades of chronological lunacy.

Aside from all this the production was not that bad. The play is funny, and the lines alone fill in most of the laughs. And in addition to this there were a few, though not too many, bright spots in the acting.

Nevins Successful

As the bellowing and bellicose Whiteside, Tom Nevins turned in his second fine performance of the year. Issuing his invective dictums from a wheelchair for most of the play, Nevins brought off a sarcastic but lovable character.

Tom McCoy, as Doctor Bradley, played the purse-lipped medico consistently and laughably. As the axe-murdering sister, Marge Stein flitted around the stage with comically believable psychotic antics.

"Hammy" Femme

The best female performance was rendered by Marianne Willaert who, as the sex-pot, Lorraine Sheldon, vamped about, dramatized the obvious, and lost her suave southern accent at the right times. She succeeded in creating an admirable characterization of the stereotyped "Hollywood Hamette."

Jane Anderson (Miss Preen) and Liz Meagher (Mrs. Stanley) offered interesting and competent turns of acting.

Mary Lee McDonald (Maggie Cutler) was either miscast or pitifully misinformed. Maggie is a divorcee, a "girl Friday" for a well-known personality, and at least a girl of the world. In this play, when she should have been sophisticated, she was quietly sardonic; and where she should have been excited she was a philosophical girl next door with a Sunday School teacher's monotone.

John, the butler (Joseph Styborski), and Sarah, the cook (Carol O'Conner), were perhaps the most dramatically unprovacative pair this writer has ever had the displeasure of witnessing. Most of the other minor characters thankfully transcended this and turned in adequate performances.

The Man Who Came to Dinner was comical, but it could have been really funny with more Hart and less spotty acting.

First Edition Of Scholarly 'Concept' A Qualified Success

by Jerry Heavey

Concept has arrived, and its editors are to be congratulated for the first issue's realization of their aim "to provide a medium for enlightened student opinion and stimulate others to consider academic and social problems." It must be said, however, that the contents of the magazine achieved only varying degrees of success.

Life, Women, Pretzels is a lightly humorous summation of the wisdom which the author has gained during his life, namely, that life is too short, that women are impossible to get along with, and that eating soft pretzels is one of the great pleasures of life. The essay seems to have been included in Concept more as a change of pace than as a serious attempt to fulfill the stated purpose of the magazine. Yet it is probably the best essay in the magazine, and certainly the most interesting.

Essays on Philosophy

Knowledge in the Twentieth Century is an investigation of the roots of the cleavage between science and philosophy in the modern age. It attempts to show the necessary correlation between those two fields of human learning. More than any of the other essays this one provides the intellectual stimulation which is one of the goals of Concept.

Contra Nihil has the distinction of introducing to Villanova what seems to be a candidate for most-used-word-of-1962 "Weltschmerz." The Weltschmerz to which the author refers is the destructive influence of nihilistic philosophy on our civilization. Like the previous essay this one causes some mental stimulation in the reader. Further, it demonstrates the very real importance that the ofttimes apparently dry and lifeless realm of philosophy can have in the affairs of society.

The essay Communism — A Student's Analysis is the type of article one might expect to find on the political columnists' page of a newspaper. Its anlysis of the growing Communist threat and of the often unsuccessful countering of that threat by the free world shows a knowledge of current history. Its conclusion lacks the vitality of the rest of the article.

Other Articles Dull

The other articles in the magazine are generally tedious reading, not because they are profound, but because they are dull and pretentious.

On Educating an Exploding Population by now graduated founder of Concept, Frank McCormick, is based on an idea which is probably worth considering, but the article is three times as long as the idea requires. Moreover, the author has assumed a tone of unwarranted authority which makes many of his statements sound downright ridiculous. Even the title of the article is misleading.

There are two articles on music in Concept. The first, Popular Music: A Critique, has a strong overtone of snobbery. The article suffers further from the author's poor reasoning and misinterpretation of facts. His scornful treatment of folk music and his outright condemnation of rock-and-roll arouses in the reader a prejudice toward him as strong as his own prejudice toward popular music.

Music and Metaphysics

The other essay on music, Music: A Discussion, An Exhortation, and A Mode of Attack, is less disagreeable, but hardly more appetizing. It offers the reader nothing which is not already common knowledge.

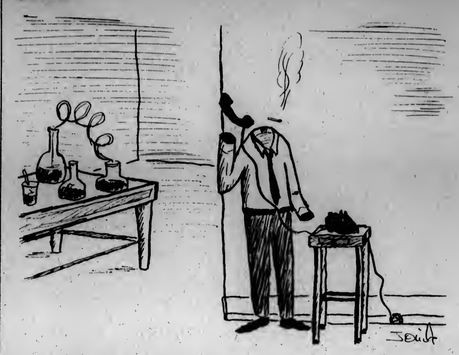
A Metaphysics of Love is the most involved essay in the magazine. A good dictionary would make better reading. It is not so much that the article has faults, as that it has so little virtue. Particularly lacking is the virtue of readability.

Most of the articles in the magazine demonstrate intelligence and knowledge, but only the first four mentioned are appealing to the reader. The others are just not particularly interesting. It may be more than a coincidence that the better articles in Concept are the shorter ones.

Warning To Radicals: Yankee Go Home

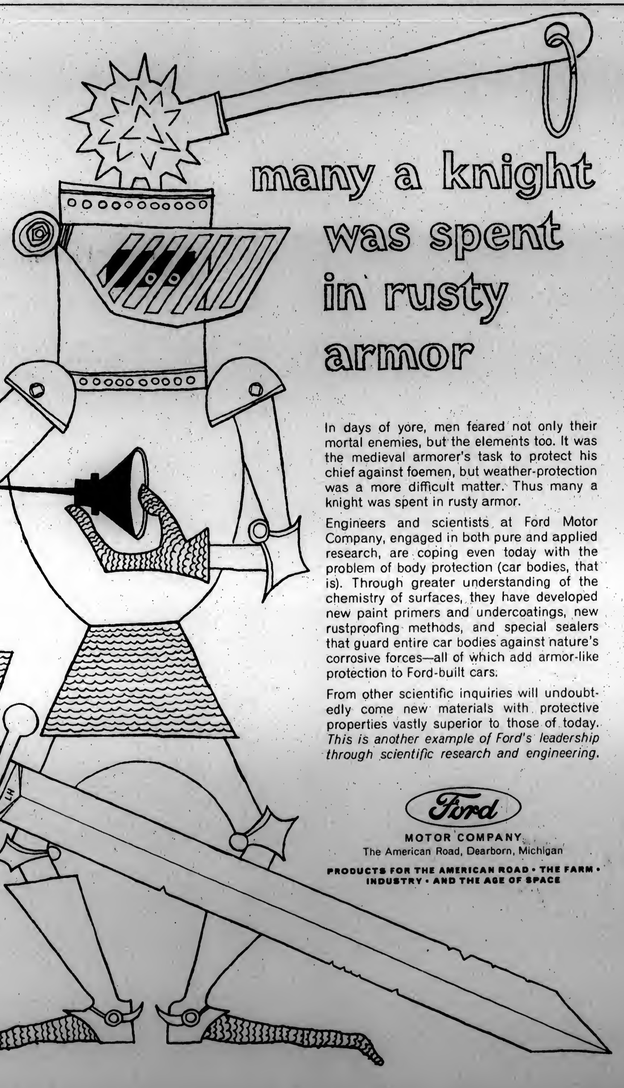
by Pete Nolan

The emergence of some of the extreme right wing, anti-communist, super-patriot, wild-eyed groups in the past year has thrown quite a scare into many of the small abnormal political outfits.



Many are storming through our country searching out the slightest signs of subversion. This is all well and good, but quite a few of these people aren't sure who is Communist and who is not. This is making it very difficult for groups such as the Social Anarchists, Democratic Federalists, Feudalists, etc.

These people have been around for years and they've never really bothered anyone. They usually get together once a month at the local Moose hall and discuss politics over a few drinks. At worst they occasionally nominate someone for president, proclaim someone as king, or march in the St. Patrick's Day parade.

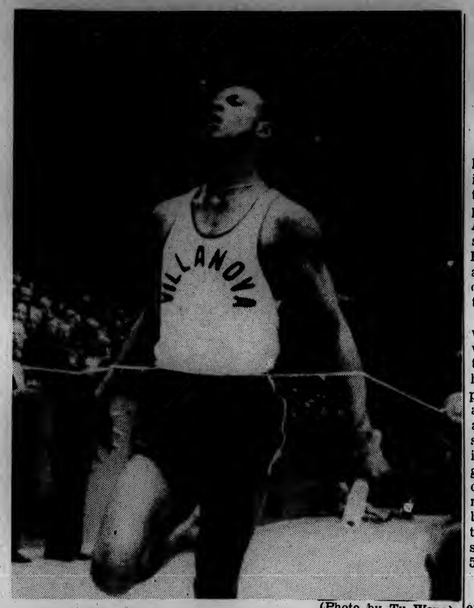


Now many of these people have been forced underground by the roving anti-Communists. It's bad enough when there is ill-will toward Americans abroad, but when "Yankee Go Home" signs appear in New England the situation has become out of hand.

It has been suggested that the government construct relocation camps for these political unfortunates or that they register with their local chapter of the John Birch Society. It is hopeful that some adequate arrangements can be made before the first of May.

Jonik

"Oh, nothing much Charlie, what's new with you?"



In days of yore, men feared not only their mortal enemies, but the elements too. It was the medieval armorer's task to protect his chief against foemen, but weather-protection was a more difficult matter. Thus many a knight was spent in rusty armor.

Engineers and scientists at Ford Motor Company, engaged in both pure and applied research, are coping even today with the problem of body protection (car bodies, that is). Through greater understanding of the chemistry of surfaces, they have developed new paint primers and undercoatings, new rustproofing methods, and special sealers that guard entire car bodies against nature's corrosive forces—all of which add armor-like protection to Ford-built cars.

From other scientific inquiries will undoubtedly come new materials with protective properties vastly superior to those of today. This is another example of Ford's leadership through scientific research and engineering.

Villanova frosh sensation Don Webster breaks the tape on the anchor leg of the freshman mile relay during the recent AAU meet, aiding the Wildcat trackmen in capturing the AAU team title.

'Cats Capture Big-Five Championship; White Paces Clincher Over St. Joe's

by Joe Zawacki

One guy summed it best when he said, "Villanova didn't win it . . . St. Joe's lost it." To which the Villanova fan promptly replied, "Who cares. We won." And so it was. For the first time since the inception of the Big Five, a Villanova team defeated a St. Joseph's quintet and everyone was too happy to care about the quality of the performance.

The score was 66-59 and it was only close at the end. It was also fitting that senior captain Hubie White should be the hero among heroes, scoring 23 points, collaring 17 rebounds and doing his share in the Villanova defense that had the usually sure-handed Hawks looking somewhat shell-shocked. So good was White's play that he only made one mistake all night, an ill-advised behind the back dribble that resulted in two Hawk points that made the score an uncomfortably close 56-50.

Good Fouls

However, a few minutes later, White dropped in two chippies and a foul to help put the game out of reach. In the end, it was his foul shooting (9 for 15) that was consistent enough to keep St. Joseph's from closing the gap. The pesky guarding of Bob Dickey, Tom Wynne and Harry Booth held him to five field goals until the last few minutes.

Leading St. Joe's was Wynne, undoubtedly the Most Valuable Performer in the Big Five this season. He scored 19 and grabbed 17 rebounds before fouling out late in the game. However, like the rest of the Hawks, he started too late.

With White, Wally Jones and Jim O'Brien setting the early pace, the Cats broke fast to a 26-8 lead. The Hawks were woefully cold, even to the extent of blowing a number of layups. In addition, the Cat defense was never better. Ten waving hands met St. Joseph's each time they crossed midcourt and it was the difference, since Villanova wasn't setting the world on fire for the next 30 minutes.

Didn't Press

According to Jack Kraft, the only surprise that Jack Ramsey effected was something that didn't occur at the start, namely the famed Hawk press. "I thought sure that they would come after us from the beginning," he stated between slaps on the back after the game.

The City Liner's dressing room was tomb-like. Ramsey, always a hard loser, didn't have much to say. Actually there wasn't.

Random notes: The Main Liners are undisputed City Champs for the first time, with a 4-0 record. They said it couldn't be done. . . With all city games played except for the rematches, here is one man's All-Big Five: Bobby McAteer and Wally Jones, guards; Hubie White, center; Tom Wynne and Earl Proctor, forwards . . . Most valuable (and also most consistent all-around): Tom Wynne . . . For the record, the score of the LaSalle game was 65-63, Villanova.

'Cats Take AAU Title Budd Extends Streak As Cruz Saves Meet

Villanova edged the New York Athletic Club, champion for four straight years, to take the National AAU team title at Madison Square Garden. Rolando Cruz copped second place in the pole vault at 15-4 to give the Cats the three points needed to bring the title to the Mainline for the second time in Coach Jim Elliot's reign.

Frank Budd won the 60 yard dash over Herb Carper to continue his win streak and then ran the third leg on the winning sprint medley team that racked up a 25 yard victory over Manhattan. Carl Wagner, Alan Jackman, Budd and Paul Drayton, running the 440, 100, 220 and 300 in that order, were clocked in 1:53.2 seconds.

Billy Joe managed a third place finish with a toss of 56 feet, 9¾ inches and the two mile relay took a surprising second place to keep the Wildcat hopes alive.

Slow Start

Villanova got off to a slow start as Tommy Sullivan tripped and fell in the 1000 yard semi-finals and failed to stick with the pace after he switched to the mile. Both Leon Pras and Charley Hammock were eliminated from the hurdles final leaving it up to Cruz.

The sophomore vaulter lost to Henry Wadsworth but won the title for the Cats on his last jump.

Last weekend at the K of C championships in New York, Cruz finished second again, this time to John Uelses. Billy Joe broke his own Villanova shotput record with a heave of 58 feet, 5 inch effort.

Freshman Don Webster finished third in the 600 yard run while Bob Coffill finished fourth in the 600 yard high hurdles. The Wildcats, priming for the IC4A meet next Saturday, finished second in both the mile and two mile relays.

IC4A, NCAA To Test 'Cats March 10, 12

by Dan Grove

Jumbo Elliot's hopped up harriers will make their weekly pilgrimage to Madison Square Garden this Saturday, this time they are in search of the elusive I.C.4A. indoor championship that Yale annexed last winter. The Bulldogs grabbed the trophy on the virtue of a disqualification adjudged against the third place mile relay team. Without the third place points Villanova lost the team championship by one point (30-29).

The meet will feature a plethora of big name track stars such as Frank Budd, the world's fastest human, and Gary Gubner, the East coast's answer to Parry O'Brien. Budd will be favored to capture his fifteenth straight indoor sprint, and Gubner figures to beat Villanova's Billy Joe in the shot put.

The individual champions are important, but the main attraction of this meet is the all out struggle for the team championship. The crafty fraternity of track coaches all try to outwit each other by shifting men in and out of events, in order to amass enough points to stay in the team race. For instance high jumper John Thomas will be entered in the hurdles by his Boston College coach in hopes of picking up a few extra points.

Drayton Out of Relay

Villanova's Jim Elliot is reportedly holding Otis Drayton of mile relay fame, out of that event in order to keep the sprinter fresh enough to chase Frank Budd to another victory.

60 yard dash Record: 6.1

Frank Budd, undefeated in 14 straight indoor sprints, is the heavy favorite to retain the title. Teammate Paul Drayton could push him to a 5.9.

We pick: Budd

60 yard Hurdles Record: 7.2

Heptagonal champion Jay Luck of Yale and two years running defending champion Leon Pras of Villanova will be pushed to their limit by fast improving Charlie Hammock, also from the Mainline, and M.S.U.'s Hiram Johnson.

We pick: Hammock, in top shape.

600 yard run Record: 1:10.4

If N.Y.U. Olympian Jim Wedderbrum runs, he should hit the tape ahead of Frank Tomeo of Fordham and Lawson Smart of Morgan State.

We pick: Wedderbrun

1000 yard run Record: 2:09.6

Fordham's sensational Frank Tomeo will duel with N.Y.U.'s James Brown in one of the thinnest fields of the meet.

We pick: Tomeo

Mile run Record: 4:08.1

Harvard's Mark Mullin, IC4A outdoor mile runner-up should nip Villanova's Vic Zwolak and Cornell's Eric Groon.

We Pick: Mullin

Two Mile run Record: 8:59

This one will be wide open. The field will be big and the early going bumpy. Cornell's Steve Machooka hasn't been unveiled in individual indoor meets, but the Kenya barn high stepper may be ready to turn on the heat Saturday. Former champion Tom Lairis of Dartmouth, defending champ Bobby Mack, and Villanova's "Goose" Traynor will all be around at the finish.

We pick: Machooka, if he's in shape.

Mile Relay Record: 3:17

With Bob Raemore out with an injury and Otie Drayton not entered, Villanova may concede this one to Morgan State.

We pick: Morgan State

Two Mile Relay Record: 7:40

Holy Cross, who surprised Jumbo in last year's IC's will be favored this time. Jon Dante and company may want to avenge last year's defeat but they will also have to contend with Manhattan and Georgetown, either of which could sneak in.

We pick: Holy Cross

Shot Put Record: 57'

World indoor record holder Gary Gubner of N.Y.U. returns to his palace Saturday to shoot at 65 feet. Villanova's defending champion William Joe and Fordham's Ed Kohler will vie for second.

We pick: Gubner, country's best

Pole Vault Record: 15' 2"

Villanova's Rolando Cruz is a clear favorite since Johnny Uelses hasn't got a matric card. Maryland's John Belitza is the only other 15 footer in the field.

We pick: Cruz, to break the IC4A record

Weight Throw Record: 63' ¼"

Harvard's muscleman Stan Doten and Ed Bailey should give Navy's Judd Sage all he can handle in this exotic event.

We pick: Bailey

Broad jump Record: 25' 2½"

Michigan State's Solomon Akapata and St. John's Winston Cooper are the best of a weak field.

We Pick: Akapata

High Jump Record: 7' ½"

Boston University's John Thomas, who jumps lower as he grows older, should win over a weak field, Wilmore Davis of Morgan State as runnerup.

We pick: Thomas

TEAM CHAMPION

Villanova, out to avenge last year's disqualification loss, has too many horses to be beaten this year, Yale's Morgan State, Maryland, and Harvard will be good scorers but second place is their only hope.

We pick Villanova with 40 or more points Dark Horse: Yale—Boola Boola!

by Tom Bruderle

Villanova's surprising Wildcats became the first team in the field to accept an NCAA bid. Not since the 1959-60 season had the Cats appeared in a tournamen., and then in the NIT. The NCAA acceptance marks the first time since the 1954-55 campaign that Villanova has appeared in the NCAA.

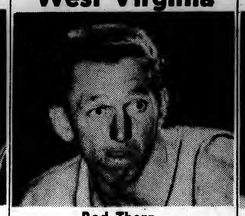
After much speculation about the opponents and possible sites, the Palestra was chosen as the court for the first round. The opening game of the March 12 triple-header will pit New York University (17-3) against the winner of the Yankee Conference, the University of Massachusetts, (15-8). At approximately 7:30, Yale (18-5), the Ivy League Champs, will face Wake Forest (17-8) winner of the Atlantic Coast Conference. In the final game the Wildcats will battle against West Virginia. Earlier in the season the Mountaineers handed Villanova its first loss, 88-82. Since very few teams win at Morgantown, the secoond Villanova game could be different.

On March 16-17 at College Park, Maryland, the Middle Atlantic Conference Champion will play the victor of the Yale-Wake Forest game. The winner of the NYU-Massachusetts tilt will play either Villanova or West Virginia. The surviving two teams will play each other with the winner going to Louisville, Kentucky for the NCAA finals, March 23 and 24.

N.Y.U.

Barry Kramer

N. Y. U. enters the NCAA tournament after missing last season. In 1960, the Violets went to the semi-finals in the NCAA only to lose to Ohio State 76-54. This year's team could possibly do as well.



Harold Hairston, a 6'6½" soph is the top point producer for the Violets. He has tallied 338 points this year for a 18.7 average. His high game was 28 points against Army. Add to this a 12.1 rebound average (21 against the Hawks), one can see why he is an all around threat.

Right behind him is Barry Kramer, a 6'4" soph who averaged 18.2 points a game. His best night was against West Virginia when he tallied 29. Kramer is consistent off the boards, averaging 8.4 rebs a game.

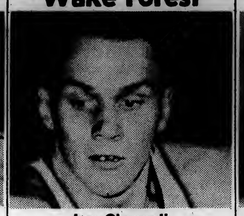
The third big gun is 6' Mark Reiner, a senior. Although he averaged 13.8 points a game he clicked for 35 points against Temple at Madison Square Garden, with many of his points coming on long set shots.

N. Y. U. will play Yale in the first game of the March 12 triple-header, with the winner playing either West Virginia or Villanova.

West Virginia

Rod Thorn

An injury plagued but potent West Virginia contingent will face Villanova in the third game of the March 12 triple-header. Led by second team All-American Rod Thorn, the Mountaineers won the southern conference and have a 23-5 record.



Thorn, a 6-4 junior, is currently averaging 23.8 points per game. Against Villanova in the Cats 88-82 loss, Thorn tallied 29 points. His high game of the year was against Furman when he scored 35 markers.

Following Thorn in scoring is 6-2 Jim McCormick who has a 15-4 average. Due to late season injuries, however, it is not likely that he will play at the Palestra.

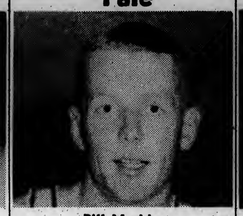
The big man for West Virginia is Tom Lowery, a 6-8, 208 pound sophomore. Lowery, who is averaging 10.2 points per game, scored 17 against Villanova for his seasonal high.

West Virginia's probable starting line-up is 6-4 Gale Catlett (6.4 ppg.) at forward along with the 6-4 captain Kenny Ward (11.0). At center will be Lowery and Thorn will play one of the guard positions. Dan Weir, a 5-11 soph (1.6 ppg.) will be at the other guard spot.

Wake Forest

Len Chappell

The Demon Deacons of Wake Forest College will represent the Atlantic Coast Conference when they tangle with Yale. On Saturday March 3, the Deacons defeated Clemson 77-66 to capture their second straight conference championship and earn a bid to the NCAA.



When thinking of the "Bones" McKinney Deacons, one naturally thinks of 6'8", 240 lbs. Len Chappell. The big senior from Portage, Pa. is currently averaging 30.9 points per game. His high game for the season was 50 points against Clemson January 6. He was recently named All-American.

Backing up Chappell is 5-9 Billy Packer. Often shown up by his big teammate, the Bethehem, Pa. senior is averaging 13 points per game. His two best efforts have been against Maryland and Duke when he tallied 20 points each.

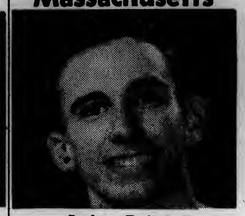
In their only appearance at the Palestra this year, they were edged by Saint Joe's Hawks 65-63.

The Deacons will battle Yale in the second game on March 12, with the winner facing the still undecided Middle Atlantic Conference Champ.

Yale

Bill Madden

In pre-season polls Yale was expected to finish behind Princeton in the Ivy League race. Following a growing trend, however, Yale upset the "experts" as well as Princeton by capturing the crown.



Captain of the Elis is Bill Madden who recently cracked the 1000 point barrier against Darmouth. Madden has been Yale's second highest scorer notching 301 points for a 14.3 average. As a senior he has been a steady performer on this sophomore-studded lineup Rich Kaminsky, a sophomore, is the top point getter with 326 points. Rich has averaged 15.5 point per game. Third leading scorer is soph Dennis Lynch who has scored 262 points for a 12.4 average. Dick Evans, a senior forward, is counted on for rebounds along with 6'8" center Steve Goulding, a junior.

Although the Elis have the unenviable task of facing Wake Forest, they are currently riding the crest of a nine game winning streak and they have captured 13 out of their last 14 games.

Winner Plays at College Park

The winner of the Yale-Wake Forest game will play the M.A.C. Champ in College Park, Maryland.

Massachusetts

Rodger Twitchell

The University of Massachusetts won their first Yankee Conference Championship when they thumped New Hampshire 109-62. Coach Matt Zunic's five had an 8-2 record in Conference play and a 15-8 overall mark.

Top scorer for the Redmen is Rodger Twitchell a 6'5" 185 sophomore who has averaged 17.4 per game. His best effort was at Portland, Maine, against Colby where he had 28 points. He is no slouch off the boards, averaging 12.1 rebounds a game. Against Tufts, February 15, he reached for 19.

Backing up Twitchell is 5'9" sophomore Pete Bernard. He averaged 8 points per game as a freshman and now he has steadily improved to a 12.5 clip. His best game was against New Hampshire when he tallied 22 points.

Behind Bernard is Captain Leslie Kirk a 6'5" senior who is currently averaging 10.8 points per game. He is the second highest rebounder, averaging 10 per game.

The Redmen, who have won nine out of their last ten games, will face N.Y.U. in the first game on Monday, March 12.

LYNX Masthead Rewritten Murphy Assumes Editorship

by Ed Farrell

Major changes in the staff of the Lynx, the literary magazine of Villanova, were made public last week.

Rev. John M. Quinn, OSA, has been appointed as moderator of the magazine, effective immediately.

Frank Murphy, junior English major, has been appointed editor. Murphy replaces Garrett Evans, who resigned after publication of the recent LYNX issue.

Further changes in the editorial staff of the magazine will be announced at a later date.

Complete Revision

As soon as the change was made, Murphy announced that a complete revision of the magazine will be undertaken, which will include a new format. Included in this change will be the introduction of photographs for the first time in two years.

The literary content of the semi-annual publication will be a compromise between abstruse profound works and light contemporary ideas with the trend toward popular material.

To Entertain

Murphy stated that the magazine will primarily be organized to entertain its readers rather than to achieve a complex literary status.

For the spring issue all types of literary works will be considered, including satires and literary criticisms. Cartoons may also be submitted.

According to Murphy, the new concept of the LYNX will emphasize the presentation of an idea rather than the idea itself, thus conforming to the nature of a literary magazine.

Commenting on the change, Murphy stated, "We wish to try to make the magazine readable and enjoyable while maintaining a relatively high standard of literary values. We are encouraging more diverse material than before as part of our effort to reach this goal."

The next issue of the literary magazine is slated for some time this spring.

Villanova Physics Major Wins Woodrow Wilson Fellowship

by George West

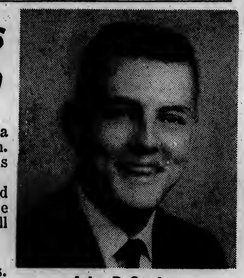
For the second time in the history of the University, a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship has been awarded a Villanovan. John DeSanto, a senior physics major, is the recipient of this honor.

The fellowship consists of a $1500 tax-free grant and tuition for one year leading to a Master's Degree at the college or university of the student's choice. DeSanto will also be a lifetime Woodrow Wilson Fellow.

Hope For Teaching Career

In the national contest, DeSanto is one of 1048 winners. The fellowships are given for the humanities, science, and social science to subsidize the first year in the hope of continuation to a doctorate and an eventual college teaching career.

Sir Hugh Taylor, former Mendel Medal winner and president of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation notified DeSanto of the award. Honorably mentioned in the competition were Joseph A. Massey and Anthony Coccia.



In commenting on the honor, Dr. Bernard Bedard, postgraduate study advisor said, "DeSanto's success should encourage applicants for the award."

Only Other Winner

The last and only other Woodrow Wilson winner at Villanova was Ralph C. Udisious, also a physics major, in 1958.

The Woodrow Wilson awards were originally made only at Princeton University. The Foundation was named after the former president of Princeton University, Woodrow Wilson.

the relatively small group grew to a National Foundation. Five years ago the Ford Foundation subsidized organization, increasing it to its present size.

WWVU-FM Proposal Report: Nearly Ready For Operation

Preparations for the addition of an FM mode of broadcast to the regular AM closed circuit facilities of WWVU, the campus radio station, are reaching the final stages.

This week a technical report on the proposed modification was received by the radio station. This report constitutes the main portion of the FM proposal which will be submitted to the administration for its approval.

According to Dan O'Mara, station manager, "All auxiliary equipment is ready to go into operation. Only the transmitter and antennae are lacking at the present time. These will be obtained if the administration approves of the modification."

Technical Advisor

Providing technical advice to the station about the FM modification and also handling the necessary arrangements with the Federal Communications Commission is Mr John Finger. Finger, a supervising engineer for the General Electric Corporation in the field of antenna design, has aided the technical staff of the station in setting up the physical standards of the station so that they meet FCC requirements.

Finger was asked to aid the station by Dr. Charles Smith, station director, through Mr. Dave Scott, of Villanova.

He was graduated from Manhattan College with a Bachelor of Electrical Engineering in 1955. After working with General Electric for a short time, he was a communications security officer in the Air Force for three years before returning to GE.

Comments on Staff

Commenting on his association with WWVU, Mr. Finger stated, "In my work with the members of the station staff, I have been impressed with their willingness to devote extra time to the station. Without their hours of work, improvements on the station such as the FM modification would never be possible."

O'Mara commented, "I think it would be very advantageous to Villanova University to have its own FM station. This would give the Augustinians the opportunity to provide some three million people of the Delaware Valley with its first Catholic FM radio station."

The grounds upon which Villanova has been built once belonged to a Revolutionary officer and merchant, John Rudolph.

Marlboro Trio Set To Perform March 18 At Chamber Concert

Villanova will present its second in a series of four Chamber Music Concerts on Sunday, March 18, in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall at 3:30. Performing at the concert will be the Marlboro Trio, consisting of Anton Kuerti, piano; Michael Tree, violin; and David Soyer, cello. This talented young group was organized under the auspices of Rudolph Serkin at the Marlboro (Vermont) Music Festival last season.

Anton Kuerti, winner of the internationally famous Leventritt Award in 1957, has performed with most of the major orchestras in this country since his debut with the New York Philharmonic. He has won acclaim for his performances in European Festivals at Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia, and Spoleto, Italy.

As a protege of Efrem Zimbalist, Michael Tree studied at the Curtis Institute of Music. Mr. Tree has recently toured the United States, Canada, and South America.

David Soyer, a native of Philadelphia, made his debut with the Philadelphia Orchestra, and has given numerous recitals at Carnegie Hall and Town Hall in New York. Formerly Mr. Soyer has been associated with the Bach Aria Group, the Guilet String Quartet, and the New Music String Quartet. Mr. Soyer has also toured extensively throughout the United States and Canada.

Council Group Names Goldwater Treatise As Book Selection

The Student Faculty Committee has selected the controversial political treatise, Conscience of a Conservative, by Barry Goldwater as its Spring book selection. The program is headed by Tom O'Connor of the Student Faculty Committee of the Student Council in conjunction with the History Department.

O'Connor commented that the choice was guided by the book's controversial nature and importance in the contemporary political scene. "It is felt by the committee," emphasized O'Connor, "that every student and faculty member should be acquainted with the book and the ideas it presents.

"No sympathy on the part of the Student Council is meant to be implied by the selection of the book, rather it demonstrates the desire of the Council to make all Villanovans aware of contemporary issues."

Free Copies Available

Copies can be acquired from Room 128, Sheehan Hall. The copies will be distributed free on a first come first served basis. After that copies can be bought in any book store, pocket book stand, etc. for sixty cents in the soft cover edition.

Previously the book has gone through 14 editions. Discussion groups will be organized early in April. Both pro and con ideas of the book will be presented. Students are also suggested to consult the publicity issued during the next week.

Bateman Elected Chairman During Regional Convention

The annual convention of member schools in the Southeast Region of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government at West Chester last Saturday featured the election of a Villanovan, Anthony G. Bateman, as its Chairman and Candidate for Chairman in the State Convention to be held in Harrisburg April 5, 6, and 7.

Bateman, a Senior Arts and Science major, ran for the position uncontested by any other delegation and received a unanimous vote. His running mate as clerk will be the Ursinius senior, Barbara Bogel, whom Bateman nominated at the State Convention a year ago. His speech was the most successful of the nominating speeches.

Rademaker Directs

The Regional Director of I.C.G., Bill Rademaker of Villanova, pointed out that the "convention ran very smoothly and had 100 registered delegates." Rademaker also served as the second Parliamentarian during the Convention.

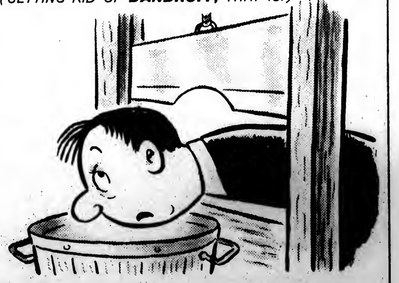
Of the nine committees to which Villanova sent delegations two of the chairmanships were commandeered by Villanovans. Corresponding Secretary Hugh Lletch and Paul Downey headed the Foreign Affairs and Taxation and Finance Committees respectively.

Of the twenty bills presented to the joint assembly of all committees, eight of them were authored or co-authored by Villanova. Also addressing the meeting were the guest speaker, Edward Everetts, of the History and Political Science Department at West Chester, on the subject of "National Congress," and Dr. William Sykes, West Chester President.

PMC Leads

The Pennsylvania Military College had the largest representation with twenty while Immaculata and Villanova had 19 and 16 each. Tom Gallen, Chairman of the Villanova delegation, also expressed his approval in the outcome of the elections for Chairman and commented that the State Convention might be chairmaned for the first time by a Villanova Student providing sufficient support is obtained from other regions.

New Pre-Law Journal Now Accepts Articles



The Villanova Pre-Law Society has announced that articles for the forthcoming Pre-Law Journal are now being accepted.

The annual publication is planned for this semester. The editor of this year's journal, George F. West, senior pre-law major, commented that articles to do with any phase or aspect of the law are acceptable. They should be of moderate length, typewritten, and may be submitted to any officer of the society.

West said, "Last year's edition of the journal met with great success due to the excellent cooperation of the members and this year's publication will certainly rival past journals."

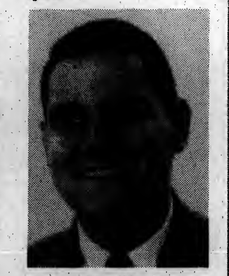
University Man Stapf

Partaking quite freely of the spice of university life, senior Mike Stapf has extended his interests and influence over a wide range of academic, athletic, and extra-curricular aspects of the Villanova campus.

In his most recent undertaking as Chairman of the Senior Dinner-Dance, Mike saw 86% of the graduating Class of 1962 attending, highlighting a most successful weekend initiated by the Villanova Jazz Festival and culminating in the Wildcat court victory over LaSalle.



Stapf, currently in the fourth year of a five-year mechanical engineering course, is a member of the NROTC, and is President of the Quarterdeck Society. Upon graduation, he will enter the navy for four years as a commissioned officer. Mike sincerely believes that "the experience one can attain is completely advantageous to one's character."

Active in Council

A product of Albany, New York, Stapf is an active member of the Student Council and the Student Senate, and was once connected with the now-defunct Fraternities and Societies Committee. Last year he was co-chairman of Mother's Day, and as a sophomore he worked with the Orientation Committee.

Mike is already in his fourth year with Phi Kappa Pi and with the drill team, and for three years he has competed in intramurals. Since freshman year, he has been a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Concerning the Dinner-Dance, Stapf remarked that everything turned out just as planned, and that he was "moved by the cooperation of the students involved. It was really indicative of Villanova spirit."

Mike Stapf

Returning to the subject of his future, Mike commented that the Navy is first chronologically. But his five-year engineering course will certainly not be wasted. In time, the multi-faceted senior intends to enter the field of engineering in personnel; by this, he means sales or management.

Review of Progress Is Primary Business At Council Meeting

A brief review of the progress of the past two weeks was the primary business conducted at the Student Council meeting a week ago. Little color or action enlivened the assembly of diffident members.

The main point of interest centered about the near non-opening of the Belle Masque play, "Mr. Roberts," This was due to a sloppy and belated report of the activity to the Student Council and Rev. William Farrell, OSA, Dean of Extra-Curricular Activities, as required of all societies or clubs staging any campus or off-campus production.

The production was, however, permitted to run as scheduled when a corrected report arrived late Wednesday evening. The Council intends to enforce this power in the future in the event of other crimes.

Other interest points:

Warning to all students about using university phones for their personal calls; a possible establishing of an Interfraternity Council for a weekend for all fraternities during second semester; the controversial Student Council Dinner Dance being postponed until next year.

The motion to move the voting machines from the Alumni Gym to Dougherty Hall was defeated; the necessity of possibly moving the vote on the annual free-day at least one semester previous to the date was mentioned; and the announcement that Rev. Joseph Kemme, OSA, does not favor setting a precedent in allowing the seniors car privileges was pointed out.

CAMPUS NEWS BRIEFS

It was recently announced that the NFCCS of Villanova will sponsor three projects this semester. The first of these will be to co-operate with the Religious Affairs Committee of the Student Council in collecting donations for the new seminary.

A series of lectures dealing with racism and/or communism will be the second proposed project. The lectures, tentatively scheduled for early April, will be followed by open discussion periods in which students are encouraged to participate.

Area Co-operation

Co-operating with various Philadelphia Catholic Colleges, the NFCCS will work on the Casa Del Carmen Program—a Puerto Rican Mission supported by the Archdiocese of Philadelphia. The main support given by the NFCCS will be the supplying of college students to teach English, help form sports programs, and make contact with newly immigrated Puerto Rican families.

Senior Delegate to the NFCCS, Gene d'Aquili, announced that any student who has some free time and would wish to spend it in a worthy project, the Casa Del Carmen Program, should leave his name in the NFCCS box in the Student Council Office.

The Intramural Department recently announced the Annual Intramural Bridge Tournament. Since the tournament depends on the co-operation of the Department with those students wishing to take part, no date or time has been set. Upon the submission of entries. the Department will arrange a suitable time and place.

Innovations occurring this year include women competing with or against men, the selection of one's own partner, and the selection of a partner by the Department.

The award is made on the basis of service to the school and the unit. Among other activities, Pleva has been active on the drill team, in the Pershing Rifles, and has been the Student Council representative for the Geological Society.

Religious Aspects Of Catholic Education

This is the second in a series of editorials concerning Catholic education. This editorial deals with the role of religious education and stimulation in a Catholic college.

As we stated last week, the goal of Catholic education is to attain academic excellence while putting an emphasis on directing man toward the Ultimate End. Catholic educators say that this is possible and consistent with the rational search for truth. We agree with this position but question its implementation in Catholic institutions of higher learning.

In its attempt to reach this goal, higher Catholic education tries to provide academic stimulation coupled with a religious atmosphere and education. This seems to improve both the rational and spiritual natures of man. But we do not believe that Catholic education has been meeting all of the present needs of this more important spiritual nature of man.

Finished Product

The finished product of a Catholic college should be a person who believes in his Faith, knows why he believes and is able to explain his beliefs intelligently. Most important, he should be a person whose actual life is consistent with these beliefs. In our opinion, this is not the picture of most Catholic college graduates, circa 1962. Why?

We can see why more easily if we realize that some undergraduates consider courses offered by the Theology Department as an academic picnic and average booster. The result of this image is academic laziness and a demotion of religious education to a secondary position.

Dogma

Catholic dogma is sometimes taught in the Baltimore Catechism style, as dry matter for rote memory. Rarely are the dogmatic principles of the Faith presented in a manner that satisfies the questioning mind. The reasons for the development of dogma and a sound argument against heretical propositions should be presented in order to stimulate the student to enable him to answer the questions posed by modern society.

Honest student interest and curiosity about Catholic principles are being stifled by a number of other factors. Students who have the aptitude and background to proceed rapidly in the study of their Faith are being held back by being placed in classrooms with students who have yet to grasp the basic essentials of Catholicism. Manpower shortages make necessary the use of teachers whose extra-seminary training lies in other fields. There is a tendency to isolate Catholic dogma from the sciences and philosophy that question its validity and to separate it from the mainstream of contemporary thought in all fields. These factors tend to lead the student to place his interest and emphasis in the non-religious disciplines.

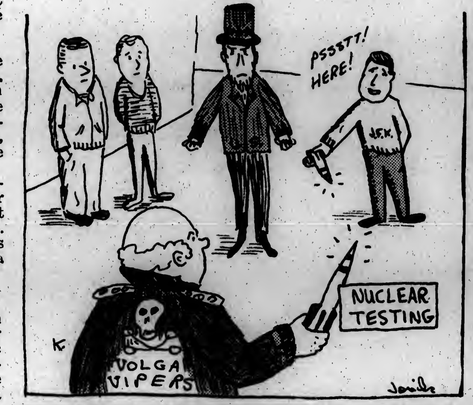
Limited Funds

Manpower shortage and lack of funds account for some of these deficiencies. There are, however, some suggestions that could possibly be implemented to improve the religious education.

Students who have no background in theology should be put into a remedial course for at least one year. This remedial course would be offered to qualify the student to participate on an equal basis in the more advanced courses. Those students who have an adequate background in theology could enter immediately into the more advanced and comprehensive courses that offer a challenge to their abilities.

The theology curriculum should be made more challenging to the student, both in the amount of work required and intellectual provocation. Perhaps the tightening of this program would lead to the addition of more courses. Since theology is required in only six of eight semesters, the two extra semesters could be utilized to offer these courses.

Another Area



Another area where improvement is needed is that of relating the historic truths of Catholicism to the questions and problems of modern life. Catholic graduates must be better prepared to answer both the overt and the implied attacks of today's world.

It is necessary for today's Catholic graduate to know and understand the reasoning behind the attacks and false propositions that the Church opposes. It is necessary that he know the modern teachings of Catholicism and the basis for their truthfulness. This will help him to better relate his beliefs to the thoughts of modern science and philosophy and to avoid imagined conflicts between Catholic dogma and scientific fact.

This seems like an all encompassing ideal that can never be fulfilled. But it is not as difficult as it appears at first glance. We believe that it is an ideal that even within the enforced limitations of the present situation, can do much to help improve Catholic education and to fill the void in our material-mad society.

We think that many of these points we have made with criticisms and suggestions might be relevant to the theology situation at Villanova. Let those who know the whole picture make the proper application.

The (Cold) Rumble

Counterpoint

Barry's Asset

by Joe McCarthy

The Republicans are still hard put for a candidate of Presidential "timber" in both 1964 and 1968. Three men are now considered as the foremost contenders for this nomination: Nixon of California, Rockefeller of New York, and Goldwater of Arizona.

Nixon and Rockefeller are both finding the going difficult as far as their future political ambitions are concerned. Nixon is suffering from his recent defeat in the last national election and Rockefeller from an impending, but certain, divorce from his wife of 32 years.

Asset: Debutante Daughter

Goldwater, on the other hand, is still "golden" in the national political circus. Adding to his assets is one Margaret Ann Goldwater, his beautiful 17 year old daughter.

She stands about 5' 5" and looks like a model out of Mccalls or Ladies' Home Journal. She has dark hair and carefully sculptured facial features accentuated by dark piercing eyes with demurely arched eyebrows.

Her latest achievement is her selection as Queen of the Ninth Annual International Azalea Festival at Norfolk, Virginia. An interesting note with some possible political portent is the fact that last year's festival was ruled over by Lynda Bird Johnson, the daughter of the Vice President.

As a campaigner, she has proved her father's equal, twice garnering the post of President of her class at Judson's School outside Phoenix where she is now completing her last year in high school. Such an appealing young lady will doubtlessly help voting especially when convention-time arrives.

Maybe we will again hear strains of Margaret Truman or Jackie Kennedy in the White House sometime in the future six or seven years. It's great publicity!

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To my astute American in Paris,

As one read your sardonic letter, your cynicism was only exceeded by your naivete. If living in Paris has warped your perpective to such a degree that an incident such as that which happened this week IN PARIS, whereby the O.A.S. fighting to block Algerian independence struck one of its heaviest blows by killing five policemen and a priest and injuring fifty persons when a truckload of explosives was blown up in a crowded market place can be condoned, then I am grateful that my errors are only in spelling and not in moral judgement.

If you still believe that these atrocities are a figment of my "vivid" imagination, then please explain this to the families and friends of the deceased.

If this incident and similar ones are only for the purpose of causing "little more damage than the breakage of windows and the confusion which inevitably results" then these assasins should be commended for doing such an excellent job in fulfilling more than they intended.

A Decision

Utilizing diplomatic tact and his usual prowess, President Kennedy last week announced the inevitable decision to resume U.S. nuclear testing in the atmosphere.

It is because the Soviet Union persisted in engaging in the testing of 58 megaton bombs to the detriment of every human being, that prompted this decision. By the progress made by the U.S.S.R. in its 50 explosions last fall, the U.S. was in danger of losing the nuclear superiority which is the shield of the free world.

With this move, President Kennedy once more put Nikita Krushchev on the defensive. The Premier of the Soviet Union, now realizes that the U. S. is not going to remain dormant while Russia surges forward in the arms race. The Russian news agency Tass labeled this action "strongly resembling blackmail," and one which would be used as a lever in the forthcoming disarmament conference in Geneva. The Soviets, however, made it clear that this maneuver would not effect its policies concerning an inspection system.

This edict delivered by the President rang loud and clear and was met with mixed reactions by the people of the world.

Japan's Premier Ikeda reacted by dispatching a tolerant letter to Kennedy calling the testing resumption "exceedingly regrettable" and implored: "We strongly request you to withdraw the decision." Egypt sounded discordant by stating, "an air of pessimism" would prevail at the disarmament talks to be held in Geneva. Red China agreed at last with the Soviet Union and denounced Kennedy's decision as odious and aimed at a Communist compliance with a test ban scheme. As expected, all Western allies viewed this judgement as one that was demanded and precipitated by the Soviet Union's actions.

Before this definite decision was made President Kennedy, with the aid of the National Security Council spent a considerable amount of time gathering information concerning the resumption of nuclear testing. The conclusion reached by this competent group of men was that the testing was necessary and integral to the maintenance of the freedom of the U. S. and her allies.

It is the commitment of the Security Council and the President which shall insure the freedom of every citizen of the U. S. and every peace loving person of the world. Concluded the President: "Our foremost aim is the control of force, not the pursuit of force, in a world made safe for mankind.

It seems illogical, but sometimes to secure peace, one must resort to violence. President Kennedy's policy has been dictated by world circumstances—to maintain peace and if necessary utilize force. The first step has been taken . . .

Belle Masque's 'Mister Roberts' Good Comedy

By Dan Grove

When a script is capable of producing hearty belly laughs and the cast is able to project that script, the audience is rewarded with an evening of first rate entertainment. Belle Masque's production of Mister Roberts came close to meeting these requirements last Thursday night.

The comedy, adapted from a book by Thomas Heggen and dramatized by Joshua Logan, takes place aboard a rusty old Navy cargo ship 1000 miles removed from the war in the Pacific. Since Japs are scarcer than girls a different kind of war is waged by the captain and the crew—they fight each other.

Captain Dumb

On the surface the captain, a loud, ignorant and incompetent glory seeker, appears to have the upper hand. He enforces petty rules and sees that his men are denied liberty for a year. The crew, however, has a better leader—Mr. Roberts, a frustrated All-American boy, who yearns to get into the war. He is ably assisted by a philisophical old quack who passes himself off as the ship's doctor, in between bouts with the medicinal alcohol, and Ensign Pulver a lazy dreamer whose grandiose schemes are never carried out, but always offered to impress Roberts whom he adores. These three officers were the titular leaders of a motley crew whose seamanship consisted of brewing fantastic mixtures of fermented "jungle juice", and staying off report.

This production progressed evenly through the first act and produced several funny lines many of which Thursday night's audience missed. The slapstick buffoonery of the crew was well staged. The aloofness and ignorance of the captain identified him as a "bad guy" immediately.

Bill Byrne who played Dolan tries to win over the goat he shanghied after a night of alcoholic liberty. The scene is from Belle Masque's presentation of "Mister Roberts".

The second act was funnier. The slapstick was reminiscent of the Marx Brothers at their unorganized best. The finale was tragic.

In general the production was more than adequate, except for some spotty acting by two of the main characters it would have been excellent.

Gene Corcoran who plays Mister Roberts tended to overact his part. He reached an emotional pitch several times unnecessarily. He did come across well in several instances, but on the whole his performance was not convincing enough. The competition the slapstick gave this serious role, made it a difficult one.

Smith Salty

The brightest performance in the show was given by Pete Smith who played Dowdy, with a laugh provoking gusto that carried the play over its few weak spots. He had all the accountrements of a typical navy salt oblivious to worry and grudingly obliging to officers. His foghorn-like voice and the jaunty angle of his cigar made him perfect for the role.

Bob Heenan, who played Ensign Pulver, simply failed to do justice to the part. Except for the final scene he didn't succeed in taking advantage of the scintillating script. Jerry Paonessa did a sparkling job as the captain. Many of the laugh lines depended on his loud, ignorant commentary. He was especially funny during the palm tree incident.

The crew was hilarious. They stumbled around the realistic set in a very convincing manner. Ken Resinski, and Ross Anzaldi were particularly good.

Pretty Nurse

Marti Keene, the nurse provided some glamour but no acting ability in her small part.

Bill Diepenbrock did an adequate portrayal of the "doc". At times he was a bit laconic but his drinking scenes were well done.

Despite the flaws noted, this production provided the audience with a night of hearty laughter, and has to be classified as a success. Presentations such as Mister Roberts are better suited for undergraduate theatrics than several of the dramatic efforts offered in the past.

Perhaps the audience is more receptive to histronics of this nature. And certainly the Belle Masque Society, which has to labor with the inadequate facilities of Vasey Hall (no curtain is even provided) can orientate its talents better in this direction.

Footprints And Thaw Reveal Murky Secret In Mendel Field Mud

by Jan Dyroff

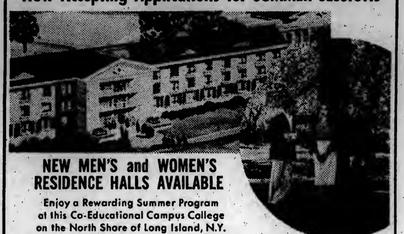
Someone passing through the campus is apt to hear rumors spreading from a dark corner of the Pie Shoppe to the effect that half the student body is lost each spring. Assuming there to be a shred or two of truth in the rumor, this is a very alarming thing.

Knowing the usual bent of the student mind, the blame for this might be laid on the shoulders of the administration. But such is not the case. The loss is due to no academic cause such as multiple failures, but to a natural cause—the thaw that comes each spring.

Colorful Season

The vernal season is upon us and the lawns and fields blossom in their most vibrant color, mud brown. Where neat lines once marked the limits of athletic contest, there is now a large expanse of goop that looks like a black-and-white milkshake.

But where does the student enter into this, you may ask. The answer can be gotten from an observation made on Mendel Field recently. A set of three pairs of footprints was seen to originate from the path by the chapel. One third of the way across the field, there were only two sets. Half way across, the two became one and a half and weaved their way to the main door of Mendel Hall.



Rumor True

At first glance, it might seem that the rumor was true and one half of the students were lost in the mud. But this is clearly not so; the only loss incurred was one student and one shoe, thus explaining the odd footprint.

The rumor, then, is almost true. It should serve as a lesson in sign reading, though little does the casual observer realize that the "Keep Off The

'Round Midnight

A Man, A Horn, A Legend

by Joe Zawacki

This is a short look at the great romantic legend of American Jazz. It has everything: an introverted young man who just had to play that horn, after-hour sessions in smoky cellars, gin, more gin, and enough crazy stories to fill several books. The setting was complementary also: the roaring 20's, the so-called Jazz Age of F. Scott Fitzgerald, complete with Stutz bearcats and raccoon coats.

The Horn

When writers, musicians and historians talk of Leon Bismarck (Bix) Beiderbecke, they talk first of his horn. Thanks to records, his horn and the way he played it will never fade away. Once heard, it's a sound you'll never forget: the warm, mellow cornet tone, sometimes with almost no vibrato at all; the attack that was as sure as Willie Mays going after a long fly with every note brought out as clearly as a padded mallet striking a chime; the flow of ideas, sometimes bursting with spontaneous energy and yet always sounding coolly calculated, as neatly arranged as though the composer had carefully organized each phrase and then plotted all the little inflections and dynamics.

It's not easy to listen to Bix and his horn today. The radio provides little Jazz at all, and the dispensers are too narrow minded to realize the importance of traditionalism and the effect it has in creating more listeners to this form of good music.

Then there're the records. Because Bix died at the age of 28 in 1931, there are no hi-fi recording available to enhance the sound. Not that Beiderbecke's horn needed, it, but he was not always surrounded with the best of musicians. Sometimes you have to listen to a lot of mediocrity, but boy oh boy, is it worth the wait! ! !

One musician phrased it thus: "You know, Bix carried the whole band on his back in those dates—when he blows on those records, he's blowing trombone, beating the drums, and everything else. He had to—he was the only real guy on them."

Bix' personal life was something else. He was born on March 10, 1903 in Davenport. His family was fairly well to do and musically inclined. His nickname was inherited from an older brother. It is said that the riverboats coming from the South gave him his first taste of the sounds that were to become his life.

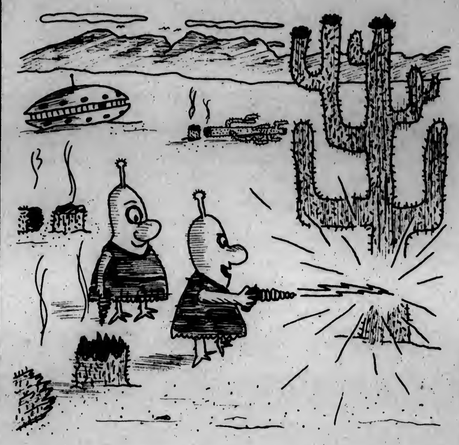
Row And Rough

He spent a few years in college but the constant trips to Chicago to hear the New - Orleans musicians slowed his interest in books. A roadhouse in Hamilton, Ohio was the debut of the Wolverines, a pioneer group of white musicians led by the 20 year old cornetist. They were raw and rough, but whatever it is that propels the Jazz musician, they had it. Quality, maybe not. Fire and soul, yes. And they had Bix.

In 1925, the Wolverines broke up and Bix joined first the Charlie Stright band in Chicago, then Frank Trumbauer's in St. Louis. The C-melody saxophonist became sort of a guiding light for the sensitive cornetist, securing record dates for the band and helping Bix gain a certain knowledge of reading. Bix was always a poor reader and this was a constant cause of frustration in later years.

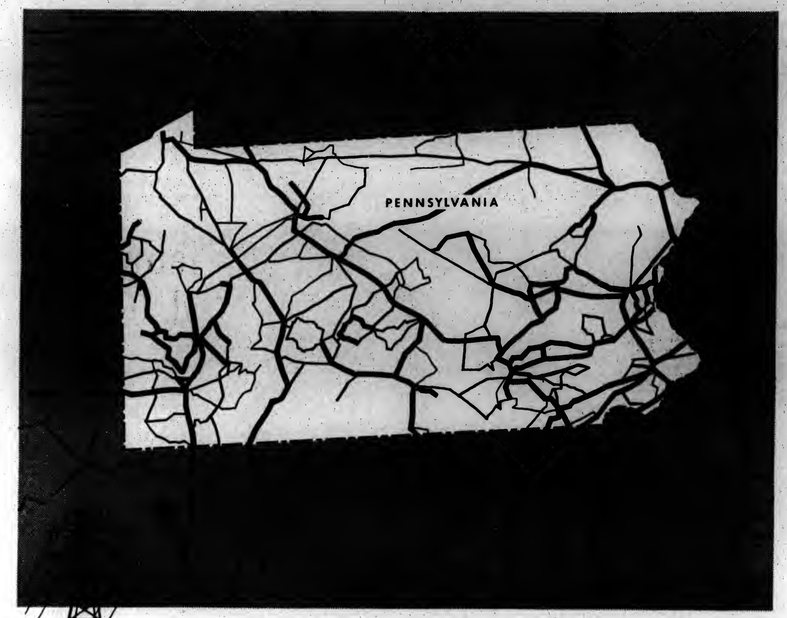
Beginning of The End

When Bix joined Paul Whiteman's band in 1927, the downward thread was started. The heavy arrangements and the hours of waiting before a shot at a solo plus Beiderbecke's own psychological difficulties eventually destroyed him.



Bix was a looker. He liked the high life and it is said that his bootleg supply never fell below the 24 hour reserve mark. When he felt frustrated, he hit the bottle harder. As his freedom in playing decreased, so did his spirit.

Another problem was his inborn feeling for chords. He was a rebel, and his writings show a far advance concept of harmony than would be heard for another 20 years. Some musicians have felt that Bix, in concentrating on kicking over the traces of conventional music and studying the whys of the revolt, got bogged down in more theory than he could handle.



His most famous composition, In A Mist (which is still recorded today), is perhaps symbolic of the musical mist that Bix never got out of in his striving and searching for something that always eluded him. He had no Monk, Dizzy or Bird to talk to. And if his playing was so beautiful as he searched, what would it have become had he found it? One critic answered by saying, "Listen to Miles today and multiply by 10 and you would have Bix."

Bix's personal life became a mist in which he depended on alcohol to carry him through each disappointment. The mist cleared on August 7, 1931. Some say a cold got him, others claim drink. It doesn't matter.

Highways . . . of electric power

This is Pennsylvania's "highway system" of electric power . . . ready for any demand or any emergency. The lines charted on this map are part of the great electric grid that covers the nation, connecting the facilities of more than 100 investor-owned electric companies.

This vast network of power is a reality today because the forward-looking, business-managed electric industry planned it that way. And now, even greater facilities are under construction or on the drawing boards, to secure the nation's power future for many years ahead.

Over the next 20 years electric utility companies will be spending more than $143 billion for construction of facilities. This money will come, not from taxes but from voluntary investment by individuals who have faith in the performance of an industry which has always been ready to meet all power demands . . . which has continuously contributed to a higher standard of living at progressively lower cost.

An Open Letter To Nickolai Raskovich

by Pete Nolan

One of the most booming industries in America today is that of popular records. You rarely turn on the radio anymore without hearing the wailings of a long-haired teenage idol on his way to another million. It is a sad thing, however, that many people are not able to catch the significant message that these songs are trying to put across due to the amazing speed which is characteristic to so many of these tunes.

I say that it is a sad thing because probably a lot more people would realize and understand the complexities and frustrations which teenagers have to face if they would only be able to catch the lyrics. Some typical problems that are put to lyrics are: "I can't get the car cause my marks ain't been so good," or "I'm a wanderer and I'm the cat who knows," or "I'm not doin so good in English class 'cause I sit next to Mary Lou" etc.

What is even more perplexing is that thousands of these energetic youngsters are turned away daily from the record companies' doors, dejected, and left alone with only their song.

I recently came into contact with one of these individuals; his talent was questionable, but his message was inspiring. It takes its form in an open letter to a teenage Russian like unto himself. I believe that it is worth printing.

Dear Nickolai.

I don't know you and you don't know me but I sure would like to meet ya. I'd like to walk right up, look ya square in the eye, and give ya five. I'm a teenager just like you. I like to fool around with cars, drag race, and steal hub caps and all that stuff, and somehow I know that you'd do the same things if they'd let ya or if they had a lot of cars over there.

Somehow I think that we dig the same things. Man, I don't dig all this stuff about war and bombs and stuff. I mean, I jest want to go'ya know. They tell me ya don't have rock n' roll over there, but I don't believe it. I jest know that when you hear a train go by, or listen to the "Internationale," or hear the shovels clang up in those Siberian mines, I jest know that you must feel like rockin'n' rollin'.

I'll tell ya Nickolai, I believe that if all us teenagers everywhere got together and jest kept rock n' rollin', we'd do more good than any squares over any conference table anywhere. And then the world would move as it was meant to move—rockin' and rollin' and twistin'.

Yours truly,
Herbie Finch U.S.A.

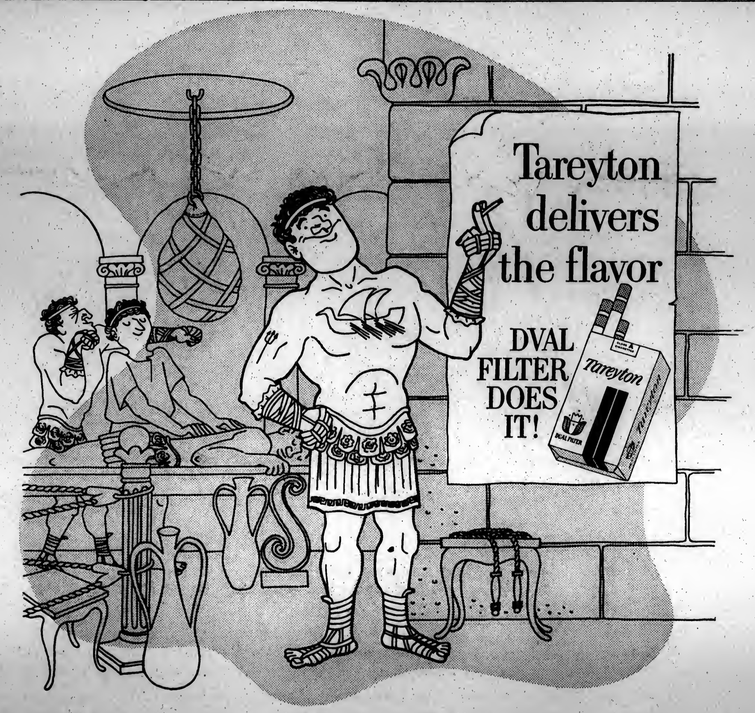
Courageous Snow Traveler In Horribly Mis-Cast Role

by Jerry Heavey

Having a broken back isn't entirely a misfortune. I mean like I've been at Villanova two and a half years, and this is the first time I've seen the inside of the Infirmary. Besides the educational aspects, the cast on my back has given me a chance to catch up on my letter writing, though I can't write too fast holding the pen in my teeth. (I forgot to mention that I broke both of my arms too, but that's actually a piece of good luck, because the casts on my legs aren't big enough to hold all the autographs I've been getting anyway.) I get a good grip on the pen with my teeth, and brace it against the cast on my nose.



That nose cast is the oldest piece of plaster on me. In fact, it was the broken nose that started everything. Last Tuesday, at the height of the snowstorm, I was fighting my way across Mendel Field, completely blinded, when I tripped on something. I'm not certain what it was, but it groaned. I suppose the poor devil is still lying there under one of the drifts. I staggered and fell, breaking my nose on a frozen shoe that someone had lost.

I lapped up some of the warm blood that began running down my face. This gave me the energy to start running for the Infirmary. To protect my nose I ran with my arms stretched out in front of me. Until I hit that tree.

Besides discovering the high degree of forestation on our campus, I also found that there is a very steep hill in front of the Infirmary building. Rolling down that hill shook me up, and necessitated the rest of the casts. But the aspirin I got after they carried me inside helped kill the pain.

They tell me that I won't be allowed on my feet for a couple of months. This means I won't be walking through any more snow this winter. That's fortunate, because if I were to fall in the snow with all this white tape and plaster on I might sort of blend in and not be found 'til the thaw.

A gambler died and the funeral was well attended by his professional friends. In the eulogy the speaker asserted, "Spike is not dead. He only sleeps." From the rear came the interrupting words, "I got a hundred bucks that says he's dead!"

Parking Lot Becomes Parking Problem

By Adam Wright

We arrived on the campus this morning (If the parking lot can be considered part of the campus) at 9:18 A.M. Our 9:30 class was in C&F. We arrived at the classroom at 9:39, 21 minutes later.

We feel that it should be no great problem to park a car and get to C&F in twelve minutes. It should be no problem, but it is.

The cause of the problem is the inevitable mess in the parklot. There are cars half-way into the east-west traffic lanes, there are cars parked in the passages between these east-west lanes, and sometimes there are even cars parked in front of the entrances to the lot itself.

The reason for this haphazard and grossly inconsiderate parking is not immediately evident to us. There is no lack of parking spaces available in the lot.

This whole problem would be non-existent if twenty or thirty people would merely drive another hundred feet and park in a designated parking space.

Last year the Student Council acted on this situation and for a time the situation improved. But now the situation is worse than ever, and it seems to be time for more action.

We would suggest a very simple procedure. Any car improperly parked in any way should be given a warning. On a second offense a one dollar fine should be imposed and enforced. All offenses thereafter should receive a fine of three dollars.

Finally, any car which actually blocked a traffic lane or another car should be towed away and made available to the owner upon payment of the towing charge.

Meanwhile, we can only readjust our schedule, arrive at the lot by 9:10, and look to the day when the parking lot will tease to be an obstacle course.

'Round Midnight

A Man, A Horn, A Legend

by Joe Zawacki

This is a short look at the great romantic legend of American Jazz. It has everything: an introverted young man who just had to play that horn, after-hour sessions in smoky cellars, gin, more gin, and enough crazy stories to fill several books. The setting was complementary also: the roaring 20's, the so-called Jazz Age of F. Scott Fitzgerald, complete with Stutz bearcats and raccoon coats.

The Horn

When writers, musicians and historians talk of Leon Bismarck (Bix) Beiderbecke, they talk first of his horn. Thanks to records, his horn and the way he played it will never fade away. Once heard, it's a sound you'll never forget: the warm, mellow cornet tone, sometimes with almost no vibrato at all; the attack that was as sure as Willie Mays going after a long fly with every note brought out as clearly as a padded mallet striking a chime; the flow of ideas, sometimes bursting with spontaneous energy and yet always sounding coolly calculated, as neatly arranged as though the composer had carefully organized each phrase and then plotted all the little inflections and dynamics.

It's not easy to listen to Bix and his horn today. The radio provides little Jazz at all, and the dispensers are too narrow minded to realize the importance of traditionalism and the effect it has in creating more listeners to this form of good music.

Then there're the records. Because Bix died at the age of 28 in 1931, there are no hi-fi recording available to enhance the sound. Not that Beiderbecke's horn needed, it, but he was not always surrounded with the best of musicians. Sometimes you have to listen to a lot of mediocrity, but boy oh boy, is it worth the wait! ! !

One musician phrased it thus: "You know, Bix carried the whole band on his back in those dates—when he blows on those records, he's blowing trombone, beating the drums, and everything else. He had to—he was the only real guy on them."

Bix' personal life was something else. He was born on March 10, 1903 in Davenport. His family was fairly well to do and musically inclined. His nickname was inherited from an older brother. It is said that the riverboats coming from the South gave him his first taste of the sounds that were to become his life.

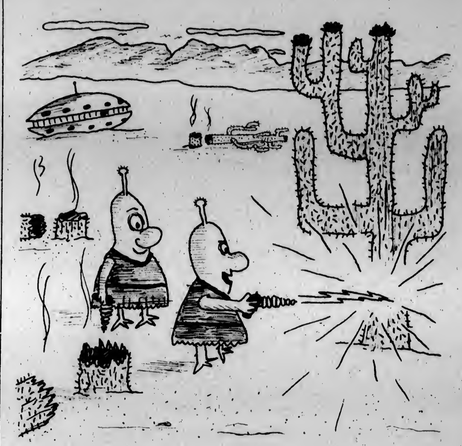
Row And Rough

He spent a few years in college but the constant trips to Chicago to hear the New Orleans musicians slowed his interest in books. A roadhouse in Hamilton, Ohio was the debut of the Wolverines, a pioneer group of white musicians led by the 20 year old cornetist. They were raw and rough, but whatever it is that propels the Jazz musician, they had it. Quality, maybe not. Fire and soul, yes. And they had Bix.

In 1925, the Wolverines broke up and Bix joined first the Charlie Stright band in Chicago, then Frank Trumbauer's in St. Louis. The C-melody saxophonist became sort of a guiding light for the sensitive cornetist, securing record dates for the band and helping Bix gain a certain knowledge of reading. Bix was always a poor reader and this was a constant cause of frustration in later years.

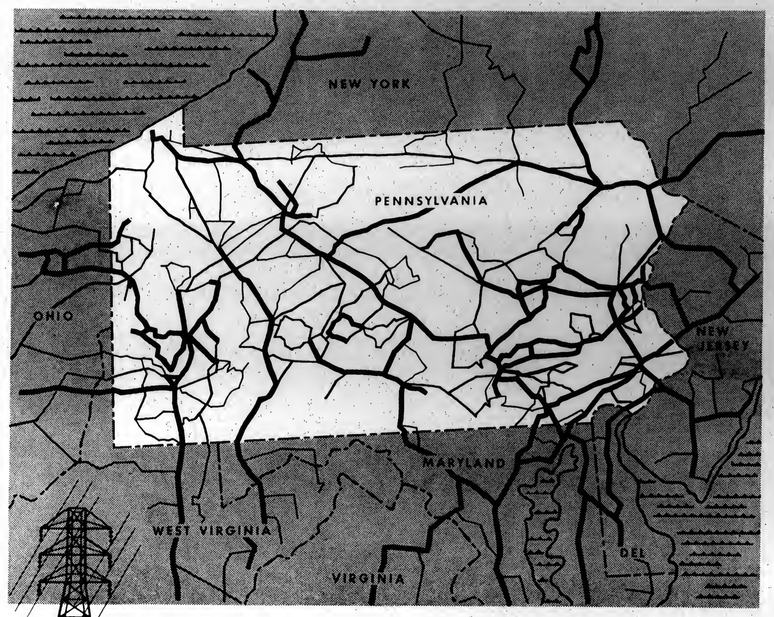
Beginning of The End

When Bix joined Paul Whiteman's band in 1927, the downward thread was started. The heavy arrangements and the hours of waiting before a shot at a solo plus Beiderbecke's own psychological difficulties eventually destroyed him.



Bix was a looker. He liked the high life and it is said that his bootleg supply never fell below the 24 hour reserve mark. When he felt frustrated, he hit the bottle harder. As his freedom in playing decreased, so did his spirit.

Another problem was his inborn feeling for chords. He was a rebel, and his writings show a far advance concept of harmony than would be heard for another 20 years. Some musicians have felt that Bix, in concentrating on kicking over the traces of conventional music and studying the whys of the revolt, got bogged down in more theory than he could handle.



His most famous composition, In A Mist (which is still recorded today), is perhaps symbolic of the musical mist that Bix never got out of in his striving and searching for something that always eluded him. He had no Monk, Dizzy or Bird to talk to. And if his playing was so beautiful as he searched, what would it have become had he found it? One critic answered by saying, "Listen to Miles today and multiply by 10 and you would have Bix."

Bix's personal life became a mist in which he depended on alcohol to carry him through each disappointment. The mist cleared on August 7, 1931. Some say a cold got him, others claim drink. It doesn't matter.

Highways . . . of electric power

This is Pennsylvania's "highway system" of electric power . . . ready for any demand or any emergency. The lines charted on this map are part of the great electric grid that covers the nation, connecting the facilities of more than 100 investor-owned electric companies.

This vast network of power is a reality today because the forward-looking, business-managed electric industry planned it that way. And now, even greater facilities are under construction or on the drawing boards, to secure the nation's power future for many years ahead.

Over the next 20 years electric utility companies will be spending more than $143 billion for construction of facilities. This money will come, not from taxes but from voluntary investment by individuals who have faith in the performance of an industry which has always been ready to meet all power demands . . . which has continuously contributed to a higher standard of living at progressively lower cost.

An Open Letter To Nickolai Raskovich

by Pete Nolan

One of the most booming industries in America today is that of popular records. You rarely turn on the radio anymore without hearing the wailings of a long-haired teenage idol on his way to another million. It is a sad thing, however, that many people are not able to catch the significant message that these songs are trying to put across due to the amazing speed which is characteristic to so many of these tunes.

I say that it is a sad thing because probably a lot more people would realize and understand the complexities and frustrations which teenagers have to face if they would only be able to catch the lyrics. VU Exceeds 300 Pint Goal In Red Cross Blood Drive

The recent Blood Drive on the Villanova campus conducted in cooperation with the American Red Cross collected 313 pints of blood as compared with last year's 304 pints.

Jim Shiels, Chairman of the Student Activities Committee, pointed out that the meeting of the 300 pint quota for Villanova allows anyone connected with the University, plus his immediate family, all the blood needed within a one year period.

The Wayne Chapter of the American Red Cross will be the contact for those who might need blood.

Over 450 originally signed up for the drive. Out of that number 358 turned up but 45 of these were rejected for medical reasons. It was noted by Shiels that the rejections were very high this year.

The Villanova Blood Drive Committee and the Red Cross also offered an apology to anyone taking offense for having their names read over the Public Address system in Dougherty Hall. "But the purpose," he said, "was only to remind them."

As a result the requisite 30 additional pints were received.

Dr. Goodwin gave a detailed outline of the various abnormalities that are characteristic of psychotics and neurotics.

Lecturers are planned to continue for the rest of the semester.

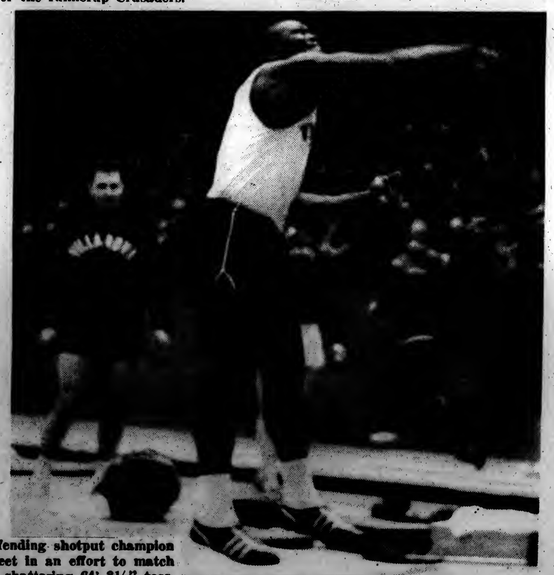
Trailing him are teammate Otis Drayton (far left), Bob Lewis of Michigan State, Gerald Ashworth of Dartmouth, and Robert Mathis of Manhattan.



ADAMS ADDS INSULT—Jumbo Elliot's 2 mile relay team added insult to injury by winning that event in an upset over favored Holy Cross. Anchorman Al Adams broke the string with five yards to spare over the runnerup Crusaders.

ZWOLAK ZIPS—Sophomore Vic Zwolak appears to be loosing a victory scream as he finishes 25 yards ahead of the field in the ICAAAA mile run.

PRAS LEANS—But Manhattan's Tyrone Pannell leans a bit more to nip Villanova's defending champion in the finals of the high hurdles. Yale's Bill Flippen and Jay Luck finished fourth and third respectively.

JOE JUMPS—Defending shotput champion Billy Joe leaves his feet in an effort to match Gary Gubner's record shattering 64' 3½" toss. Joe's best heave of 55' 4" was good enough for second place.

Manhattan Mismatch

By Dan Grove

On track weekends New York's Manhattan Hotel is the meeting place for running and jumping enthusiasts and their followers. Last Saturday was no exception. An unaware convention goer stood by the cigar counter and scratched his new tounee as a horde of pink checked collegians wandered about the lobby in strange looking, bright colored apparel.

A bevy of teenage coeds drifted in to admire the muscleage before they strolled down to Manhattan branch of Vic Tanny's—the Peppermint Lounge. Some just sighed at a group of shotputters standing by the front door flipping the 16 pound lead pellets around like they were matching pennies. Of course there was the usual comotion when two pole vaulters tried to go through the revolving door, pole and all.

Hurdlers Improvise

Out in the middle of the floor several Ivy League hurdlers lined up three lounging chairs about ten yards apart and prepared to skim over the obstacles. Frank Budd the king of the sprinters held court with Gotham press corps in the corner.

The hotel manager shrugged his shoulders and said "what the hell, at $13.00 a room I should worry". It was a weekend just like the rest in the indoor season, except for one thing. This was ICAAAA time, team points suddenly meant more than individual performances.

Coaches Plot

Upstairs a group of coaches huddled around a fifth of Jack Daniels and rolled cigars around in their mouths. The meeting was sort of a cabel type affair with one piece of trickery in mind—to stop Villanova from winning the meet by a ridiculous margin. The meeting broke up when a room service boy suggested fixing the judges.

Meanwhile at Madison Square Garden, spectators and participants started floating in. By an hour after sunset the stage was set for Villanova's fourth team championship in the past six intercollegiate B.V.D. derbys.

By that time Frank Budd had already run the first official 6.0 60 yard dash in the Eighth Avenue collosus, and was preparing to do it again for the benefit of skeptical latecomers. He waited until the finals to complete the rare double, and he needed every stride of the acceleration exhibition to beat Dartmouth's Jerry Ashworth. It was over so quickly that a hotdog vendor who handicaps on the side demanded a track measurement.

Many Heroes

There were lots of heroes during the circus like contest. Vic Zwolak's upset win in the mile was the biggest surprise He trailed the leaders for eight laps and then started an early kick that completely astonished the favosites who had allowed a slow early pace. He continued his drive and completely disillusioned Harvard's Mullin and Georgetown's Rielly.

The two mile relay team's victory was another upset. The four furlongers had been losing consistently to Holy Cross the defending champ, but the pattern was shattered when Jon Dante, who was obviously using a fibreglass baton, shot into a ten yard lead durinng the third leg. The rest of the meet was anticlimatic. Budd's record gallop set the pace that made the victory a real team affair. Even Jumbo Elliot's pre-meet pessimism wasn't convincing enough to make anyone believe that Villanova wasn't a winner, long before the final score of 31½ points was announced.

Handicap Affair

Back in the notel the coaches met again, this time laying long range plans. The room service boy entered again with a bucket of ice. This time he said, "Forget about fixin the judges but how about breaking up Villanova's team or making next year's meet a handicap affair.

Jumbo Elliot wrung his hands and tried to decide how to explain that this years freshman team won't help the Wildcat's chances next year.

Softball Beginning; Basketball Ending

The Intramural Department has announced that entries are now being taken for softball teams for the coming season.

This season, for the first time, a new rule will permit each team to carry one varsity or frosh athlete on its roster, provided he is not a varsity baseball player.

Entries will close on March 22. Those desiring entry blanks should go to the Intramural office at 112 Alumni Hall or contact the softball coordinator, Al Ward, at 212 Sheehan Hall.

In the meantime the Intramural Basketball playoffs are in full swing. In the quarterfinal games of March 7 the 5N's dropped a 39-34 decision to Johnny's Team and the Gunners romped to a 66-38 win over the Avengers.

Unheralded Skaters Compile 4-5 Record For '61-62 Season

by Tom Bruderle

Believe it or not, Villanova has a hockey team. Yes, that's right, a hockey team. "But, you may argue, there is no mention of it in the school catalogue." That's very true, but there is also no mention of Kelly's or fraternity initiations either. Not only is there a hockey team, but, despite the fact that the school does not officially recognize it, it is a very successful team.

Early History

Five years ago the skating Wildcats opened their season at Valey Forge Country Club. After two years of bumps, bruises, and losses, the team moved to its present home, the Main Line Skating Rink. Here they had a good 4-1 mark. Last year the team compiled a 3-4 record. During these trying times the team was fortunate to have Mr. George McNeil as its head coach. At the start of the 1961-62 campaign, however, McNeil left and the life of the sport was threatened at Villanova.

4-5 Record

With seniors George Snyder, Mike Clemente, and Kevin Shea, the only veterans, the 'Cats finished with a 4-5 record. Villanova competed in the Pennsylvania Collegiate Hockey Conference and finished with a 4-2 record. They defeated Lehigh twice and split games with Franklin-and-Marshall and Lafayette. In non-league games, they lost to Rutgers, the Hill School, and Valley Forge.

High Scorer

Co-captain of this year's team was Mike Clemente. The five year Navy engineer led the league with 33 points. Second highest pointer for Villanova was freshman Dick Thackery with 21. Close behind him was classmate Jack Clemente, Mike's cousin. This high-scoring trio formed Villanova's front line.

Co-captain Kevin Shea teamed with Frank Bozza for a tough defensive line, and goalie Ralph Williams made life miserable for opposing teams. The second line was centered by Tom Phillips. Flanking him was Ken Kilmarktain and Jack Brown.

Despite the lack of a coach, Shea said, "The lack of a coach hurt, but the team displayed good talent and hustle and we played better than expected."

Rugby Coach Coghlan Honored; Team Faces Columbia In Opener

A vigorous ten game schedule has been announced by the Villanova Rugby Club for the spring season. Four of these games will be played against rivals in the District Two Division of the Eastern Rugby Union.

The club received an increase in its status last year as, after one year of actual ball, they were promoted from Division Three to Division Two. The squad's Captain, Ralph Lewis, noted that the major game of the season should be with Notre Dame, the only other Catholic college in the country fielding a rugby squad.

At the beginning of practice two weeks ago, 44 reported to fill out a thirty man contingent. The 'Cats will, thus, again field both an A and a B team. The B squad, according to Lewis, should have at least six or seven games.

Coach Honored

Frank Coghlan, the team's coach, recently received the Eastern Rugby Union's Most Outstanding Rugby Player, Active or Inactive Award of the year. He was feted at the annual West Chester Rugby Football Club Dinner in New York at which Mickey Mantle was also honored.

Coghlan received a silver bowl for his "contributions of time and effort to the E.R.U." Both Coghlan and Lewis are now planning a tour of Canada in the first week of June. Two of these three cities, Montreal, Toronto, and Quebec, will be visited. Four or five games are tentatively being scheduled.

'NOVA PREVAILS IN IC4A, NCAA TESTS

Budd, Gubner, Cruz Set Marks As Cats Tally 31½ Points, Win Meet

by Bob Larkin

Villanova was picked to win the IC4A track title in a breeze by the track buffs with a total of 30 points. The Cats didn't disappoint the experts in winning their fourth title in six years while piling up 31½ points.

Five meets and two special events meet fell before the event cleared at the Garden. Frank Budd started the day off by equalling the world record of :6 for the 60 yard dash in the afternoon quarterfinals. He repeated his performance in the finals for his third straight IC4A dash title.

Gary Gubner, the world's indoor shotput champion, took first place with a heave of 64 feet 3½ inches. Billy Joe, the defending champion, had to settle for second with a 55 feet 11½ inch effort while Gerry Donini finished sixth. All six attempts by Gubner shattered the old meet record of 57 feet.

Braggs Record Broken

Villanova's first sophomore winner of the evening, Rolando Cruz, cleared 15-3¾ inches in pole vault to break Don Bragg's record set back in 1956. Cruz, out of practice the week before with an influenza attack, cleared the bar with ease on all of his tries before missing at 15-7½.

One of the biggest surprises of the meet came in the mile run where Mark Mullin of Harvard and John Reilly of Georgetown were picked as cofavorites. Vic Zwolak another sophomore brought the New York fans to their feet with a 4:09.3 victory. The ex-Marine who usually likes to set the pace hung back until there were two and a half laps to go and then turned on the steam to win by 25 yards.

Tom Laris of Dartmouth and Bob Mack of Yale set the pace for the first part of the two mile run. When Mack took the lead the crowd cheered while he kicked into the lead winning in 8:58,3, a new meet record. Pat Traynor of Villanova placed fifth with a 9:14.6.

Jay Luck of Yale trying for a double win captured the 600 yard run in 1:11.7.

Villanova's two mile relay team fooled the experts by whipping defending champions Holy Cross by four yards in 7:45.2. with Gerry "come from behind" Hackett and Pat Nicastro running the first two legs, Jon Dante took the lead on the third leg and Al Adams held on for the win.

Defending champion Leon Pras had to settle for second place behind Tyrone Pannell, a sophomore from Manhattan.

Villanova's freshman medley team set a new freshmen IC4A indoor record and a new world collegiate record. Marty Ferko, with a 1:57 half mile, Don Webster in a 47.7 quarter mile, Stan Kozlowski with a :23.6 for the 220, and Tommy Sullivan running a 4:01.1 mile managed to chop seven seconds off the old world record set by N.Y.U. in 1941.

Ted Baily of Harvard won the 35 pound weight throw with a record toss of 63 feet 5 inches. Frank Tomeo won the 1000 yard run in 2:11.5 and N.Y.U. copped first place in the mile relay.

Wildcats Roar Back, Hit 51 In Last Half; Jones Sparks Spurt

by Ed Lohr

How sweet it was! Villanova's battling Wildcats roared from behind in the second half to defeat the Mountaineers of West Virginia 90-75 and earned the right to face N.Y.U. in the semi-finals of N.C.A.A. Eastern Regionals at College Park, Md. Friday Night.

The 'Cats staging one of their greatest comeback efforts in years, poured in 51 points as Hubie White, playing his last Palestra game, and soph sensation Wally Jones lead the inspired surge, which sent the crowd of 9214 into a tizzy.

Thorn An All-American

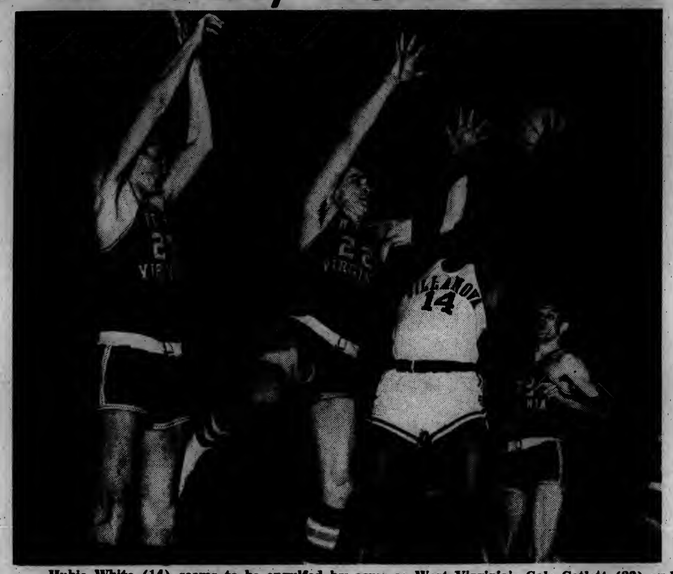
All-American Rod Thorn more than lived up to his reputation as he tossed in the first two points of the game after West Virginia controlled the tap. The running Mountaineers never were headed in the first half as they led by 42-39 at the intermission.

Rexall drugs should check with rookie coach Jack Kraft to get the formula of the stimulant used by the rookie mentor to set the 'Cats afire in the second stanza.

Don Weir opened the scoring with a jumper but from then on it was all Villanova. The Main Liners went on to rack up five straight points to grab the lead 45-44 on a twisting, snapping jumper by Jones with 17:23 remaining.

Cats Lead All The Way

From then on it was downhill, as the City Champions were not to be denied in their bid for revenge of the earlier defeat at the hands of the Mountaineers. The ice-water veined Jones hit on an unbelievable 13 for 17 from the floor and has to be credited with breaking the game open as he ripped the cords for 10 of his points between the 14 and 9 minute mark.



White led all scorers with 28 points including the 18 biggest markers of his life in the second half. Jones ended up with a total of 27 and Thorn racked up 23 for the losers.

A big difference tonight however was the man with the cookies, Jim McMonagle, who hit on 6 for 12 from the floor and 4 for 5 from the foul line for a total of 16 points. He also grabbed off 11 rebounds to lead the 'Cats in that department.

Villanova's victory surge hits its peak with 2:17 remaining when the Wildcats opened up an 18 point spread and matched it again with 1:23 left, 86-68.

With the throng in a deafening uproar, Kraft began to substitute at this point—the Mountaineer was DEAD and the Wildcat was KING. It was the 14th straight victory for 'Cats in the Palestra this season.

Villanova now faces NYU Friday night at College Park. The Violets outscrapped Massachusetts, 70-50, in the opening game. Wake Forest, by virtue of its overtime 92-82 win over Yale, will face MAC champ St. Joseph's, in the other game. The winners will meet Saturday to determine the Eastern champ and the Louisville berth.

Hubie White (14) seems to be engulfed by arms as West Virginia's Gale Catlett (22) and Tom Lowry (25) attempt to block his shot. The action occured in Monday's N.C.A.A. elimnations which saw Villanova thrash the Mountaineers 90-75. (Photo by the Evening Bulletin)

McDonough To Lead Swim Team In ECAC Competition At Yale

Coach Ed Geisz will send four members of the Villanova swimming team to the ECAC Championships on March 15, 16, and 17 at Yale University.

Senior Don Reed will swim the 200 yard individual medley. Al Hicks, under the tutelage of Geisz for seven years is entered in the 200 yard backstroke.

Sophomore Dick McDonough, the Wildcats top threat, will swim in both the 200 and 100 yard butterfly. Another sophomore, Jack Geoghegan is expected to place in the 100 yard freestyle.

Double Threat

McDonough, who may capture a double win in New Haven, tied the 100 yard American Long Course record with one turn in 56.6 seconds at the Trenton Times Meet, which was the first team title ever won by a Villanova swimming team. He holds a 2:02.5 in the 200 yard butterfly. Dick also placed fifth in the same event after leading for the first 150 yards at the National AAU meet in Los Angeles last summer.

The Mainline swimmers will face stiff competition from Yale, Harvard, and Princeton, Army, and Navy. The last three schools have already downed the Wildcats in duel meets this year.

Jod Graeff and Gardner Greene of Princeton lead the field in the 100 yard backstroke and breaststroke with Austin of Yale favored to take the 100 yard freestyle in record time.

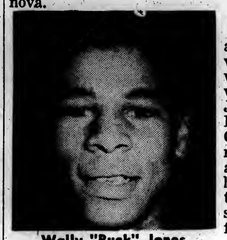
Have Guns, Will Shoot



by Joe Zawacki

Maybe it was the dinner that caused it; or maybe the strain of sitting through 5 1/2 hours of basketball on the soft Palestra cushions. But anyway, "I had the craziest dream last night." Someone should write a song about that.

It was a real wild dream. Remember when we were kids and the big event of evening on your spanking new TV set was a show that was usually titled something like "Frontier Playhouse"? Well, here I am in the arms of Morpheus and the show starts. Fade in the villain.

The OK Palestra

The chief baddies (as he was invariably called) was usually the best actor in the show, someone like Douglas Fowley. He had to be the best so that we could boo and hiss him properly. Let's say his name was Rod Thorn and he had walked into the Palestra bar looking to shoot down his hated enemies, the ranch hands from that place on the Pecos, Villanova.

Wally "Buck" Jones

Being young and impressionable, we weren't yet to the point where we knew that the goodies would triumph in the end. Thus we were concerned for foreman Jack Kraft's top three hands, Buck (Wally) Jones, Tim McCoy (Hubie White) and Raymond Hatton (Jim McMonagle). Each of these three hombres are handy men around the ranch, but how were they supposed to face up against the fastest gun in the East?

The scriptwriters didn't help our quandry either. That varmint Thorn started out like he was going to wipe up the Palestra floor with the whole Villanova crowd and ruin their chance to take the herd of cattle to Louisville for the big payoff. In fact, things seemed so bad halfway through the show that we had to retreat to the machine in the back and fill up with some Jujy Fruits.

But then it was time for our side to get their licks in, so that the 9200 kids in the theater could stand up and scream invectives at rancher King's dastardly crew. This was when Buck (oops, I mean Wally) proved his mettle. A reel western hero could take on two villians with his fists, another with a gun, and pat his horse and girl affectionately at the same time.

Tough Hombre

This Jones guy is no slouch either. He empties his gun with 17 shots (it's a special gun) and 13 times, he hits his mark. In between, he dispatched a few assists to his pardners and generally harasses the baddies. He's probably the toughest hombre to work the Villanova ranch since that Arizin fellow took off into the sunset a few years back with those Indians.

But just as Buck Jones couldn't get the whole thing done by himself, our Jones boy has got the proper help also. When

The Tenth Annual Shamokinaki Dance, benefiting the Augustinian Foreign Missions in Japan, and the only Villanova social event during Lent, will be held this Friday in the Field House from 9:00 p.m. until 1:00 a.m.

"Decorations, prizes, entertainment, and favors will surpass those of last year's dance," stated General Chairman Ken Horn. Dance music for the affair, traditionally one of the most successful dances of the social year, will be provided by the popular "Villanovans." During intermission, the T-Tones, an eleven-member singing group from Rosemont, will entertain.

Harmonically Perfect

Praised as "harmonically perfect" by Toby DeLuca, music director of WFIL, the T-Tones were organized in 1952. Originally a part of the Rosemont College glee club, and now under the direction of Nancy DeVito, a senior, they are composed of eleven members who must audition to qualify. They have performed in New York at the Hotel Statler's Cafe Rouge, and have won acclaim from "Downbeat" magazine.

The T-Tones have recently completed a record for RCA which is now available in the University Shop. Five hundred albums were produced, and recording expenses were financed by their Rosemont colleagues.

Late Permission

As in past years, late permission for the girls from local colleges who will attend the dance, has been granted. Tickets, costing $2.50 per couple, will be on sale for the remainder of the week in the Pie Shoppe, and will be available at the dance.

Refreshments, including free potato chips and pretzels, will be served. Souvenir favors and programs will be distributed to all couples attending. A Japanese tea set will be awarded at the dance as a door prize, and twenty other prizes will be given out to those holding lucky programs.

Council Gets Consent Senior Car Privilege Extension Is Granted

An extension of the present senior car privilege to seven days has been approved by the Administration. In commenting on this long-sought concession, Mal Carton, co-chairman of the Student Council's Student Activities Committee, stated that "this privilege is the culmination of four years of concerted effort of the Student Council in seeking and pursuing the interests of the Villanova student body."

The former privilege was instituted in 1958, and stipulated that approved seniors could maintain cars on campus for weekends only. This year, of 85 seniors applying for Administration approval, 55 were accepted and 35 were rejected while 8 have lost this right due to various abuses.

The Student Council, however, in behalf of those students who felt the need for an extended and more comprehensive plan, sought for four years to obtain this recent permission.

Reasons for Refusal

Seaborg Heads Speaker List At Mendel Hall Dedication

Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg, former Nobel Prize winner and Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, will be the principal speaker for the dedication ceremonies of Villanova University's new Science and Research Center, Mendel Hall, on Saturday, April 7.

Dr. Seaborg will speak during exercises in the University Field House which begin at 11:00 a.m. Other speakers include the Honorable John Morgan Davis, Lieutenant Governor of the State of Pennsylvania, and Most Rev. Francis J. Furey, Auxiliary Bishop of Philadelphia.

Blessing of the huge four-and-a-half-million dollar structure will take place at 12:30 p.m. with the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, OSA, Chairman of Villanova's Board of Trustees, presiding.

Very Rev. James A Donnellon . . . to preside

Mendel Hall is named for Gregor Johann Mendel, the Augustinian Monk whose 19th century research gave to the world the Mendelian Laws of Heredity. Mendel was a member of the same religious order which conducts Villanova and some 40 other educational institutions throughout the world.

Seaborg was co-discoverer in 1940 of plutonium, the first of a number of transuranium elements he was to help discover in the next 18 years. He has also played a key role in the identification of more than 100 isotopes of elements.

Dr. Seaborg was given a leave of absence from the University of California in 1942 to head the vital plutonium work of the Manhattan project at the University of Chicago which led to the development of the atom bomb.

Students Invited

Students are invited to the dedication exercises, especially to those in the Field House in the morning.

Senator Joseph Clark To Address Students On Current Subjects

The Academic Affairs Committee, under the direction of Thomas O'Connor, announced that it will present Senator Joseph Clark, Pennsylvania Democratic Congressman, as the speaker in the last lecture of the current Student Council series.

Senator Clark will speak on topics of national and international importance and current event in the houses of national legislature.

The speech will be held in Vasey Hall auditorium at eight o'clock, April 1.

Maynard Ferguson Featured In Junior Week Jazz Program

The Junior Class of Villanova University has recently announced that a Jazz Concert will take place as a part of Junior Week, featuring the Maynard Ferguson Orchestra and the Four Lads. The concert will take place on Friday evening, May 4, and will be held in the Villanova Field House.

Junior Preference Tickets

Junior Class President Jim Tate and Tom Semmer have stated that Junior Preference tickets will go on sale April 2, and will continue through April 6. During this period, only members of the Junior Class may purchase tickets. Juniors must present their matriculation cards when purchasing the tickets. Tickets will be made available to the entire student body between April 9 and April 17, after which they will go on sale to the general public.

Extended Stage

Students are advised to make their purchases as early as possible, since the tickets are being printed according to sections. No section will be over-sold, thereby giving the preference of seats to those who purchase their tickets early. Field House balcony tickets are $2.00 and orchestra tickets are $2.50.

Anyone interested in being an usher should contact John Ellis in room 222 Sheehan Hall.

It is interesting to note that this is the first concert to be presented as a part of a Villanova Junior Week. With the signing of Maynard Ferguson and the Four Lads, the Junior Class has inaugurated what they hope might turn into an annual event.

Tutoring Services Will Begin March 21

The Student Tutor Program will hold its semesterly registration between March 21 and 29 in Dougherty Hall. The program is being conducted this semester by Jim McErlane and Jim Friel of the Academic Affairs Committee of Student Council.

All work will be finished and everyone will be contacted before April 5. Those students who sign up for assistance will be notified as soon as the tutors' names are submitted.

Students desiring to register before or after the regular registration dates will be accommodated in the Student Council Office in Dougherty Hall.

Rehearsals Begin As Turf and Tinsel Club Restages Past Comedy

The Turf 'n' Tinsel Club is in rehearsal for its spring production, "The Man in the Gray Flannel Toga." In commenting upon the turnout for auditions, club president Joe Ruggiero stated that on the whole he was pleased with the turnout but emphasized that there are still openings in minor spots and in the chorus.

The entire cast is very optimistic about the production, with the consensus of opinion that it is one of the funniest T 'n' T plots yet created.

Madison Avenue Dream

Briefly, Wilbur Tilford, a typical Madison Avenue Junior executive, falls asleep in a local museum to be awakened on Mt. Olympus. In true Madison Avenue fashion it is not very long before he becomes involved in a big promotion scheme to boost a "used chariot sale." In the process he involves himself with the gods Zeus, Aphrodite, Athena, Hermes, and Bacchus, and eventually is unable to resist the "classical advances" of Athena. To satisfy her and promote his chariot sale, Tilford decides to participate in the Olympics. When glory is his he returns all too soon to the twentieth century.

The roles of his Olympic companions in the first T 'n' T presentation were filled appropriately by Don Bragg and Ron Delaney, when the duo made their VU theater debuts.

Behind WWVU Radio

Few students stop to consider what is entailed in keeping a radio station in top running order and who else besides the announcer is responsible for the finished product—the well-aired musical, news, or panel program. As vital to the functioning of the radio station as the managing editor is to the newspaper is the chief engineer. Villanova's contribution to this corps of the unsung is Mark Devaney, Chief Engineer of WWVU.

Mark, now in his fourth year of five-year mechanical engineering course, is responsible for a good deal of behind-scenes work, such as obtaining new equipment and repairing the old, and co-ordinating all the activities of the station's engineering staff.

Optimistic on FM

Among his—and his staff's—more recent efforts is the formulation of plans for the possible WWVU-FM technical operation. Quite optimistic, he commented that "the only things in the way now are licenses and some equipment."

Complementing his other duties, Mark was co-editor of the WWVU Equipment Instruction Manual, an engineer's handbook with complete instruction for running the console and the tape recorder. The manual is so designed that practically any intelligent student could easily run the set-up.

Future Engineer

Devaney, who calls Mamarock, New York, his home, is also in the Sailing Club, and for three years he was a member of the Villanova Band. An NROTC-man, the Navy is in his more immediate future. Mechanical engineering will come later.

The chief studio engineer for two years before he became Chief Engineer, Mark expressed his feeling on some of the credits of the FM: "If and when FM comes to Villanova, the student deejays will gain more than a working knowledge in actual radio, and the engineering staff will gain the added responsibility and practical experience necessary should they decide to continue in the communications field."

First History Talk Next Wednesday With Malik On 'South Asia'

The History and Political Science Department of Villanova will present its annual Spring Lecture Series by members of departmental faculty. The theme for the 1962 series is "Current Problems in American Foreign Policy."

The first lecture on March 28 features Professor Hafeez Malik who will speak on the "American Foreign Policy and South Asia."

The second and third lectures will be given by Professor Joseph H. Nevins and Professor John J. Logue. All lectures will begin at 7:30 in Room 110, C&F.

Mueller Clarifies Conference

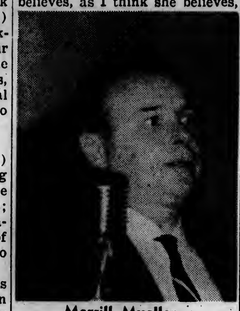
Edward M. Graham

Merrill Mueller, NBC news commentator, addressed the third Student Council forum of this year on the topic of the Geneva Conference, presently in session. As Mr. Mueller stated at the beginning of his speech, he could not limit himself to the problem of disarmament when in reality the Geneva Conference itself was not limiting itself to this singular problem. Rather, his speech not only included disarmament but entailed a comprehensive and informative survey of the world's major trouble areas.

In regard to disarmament, Mr. Mueller presented the three basic demands of both the United States and the Soviet Union. The United States represented by Secretary of State Dean Rusk has set forth these demands: 1) limitation in the size of stockpiles, and a freeze on their growth; 2) suspension of the production of nuclear weapons, and the disposál of conventional arms; 3) a joint police force to enforce these two.

Soviet Demands

The Soviet demands are: 1) total destruction of existing weapons; 2) cessation of the production of nuclear weapons; 3) destruction of all other weapons. It is on the last point of the United States that the two are unable to agree.



Mr. Mueller stated that it was the United States, in the person of Mr. Rusk, that was taking and is holding the initiative in these talks. Mr. Rusk, by placing a deadline on his personal participation, and President Kennedy, by placing a deadline on the resumption of United States atmospheric nuclear testing, have been able to place the burden of the consequences of the meeting of these deadlines on the shoulders of the Soviets.

Source Information

In regard to nuclear testing in general, Mr. Mueller stated that he has "yet to be convinced that nuclear testing would be damaging to unborn generations." He cited the case history of the ABCC (American Bomb Control Commission) which has been examining for the last 17 years the effects that radiation has had on the 100,000 Japanese inhabitants closest to the bomb explosions, yet who have survived and were not immediately maimed.

The results of the weekly checkups that these people have been receiving show that they and the children born to them have been completely normal.

His second reason for believing that the United States should continue testing underground and resume atmospheric testing was the "simple fact that, as long as Russia has the bomb and believes, as I think she believes,

Merrill Mueller
. . . on Geneva

that the United States will disarm first in order to preserve the peace, should be sufficient reason for us to begin full scale testing. We must convince the Russians that we are not only sincere in our desire for peace but that we are also sincere in our commitments to the free world."

Berlin Problem

In regard to the Berlin problem, Mr. Mueller suggested the adoption of the "Rapacki plan which was composed back in 1952 by the present Polish Foreign Minister, and calls for the creation of a neutral zone running across central Europe from Norway to Greece. "What we often forget," stated Mr. Mueller, "is that Berlin is indeed the bone in the Communist throat, and is a cancer, but that the Soviet Union while keeping the squeeze on would stop short of a major war."

Major Considerations

Mr. Mueller went on to summarize what he believed were the major problems confronting the Soviet Union. The Russian populace, now with the impetus of a higher standard of living, is just as concerned over Leningrad and Moscow as we are over the fate of Washington or New York in the event of a nuclear war. This, added to the recent development in the "tactical split" between Red China and the Soviet Union in carrying out their designs on the world, are major considerations in the formation of their foreign policy, and amount to substantial problems.

In closing, Mr. Mueller stated that if Geneva should fail we still have the recourse that, since Geneva talks were convened by the U.N., we could reconvene the talks by a General Assembly motion that would "place Russia in such a position that her true stand in regard to disarmament would become known either by her acceptance or rejection of the General Assembly motion. We must not forget that now the pressure is on the Soviets and we can neither chicken out nor relent in our efforts" concluded the speech and brought the attending 250 students to a standing ovation.

A brief question and answer period followed.

Class Nominations Scheduled

The junior, sophomore, and freshmen classes will make their nominations for next year's student council representatives this Thursday, March 22. The nominations will be taken at three different campus locations, to be made known beforehand by the Student Council.

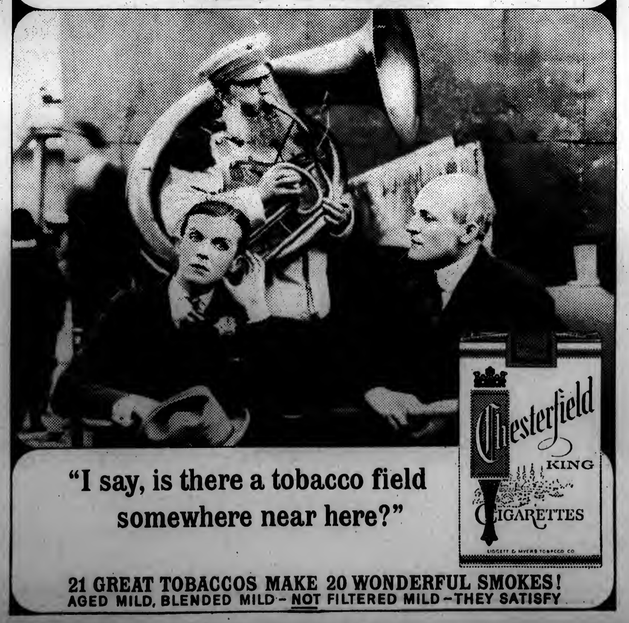
The juniors, who are nominating for their senior year representatives, are eligible for six representatives plus one alumni representative.

On April 12

The six representatives, who will be elected at the general elections on April 12, will represent the three divisions of the school. The Arts and Sciences, Engineering, and Commerce and Finance divisions will have a day hop and a resident to represent them in the Student Council.

The sophomores will be making nominations for six representatives who will also come from these three divisions—one day hop and one resident from each division. The freshman class nominees will be vying for the two representative seats in Student Council: one delegate represents the day hops of next year's sophomore class; the other, the residents.

The Nurses will be nominating a sophomore candidate who will serve as a representative on the Council in her junior year.



Qualifications

Qualifications for a nominee to be eligible for the general elections are as follows: the nominee must have a minimum cumulative average of 2.5; he must have approval of the Dean of Men, and the Dean of Student Activities; he must have a good chapel record. Moreover, he must pass the eligibility test administered by the Council and must be nominated by a member of his class and division.

It should be noted that the Student Council test is considerably more difficult than in previous years, and that the candidate will have to have first-hand knowledge of the Constitution of the Student Council and of parliamentary procedure. Material for both of these will be furnished to the candidates by the Student Council.

The nervous relatives were all gathered in the lawyers office early, waiting for him to read Uncle Jasper's will. The lawyer read: "Being of sound mind, I spent all my money."

Vacation Views

Much speculation has been aired concerning the brevity of the Easter vacation period for Villanovans this year.

Due to a change in the compulsory retreat schedule for all classes, the dates originally selected do not now apply. Instead of taking the retreats during the semester break or Easter vacation, students now take their retreats with their respective classes on four different week-ends.

As an apparent result of this change, the Easter vacation has been shortened to just six days. The vacation will run from last class on Wednesday until first class on Tuesday.

It might also be noted that last year's vacation ran ten days covering actually six ordinary class-days and two weekends. Original plans for this year, drawn up a year ago, were exactly the same.

Now under the new change, the student loses one day, remembering the Friday of his weekend retreat.

The Easter vacation used to offer students time in which to either work, travel, catch up with their studies, or relax.

One conjecture for the shorter vacation and the exclusion of one weekend due to the three class days is that it was hoped that a damper could be placed on students venturing into Fort Lauderdale. The difficulties and disorder encountered there have been recognized by university authorities.

But, it also seems that these students have a few, if any, worries about cutting three days (as at Villanova) or even more. In proportion to its enrollment, not many Villanovans do engage in the Florida escapes.

Both the resident and the day-hop at Villanova have legitimate complaints against the new vacation calendar.

The resident contends that he does not have much time at home. It is furthermore impossible for both to work during the Eastertime. For some students who live at a distance, there is no easy or quick method to go home unless by expensive jet. Otherwise, two of the six days off are spent traveling.

Libraries are not open and with the pre-Easter services, little study can be accomplished. This point also applies to residents.

If, however, the two days which are received off after Easter were shifted to the previous week, there would be only one day of class, Monday during that week. Students could cut this day if they wanted to work or travel and also have the preceding weekend as part of their break.

Since their is also a one day variance, it might be hoped that Monday be included as part of the vacation as once planned.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

The VILLANOVAN deserves warm congratulations for its March 14 discussion of theology in university education. It is heartening to see brought into the daylight an appraisal of issues surely of concern to all, issues that might otherwise be debauched by derisory comments, often factually baseless as well as logically inept, spewed out behind closed doors. A welcome contribution like this may, in addition, help give the lie to the brainlessly parrotted myth that the ideal Catholic student shrinks in oldmaidish horror from any thought deviating from a servile worship of the academic status quo. It goes without saying that these and the remarks that follow represent the personal impressions of this writer alone.

The tone and spirit strike this observer as especially commendable. The article, successfully resisting the temptation to crude distortion or cheap epigram, never once descends from its lofty, deliberately nonprovocative mode of analysis. Objective and dispassionate throughout, it gains rather than suffers in intellectual vigor for being garbed in a restrained, emotionless style. Throughout also there breathes a Christian spirit of firm but gentle reason whose conclusion essentially never outstrips the data adduced in the premises. Perhaps more than one reader may find this austere loyalty to reason remarkable in an Age of Unreason wherein softheaded question-begging and hardheaded prejudice do proxy for proof.

Though the content seems by and large satisfactory, it is not captious to call attention to neglected matters that qualify, without nullifying, some of the major points made.

(i) The lack of an adequate philosophic training among many students forms an almost insuperable obstacle to the uniformly excellent presentation of theology. As the science of faith, theology relies on philosophic instruments no less indispensable for its understanding than is advanced mathematics for modern physics. Yet course requirements foreclose for many access to the philosophy basic to the theological program envisioned.

(ii) The greater stress on theology called for would mean more course hours. This increase, however, would in turn entail dropping some other courses, or if these be retained, a larger class hour load would tend to downgrade these courses, along with theology, in the eyes of accrediting agencies.

(iii) There is no casual connection between alleged deficiencies in theology instruction and student sloth. Were everyone's fondest desires concerning theology everywhere realized, students long practiced in idleness would continue their pursuit of sub-bovine interests. The barbarian within the gates, who hails a championship team as the acme of academic achievement, will not vanish no matter how thorough any curricular revision.

Again, it is encouraging to hear Catholic students thinking out loud in a sane manner on problems of the Queen of the Sciences. May the adult concern exhibited in this article stay with you not only in the groves of Academe but, more importantly, in the hot, dusty marketplace in the years ahead.

To the Editor:

I want to commend the writer of the second in the series of editorials on Catholic education. The analysis of the various factors involved was rather fair and temperate and quite mature.

There are some extracurricular considerations which I feel could contribute much to this fruitful discussion at Villanova:

1) informal theological sessions with prefects in the resident halls.

2) the extensive program carried on by the University Chaplain and his assistant,

3) the fact that the Religious Department personnel teach all undergraduate students in all four years in all divisions.

It is most encouraging to me to see in the VILLANOVAN such vivid interest in what Our Lord described as "the one thing necessary."

Catholic Education

The purpose of a Catholic education, as we stated last week, is to impart to the student an active awareness of his relationship to God, coupled with sound academic training. It is this latter area that concerns us now.

As far as material fulfillment is concerned, we must look at Catholic education in light of how well it helps a student prepare for this life. In this regard, Catholic education has drawn a great deal of criticism for turning out second rate graduates. While this is of questionable validity, we believe that today Catholic education is faced with many serious problems.

One of the most pressing of these problems is that of numbers. In recognition of its moral obligation, Catholicism tries to educate as many qualified people as it possibly can. With the enormous increase in both the size of the Catholic population and its proportional desire to obtain a sound education, Catholic educators are faced with the problem of having their schools become mass producing, mental factories. Taken to its logical conclusion, it seems that this would almost certainly result in mediocre graduates.

Efforts are being made to meet this problem! efforts that must both continue and increase. Instead of letting the increasing numbers drag down the educaional sandards, he general level of these standards must be raised to meet the demands of today's world. The recent elevation of the admission requirements here at Villanova gives evidence of attempts to do this.

Classroom requirements have become stiffer in recent years but they must get even more demanding if Catholic students are to be able to compete for the best jobs. Catholic education must care for its great numbers but it must also see to it that the diplomas that it awards are worth more than the cost of their printing.

This problem of numbers has another side to it that is just as important as the first. In this century, American education has followed a general pattern, dictated by the introduction of erroneous application of the principles of democracy into the field of education. This has led to the neglect of many of our more gifted minds to the point of waste. This has been equally true in many Catholic institutions.

This neglect of a small number of exceptional students cannot continue if Catholicism hopes to regain its leadership of intellectual thought. These neglected students are the very ones that will carry out this resurgence. They must be given every opportunity to develop their minds to the limits of their capabilities.

Villanova's Honor's Program is a positive step in this direction. But this is by no means sufficient. Greater efforts must be made to educate these students at a faster, but individual rate and to increase the number of better students that are able to be included in these programs.

One additional step that might possibly be initiated is a Tutor system for qualified Juniors and Seniors. This would not only help them to advance more rapidly but also to gain access to areas of thought that are denied to them under the classroom system. If not this, then other programs must be tried to find the intellectual gap for these students and to take advantage of their talents.

Another troublesome area for Catholic education is the financial burden. This has received a great deal of attention lately due to the efforts being made to give Federal aid to education. There seems to be some question as to the constitutionality of direct aid to Catholic education. This may be strictly true. But if Catholic education is to continue to play the vital role that it does in he American educational system, some form of financial consideration must be made for it. Catholics cannot be asked to bear increasingly excessive financial burdens to support educational institutions that are so important to the rest of the country.

These are only two of the many problems that Catholic education must successfully meet if it is to continue to be an important influencing factor in American life. In the coming weeks, we will continue to look at the other problems.

Mendel Hall Becomes Science Milestone

Designed to meet the complex challenges of the Atomic Age, the new jet-lined Science Building at Villanova University is equipped to handle the most highly specialized research problems, and to offer maximum space for the University's greatly enlarged enrollment of students in basic science studies.

Stonework Adorns

The concrete frame of the new, air conditioned Science Building is partly sheathed with stonework to match the other campus buildings and partly with aluminum window walls formed of glass panels and Alberene Stone.

Composed of two wings, linked with a bridge of classrooms above the first floor and by a fully excavated basement below, the new building is located directly between the Library and Naval Science Building. The four story high west wing is parallel to the Pennsylvania Railroad at Villanova Station. The five story high east wing is perpendicular to the west wing.

The architects and engineers worked closely with the Augustinian Fathers and other members of the Science Department of the Faculty of Villanova University to produce plans for the building.

Thoroughly Discussed

Present and future needs of the Science Faculties were thoroughly discussed and these needs were incorporated in the plans. Materials were carefully chosen to minimize maintenance costs and to create an efficient and cheerful environment for serious studies.

Above the handsome main entrance are symbols representing the basic sciences carved into Indiana Limestone panels. The sumptuous lobby on the first floor of the west wing has walls of Italian Cremo Marble and a Terrazzo floor.

The Biology Department is located on the ground floor and first floors, with a science museum and general administration offices. The second and third floors are occupied by the Chemistry Department in this wing.

Hot Lab

A hot laboratory for the study of radioactive materials and a computer room are located on the ground floor of the east wing. Other physics and mathematics classrooms, laboratories, and offices are located in this wing which is capped by the planetarium, observation terrace and telescope of the Astronomy Department.

Mendel Hall is the most imposing of the ten new buildings added to the campus since 1945. It covers 162,000 square feet and contains 30 classrooms ranging in size from 30 to 180 seats.

A special feature is an atomic physics laboratory complete with nuclear reactor. Much of the equipment in this laboratory was made available by assistance from the Atomic Energy Commision.

General Contractors for the new building were Nason & Cullen, Inc. Supervising Architect was Albert Dagit Associates.

The science building is named after Gregor Mendel, an Augustinian monk.

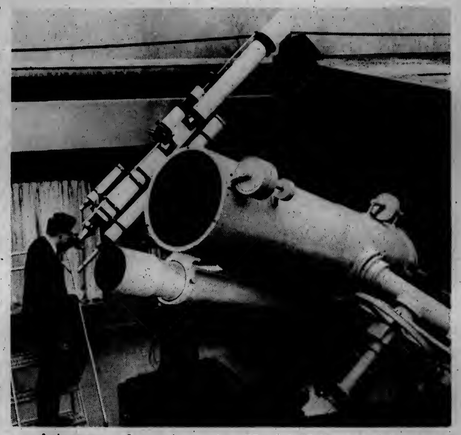
The name Gregor Johann Mendel, the great scientist whose research has given to the world the Mendelian Laws of Heredity, has always had special significance for the priests, faculty, students, and alumni of Villanova University.

For Gregor Mendel was a humble Augustinian priest, a member of the same religious order which conducts Villanova and nearly forty other educational institutions throughout the world.

It was just one hundred years ago that he was engaged in the scientific observations which he had begun in 1854. The results of that work were published in the 1860's in papers read before the Natural History Society of Brunn, Austria where Father Mendel was the Abbot of an Augustinian Monastery.

The Gregor Mendel who experimented with strains of a common vegetable in the shadow of an abbey chapel is now an internationally important figure in biology. In a stricter sense Mendel might be called the "complete scientist" because he was learned in mathematics and physics as well as biology.

Scientific Mind



He had a mind favorable to scientific accuracy and thanks to his exact records the world is indebted to him for what we properly call the Mendelian Laws. Moreover, the precision of his experiments makes him very conclusively a figure sympathetic to the methods of modern science.

Now, a century later, the name Mendel will be honored in a special way on Villanova's campus. The University's new multi-million dollar science and research center will be named for the humble monk.

The mammoth structure will be dedicated on April 7 during appropriate ceremonies. Mendel Hall houses the University's Departments of Astronomy, Biology, Chemistry, Mathematics and Physics.

Symbols representing the five basic sciences—Biology, Chemistry, Mathematics, Astronomy, and Physics—appear above the main entrance of Mendel Hall.

Astronomy observatory atop Mendel Hall, new science and research center at Villanova University. Sliding roof permits the free operation of the latest telescopic equipment. Here students operate 16 inch reflector scope (right) and 6 inch refractor telescope. Instruments, which cost nearly $25,000, are used for day time as well as night time observation.

This observatory, along with the planetarium, are presently open to the public during special shows being presented by the Astronomy Department, the next show scheduled for March 30.

A 90 Proof Reality

by Pete Nolan

I'd like to talk a little bit about drunks. I mean the real down-and-out rolling-in-the-gutter type. These are the people you've all seen at one time or another, begging a quarter for a cup of coffee, when everybody knows that a cup of coffee is still only a dime and a glass of wine isn't. But drunks are funny people. They've really got a lot to say. You can't trust a drunk to hold down any type of job, but somehow, almost ingeniously, he manages to stay drunk for most of his waking hours.

I used to know this guy, who used to own a bar, and he catered exclusively to drunks. This place was the Toots Shor's of the bottom-of-the-barrel drinkers. There was no race barrier, no class distinction, no differences whatsoever.

There was this guy named Dumpy who always used to be in there. He never took a drink or at least no one ever thought he did. The boss would let him tend bar and even open the place up some mornings. This idea that Dumpy was playing the straight and narrow turned out to be a big mistake. Somehow Dumpy was getting his nips in, behind everybody's back, and one day he checked out with a couple bottles of gin and the contents of the till. The funny thing about it is that Dumpy came back about a year later and nobody was really mad.

By this time the reader is probably wondering what all this business about drunks is all about. It's really kind of difficult to explain. A drunk is probably the only person in the world who'll admit to you that he's a real good-for-nothing bum. He'd probably cheat his best friend for a drink, but both of them know it, and that doesn't make them any less friendly. And finally to wrap it all up, you might say that a woman is just a woman, but a good drunk is a reality.

A Market For Mediocrity

by Joe Zawacki

There's a record on the stereo now. It's a new LP called "Point Of No Return" and the artist is supposed to be Frank Sinatra. It stinks!!!

What? Heresy! Imagine anyone having the gall to say anything bad about "our Frank." Why, he's the "Chairman of the Board," leader of the Clan, heartthrob of millions of star-struck, naive girls and boys. He can do no wrong.

Unfortunately, Sinatra can do things wrong. In addition, he can do things badly. Four of his last five LP's (the sixth hasn't been heard sufficiently for criticism) have been excursions into indifferences and his last three movies (two of which featured the Clan) have been embarrassingly painful.

Still The Best

Is Sinatra losing his magical touch? Doubtful. Very doubtful. The man is still undoubtedly the greatest talent in the country and when he wants to, he can be more charming than the Pied Piper of Hamelin. Witness the brilliant Reprise ablum, "I Remember Tommy," in which he collaborates with Sy Oliver on 12 of the tastiest tracks heard in quite some time.

But there's the answer. Or at least a clue. Sinatra works when he feels like it, and the quality of his output seems to vary enough to satisfy a chameleon. You see, he doesn't have to put out quality. He's got a ready made market of worshipers who will gobble up anything that he produces, no questions asked.

As far as this writer is concerned, the whole thing is comically ludicrous. I don't blame Sinatra. If he can get away with it, more power to him. It just amazes me that people who will scream at an increase of a transit fare can turn around and accept something that is not of the quality that it should be.

Higher Standard

Now, admittedly, inferior Sinatra is superior to many other artists' performances, but that's not the point. The question is, should the buying market purchase something that is not up to the standard associated with it? I remember when I was a kid, I always looked forward to seeing Stan Musial and Ted Williams come to town. They were the greatest, and accordingly, when one or the other drew the collar on a particular night, it was more disappointing than if a .230 hitter had done the same.

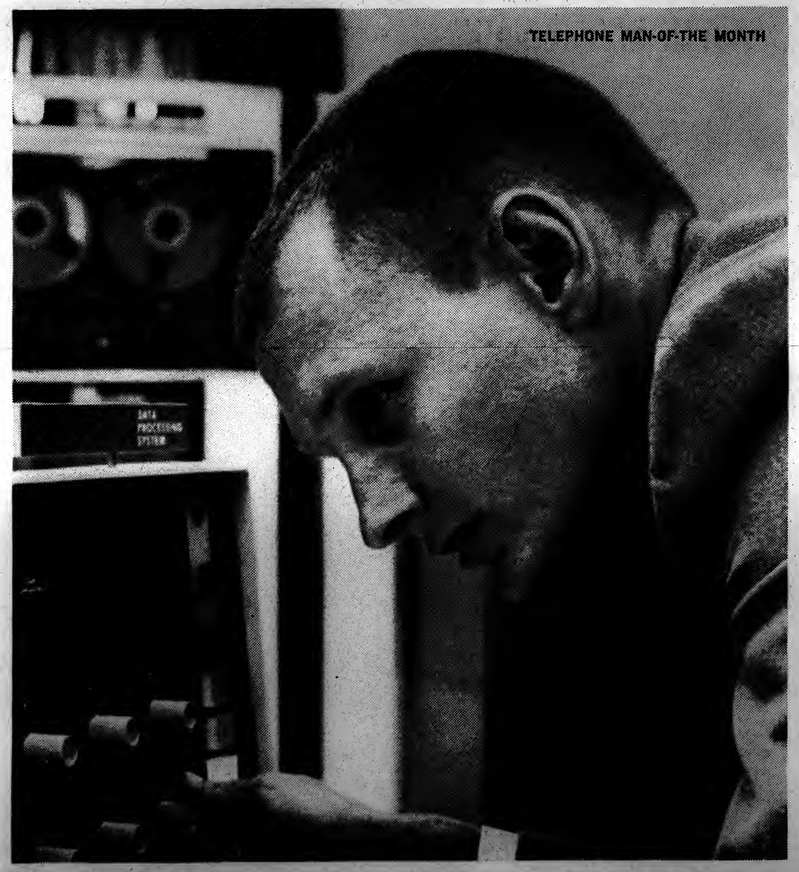
The same way in Jazz. Ellington is almost synonymous with greatness. So it should be with Sinatra. It was only a decade ago that he fought his way from near oblivion to the top of the perch. To do it, he had to recapture all his lost fans and create new ones. The series of albums produced at Capitol with Nelson Riddle and Billy May, coupled with his movie performances, were marked with constant quality. It made him rich, and the greatest hero-conscious country in the world had another.

The Leader

With his growth, Sinatra apparently felt stifled by his Capitol contract. So he broke out on his own and formed Reprise. However, he still had to fulfill his obligations to his former company. One of these masterpieces was entitled "Sinatra's Swinging Session", with the lengths of the various tracks running around 1:50 and the quality approximately the same. One Capitol man related how Sinatra and his crew walked into one of these historic sessions late; the master said something to the effect "let's get the damn thing over with," and proceeded to rip through the session in Olympic time.

It was expected that the releases on his own label would fare better. Financially, they did. Only the "Tommy" album made it quality-wise. The movies were worse. The two clan movies were beautiful examples of American status - symbolizing. With the supreme members tripping over the absurd banal scripts, the audience howled with delight. They were now "in." I actually heard one girl coo to her date, "Aren't they just wonderful together. I saw in a magazine that they're just like that in real life."

If you told the girl that she had been sold a bill of goods, it wouldn't have done any good. If she could answer without gushing all over the place, she would probably have pointed out all the people in the theater, which is really the sad part.



It looks like Barnum's remarks about a sucker being born every monute still holds . . . only now the ratio has increased.

The Philosophy of Conservatism

by William H. Kelly

The philosophy of Conservatism is a philosophy of freedom. It is the acceptance of certain absolutes and the rejection of systems which do not hold to the idea of absolutes.

Specifically, Conservatism rejects any political system which contains either Pragmatism, Positivism or Relativism. Since Conservatism is a philosophy of freedom, it must also reject the collectivistic ideas of Liberalism, Socialism, or Communism.

To explore the beliefs of Conservatism, let us postulate the absolutes necessary for the Conservative. First there is the apodictical truth that God exists. Having once established this, it is an easy matter to proceed to the necessity of an absolute moral code.

Hence the Conservative believes that society is ruled by Divine intent and that there exist certain unrevocable laws, both physical and moral, which we call truth and are above society. Therefore, man ought to act in accordance with this fact and should not construct his society, laws, and customs to conflict with it. All political problems are, in essence, moral problems and hence man cannot be given the choice between a moral and legal code at variance with each other, for havoc will ensue.

Man's End

The end of man should then be in accordance with the above objective. The Conservative believes that man should be free, but he rejects freedom as the end of human existence. It is the objective order that man should strive to realize, and in doing this man must, of necessity, have free choice. However, choice of a good is something which can only take place when there is free will. A moral decision can best be made in an atmosphere of political freedom.

When man is politically free, he then can make moral decisions and seek moral absolutes. Virtue, good, or the right choice is the end of a given action, and freedom is the instrument which serves this end.

It is a truism that men without values are willing to trade their freedom for material benefits. This tendency results in an increasing role of the state which seeks to supplement value. Correspondingly, the rise of the state is accompanied with a decline of individual ability to withstand the state.

Hence, the harmony to be achieved is one which will permit human freedom to flourish as much as possible and yet allow government to perform its legitimate functions.

In order to exercise his freedom most effectively, the Conservative seeks a form of government which will least interfere with freedom. He seeks, as our forefathers sought, a government which will not make him dependent upon it for his existence and one which will not usurp his power of choice.

He seeks limited government and maximum freedom. For these reasons a Conservative cannot abide with an authoritarian or collectivistic type of government which seeks to tell people what is good for them, nor can he avoid with a democracy, if by that term one means the will of the people and nothing else.

No "Democratic" Progress

Reason teaches that the majority of the people will not always be right and history has shown that such injustices as the Crucifixion and the Salem Witch Trials had the sanction of the majority. Another reason why a Conservative opposes a democracy is that it is not conducive to progress, for progress has always been the result of extreme minority opinion.

Consider what majority rule can do to the ideas of say a Socrates in any given age. Majority rule of itself will always tend to abolish all who dissent. In lieu of this, the Conservative stands for a government which will protect the rights of a minority and protect those who disagree with the will of the majority. Conservatism seeks and finds a republican form of government like ours.

Our type of government represents the living belief of the Conservative. For this reason a Conservative rejects the intrusions of the liberals to usurp powers belonging to individuals, states, or even those of one branch of government and also rejects the perversion of a legitimate function of government for some utopian idea.

Perverted Government

Such a perversion of a legitimate government function is illustrated by a leading liberal, John K. Galbraith, in his book The Affluent Society. He states that "The rational liberal, in the future, will resist tax reduction, even that which ostensibly favors the poor, if it is at the price of social balance. And for the same reason, he will not hesitate to accept increases that are neutral as regards the distribution of income . . . There is work here enough for any egalitarian crusader."

Now the Conservative can in no way accept this, for the power of taxation is to be used to support the legitimate functions of government and not to insure the social balance or redistribution of the income. This branch of government, and also opposition arises from the nature of man himself. Man is equal only in the eyes of God and is not meant to be politically or economically equal. Any attempts to create political or economic equality must be rejected because man is not perfectible.

Summary

Probably the best summary of Conservative political thought is found in the last two social encyclals of the Church Quadragesimo Anno and Mater et Magistra in which is enunciated the principle of subsidiarity. This important principle is as follows:

"Just as it is wrong to withdraw from the individual and commit to the community at large what private enterprise and endeavor can accomplish, so it is likewise unjust and a gravely harmful disturbance of right order to turn over to a greater society of higher rank functions and services which can be performed by lesser bodies on a lower plane. For a social undertaking of any sort, by its very nature, ought to aid the members of the body social, but never to destroy and absorb them."

This is what a Conservative believes.

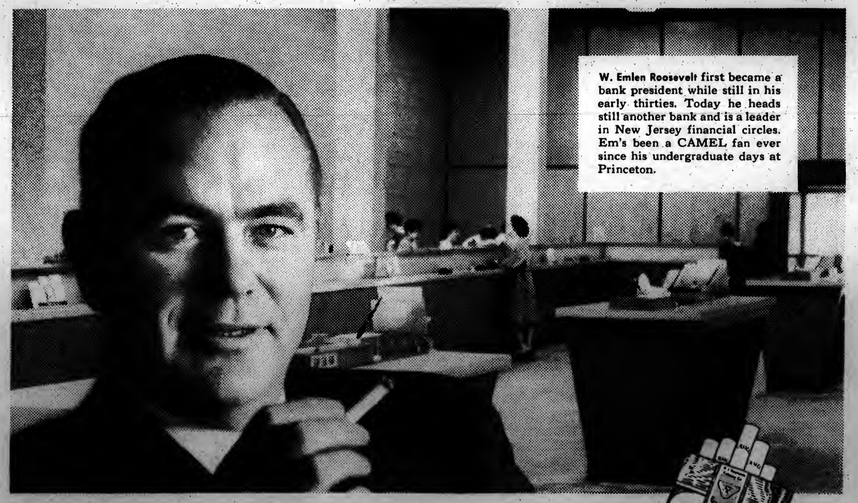
Career Cues:

"Whatever your major, make sure to include a course in 'people'!"



W. Emlen Roosevelt, President
National State Bank, Elizabeth, N. J.

"If my college adviser had prophesied that studying psychology would some day help promote my career in banking, I'd have scoffed. Yet that is exactly what has happened. And when I think about it now the reason seems obvious. The facts and figures of banking, or of any other field, are mechanical devices. They take on real meaning only when related to people.

"Good psychology is also the basis of all teamwork. And, since most of today's business and scientific problems are too complicated for 'one man' solutions, teamwork is essential. If you want to be a valuable team player, and a likely candidate for captain, be the person who understands people. Learn what it takes for people to work together in harmony. Learn how to win trust and confidence. Learn basic human psychology.

"Bear this in mind, too. World tension, community tension, business tension, even family tension are the facts of everyday life. The more you know of human behavior, the better prepared you will be to deal with these problems.

"So, if you have the chance, take a course devoted to 'people.' Your class adviser can probably help you fit a psychology elective into your schedule. I don't think you'll regret it . . . I know I didn't."

W. Emlen Roosevelt first became a bank president while still in his early thirties. Today he heads still another bank and is a leader in New Jersey financial circles. Em's been a CAMEL fan ever since his undergraduate days at Princeton.

CAMPUS NEWS BRIEFS

Student Council has announced plans for its forthcoming Student Government Week to be held April 2 to 9. The focal point of the week will be activities centering in Dougherty Hall.

A three-table exhibit will be displayed in the Center Lounge of Dougherty. One table will trace the outline of the chain of command in Student Council. Another will show the accomplishments of the council. The last table will explain the procedure for student council functions.

Proposed Activities

A meeting of the Student Senate, held on Monday in the East Lounge, will be open to the student body. On Tuesday night there will be a panel discussion on the practical problems by the presidents of the student bodies of LaSalle, St. Joseph's, Villanova, and editors of the VILLANOVAN and the BELLE AIR, and the manager of WWVU. On Wednesday night an open meeting of the Student Congress is planned.

The purpose of the week is to acquaint students with student government. Joe Tate, vice-chairman for the Student Government Week, expressed the hope that those who plan to run for office may take an active interest in the week's activities so that they will have a fuller understanding of the Council.

Herbert Romerstein, former Communist Party member, will be the featured speaker at the next meeting of the Villanova Freedom Forum. Scheduled for March 29, in Vasey Hall Auditorium, the lecture will follow a brief business meeting.

Romerstein, who is considered to be an authority on the youth activities of the Communist Party, joined the Party in New York City at the age of seventeen. At the time, he said, Communist Party's philosophy and activity in the United States appealed to him primarily because it offered opportunity for political involvement and intellectual participation and fulfillment.

No Membership Involvement

He contrasted this dynamic organization structure with the then existing structure of the Republican and Democratic parties, which offered no membership or participation involvement for those who had not reached the voting age.

This lecture is the second of the semester for the Freedom Forum and is expected to be of interest to members of the club and the general student body. Guests and students from other colleges are also invited to this lecture.

Chess Club Meets Haverford In Forthcoming Competition

"The Villanova Chess Club, now in its third year, extends an open invitation to seasoned and novice players," announced Dr. Victor Krupitsch, moderator of the organization.

The club, now being formalized, will meet every Wednesday night at 7 p.m., Dougherty Hall (Day Hop Cafeteria).

Purpose of the club, as expressed by Dr. Krupitsch, will be to compete with neighboring colleges in chess matches.

Dr. Krupitsch emphasized the need for interested students and FACULTY in his open invitation for new members. "Math majors are especially asked to participate; however this should not deter other interested students," Dr. Krupitsch said.

Good Potential

In their inter-club competition, according to Dr. Krupitsch, the players have exhibited to date the potential to become one of the better teams in the six-college area of Haverford College, Bryn Mawr College, University of Pennsylvania, Drexel Institute of Technology, Temple University, and Villanova.

First scheduled match of the season, slated for next Wednesday, will be with Haverford College. As stated by Dr. Krupitsch, "It is imperative that a group of five members be selected for the forthcoming match." All five varsity boards are open at present, thereby allowing for starting members to qualify for the Haverford match.

Guild Drive Begins

Reverend Francis Kelly, Director of the Augustinian Seminarian Guild, has announced that the goal of the Guild Drive this year is 100% participation of the Villanova student body.

The main purpose of the Guild's drive is to alleviate the expenses of the development of Augustinian seminarians. All who contribute share in the spiritual benefits of the priests and seminarians, who offer their devotions especially for this intention.

WWVU Prepares Show: 'Emphasis On Debate'

Continuing in its policy of reaching and stimulating the Villanova student body with topics both vital and interesting, campus radio station WWVU will air the third in its series of "Emphasis" discussions next Wednesday evening at seven p.m.

The ninety-minute program, announced commentator Frank Sauers, will be a four-part "Emphasis on Debate." The first part is an interview with Terry Stratman, President of Beta Gamma Debating Society of Villanova. An exhibition debate consisting of constructive speeches and rebuttals constitutes the second two parts.

The final portion will be a discussion on the debate itself. Participating, along with moderator Sauers, will be Terry Cooney, Dave Galie, Joe Rohr, and John Callahan, all of Beta Gamma.

Seminary Guild Holds Panel On Censorship

The Augustinian Seminary Guild will sponsor a panel discussion on "The Moral, Legal, and Literary Aspects of censorship" on Sunday, April 1, in the Field House at 3 p.m. The Rev. George Lawless, OSA, will discuss the moral aspects; Mr. O'Toole of the Villanova Law School, the legal aspects; and Dr. Fischer, the literary aspects. Student admission is fifty cents.

Honors Won By Guarch, Shea, Kenney, In Talent Night Show

Opening with the Dixieland strains of the "Villanovans" and piloted by Master of Ceremonies Kevin Shea, the annual Amateur Night on March 13 provided a Vasey Hall audience with two-and-one-half hours of lively entertainment.

The first participant in the contest was Pat Kenney, who demonstrated his music and comic ability with a trombone. Returning from last year's Amateur Night were Guy Calissi with a monologue, and Guy Guarch, who won last year's contest, with a new set of imitations of typical Villanova events.

Rounding out the list of contestants were Terence Cooney with several vocal renditions, and Kevin Shea with his popular magic acts. Judged by Mr. Jack Lumsden, Mr. Ed Geisz, and John Bauman on ability, presentation, poise, and audience reaction, Guy Guarch was declared the winner. Pat Kenney was given second place and Kevin Shea, third.

Non-Amateur Performers

During the program, the audience heard several folk songs by the "Criterions," a trio of Villanova musicians who recently cut an album soon to be released. Enthusiastic rounds of applause brought them back for encores.

Nine Groups Present For Choral Festival

The Eighth Annual Choral Festival will be held in the Villanova Field House on Saturday night, March 31.

Selections from current Broadway musicals, as well as popular light classics, will be presented. Villanova will host the glee clubs, in order of their appearance, of Rosemont College, Saint Joseph's College, Holy Family College, St. Peter's College, Immaculata College, Temple University's Men's College, and Chestnut Hill College. The hosts will end the performance.

Co-chairmen Chosen

Doctor Herbert Fiss will direct four clubs from the assembled group. This year's festival is co-chairmened by Jack Blake and Mike Collins.

The festival will begin at approximately eight o'clock. Tickets will soon be available in the Pie Shoppe and the C&F cafeteria at $1.50 for general admission and $1.00 for student admission.

Car Privilege

abuse of the privilege on weekdays, lack of consideration on the part of seniors, and poor cooperation generally.

After considerable argumentation and deliberation at a meeting of the Student Administration Committee, it was decided that the question would be referred, for the first time, to the Vice-Presidents' Meeting. The five university vice-presidents have final decision on all major policies concerning the undergraduate student body of Villanova.

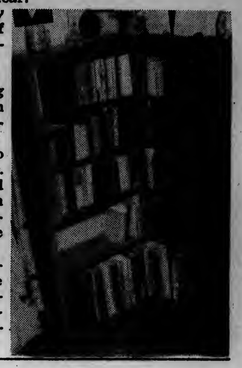
Second Concert Hosts Marlboro Trio

by Art Molitierno

On Sunday, March 18, Villanova students, friends, and interested music lovers had a second opportunity to see and hear a superb performance of Chamber Music.

Ably Staffed

The Marlboro Trio, ably staffed by Anton Kureti — Piano, Michael Tree — Violin, and David Soyer — Cello, gave evidence of its fine repuation by performing the Trio No. 4 in C Major, K. 548 by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, the Trio No. 2 in F Major, Op. 80 by Robert Schumann, and the Trio No. 2 in E Flat Major, Op. 100 by Franz Schubert.



Magnificent Performance

The Marlboro Trio performed magnificently with each individual lending his talents to the greater whole. Although each artist performed extremely well the group was never out of balance, and all throughout the concert the unity of the Marlboro Trio could be felt by those attending the concert.

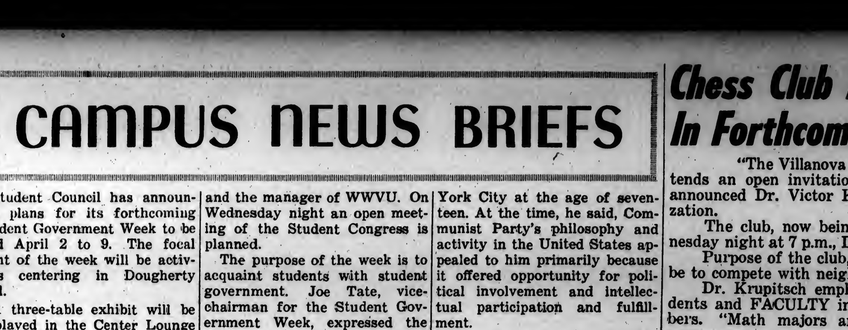
Faculty Library Committee Hosts Book Collection Contest

The Faculty Library Committee hopes for as many entries as possible in the Book Collection Contest. The local committee lists below the procedure for the Villanova contest. Do not bring the books to the campus, but please submit the following:

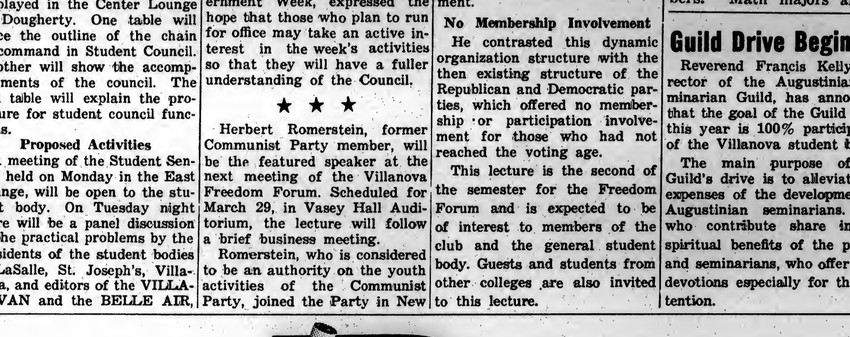
A photograph of the collection such as the one shown here—not professional but clear.

A list of titles, including very brief subjective annotations of thirty-five of the most significant.

Due on April 9



A signed statement certifying that the books listed and shown in the photograph are the contestant's own property.

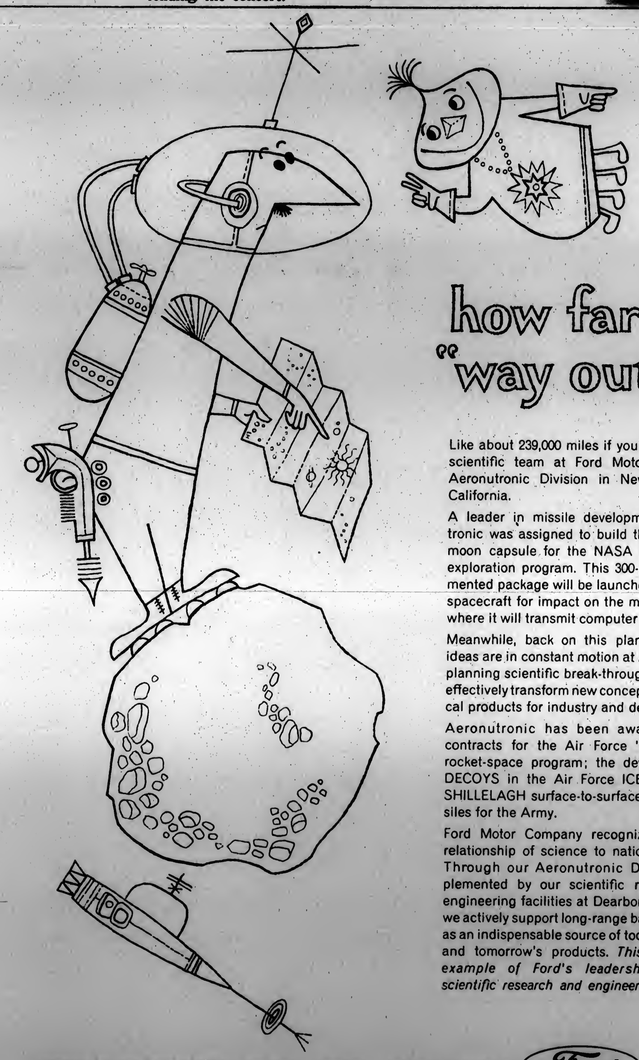


Contestants are asked to bring these materials to Dr. Frescoln's office in Vasey Hall on Monday, April 9, between 8:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. Judging will take place during the week of April 9.

It is hoped that as many students as possible will enter the contest, which is also an opportunity for serious minded students to acquire extensive selection of books.

LUCKY STRIKE presents:

LUCKY PUFFERS "SPRING MADNESS"



GO NEAR THE WATER. Spring is the time when students start thinking about water fun. We say: Splash up a storm. Have a lark. But please be careful. Each year, a few careless students get water on their Luckies. Imagine their remorse! Imagine yours if you were to spoil a Lucky—that great cigarette that college students smoke more of than any other regular. So have a swell time at your favorite watering hole this spring. And keep your Luckies dry.

B-Ball History Published

by Tom Bruderle

Seven years ago Fr. Michael J. O'Donnell, OSA, received questions concerning the football and swimming teams. While searching for the answers, Fr. O'Donnell noticed huge gaps in the scoring records which resulted from two fires that has struck Villanova. "With the innocent notion that the necessary information could be collected in approximately ten to twelve months," Father O'Donnell set to work.

Work Praised

The results of Father's work have been lauded by the three Philadelphia newspapers and with good reason. Father begins with his work with Villanova's first game, a 43-40 win over Catholic University on January 19, 1921, and ends 563 wins and 314 losses later with the 1960-61 team. Also included are team photographs and game-by-game scoring.

Father O'Donnell

For the technical fan, Father has listed the scores and opponents of the freshman and now defunct junior varsity teams. In the appendix Father records the coaching records for each varsity and frosh coach along with the records of opponents versus Villanova. Also, individual and team records are included. In a sentence, Father has set to print every Villanova basketball record and statistic conceivable. This book can be purchased in the book store for $1.95.

Father O'Donnell, keeper of all athletic records, has been at Villanova since 1932. He can recall to mind the 1938-39 squad which hit 20 victories for the first time in school history, the 63-17 heyday of Paul Arizin and company, and today's current city champs. For basketball fans, this 144 page Villanova basketball encyclopedia is a "must."

Five meet records fell at the Eastern Seabord Intercollegiate Swimming championships held at Yale. Dick McDonough set an NCAA record in the 200 yard butterfly with a 2:01.2, breaking the mark set earlier in the day by McDonough in the qualifying heats.

In the 200 yard free-style he was timed in 2:04.4 slicing two-tenths off the old record. Fellow Villanovan Jack Geoghegan finished third with a time of 2:05.1. Villanova finished fourth in the team standing behind Harvard, Princeton, and Yale.

On Saturday, March 10, the Villanova Pistol team competed in the NRA Sectionals at Bucknell University. Compiling eight individual trophies and eight medals, the team managed a second place finish, losing to Navy while defeating Bucknell and Gettysburg.

Carl Ackerman received the high ROTC award in the meet while George Sinclair and Joe Bader also contributed appreciably to the team effort, with several awards.

'Witchcrafts'

Diamond Squad Readies

by Joe McCarthy

Today is the first day of spring! It's the season of lilacs, robins, and baseball.

The 1962 edition of Villanova baseball has begun to take form. The squad has been on the field for a week. Coach Art Mahan has picked thirteen for his "lucky number" this year.

Entering his thirteenth year as the squad's mentor, Mahan has all but three of his starting lineup back from last year. His 17-3 record was the best in Villanova history. Six of his last twelve years have resulted in slates deserving of tournament bids. The Big Five Crown has not been wrestled from the 'Cats in the past four years.

Phil Fidalgo

Four seniors, Phil Fidalgo, Al Wiegand, Don Melega, and Dan Renn each expect to avenge last year's loss to St. John's in the first round of the NCAA Tournament. Each also remembers losing the same way two years ago.

Fidalgo compiled a 7-2 won-loss record with an imposing 1.73 earned run average. The versatile southpaw also led in the power department with four home runs and was fourth in batting with .321.

A twenty-two game slate, fourteen at home, awaits the Wildcats. First game is with Philadelphia Textile on March 31 at home.

The pitching staff is strong. The addition of sophomore Bruce Howard, a lanky right-handed fastballer and the experience gained by Wayne Walz (3-0), Mike Kiley (3-1), and Pete Connors (4-0) places plenty of depth and strength on the mound.

One of the big losses was junior Dan Baier, a slick-fielding second baseman who signed for a reported $15,000 bonus. Baier led the team with his .396 batting average and was co-leader with catcher Al Wiegand in the runs-batted-in department with 22.

Mahan hopes to move last year's success, Dan Renn (.311) in from the outfield to play third and move third baseman Don Melega (304) over to second. Shortstop Jack Lynch (.384) and first baseman Richie Richman (.382) fill out the starting infield.

In the outfield, three starters have been lost, two to graduation and Renn to third base. A sharp sophomore prospect, Gerry Harrington, however, is expected to provide center-field wiith his long ball and good glove.

Behind the plate will be Al Wiegand and Joe Farber, a junior out for the team for the first time, backing him up.

The only real weakness lies in the pressing lack of depth in any of the infield or outfield positions. But, barring injuries, the 'Cats could better even last year's .306 team batting average and travel to Nebraska.

Wildcats Defeat NYU Violets Bow To Wake Forest In Final

by Ed Lohr

It is 598 miles from College Park, Md, to Freedom Hall in Louisville, Ky. but the Villanova Wildcats will not be making the trip as they were kayoed in the third of a scheduled five rounder by Wake Forest, 79-69, in the NCAA Eastern Regional finals Saturday night.

The 1961-62 cagers, who were picked last in the Big Five and eventually went undefeated in city play, reached a summit in the annals of Villanova basketball by gaining the regional finals with a cliff-hanging victory over NYU 79-76 Friday night as superb Hubie White slashed the Violet defense for 31 points, a performance which earned him a berth on the all-tourney team.

Big, Bad Deacs

The Demon Deacons featured a wicked trio that was too much for the 'Cats. Number one of course, was Len Chappell weighing in at 240 pounds and standing 6-8. Number two was Bob Wollard, who is 6-10, and who played the best game of his life in scoring 19 markers and snaring 18 rebounds which combined with Chappell's 22 points and 21 rebounds led to the disastrous assault on the much smaller Wildcats.

Comeback

For the second night in a row the 'Cats showed that they were a great ball team as they came from 10 points back to grab the intermission lead at 44-42. Leading the surge in both comebacks was Wally Jones and Jim O' Brien.

Against NYU Villanova made up a 12 point deficit to trail only by 2 at the half, 42-40. In the second half of that tilt, White tossed in 23 including two cruical three-point plays, one when the Wildcats trailed by four late in the game.

"Bones" Number Three

Rounding out the trio is the irate coach of the Deacs, Horace "Bones" McKinney, who threw his coat, towels, and his players into the game while snuffling nine players masterfully in and out of the competition in both victories over the Hawks and the 'Cats.

Out of Gas

Villanova's amazing coach Jack Kraft had to go 40 minutes of each game with his five starters and they physically ran out of gas in the last five minutes of Saturday's game.

Turning Point

Villanova, however, was never out of the game against the Wake. The turning point of the game was with five minutes remaining the 'Cats were in the midst of another comeback trailing only by three when White missed two fouls and the entire team cooled off, scoring only two points going down the stretch.

Bucks Next

By virtue of its victory, Wake Forest draws the uneviable task of meeting Ohio State in the semi-finals Friday night at Louisville. On the other half of the bill will be defending champion Cincinatti and UCLA, led by Overbrook's Walt Hazzard. The finals are Saturday night.

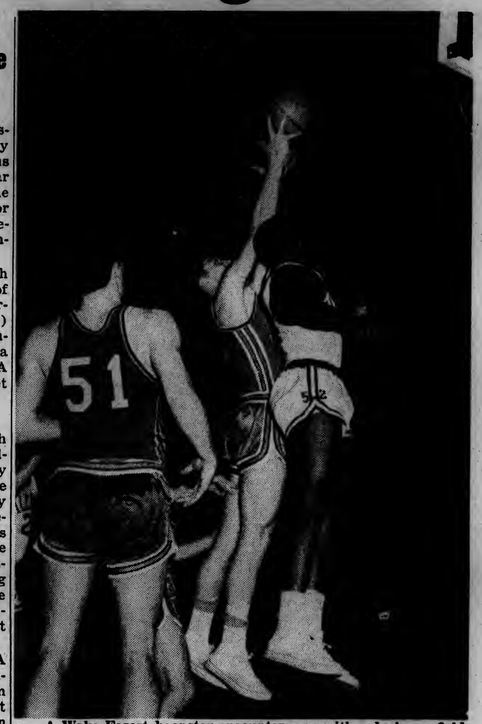
Pinnacle!

Villanova's part in the tourney were best summed up before Saturday's game by the incomparable Jake Nevins when he said, "This is the pinnacle." A job well done!

Deacons, Ohio State To Meet At Louisville In NCAA Semi-finals

by Joe Zawacki

The scene switches to Louisville this Friday and Saturday as the four regional champions meet to decide who will wear the mantle of supremacy for the year 1961-62. Unless a major upset occurs, it looks like a repeat of last year between Cincinatti and Ohio State.



Friday's pairings will match Wake Forest (21-8), winner of 11 straight games, against tourney favorite Ohio State (25-1) and defending champion Cincinnati (27-2), winner of 16 in a row, faces surprising UCLA 18-9). The winners will meet Saturday.

Three All-Americans

The Buckeye-Deacon clash will throw together three All-Americans: Len Chappell, Jerry Lucas, and John Havlicek. The Big Ten champs will be heavy favorites on three factors: the revenge motive for last year's only loss to Cincy, the pressure being off due to the loss to Wisconsin, and an earlier lacing given the Deacons on their home court. Of course, Wake has improved since then, but not enough. Our pick: OSU by 14.

Cincinnati, defending NCAA champ and Missouri Valley entrant, has a full head of steam on and will be out to prove that last year's 70-65 overtime win over State was no mistake. To do so, they must first hurdle the Bruins from UCLA, led by Philadelphian Walt Hazzard. The Uclans started slow, but have won 12 of their last 14. They like to run but their depth isn't enough to stop the Bearcats. Our pick: Cincy by 15 after a close first half.

Saturday, we'll go on the limb and say Ohio State by 10.

NCAA: White Was Great And Jones Was Jones

by Joe Zawacki

A Bunch of Stuff: In a way, it was ironic that Wake Forest should be the surviving quintet of the Eastern Regionals. The Deacons, and their All-American Len Chappell, were the least impressive team at the Palestra last Monday and their performance Friday against St. Joseph's was hardly any better.

However, they had it when they needed it, or as one courtside pundit phrased it, "They don't do anything well . . . they just win."

The 6'8," 240 lb. Chappell also was somewhat criticized for his performances. From this corner, the big boy looks somewhat clumsy in his movements and he doesn't need an oxygen mask for the heights he reaches while rebounding. But how are you going to knock a 30 56% of his shots and 15 rebounds per in a conference of the stature of the ACC? And what a touch!!! One dissenter said, "He's no Lucas; OSU will kill them." Yeah, but his team made it to Louisville. No other team in the East did.

LEN CHAPPELL

Chappell was deservedly voted most valuable in the Eastern Regional. Joining him on the regional "All" team, were Wally Jones and Hubie White of VU, Billy Packer of Wake and Tom Wynne of St. Joseph's. All deserved it. White played the best ball of his career in the three games, finally fulfilling all that was expected of him for the past three years. Even his 6 for 25 shooting Saturday didn't dim the fact that he hustled every minute of each contest and was proficient in every phase of the game.

Jones was Jones and what more can you add to that? Which brings up another point. When the Villanova awards banquet is held next month, the only solution to the MVP problem is to give it to both Jones and White. If either receives it solely, it would be a slight on the other. The team couldn't have advanced as far as they did without either one.

For those who asked for explanation of this writer's pick of Tom Wynne as the Big Five's MVP, here goes. Try it with an open mind. MVP does not mean who is best. It means who is most valuable to his team. That gives us four candidates, White, Jones, McAteer and Wynne. The first three are probably better, all-around players than the 6'5" Junior from City Line. But Villanova is dead without either Jones or Hubie.

That leaves McAteer and Wynne. Without either, their respective teams are nowhere. But LaSalle didn't earn a tourney bid, which is not Mac's fault, but this writer can't see Ernie Banks most valuable either on a fifth place club. Wynne is the only player on Jack Ramsey's squad that the Hawk mentor couldn't afford to lose. For what it is worth, this writer's personal choice would be a different one. But Wynne is the most objective unbiased pick he could come up with.

A bit of praise and thanks is due also to Joe Blair of the University of Maryland who was chairman of the publicity committee for the regionals. After the debacles of arrogance and freeloaders at the Palestra this year, it was a pleasure to see something three times as difficult, run in a first class fashion.

Each writer was assigned a particular spot at the table, given tickets for admission along with an identification badge. In addition, space was allotted for hats and coats and a generous buffet was laid out each night. Blair and his assistant Jack Zane were all over the place, seeing that everyone's needs were serviced. Sure wish the "keeper of the cokes" at Penn had seen it.

Wishful thinking dept.: If the Warriors move out of town and Philly is left without a pro team next year, the smartest move of all would be to move the college games down the street to Convention Hall. Not only is it larger than the Palestra, it is 10 times more comfortable and there wouldn't be the traffic jams in the hallways that develop during sellouts.

Of course, it will never happen. For one thing, it's a smart move. That automatically will kill it. Someone else will holler rent, even though a fair deal could be worked out. Someone else would scream about taking the games off the campuses. And wouldn't Penn love the idea!!!

Area Council Presidents Question Student Government Effectiveness

"What is student government? Student government ain't." So replied Tom Wall to one of the underlying thoughts during a panel discussion on the "Effectiveness of Student Government" last week.

The discussion involved the presidents of the student bodies of LaSalle, St. Joseph's, and Villanova, presenting their views on student government. Rev. Robert J. Welsh, OSA, Dean of the division of liberal arts and sciences, was the faculty representative from Villanova. Critics for the representatives were Jan Garigliano, BELLE AIR editor, Dan Grove, VILLANOVAN editor, and Rev. William E. Farrell, OSA, Dean of Student Activities.

In delivering the keynote address, Fr. Welsh noted that a student government should primarily be a liasion between the student body and the administration and faculty. "Only when this concept has fully materialized on a particular campus can student government be truly effective," continued Fr. Welsh. He added that the primary difficulty encountered at the present time was a lack of continuity in the structure of the student organization. As a partial remedy to some of the problems afflicting student government, he suggested that more power could be given to the governing body itself.

Student Government Week

The panel discussion was presented as a part of Student Government Week with Joe Tate, Villanova Student Congress vice-chairman, presiding.

In assessing the effectiveness of the student organization at St. Joseph's, John Talamini, president of the student Body at that school, went to great lengths to emphasize that the St. Joseph's SC was "just now becoming an organization devoted to something more than

Student Council To Present Variety Show In Field House

The Student Council has announced its sponsoring of a variety show to be held in the University Field House April 14. Tickets will be priced seventy-five cents per person, one dollar and a quarter with a date, if purchased before the performance. The prices at the door will be one dollar and on dollar half.

The Council has undertaken this show as the result of the success with which the Intramural Talent Night was received. Performers from that Talent Night, as well as several newcomers, are expected to lend their talents to the show.

Criterions Featured

Featured will be the Criterions, a group of folk and ballad singers. Also returning from the Talent Night will be Guy Guarch, Kevin Shea, and Pat Kenney. Guarch will imitate "Sounds of Villanova" while Shea will perform feats of magic. Kenney will entertain on the trombone.

New to the Villanova talent scene will be Larry Kelley and Chuck Quirk (The Sleepyhollow Singers), Paul Wachtler, Joe Ruggiero, and Jim Croce. Kelley and Quirk will sing ethnic folk songs, while Ruggiero will entertain with several vocal renditions.

Wachtler will provide a change of pace with dramatic dialogue and Croce will demonstrate his unusual twelve string guitar. A group of Vilanova nurses are slated to sing several numbers.

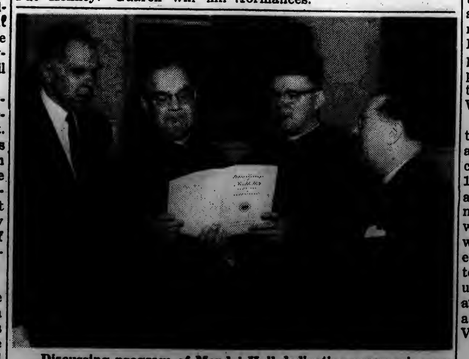
Presiding over the ceremonies will be Joe Salviuolo, master of ceremonies and director of Parent's Weekend.

A mixer will follow the performances.

Father Falvey

University Librarian And Development Head Father Falvey Dies

The Reverend Daniel Falvey, OSA, former director of the Villanova University Development Foundation and librarian for the university for the past twenty-six years died on Monday April 2.



Father Falvey, who was fifty-five, was fatally stricken, apparently by a heart attack, in St. Thomas Monastery. He was widely known for his work in three fields, as director of the university's twenty-year twenty-one million dollar development program, as an expert in library science, and as inaugurator of the Catholic Students' Publication Conference.

Retired

He retired as director of the development foundation last June after eighteen months of service during which time ground was broken for Mendel Hall, the five million dollar science building. The structure was dedicated on Saturday.

Forum Will Present Sen. Joseph S. Clark, Noted Reform Leader

The featured speaker at the fourth lecture in this year's Student Council forum series will be Senior Senator from Pennsylvania, Joseph S. Clark. The lecture will be presented in Vasey Hall on Thursday evening, April 12 at 7:30 p.m. All students and faculty members have been invited.

Political Philosophy

Believing that it is "the function of modern democratic leadership to provide a floor below which misery will not be permitted to sink," and because of his voting record along almost straight "liberal lines," Senator Clark has been accused by campus conservatives of leaning too far to the left, while campus liberals are generally pleased with his coming to the University after a deluge of conservative speakers this year.

Background

Senator Clark is a native of Philadelphia and attended Harvard where he graduated magna cum laude in 1923. He then attended the University of Pennsylvania's Law School where he received his LL.B. in 1926. From 1926 until 1949 Clark practiced law in the Philadelphia area except for his time in the service during the Second World War.

Clark was elected city controller of Philadelphia in 1949, and was the successful democcratic nominee for Mayor in 1951. His mayorality brought a "reform era" to Philadelphia management and politics, and it was his well-known record that was partly responsible for his election as Senator in 1956. His term in office expires on January 3, 1963. Presently, Senator Clark is seeking re-election and is opposed by Congressman Van dZant.

In the Senate, Clark serves on the Labor and Public Welfare Committee, the Banking and Currency Committee, the Special Committee on Aging, the Post

The activities of the day are slated to come to a close at 5:15 with Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament in the chapel.

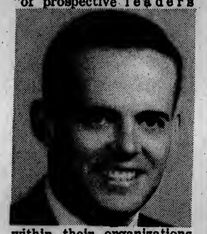
Troubleshooter Breen

The deeper one proceeds into the woods, the less he sees of the forest. This is true of many of the heads of various campus activities. They perform their jobs well, but being as involved as they are, they sometimes fail to detect the shortcomings in their organizations that only an interested observer can see.

One such observer is senior Paul Breen, Secretary of the Dean of Student Activities. Paul has worked closely with WWVU, NFCCS, and other organizations in relation to their rudimentary and vital problems, acting in the capacity of campus trouble-shooter. One effect resulting from his ideas is the new glass-cased Student Activities Directory.



Activities Reflected

Breen's acute knowledge of the University's student organizations reflects in no small way his own participation in various extra-scholastic activities. As a junior he was Business Manager of Belle Masque, for which he has worked three years, and Vice-President of Alpha Psi Omega, the honor society for dramatics.

This year Breen has divided his time among the Student Council, Belle Masque, and SAM, as well as functioning as Co-chairman of the Student Council Bowling Committee. He has also competed in intramurals.

Effective Leadership Needed

Paul feels strongly about the perpetuation of effective leadership on campus. "Villanova has many organizations and societies, some of which have come a long way in maximizing their potential. Others have fallen far short of their goals. The thorough education," he continued, "of prospective leaders within their organizations —with a constant reappraisal process—would certainly be a move in the right direction."

One attempt to fulfill these views was Paul's idea for the recent Student Government Exhibit in Dougherty Hall. Its twofold function was to show some of the procedures involved in campus and off-campus activities, and to describe the structure of the Student Council and what it has been doing here to stimulate student interest and leadership at Villanova.

A native of Englewood, New Jersey, Breen is an industrial administration major. Paul will be married this summer. And in the near future, he eyes graduate school for business.

ACES Sponsors Panel on U.S. Trade Business Leaders To Speak Tonight

Five leaders from various fields of business in the Delaware Valley area will participate in a panel discussion to be presented following a dinner program in Dougherty Hall tonight at 6 p.m. The topic of discussion is, "Can The United States Maintain Its Position in International Trade?"

The Rev. Joseph A. Bartley, OSA, Dean of the School of Commerce and Finance, will act as host during the dinner which precedes the panel discussion.

ACES Panel

The members of the panel, which is presented by Americans for the Competitive Enterprise System, Inc. (ACES) will include: Dr. Lincoln Hall, Vice-President, Fidelity-Philadelphia Trust Company, representing the banking industry; Horace Jones, President, James Lees and Sons, representing the textile industry; Robert D. Bent, Vice-President, Atlantic Refining Company, representing the oil industry; Matthew H. McCloskey III, President, McCloskey Enterprises, Inc., representing the contracting industry; and J. William Delanty, Manager of Overseas Operations, F. J. Stokes Corp., representing the machinery industry.

Among the subsidiary subjects expected to be covered by the panel are the effect of the Common Market on U. S. trade programs, the pros and cons of U. S. tariff reductions, and the effect of tariff reduction on prosperity in the United States.

Taped by WIBG

The panel will be moderated by Curtin Winsor, Executive Director of ACES. The discussion program will begin at 7:30 and continue until 9:45 p.m. The panel has agreed to answer questions by students from the floor. The panel proceedings are expected to be taped by radio station WIBG.

ACES is a non-profit, non-political organization in the field of economic education headed by Theodore Roosevelt III. Its main office is in Philadelphia and its panel discussion programs are presented before nearly every college in the Greater Philadelphia Area annually.

President Trapp Announces Senior Fathers' Day Events

Senior Class President Ray Trapp has announced that Senior Fathers' Day for the Class of 1962 will be held on Saturday, May 12. Trapp said that Dom Minerva has been selected to supervise the annual event. Planning for the day's activities are chairmen Jim McMonagle, arranging for the Mass; Chip D'Ambrosio and Frank Bentz, Tickets; Vedder White and Jim Veccharo, Publicity; Tom Carter, Favors; and Dan Peschio, Letters.

The day will begin with Mass in the Grotto at 11:00 a.m. Rev. Thomas C. Kenny, OSA, the Moderator of the Class of 1962, will offer the Holy Sacrifice.

At noon, a filet mignon luncheon will be served to the members of the class and their fathers.

In the afternoon, diversified sports events will entertain the group. A lacrosse match is scheduled for 2:00 p.m. A rugby game will follow at 2:45 p.m. Villanova's championship track and baseball teams will perform throughout the afternoon.

General Chairman Minerva stated that tickets for the day will go on sale on Friday, May 4 in the Pie Shoppe and the C&F cafeteria. He said that fathers will be informed of the occasion by letters which will be mailed to them. He expects 500 people to attend. He added, "This year's committee has made special efforts to insure that this Fathers' Day will be the best in Villanova's history."

Council Advocates Art Show, Spring Concert, Student Aid

A number of important proposals were discussed and voted on at the Student Senate meeting of April 2.

Although a motion that the Student Council appropriate $1,000 for the purpose of establishing a $250 per year scholarship, to be matched by the Administration or Alumni, ended in defeat, the bill will be submitted to the administration for further consideration. In line with appropriations, a bill was passed to include an additional dollar in each student's tuition, which will be added to the Student Council treasury each year.

In keeping abreast with the cultural aspects of campus life, the Senate unanimously passed motions for an art exhibition during the week of April 29, and a special concert on the green, to be given on the evening of May 11.

NFCCS Interrogated

A motion that the Student Council Senate require the NFCCS to present a complete report of their activities for this academic year to the Council was passed. The motion also requires NFCCS to submit itself to interrogation as to its obligations and responsibilities. Gene d'Aquili, senior delegate to the NFCCS, announced that such a proposal would be welcomed by the NFCCS.

In order to put a stop to student apathy, the Council passed a motion for the distribution of a monthly report of the Senate Meeting Minutes in volume.

Increased Recreation Facilities

The Student Council, in passing a motion for investigation of the present recreational facilities available to the student, feels that it has demonstrated its interest in the extra-curricular well-being. The motion recommends that the Father President consider the possibility for the conversion of the annex classrooms into recreation rooms for the Student Body.

Seaborg Delivers Keynote Address At Mendel Dedication Ceremonies

Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg, Chairman of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, was the principal speaker for the dedication ceremonies of Villanova University's new Science and Research Center, Mendel Hall, on Saturday, April 7. Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, OSA, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, presided.

The Auxiliary Bishop of Philadelphia, Most Rev. Francis J. Furey and the Lieutenant Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, the Honorable John Morgan Davis were also guest speakers.

Dr. Seaborg, speaking on church schools said, "the traditions of American higher education owe much to the aims, the ideals and the spirit of dedication of the church-oriented college." As regarding liberal education he said, "One of the challenges to higher education in our day is to mesh the humanities with the sciences. In the pursuit of learning, we must understand the interrelation of science with literature, history, and the arts."

In closing, the AEC Chairman said, "The educated man today, be scientist or non-scientist, recognizes that the whole man must understand his nature and the nature of his environment and be able to visualize and be conscious of his relation to the rest of humanity, and to know his purpose. To this end, I am sure that Mendel Hall will be a real monument to Villanova's future."

Astronomy Department Plans First Symposium Of Series

The Astronomy Department of Villanova University, under the direction of Rev. Edward F. Jenkins, OSA, will sponsor a symposium on astronomical education entitled "Modern Science in the Scholarly Tradition." This symposium, to be held on Saturday, April 14, is the first in a series to be presented this spring.

The agenda is composed of a number of lectures on the subject of astonomical education. The first speech will be "Careers in Astronomy," by Dr. Kenneth L. Franklin of the American Museum - Hayden Planetarium. This will be followed by Mr. John Kosloski of the Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction on "Establishing a Space-Science Curriculum."

The afternoon will open with Rev. Martin F. McCarthy from the Vatican Observatory speaking on "The Ages of Stars." After Father McCarthy, Rev. Francis J. Heyden from the Georgetown University Observatory will speak on "The Habitability of Other Planets." Following the lectures the Astronomy Department will hold an open house.

Fr. Jenkins expects an audience of about two hundred or more people. Invitations to attend have been extended to the faculty and students of parochial and public high schools in the area, the Rittenhouse Astronomical Society, the Amateur Telescope Makers of the Franklin Institute, and prominent local astronomers.

Varsity Drill Team Competes In Annual Cherry Blossom Meet

Fielding a twenty man team, the varsity drill team from the Villanova Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps Unit managed a twentieth place finish in a field of fifty-seven teams from across the country in the 1962 Cherry Blossom Festival Drill Meet.

Competing under adverse circumstances, the team performed trick manuvers in the D.C. Armory in Washington, D.C. on Thursday, April 5. Among the many factors used in judging were precision of drill, sharpness of appearance, and showmanship.

Awarded 687

The Villanova representatives, under the leadership of Midn. Gerald Corrigan, were awarded 687 out of a possible 1000 points. Purdue University placed first with 815 points.

Leads Area

The ranking of Villanova's team placed it above all the other Philadelphia area teams.

Future meets in which the Villanova team will participate are the Greater Philadelphia Drill Meet at Franklin Field on April 25, the Fourth Naval District Meet at the Philadelphia Naval Base on April 28, and the Pennsylvania Military College Drill Meet at PMC on May 5.

Alliance Delays

It has been approximately a year since the United States and the majority of the Latin American states agreed upon the Alliance for Progress program. This program was billed as the first practical step toward helping the Latin American countries pull themselves from the depths of dirt and poverty. Activity since the historic meeting at Punta del Este has produced almost negligible results.

The causes of this non-productive period are twofold. The first, upon which hinges the second, is the failure of the Latin nations to initiate the basic reforms that were called for in the initial declaration. There has been a noticeable absence of Latin legislation in the past year attempting to cure the existing problems in land distribution, housing, education and electoral laws. The whole program is dependent upon the passage of this reform legislation.

The delay of these reforms has caused the United States to hold up the funds it has committed to the program. Congress is adamant in its position that reform must precede economic aid. This position has in turn caused the Latins to cry out that the United States is failing to fulfill its initial committments and to refuse to carry out the reforms until the money starts coming into the Latin countries.

This whole situation is deplorable in the face of the urgency of this program. Under the existing circumstances, Latin America will continue to become soil that is unfavorable for the existence of democratic governments. The threat exists of these countries going not only to the Left for the solutions to their problems, but also to the Right. The tremendous resurgence of the Peronists in the recent free elections in Argentina and the overthrow of the democratic Frondizi government are prime examples of this danger.

The present situation, which is ripe for the emergence of both Rightist and Leftist authoritarian regimes, is an extremely serious one. It is vitally important that the democratic institutions of Latin America develop the means to satisfy the "rising expectations" of the populace. It is apparent that this can only be accomplished with the aid of the United States and the other developed nations.

The urgency and importance of the situation demand that the causes for the delay be eliminated on both sides. It is time for practical politics to take play, compromises to be made and for these problems to be ironed out. Those who stress the importance of practical reality must take cognizance of the importance of having Latin America remain a place of freedom, motherhood and beez-ball.

More Student Apathy

by Ed Farrell

Tomorrow the students of Villanova will go to the polls in Alumni Hall to vote for class officers and Student Council representatives.

If the weather is favorable and the students are reasonably inclined to give five minutes of their time, a little under half of the student body will enter the voting booths and make their choices known.

This relatively low percentage points a grevious omission which many of the students commit, the failure to cast their ballots in class elections. It is true that half the qualified voters in a national election is a fairly good percentage, but on this level tnere are many voters who for various reasons are unable to vote. On a university campus the percentage of persons with legitimate excuse to forego voting is much lower. Therefore, why isn't there a greater attendance?

"I don't know the candidates, so why should I vote for some guy that I don't even know?" This a typical excuse offered by the non-voter. His argument is reflected right back to him. If the voter doesn't know the candidates, why not? Their names are all over the campus for three days preceding elections and a few questions director toward friends would soon reveal a little information about who is running for what and why.

The person who doesn't care to vote is probably the guy who complains that the Student Council is a do-nothing organization anyway, so what's the use of voting. Or he contends that the class officers are just guys with fancy titles, and big heads. Someday the thought that these organizations and positions are what they are because of the people in them will become apparent to him and perhaps he will become interested in who is elected into them.

The responsibility of the voter does not end with the closing of the voting booth door. He should know what the elected representatives are doing and should offer his views on matters of interest to his class. Attendance at a couple of Council meetings would soon acquaint the voter with information on whether or not the council which he perhaps accuses of doing nothing really does something.

When the polls open tomorrow, every student should make an effort to find time to stop and cast his ballot in the interest of his class, his school, and himself.

Letters To The Editor

Mr. William Cercone,

It was refreshing at long last to read a bit of fact in your letter (VILLANOVAN, March 14, 1962). The "Issy Les Moulineaux" explosion to which you refer did occur in Paris and was attributed to the OAS. However, you seem to either ignore or to be unaware of the fact that this took place AFTER the appearance of your editorial.

Because it was the first incident in which lives were deliberately taken by the OAS, your ability to see it so far in advance was remarkable. A prophet such as yourself is indeed an asset to Villanova University.

Not possessing this foresight myself made it impossible for me either to condone or criticize this incident. My reply was written for the purpose of correcting your error, not arbitrarily judging the actions of others. Futhermore, Paris cannot, even now, in the broadest sense of the word be called "bullet-ridden."

The attitude of gratefulness even of the OAS for the ceasefire agreement is evident throughout the city.

Although it has taken a seven years' war and the loss of lives, it seems it will now be possible for the peaceful co-existence of a new nation and the pride of the French nationalists.

Your astute American in Paris

To the Editor:

Congratulations to the VILLANOVAN for its courageous and outspoken editorial in opposition to the arbitrary selection of the Easter vacation.

As the VILLANOVAN so clearly pointed out, the administration has selected the dates so that the previous week is needlessly wasted, the result being that for those who do not live nearby, one third of the time is spent in traveling. It is certainly regrettable.

Catholic Education

One of the problems which seriously hampers the smooth execution of Catholic education is that of finances. The tremendous burden of constantly rising expenses is a millstone around the neck of every Catholic school administration.

While it is true that all education is costly, many secular schools receive aid from a variety of outside sources, principally the federal government. Catholic institutions, on the other hand, must meet their expenses on their own. If they do not earn enough from tuition to remain in the black, they must solicit aid from whatever sources are available. They are forced to beg, borrow, cut corners, and do whatever else they can in order to remain operational.

Schools functioning in the red can do one of three things. They can: 1) close down completely, offering no education; 2) work on a smaller scale, teaching only a few; or 3) continue on the same enrollment level, spending less on essential items such as good teachers, and providing an inferior learning experience. Each of the three alternatives denotes failure in the eyes of educators.

Whether federal aid to education is the answer for Catholic schools is a highly controversial subject, and it is not our purpose to discuss the issue here. Rather, we will begin with a reality—that federal aid currently is not a resource of Catholic education—and study the problem from this point. Where do Catholic schools turn for money

More specifically, where does Villanova University turn?

Income from student tuition does not cover the expenses of the university for a year. On the contrary, tuition covers only sixty-eight per cent of each student's educational costs. One can see, then, that the tenfold increase in enrollment since 1945 has not proportionnally increased university income. Instead, the enlarged enrollment has necessitated the addition of ten new buildings, at a cost of $14,000,000.

More students also means more faculty —more than the unsalaried Augustinians can supply. And lay faculty must be paid a salary.

Current tuition, then, does not balance the books. Though it is possible to raise tuition, to do so would be to limit education to those with adequate financial, but not necessarily intellectual, means. This is contrary to all ideals and purposes of education.

Through its relatively new Development Program, Villanova is operating a well-organized system, designed to plan and provide for the needs of a growing university.

The Development Program taps many sources for grants, donations, and other types of aid to the university. At the top of the list are the corporations, the foundations, individual donors, and alumni members. But this is not enough. There never seems to be enough. And so the school continues, as do other schools, searching, planning, and hoping for a solution. . . .

Why Not?

Last week's roundtable discussion on student government produced one interesting sidelight. LaSalle's student government chairman outlined an interesting and workable plan to rid our campus leaders of their "ineffective" and "rubber" stamp labels.

LaSalle's governing body actually got into the area of governing the students by instituting a student judiciary body. This group was granted the power to review all cases of student discipline that could result in expulsion, suspension, or probation of the accused offender.

Here is how it works. After the offense is reported, this group investigates the case and appoints a defender for the accused. When the evidence is collected, the case is presented before the board which is comprised wholly of students. The body deliberates and decides what punishment, if any should be meted out. Their decision is then sent to the Dean of Men who usually afiirm this verdict.

Should Villanova's Student Council obtain the power to implement such a program, and then carry it out maturely two problems would be reduced. The old student cry of inconsistent disciplinary measures would be given to the students to solve and the much maligned Student Council would gain student respect.

Temple News — Temple University — Francis C. DeLucia, office of the Governor, spoke to an administrative officer in the the Society for the Advancement of Management last week on the topic of "A Management Training Program." He said there has been an increasing amount of management jobs offered in the government. To qualify for the program one must meet civil service requirements and have training equivalent to four years at a college or university. The average salary is around $5000.

Setonian — Seton Hall University — Seton Hall has adopted the open stack policy in their library. This change in policy was a result of many things, chief among which were a number of requests from faculty and students over recent months. The stacks were closed almost two years due to some very unfortunate incidents. At the time it was found that many books were being damaged and that some were missing, but the new policy will make it easier for students to obtain books.

New University News — while several thousand students picketed the White House and the Soviet embassy to express their desire for peace, over 300 others met at Swarthmore College in Swarthmore, Pa., to study the arms race and to examine alternatives to it. No simple solutions were reached, but the general agreement was that we should not panic in groping for revolutionary solutions which have not been examined in full.

The Tiger — Clemson College — Rock n' roll is headed for Tigertown this weekend. The Olympics, of "Peanut Butter" and "Western Movie" fame will be featured at Saturday night's edition of this year's Spring Hop. Also included in the program are Lloyd Price and two top name bands.

The Lafayette — Lafayette College — The Lafayette Leopard and the St. Joseph Hawk tied in their halftime foul-shooting contest. The Wildcat still remains KING.

Beaver News — Beaver College — In a recent New York Times paperback book section the book-buying habits of college students were studied and certain conclusions were reached. Some of the more popular books were William Golding's LORD OF THE FLIES and J. D. Salinger's CATCHER IN THE RYE. One of the most popular authors among Ivy League schools in general is Albert Camus. It was also discovered that there is a greater trend towards European literature.

Silver Horn — Albertus Magnus College — A new sport at Albertus is ice-skating on the tennis courts. The courts have been flooded to help the students enjoy this winter sport, and they are open every day of the week. For a day of fun and relaxation or a night of cha-chas on the ice, the skater can hardly find a better place in the world. Well — no homework again tonight!

Varsity News — University of Detroit — Dave DeBusschere's brilliant basketball career at U-D came to a partial close last week as the senior forward made his final home appearance. Besides being honored with Dave DeBusschere Day in Detroit, the 6-5 star also received a telegram from 900 students congratulating him and had a lounge in Shiple Hall dedicated to him. Now all Dave has to look forward to is his pro career.

Each week the VILLANOVAN receives about 150 newspapers from colleges and universities throughout the entire United States. Most of these papers contain movie reviews of some form or another, and most agree that West Side Story was the best motion picture of the year. In transferring West Side to the screen, its makers have not only enlarged the scope of the marvelous stage production, but they have produced a movie with a breath-taking collaboration of technical, visual, and audio skills. West Side Story has started a new era among motion pictures, and it will serve as a movie thrill to those who see it.

Middle of the Road

by Jerry Heavey

The essential reason for the increasing conflict between persons of liberal and conservative political creeds in the United States is this: that neither admits the virtues of the other's beliefs or the faults of his own.

A specific instance of this is the conflict over the program of social security. Conservatives condemn it because it encroaches on the liberty of the individual citizen by compelling him to surrender a part of his wages without any choice on his part as to whether they will be spent that way. Liberals applaud social security because it provides for those no longer able to work, preserving the dignity of the aged and producing a definite good for the individual and for society. The opinions of the two are split similarly on other issues.

The Middle Road

Now it is obvious that any political society more complex than anarchy involves some loss of freedom by the individual. It is just as obvious that an unlimited extension of federal power and programs would completely destroy the liberty of the citizen. Thus neither conservative nor liberal principles can be wholly translated into reality.

It is wise to follow a middle road in government, avoiding the extremes of anarchy and totalitarianism, while enjoying the benefits of moderate welfare programs and of a practical measure of democracy.

The greatest advantage to the nation of the growth in the number of conservative minded citizens is this, that a strong conservative party can balance a strong liberal party to maintain the nation upon the middle road necessary for its continued well-being.

Wait 'Til Next Year

by Pete Nolan

This time of year as always, the time draws near when the old rendering of accounts must take place. Inevitably we begin to take notice of this state of happening, scratch the noggin a little bit, and begin thinking of bibliographies, and the one week jockeying for term papers, a minor reduction in party-time, a thinning out in the Pie Shoppe, and the proverbial "all nighter", world without end. Amen.

As early as last week I overheard such thought-provoking exclamations as; "Hey Eddie, did he say we have to do footnotes", or, "Boy, next semester I'm not gonna leave it all go 'til the last minute. I'm gonna take it little by little every day and then when exams come around I'm just gonna relax and go to the movies."

* * * * * *

We also notice at this time the beginning of a very calculated planning, political maneuvering, and serious discussions in wake of the extremely important struggle for power within the sacred chambers of that august organization—the Student Council. Organizers, lobbyists, and pressure groups will begin gathering outside the west lounge, in the Pie Shoppe, in the mimeo room, and before you know it, the race will be on.

Spring is also a time of review; not always academic. It all began with the football season. The team won many games year and everybody celebrated. Some people even celebrated when the team lost. I even think that a lot of people are still celebrating, although it seems they've just gotten into the habit of it because they used to celebrate last year and the year before, and some of them used to hang out at the Celebrity Room. You might call them celebrities. I went to one of those cocktail parties that they usually have during the football season. You know the type. The girls are always dressed up in flashy sport dresses and high heels, and the guys always carry a hip flask. Strictly class you know. The activities at these gigs consisted in the required amount of drawn-out hi's, handshakes, and how's your brother up at Yale sort of stuff . . . the usual routine. Everyone was waiting 'til after the season to get that fresh start, but then you felt that it might be well to wait until after Thanksgiving and really start fresh. Unfortunately Christmas vacation followed.

The most up-and-coming sport of the winter months has been skiing. Places like Stowe, and Sky Top have become a must in the well-rounded college student's bag of "names to drop in front of all college girls". At these winter resorts, the student meets anyone who is anybody. The standard question is inevitably; "how's everything at school, Charlie?" The recommended answer is; "fine, just fine." I've known guys who were carrying three or four "F's" to answer this question the same way, without even flinching. It's imperative to do this.

I know a guy who never skied in his life. He tied a pair of skis and poles on top of his MG and pulled up to one of these ski lodges and parked right in front of the place. Then he walked in on a pair of crutches with a fake cast on his ankle. If you think a double dose of Bryl Cream is daring, this fellow is way out of your class. This type of hero is fast overtaking the traditional triple threat.

How To Replace A Villanova Tradition

by Joe Noel

Chagrined, we note that a certain tradition—one singularly Villanovan in nature and antedating even the lecture-recitation system—may well be on the too-oft travelled road to oblivion.

We refer not to any number of the "traditions" passively accepted by most Villanovans—not to the blazer, to Muff Day, or to cutting class; not to the Joyce Kiley Mile or to student apathy; and certainly not to pledging or to the White Hat. Rather we call attention to Villanova's annual gift to Kelly's, the signature-laden card offered in the true spirit of tradition to be permanently displayed on the wall behind the bar.

Alternates?

As yet, no such framed offering has been made, although rumor has it that several alternatives have been suggested. Will this year's graduates flaunt tradition; will the Kelly card suffer replacement.

Lacking the spirit of whatever it takes for one to coldly break with the past, we will reluctantly discuss the other proposals.

A rather demanding group of seniors feel that one of Joe Zawacki's shirts should be given, while another argues that instead all of his shirts should be destroyed, and Zawacki himself be donated.

Blue Key Fallout

Another popular contention calls for arrangements to be made to have at least one Blue Key member on duty at all times, ready to escort the patrons to the fallout shelter, the gift choice of still other students.

Similarly, many maintain that the class of '62 should appoint a student council member to serve as a doorman, reminding each entrant that his presence is "a service of your student council."

Small but growing, one contingent insists that the gift to Kelly's this year should be but an idea—and not an original one at that.

Fire Sale

The proprietors are to be convinced that they, too, will be able to engineer a clearance sale of sorts, much in the manner of our own University Shop manager. The sale will run for eleven days, and the price of draught beer will be reduced 10% each day. Rapid calculation will reveal that on the last two days beer will be free.

Thus, some would break with tradition, eager, perhaps, to begin afresh. We contend, however, that the far-reaching effects of such a break would be at least far-reaching.

Kelly's Would Close

The Kelly owners would be as chagrined as we. Future Villanovans would be denied admittance, and, under the circumstances, the establishment, as old as the tradition itself, would pass out of existence.

Students would become an errant, aimless lot with no place to call home other than home itself. In all probability, they would eventually begin to study, and, in spite of themselves would begin an entirely new tradition.

No More Gripes

We shudder to think what would happen if this ever occured. Imagine! With students studying, they would go to class—and go prepared. No longer would one deem it necessary to cut Fridays or Mondays, or gripe about the food, or about Easter vacations; no longer would anyone be chagrined.

They wouldn't think of growing a beard, mainly because they can't. Many become really fine students over the course of the year only at the expense of eliminating their name from the Pie Shoppe log.

The Road: A Drag, Yet A Necessity

by Joe Zawacki

"Look Down, look down, that lonesome road . . . before you travel on."

It's three o'clock in the morning. The club is closing. Now starts the mad rush to the cars or bus. Get a quick start and the distance from Philly to Cleveland doesn't seem to be as great as you know it is. The hell with sandwiches and coffee. We'll get them on the turnpike. Pipe down you guys, I want some sleep. How'd I ever get in this ratrace anyway?

It's the road. The long and twisting road that only the trucker and the musician really know. The big league athletes travel in style, but not the big league musician. It's a drag . . . a real drag.

An Economic Necessity

Why bother? That's the silly question. If you don't, where's the bread going to come from? If a band or a combo doesn't hit the road and play ballrooms, clubs and colleges, it's not going to last long. There's nothing happening on the radio. Who's going to buy the few records that we do sell if they don't get to hear us? The road is a hideous torture chamber, with a new trap around the bend. But . . . it's necessary.

"Not for Me"

"Not for me, it isn't," says Charlie Byrd. "I play what I want to play when I want to every night here." The here referred to is the Showboat Lounge in Washington, a nice little listening room where guitarist Byrd has been in residence for almost six years. Run by a genial gent named Pete Lambros, it is one of the better Jazz rooms that this writer has visited. And . . . it's making money.

Varied Program

The reason for the profit is the 36-year-old, balding guitarist, probably the most inventive and proficient artist on the instrument in the country today. A typical Byrd session will find the maestro playing anything from an unaccompanied Bach fugue to a down-home blues in which he may "sing" a chorus or two. As is often the case, words are useless. Byrd has to be seen and heard to be appreciated.

Yet who knows of him, outside of the hippies? Except for a rare safari for the state department or a short trip into New York, Byrd stays in Washington. Why, it's the road, of course. But this doesn't seem to bother him. "I've got everything I need here," he says definitively. "Good management, competent sidemen, rehearsal time, a home for my family . . . and peace of mind. I don't have to hit the road, like Barney Kessel does, to keep from going batty. I can practice here to my heart's content."

No Home Base

Maynard Ferguson's problem is a little different. Instead of a combo, he's got 13 mouths to feed and no home to feed them in. While Lawrence Welk, Freddie Martin and Guy Lombardo have held residence for years, there is no Roosevelt Hotel or Palladium clamoring for the Canadian's services. Bands are dead, or haven't you heard?

Perhaps Ferguson hasn't heard. He's got a sound that he likes and he thinks he can make it pay off. Even if there was a home base, he would probably still try the road. It seems like a narcotic sometimes. It's not easy to kick.

"I always wanted a band," says Ferguson. So after freelancing on the West Coast after many years with big bands like Kenton's he proceeded to form one and despite the warnings of doom from the ever-present vultures popularly known as critics, his product has become a marketable commodity. The college crowd in particular has taken to the brassy sound of the Slide Hampton, Willie Maiden arrangements and in particular to the leader himself. Ferguson, nobody's fool, has enraptured more than one crowd with his showy trumpet style, scaling the heights with much more ease than the effort he seems to be putting out.

"An In-Person Thing"

However, to sell his band, the road is a necessity. "In fact, getting work was probably the hardest difficulty we faced in the early months of our existence," he says. "We had to go where there was work. Now that we're sort of established, we still have to travel because our band is an in-person thing. Radio and records aren't nearly as important to us as playing to a live audience."

Ferguson didn't say it, but the road is a drag for him too.

SPECIAL NOTE: A rare treat is in store for those who missed the recent Villanova Jazz Festival. As reported elsewhere in these pages, the Bob Kindred Quintet (winners of the event) will pair with John Cassavetes' award winning film "Shadows" on April 28 at the Wayne Avenue Playhouse for two shows. Either attraction could stand on its own and it should make for an unusual but entertaining evening.

NSF, Danforth Fellowships Awarded; Hickey, DeSanto Are Double Winners

Dr. B. J. Bedard, Post-graduate Study Advisor, has announced that John DeSanto, a senior physics major, and Leo J. Hickey, a senior geology major, have been awarded National Foundation Graduate Fellowships by the National Science Foundation. These graduate fellowships allow for a stipend of $1800 plus a tuition allowance, renewable each year.

Hickey will pursue his geology studies at Princeton University while DeSanto will study physics at either Princeton, Michigan, or Chicago.

Graduate Fellowship applicants were required to take exams in science and achievement. Test scores, academic record, and recommendations regarding each applicant's abilities were then considered by panels of outstanding scientists in the respective fields of the applicants. The panels were appointed by the National Academy of Sciences—National Research Council. NSF then selected the nominees.

Ralph Esposito, a senior math major, was given honorary mention by the Foundation.

Hickey has also received a four year Danforth fellowship from the Danforth Foundation. The fellowship is aimed specifically for students who plan to enter the college teaching field. The nominee for the fellowship is nominated by the university and chosen through a complex series of interviews and other selection processes.

Sorority Holds Career Night, Guests Address Nurses' Group

"Career Night" was the highlight of the Pi Theta Chi Sorority meeting recently. The meeting, held in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall, featured four speakers from various phases of nursing who gave talks on their own fields.

The first speaker was Mrs. Catherine Oblaczynski, instructor in psychiatric nursing from Villanova University. She spoke about the value of such a course in preparation both for a professional future in nursing and for a future as a wife and mother.

Miss Althea A. Livirrie, Lt., N.C., U.S.N., spoke to the sorority members about a future in Navy nursing, outlining the educational advantages offered by the Navy Nurse Corps Candidate Program.

The Air Force program was also represented, and Miss Crawford, Capt., U.S.A.F., discussed life as an Air Force nurse, placing special emphasis on flight nursing.

Miss Dorothy Seller, President of the Industrial Nurses Association of Pennsylvania, familiarized the nurses with the requirements and aspects of industrial nursing.

Speakers remained after the meeting to distribute literature and answer questions.

Nominations

Nominations for sorority officers and the Student Council representative for next year were made at the same meeting. Voting will take place tomorrow evening at 5:30 in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall. A brief meeting also will be held at that time.

Villanova IA Major Awarded Scholarship To V.U. Law School

A Senior Industrial Administration major and member of the Society for the Advancement of Management, James J. Lynch, Jr., has won full tuition scholarships from two law schools.

Jim has selected the Villanova Law School Scholarship and the Villanova Law School for his barrister training as he feels the Law School to be a continuation of the fine Christian and academic principles upon which the University was founded and maintained. Jim believes that the status of the Law School is growing along with the institution. This, coupled with its excellent staff, was one of the determining factors in his decision.

While working toward his degree at Villanova, Jim plans to specialize in the corporate and civil law fields and upon graduation he will seek employment in the legal department of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

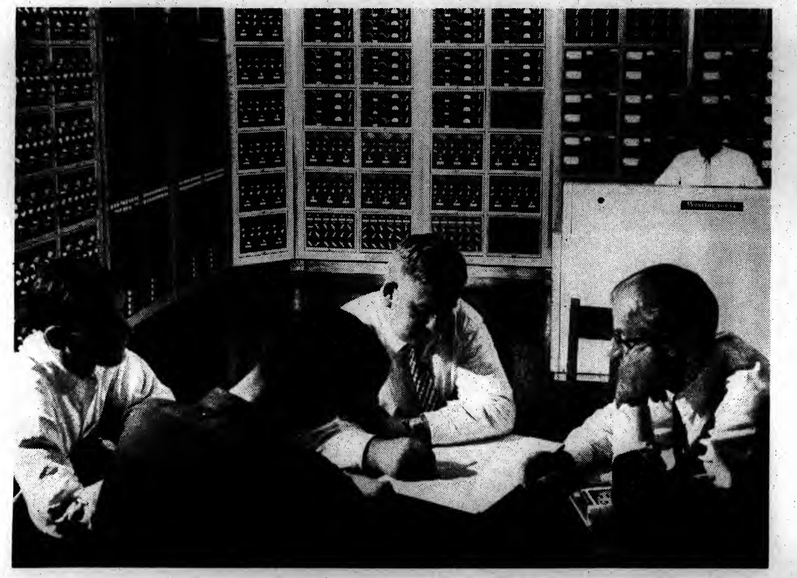
National Science Foundation Grants Money For Education

Reverend J. Bernard Hubbert, OSA, Assistant Dean of the Arts and Science Division announced this week that a grant of $14,270 was received from the National Science Foundation.

Purpose of the grant will be to aid the foundation's "In-Service Institute program for Secondary School Teachers". The program is primarily set up as a refresher course for secondary school teachers in the fields of mathematics and science.

Participating in the program will be some 13,000 secondary school teachers of science and mathematics in grades 7-12 to be held at 256 colleges and universities o fwhich Villanova is one.

Institutes are designed and conducted by individual universities and colleges to enable teachers to obtain additional knowledge of the subject matter of science and mathematics as well as to become acquainted with important textual and laboratory materials developed by study groups concerned with the improvement of course content materials.



A typical In-Service Institute meets once a week for about three hours—late afternoons, evenings, or Saturdays — throughout the academic year. Participants receive an allowance for travel and books, and pay no tuition or fees. Sponsoring institutions receive support for the direct costs of operation of the institute.

The secondary school program, which began in 1957, has increased steadily; more than 33,000 teachers have participated. Participants are selected by the sponsoring universities and not by the National Science Foundation.

You're in the public eye

Pennsylvania electric utilities, along with many other industry groups, are interested in your training for your future role. They're not only interested . . . they're participating.

Example No. 1 The AC network calculator pictured here has been aiding students and faculty at the Pennsylvania State University since 1957. This equipment was made possible by a grant of $100,000 from Pennsylvania electric companies, the Westinghouse Electric Corporation, and the Elliot Company.

Example No. 2 A nuclear power prototype, now being constructed at Saxton, Pa., at the expense of a group of investor-owned electric companies, will be available to both a Pennsylvania and New Jersey university as a facility for research and experiments.

Contributions to the education of future leaders in all fields by the state's electric companies are not confined to the engineering field. These companies give their support in various areas of education, to insure a better future for all Americans.

Spring Talk Given By Dr. Hafeez Malik On American Aid

The Villanova History and Political Science Department began its annual Spring Lecture Series with "American Foreign Policy and Southeast Asia" by Dr. Hafeez Malik, Assistant Professor of Political Science, March 28 in 110 C & F.

Introduced by Rev. John A. Klekotka, Dr. Malik is a native of Pakistan, and received a fellowship in journalism at Syracuse University. He pointed out that the national interest of the United States is the interest of the greater free world, so this country has a great responsibility in the operation of its foreign policy.

Dr. Malik is of the opinion that the United States should bring enough diplomatic pressure on India and Pakistan to bring them together as a bulwark against Communism, and we should also give enough aid to India and Pakistan to firmly establish free enterprise there.

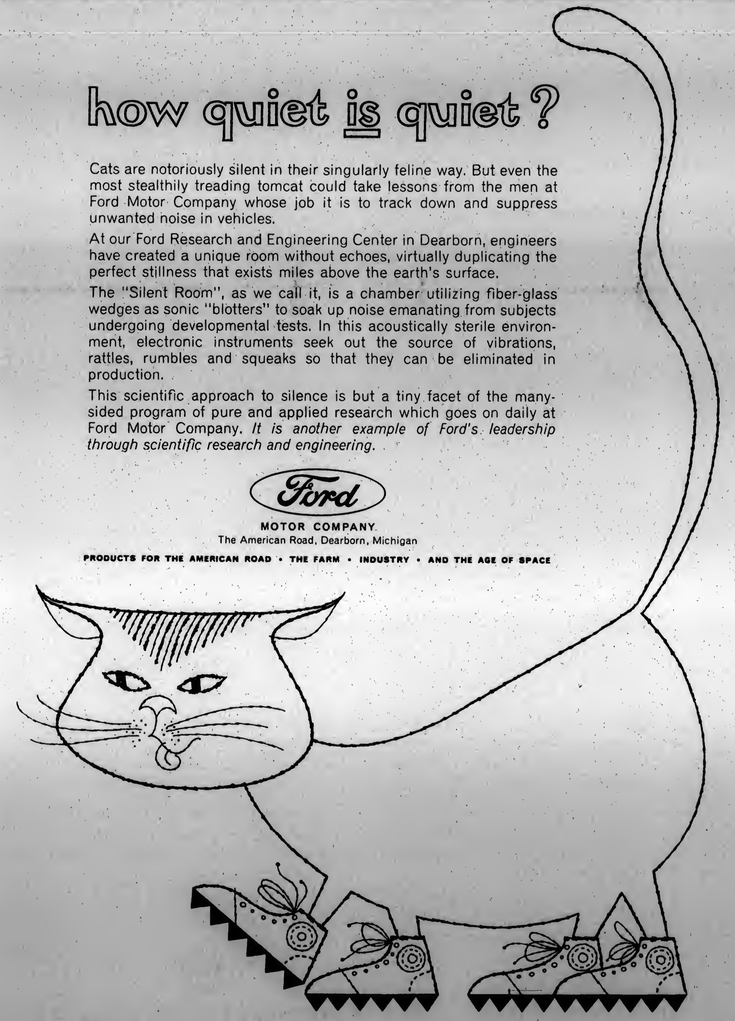
The show was written by William Rodavitch and Robert Raemore. Technical effects were the responsibility of Michael Bonasera and Thomas Kanaley.

how quiet is quiet?

Cats are notoriously silent in their singularly feline way. But even the most stealthily treading tomcat could take lessons from the men at Ford Motor Company whose job it is to track down and suppress unwanted noise in vehicles.

At our Ford Research and Engineering Center in Dearborn, engineers have created a unique room without echoes, virtually duplicating the perfect stillness that exists miles above the earth's surface.

The "Silent Room", as we call it, is a chamber utilizing fiber-glass wedges as sonic "blotters" to soak up noise emanating from subjects undergoing developmental tests. In this acoustically sterile environment, electronic instruments seek out the source of vibrations, rattles, rumbles and squeaks so that they can be eliminated in production.



This scientific approach to silence is but a tiny facet of the many-sided program of pure and applied research which goes on daily at Ford Motor Company. It is another example of Ford's leadership through scientific research and engineering.

Student Government

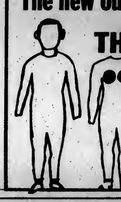
throwing beer parties, painting posters and requisitioning washing machines for certain halls." He pointed out that one of the greatest problems in the attainment of effectiveness of student government was the glory-seeker. This person likes to see his name on the council rolls only for his own selfish purposes.

Severe Apathy

Tom Lynch from LaSalle pointed out that at the 20th and Olney institution a definite problem was encounered from severe student apathy due, in part, to the large number of dayhops at the school. He added that this is being overcome by delegating more responsibility to the student government in the form of a student court and a student union building for which the students are entirely responsible.

A solution to the problem posed by the representative from St. Joseph's, that of the glory seeker, was offered by Lynch. He discussed the rigorous interviews which he and the other outgoing members of his council are administering to nominees for the new council in order to weed out these glory seekers.



In the closing speech Tom Wall of Villanova stated that student apathy is a prime factor in the lack of student government effectiveness. He pointed out that the council at Villanova is basically a service organization, not a governing body, and that this will continue to pose one of the greatest problems in making student government truly effective.

Rarely Satisfied

In reply to a statement from the floor that perhaps an answer to the problem of lack of student interest might be giving the students what they want, Wall stated that "they are rarely satisfied. Given one request, some will either complain or demand more," referring to the original problem of student apathy except where their own personal desires are concerned.

In closing the discussion, Joe Tate, moderator of the discussion, stated that activities such as the evening's panel were "a step in the right direction toward the improvement of student government at Villanova. If more students would come up with constructive criticism and put it before the Student Council, we would be more exective."

'Round the Bases

Begin The Other Game

by Joe Zawacki

Spring is here . . . or so the song goes. Which means that all the roundballs can be deflated and the men can take over. It's baseball time and even the Phillies-Colts in August is a less harsh punishment than Villanova-Scranton in the Palestra in December. Looking through a slightly jaded crystal bowl, here's one man's slightly cracked predictions for the coming season.

APRIL: In the American League, the Tigers will break fast prompting a Detroit writer to editorialize, "This is the year." In New York, a writer will sneer and say, "Wait until June." Roger Maris will have two homers for the month and Oscar Fraley will lead a barrage of copy stating that last year was a fluke. Cincinnati will break slow, the Cards and Giants fast. A Philly sportswriter, who complains about baseball articles in the winter, will write a basketball column. The Phils will be at the .500 level and Gene Mauch will be dazed.

MAY: Toward the end of the month, Walt Alston will be fired because of the Dodgers' troubles and Leo Durocher will act surprised when named as his successor. Mickey Mantle will hurt his leg. The Mets will win five in a row and someone will nominate ole Case for manager of the year. The Phils will still be at .500 and it will snow in the Sahara. The Giants and Tigers will still lead. KC owner Charles Finley will give a vote of confidence to manager Hank Bauer. Bauer will be fired. A Philly sportswriter, who complains about baseball articles in the winter, will write a football column.

JUNE: The Yanks, in third behind Detroit and Chicago, will engineer a big trade for a pitcher. The bottom of the American League will retain its status quo as it has for the last five years. Vada Pinson and Al Kaline will be leading their leagues in batting: Frank Robinson and Jim Gentile in homers. Don Drysdale will complain about Chavez Ravine and in the same month get fined for hitting a batter. The Cards and Pirate will make challenging moves at the Giants. The Braves' pitching will be in a state of collapse. Stan Musial will have set five more marks and buy a new house for his trophies.

JULY: The owners will meet and declare that there will only be one all-star game next year. The players will meet later and vote for two games. There will be two games next year. Stu Miller will throw a pitch and curfew will be called before it reaches the plate. The Phils will win four in a row and Gene Mauch will say, "This is a fine club." They will then proceed to lose 12 in a row. Maris will be batting .259 with 13 homers. The White Sox will take over first place, the Giants will hold. A Philly sportswriter, who complains about baseball articles in the winter, will write a hockey column.

AUGUST: The Mets will be hanging in fifth place and drawing at a rate that will reach a million. Casey will sneer at the Yanks who are fighting to hold third place. Baltimore's once heralded pitching staff will collapse. Norm Cash and Al Kaline will bat the Tigers back into first. Frank Lary will be 3-0 against the Yanks. Jim Piersall will throw his bat at a heckler. The new Washington stadium will look beautiful and empty. Musial and Minnie Minoso will push the Cards' pitching staff at the Giants. The Phils will be in 7th place and the Cubs will give up on their cat-o-nine managers. A Philly sportswriter, who complains about baseball articles in the winter, will write a skiing column.

SEPTEMBER-OCTOBER: The Yanks, plauged by injuries and the loss of Kubeck, will never get started. Detroit's pitching staff will hold off the White Sox and win the Series in six games. Gentile will lead in homers, Kaline in batting. The Giants' staff will collapse but the Dodgers will move too late to overtake the Cards, who will sneak in the back door with a patch-quilt lineup. Curt Simmons will win one of the two Card victories in the series. Stan Musial will retire and the game won't seem the same. The Phils will finish 7th and a Philly sportswriter, who complains about baseball articles during the winter, will start complaining.

Learning never stops for engineers at Western Electric

There's no place at Western Electric for engineers who feel that college diplomas signify the end of their education. However, if a man can meet our quality standards and feels that he is really just beginning to learn . . . and if he is ready to launch his career where learning is an important part of the job and where graduate-level training on and off the job is encouraged — we want and need him.

At Western Electric, in addition to the normal learning-while-doing, engineers are encouraged to move ahead in their fields by several types of educational programs. Western maintains its own full-time graduate engineering training program, seven formal management courses, and a tuition refund plan for out-of-hours college study.

This learning atmosphere is just one reason why a career at Western Electric is so stimulating. Of equal importance, however, is the nature of the work we do. Our new engineers are taking part in projects that implement the whole art of modern telephony, from high-speed sound transmission and solar cells to electronic telephone offices and computer-controlled production techniques.

Should you join us now, you will be coming to Western Electric at one of the best times in the company's history. In the management area alone, several thousand supervisory jobs are expected to open up to W.E. people within the next 10 years. And our work of building communications equipment and systems becomes increasingly challenging and important as the communications needs of our nation and the world continue to increase.

Challenging opportunities exist now at Western Electric for electrical, mechanical, industrial, and chemical engineers, as well as physical science, liberal arts, and business majors. All qualified applicants will receive careful consideration for employment without regard to race, creed, color or national origin. For more information about Western Electric, write College Relations, Western Electric Company, Room 6206, 222 Broadway, New York 38, New York. And be sure to arrange for a Western Electric interview when our college representatives visit your campus.

Charley Johnson Named Grid Captain During Spring Drill

Spring 1962 began on March 21. In the minds of Alex Bell and Company, however, fall began five days later as the football team began spring practice. The call to cleats and shoulder pads was answered by around 70 hopefuls. Since practice began, the number has been reduced to 55.

Losses through graduation and scholastic difficulties have created havoc in the line. Hank Gotard, Rege Magnus, Jack Weed, Jerry DeBalso just to name a few are missing. On defense, the likes of Tom O'Rourke and Rich Ross must be replaced. And judging by performances thus far, these gaps will probably be filled. "Chappie" Moore, Al Atkinson, and Harry Walters are expected to fiill the center and tackle positions respectively. Dick Sernyak, John McDonald and McDonnell have also looked impressive.

Wanted: Kicker

Another necessity is a good kick-off man. Jack Sherlock may fill this spot since he has been used as a punter. Despite some problems, Coach Bell said, "everyone returned in good condition and, barring injury, we should be able to put a respectable team on the field".

Villanova's only senior basketball players Joe Walsh (l.) and Hubie White (center) pose with Jack Kraft after the South Jersey club's banquet. Walsh was the recipient of the Chuck Drizin Award and White was presented the Michael Saxe Award.

White And Walsh Win Awards At South Jersey Club Fete

The Villanova club of South Jersey paid tribute to Villanova's surprising 1961-62 basketball team last Thursday, highlighted by the presentation of the Michael Saxe award to Hubie White as the most valuable player in the Big Five, as chosen by the five city coaches. The award is named after the former Villanova coach.

Walsh Honored

White was also voted most valuable on the team by vote of his teammates. Also honored was senior Joe Walsh, who received the Herman "Chuck" Drizin award, named after the former Villanova scholar-athlete who died in 1945 on Iwo Jima. The recipient is selected on exhibiting the same qualities as did the former Villanovan.

Two Speakers Mark Evening's Brevity

Brevity was the order of the evening as Al Severance and Jack Kraft were the only speakers, the latter commenting on the season which saw his unheralded hoopsters win their first 12 games and eventually finish with a 21-7 slate, finishing runnerup to Wake Forest in the Eastern regionals.

Mermen's Star Trio

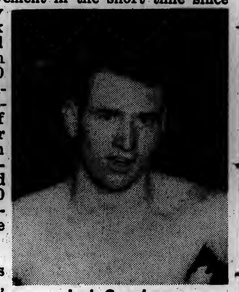
by Matt Mone

With the last of the post-season meets now over, it can be said without qualification that the varsity and freshman swimming teams have done their share in contributing to Villanova's sport millenium. This has been a year for championship teams, and the varsity mermen have kept this spirit alive by capturing the New Jersey AAA—"Trenton Times"—invitational championship and bringing Villanova the first swimming team championship in its history.

Following this victory, they went on to capture fourth place in the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships, finishing ahead of many of the perennial Eastern powers including Army and Navy. This win takes on added significance in the twenty-five points scored by the Wildcats were the first ever recorded by a Villanova team in this annual classic.

Many Reasons

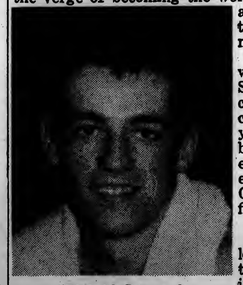
The reasons for this tremendous upsurge are many and varied. The main reason, however, lies in the roles played by three men in forming the nucles of a powerful team. This trio consists of one senior, Don Reed, and two sophs Jack Geoghegan and Dick McDonough.



Don Reed

Reed, co-captain of this year's team, is one of the all around swimmers ever to matriculate at Villanova. Throughout the season, Don has been called upon to swim every stroke and performed esually well wherever he was needed. He joined Geoghegan and McDonough as the first Villanovans ever to compete in the NCAA championships and distinguished himself by setting two varsity records.

Iona Freestyler



Jack Geoghegan, a free styler from Iona Prep in New York, came to Villanova without much background as a high-school swimmer. His improvement in the short time since he began to swim seriously has been phenomenal. Jack was voted the Most Improved Swimmer of last year's frosh ssuad after reducing his 100 yd. freestyle time from a mediocre 58.0 seconds to a respectable 49.8 seconds. The apex of the current season came for the muscular sophomore in the recent Eastern championships where he placed third in the 220 and fifth in the 100 yd. freestyle, thereby establishing himself as one of the best in the East.

Jack Geoghegan

An All-American

Rounding out this trio is Villanova's first All-American, and the captain-elect for next year's squad, Dick McDonough. Over and over again, McDonough has proved to be the key man in the mermen's success story. Coach Ed Geisz believes that Dick "is on the verge of becoming the world's best swimmer". He has already proven himself to be the East's finest college swimmer.

Dick McDonough

The nineteen year old soph who hails from Seton Hall in South Orange, N.J., recently captured the Eastern Intercollegiate titles in the 200 yds. freestyle and 200 yds. butterfly. He narrowly missed a third title when he was edged by Ed Spencer of North Carolina in the 100 yd. butterfly event.

Long Rest

Dick, whose plans include a long rest from a grueling training schedule which he is by no means ready to rest on his laurels. He has already set his sights on capturing the National AAU title which narrowly avoided him last summer.

When queried about Villanova's swimming future, all Coach Geisz will do is smile with delight and point to the record of the current freshman team which wrapped up their season with a 12-2 standing.

Rugby Squad Anticipates Rebuilding Team Defeats LaSalle, St. Joesph's

by Jim Brennon

Spring is traditionally the harbinger of baseball and beer picnics. Here at Villanova, it is also the time for rugby, that seemingly undisciplined brand of English football. In the past several weeks, the Villanova Rugby Football club has played five games. In two of the games, considered only practice games because substitution was allowed, Villanova lost to heavier and taller Manhattan (3-0) and Princeton (14-0).

In three other, pre-season, non-league games, Villanova beat Temple (24-0) and St. Joe's (3-0), the latter game being played in foot-deep mud. They dominated the play against Columbia, over St. Pat's weekend, but couldn't score a try and had to settle for a 0-0 tie.

Rebuilding Year

Ralph Lewis, team scrum-half and captain, commenting on the team's play during these games said that this would be a rebuilding year, unique in that the V.R.F.C. would win a good share of its games. Of last year's first fifteen that went all the way to the semi-final playoffs, eleven have been lost through graduation and injury.

However, Lewis said that this year's club was improving rapidly with experience and that it could very well out-do last year's performance.

In the backfield, Lewis has returned to his scrum-half position and is once again producing what is known as a "good show." Lucien Churchill St. Onge, better known as "Luke", is the other returning starter from last year. At his wing spot, Luke is perhaps the most exciting runner on the club.

Mike Ennis and John Robbins, both of whom had game experience last year, add a significant punch to the offensive attack and play an excellent defensive game. Two other backs who have also figured in the improving performance of the club are Tom Kane and Jerry Jones. At the present, both are inactive because of injuries to their knees, but are expected to return their talents to the team after Easter.

Little Hustlers

Just as it was last year, the forwards suffer because of their lack of size. Of the eight forwards, only three are over six feet and these just barely. This factor hurts them in lineouts. Don Crouthamel, a returning forward and scrum-leader said that this deficiency has been compensated for by the recent hustle of the forwards.

Don said that he expected the forwards to continue to make up for their lack of size with their speed, hustle and agressive play. This seems to be a certainty with Crouthamel and Pete Triolo leading Kilmartin, Kraus, Carson, Steffora, Lattore, Fagan and the others in an understated "good effort."

This weekend at Boston, The V.R.F.C. will play their first two Union games against the Boston R.F.C. on the 14th and M.I.T. on the 15th. The first weekend after Easter, Villanova will play Harvard on Saturday morning and Notre Dame in the afternoon, here at Villanova.

This promises to be one of the most exciting days of rugby that we'll see this spring. On May 5th, Junior Week, theV.R.F.C. will play Manhattan here. The following weekend, they will play the Westchester (N.Y.) R.F.C. and the Philadelphia 1st Troop at home. On May 19th, they travel to New York to play Williams.

Playoff Chances

Villanova is in the second division this season.

Umpires Needed

All is not well in the Intramural Department, however, as there is a reported lack of sufficient umpiring at the softball games. In regard to this need, Jim Moran requests that anyone who is available at 3:30 or 4:30 in the afternoons to come to the intramural office in 112 Alumni Hall to offer his services.

In the other areas of intramural sports, Ed Geisz has announced that late entries for the tennis doubles and singles matches that started Tuesday, April 10, will be accepted until the following Thursday, April 12.

Jim Moran is advertising a one-day golf tournament to be held at the Main Line Golf Club on Thursday, April 17. All persons interested are invited to attend a briefing to be held on Monday, April 16, in 204 Vasey Hall at 7:30 p.m.

Golfers Lose Opener Bilder Only Winner Against West Point

Villanova's golf team opened its 1962 season with a 6-1 defeat at the hands of West Point last Saturday. The Wildcats only winner on the waterlogged course was Captain Joe Bilder who carded a 76. Tomorrow the team faces Rutgers at Foresgate, New Jersey. Saturday's match is at Princeton.

Veterans Back

The team had most of last year's veterans back and they should do well this year. The 1961 Villanova golfers finished with a 13-1 record, one of the best records in the school in any sport.

Wildcat Baseball Squad Sandwiches Loss To Rutgers Between Two Wins

by Joe McCarthy

Two victories, one defeat, and a postponement highlighted the activity of Villanova's varsity baseball squad in their inaugural week of play.

The opening game against a weak Philadelphia Textile team gave the 'Cats occasion to rack up a 22-0 shutout. The mound staff behind sophomore right-hander Bruce Howard and junior Mike Kiley held Textile to no runs and no hits over nine innings.

Howard struck out eleven in his six innings and faced the minimum 18 batters. Kiley followed him by striking out three in the final three frames. The only man to reach base for Textile got on by an error in the eighth inning. Only once did they manage to get the ball out of the infield.

David Unloads

First baseman Richie Richman drove in five runs on three hits in his four trips to lead the Wildcat atack. Jack Lynch, Don Melega and Hank David each contributed three runs batted in. David also slugged the only home run of the game with one on in the eighth. He doubled in his only other time at bat to drive across another run.

Eight errors by Textile and four by their third baseman were also helpful in letting the 'Cats score in six of the eight innings they came to bat. The Wildcat lineup had 18 hits in 45 official trips to complete the rout. It was the second lop-sided victory for the Main Liners in two years, winning last year 17-1.

The Wildcats found the opposition a litle stiffer in their second game as Rutgers pulled out a 6-3 win. The victory was Rutgers second against the Main Liners in two years. Last year they stopped an eight game Villanova winning streak 2-1.

Four Unearned Runs

Four unearned runs last Wednesday prevented the Villanova nine from realizing victory. Starting out well, the 'Cats scored two in the first and added another in the second.

But the scoring ended there and Rutgers iced the contest with four runs in the fourth off starter Phil Fidalgo went 4 2/3 innings in the losing effort and was relieved by Pete Connors who allowed another score, a bases-empty home run, in the seventh. Bill Smith yielded the final Rutgers tally in the eighth.

Catcher Al Wiegand and Bruce Howard playing in the right-field slot led the team in the offensive department. Wiegand had a perfect day with three hits in as many trips while also knocking in a run. Howard continued to hit, getting two in three tries.

Three Errors

The winners combined three hits, a walk, and an error for their fourth inning scoring outburst. Both teams finished the game with seven hits but the deciding factor, three Wildcat errors, won the game for Rutgers.

Getting back on the victory trail last Friday, the 'Cats downed the University of Maine varsity 10-5 for their second victory. Maine entered the contest with a 4-2 slate which had been compiled on a 11 day tour of the south.

Mike Kiley received credit for the win but failed to finish the game. Maine chased Kiley to the showers in the sixth with a three run rally to close the Villanova lead to 7-5 in the sixth inning. Pete Connors relieved Kiley with none out and quelled the visitors on three hits over the last four frames.

Wiegand Hiting

Five players got two hits apiece as the 'Cats pounded the Maine mound staff for 14 hits. Wiegand and Howard were again the pace-setters, as each drove three runs across the plate.

The Penn State game scheduled for Saturday was postponed due to the heavy rains Friday and Saturday. Attempts will probably be made to reschedule it.

Bruce Howard will face an undefeated LaSalle squad (4-0) Thursday in the first Big Five game for the 'Cats. The game will start at 2:30 on the Villanova field. The 'Cats are seeking their fifth straight Big Five Championship.

Saturday Phil Fidalgo will attempt to average one of last year's losses against Navy in a 2:00 home game. Lafayette, holders of the only other victory over the 1961 Wildcats, also travel to Villanova next Monday.

'Cat Nips — Captain for this year's baseball team is Senior Dan Renn, who is also Treasurer of his class and a Student Council member. Renn contributed a sparkling catch of a pop bunt to help quell the sixth inning rally in the Maine game.

Hank David's Textile home run was on a 400 foot drive to deep center which bounced back to the fence. By the time all the relays had been completed, David had himself an inside-the-park home run.

CINDER-BOX

Trackmen Appear Optimistic

by Ed Lohr

Villanova's nationally renown track team heads into its 1962 outdoor campaign under a full head of steam with its ultimate sights set at Eugene, Oregon, the site of the 1962 NCAA championships, June 15 and 16.

The already crowned IC4A and AAU indoor champions open up their schedule this weekend at the Quantico Relays in Quantico, Va.

Following the Queens-Iona Relays at Randalls Island April 21, the 'Cats enter the Penn Relays, April 27, 28, to shoot for an unprecedented and almost unbelievable eighth consecutive Mile Relay Championship of American and also to defend their half mile and shuttle hurdles relay titles.

It Happens Every Year

At about 5:46 Saturday April 28, Villanova's confirmed underdog and usually patched-up mile relay quartet will scamper around the trampled chewed-up. two furlong oval under a chilling drizzle and challenge the nation's best in that event, including Abilene Christian, Morgan State, and NYU, for the eight straight time.

The other local highlight will be the 1962 IC4A championships, where Villanova will defend its title on its home cinders, May 25 and 26.

The peak of success for the experienced squad would be to duplicate Jumbo Elliot's 1957 feat, when his speedsters captured the national crown. The following are the Wildcats who can send Villanova to the top of the Collegiate world for the second time in five years.

Frank Budd ..... Sr. 5-11 172 Asbury Park, N.J.

Frank is a must in the NCAA scheme. Defending champ in both 100 and 200 must repeat. Aiming for 9 sec. flat.

Rolando Cruz ..... So. 5-10 153 Puerto Rico

Main reason 'Cats can increase over last year's 3rd place. NCAA Frosh pole vault record holder—15-5.

Jon Dante ..... Sr. 6-1 157 Union, N.J.

Jon ran the 6th fastest 880 qualifying time in '61 NCAA, but failed to make finals because he was in fast heat.

Paul Drayton ..... Sr. 6-0 165 Cleveland, Ohio

Penn Relay stalwart. Both half and mile relays. Will push Budd in NCAA, must capture at least two seconds.

Billy Joe ..... Jr. 6-2 260 Coatesville, Pa.

Fourth in last year's NCAA shot put. It will be tough to hold his own—but so is Billy. IC4A dark horse.

Doug Kerr ..... Jr. 6-5 210 Edison, N.J.

Doug broke the V.U. record in the javelin four times last year. Best—229-1. Second in IC4A. Very hard worker.

Leon Pras ..... Sr. 6-2 185 Ironia, N.J.

If Villanova has a chance to take it all, the hurdlers must score. Leon can do it, barring injuries. Best in 120 yd. highs.

Bob Raemore ..... Sr. 5-11 155 Williamsport, Pa.

Rises to the occasions like no other Villanovan. Has been masterful in Penn Relays in both 880 and mile relays.

Pat Traynor ..... Jr. 6-2 165 Havertown, Pa.

Fantastic surprise of 1961 NCAA—second to Lawler of ACC in the Steeplechase. Recovering from injury—he'll be back!

Carl Wagner ..... Sr. 5-10 150 Philadelphia

A perfect team man. Can't win that big number eight without him. Will probably run second leg in both Penn Relays and IC4A.

Vic Zwolak ..... So. 5-9 140 Wilmington, Del.

Big surprise in indoor IC4A mile—gained enough confidence that he could repeat outdoors. Strong and has great potential.

Wildcat Baseball Squad Sandwiches Loss To Rutgers Between Two Wins

by Joe McCarthy

Two victories, one defeat, and a postponement highlighted the activity of Villanova's varsity baseball squad in their inaugural week of play.

The opening game against a weak Philadelphia Textile team gave the 'Cats occasion to rack up a 22-0 shutout. The mound staff behind sophomore right-hander Bruce Howard and junior Mike Kiley held Textile to no runs and no hits over nine innings.

Howard struck out eleven in his six innings and faced the minimum 18 batters. Kiley followed him by striking out three in the final three frames. The only man to reach base for Textile got on by an error in the eighth inning. Only once did they manage to get the ball out of the infield.

David Unloads

First baseman Richie Richman drove in five runs on three hits in his four trips to lead the Wildcat attack. Jack Lynch, Don Mclega and Hank David each contributed three runs batted in. David also slugged the only home run of the game with one on in the eighth. He doubled in his only other time at bat to drive across another run.

Eight errors by Textile and four by their third baseman were also helpful in letting the 'Cats score in six of the eight innings they came to bat. The Wildcat lineup had 18 hits in 45 official trips to complete the rout. It was the second lop-sided victory for the Main Liners in two years, winning last year 17-1.

The Wildcats found the opposition a litle stiffer in their second game as Rutgers pulled out a 6-3 win. The victory was Rutgers second against the Main Liners in two years. Last year they stopped an eight game Villanova winning streak 2-1.

Four Unearned Runs

Four unearned runs last Wednesday prevented the Villanova nine from realizing victory. Starting out well, the 'Cats scored two in the first and added another in the second.

But the scoring ended there and Rutgers iced the contest with four runs in the fourth off starter Phil Fidalgo went 4 2/3 innings in the losing effort and was relieved by Pete Connors who allowed another score, a bases-empty home run, in the seventh. Bill Smith yielded the final Rutgers tally in the eighth.

Catcher Al Wiegand and Bruce Howard playing in the right-field slot led the team in the offensive department. Wiegand had a perfect day with three hits in as many trips while also knocking in a run. Howard continued to hit, getting two in three tries.

Three Errors

The winners combined three hits, a walk, and an error for their fourth inning scoring outburst. Both teams finished the game with seven hits but the deciding factor, three Wildcat errors, won the game for Rutgers.

Getting back on the victory trail last Friday, the 'Cats downed the University of Maine varsity 10-5 for their second victory. Maine entered the contest with a 4-2 slate which had been compiled on a 11 day tour of the south.

Mike Kiley received credit for the win but failed to finish the game. Maine chased Kiley to the showers in the sixth with a three run rally to close the Villanova lead to 7-5 in the sixth inning. Pete Connors relieved Kiley with none out and quelled the visitors on three hits over the last four frames.

Wiegand Hiting

Five players got two hits apiece as the 'Cats pounded the Maine mound staff for 14 hits. Wiegand and Howard were again the pace-setters, as each drove three runs across the plate.

The Penn State game scheduled for Saturday was postponed due to the heavy rains Friday and Saturday. Attempts will probably be made to reschedule it.

Bruce Howard will face an undefeated LaSalle squad (4-0) Thursday in the first Big Five game for the 'Cats. The game will start at 2:30 on the Villanova field. The 'Cats are seeking their fifth straight Big Five Championship.

Saturday Phil Fidalgo will attempt to average one of last year's losses against Navy in a 2:00 home game. Lafayette, holders of the only other victory over the 1961 Wildcats, also travel to Villanova next Monday.

'Cat Nips — Captain for this year's baseball team is Senior Dan Renn, who is also Treasurer of his class and a Student Council member. Renn contributed a sparkling catch of a pop bunt to help quell the sixth inning rally in the Maine game.

Hank David's Textile home run was on a 400 foot drive to deep center which bounced back to the fence. By the time all the relays had been completed, David had himself an inside-the-park home run.

Trackmen Appear Optimistic

by Ed Lohr

Villanova's nationally renown track team heads into its 1962 outdoor campaign under a full head of steam with its ultimate sights set at Eugene, Oregon, the site of the 1962 NCAA championships, June 15 and 16.

The already crowned IC4A and AAU indoor champions open up their schedule this weekend at the Quantico Relays in Quantico, Va.

Following the Queens-Iona Relays at Randalls Island April 21, the 'Cats enter the Penn Relays, April 27, 28, to shoot for an unprecedented and almost unbelievable eighth consecutive Mile Relay Championship of American and also to defend their half mile and shuttle hurdles relay titles.

It Happens Every Year

At about 5:46 Saturday April 28, Villanova's confirmed underdog and usually patched-up mile relay quartet will scamper around the trampled chewed-up, two furlong oval under a chilling drizzle and challenge the nation's best in that event, including Abilene Christian, Morgan State, and NYU, for the eight straight time.

The other local highlight will be the 1962 IC4A championships, where Villanova will defend its title on its home cinders, May 25 and 26.

The peak of success for the experienced squad would be to duplicate Jumbo Elliot's 1957 feat, when his speedsters captured the national crown. The following are the Wildcats who can send Villanova to the top of the Collegiate world for the second time in five years.

Frank Budd .....Sr. 5-11 172 Asbury Park, N.J.

Frank is a must in the NCAA scheme. Defending champ in both 100 and 200 must repeat. Aiming for 9 sec. flat.

Rolando Cruz .....So. 5-10 153 Puerto Rico

Main reason 'Cats can increase over last year's 3rd place. NCAA Frosh pole vault record holder—15-5.

Jon Dante .....Sr. 6-1 157 Union, N.J.

Jon ran the 6th fastest 880 qualifying time in '61 NC AA, but failed to make finals because he was in fast heat.

Paul Drayton .....Sr. 6-0 165 Cleveland, Ohio

Penn Relay stalwart. Both half and mile relays. Will push Budd in NCAA, must capture at least two seconds.

Billy Joe .....Jr. 6-2 260 Coatesville, Pa.

Fourth in last year's NCAA shot put. It will be tough to hold his own—but so is Billy. IC4A dark horse.

Doug Kerr .....Jr. 6-5 210 Edison, N.J.

Doug broke the V.U. record in the javelin four times last year. Best—229-1. Second in IC4A. Very hard worker.

Leon Pras .....Sr. 6-2 185 Ironia, N.J.

If Villanova has a chance to take it all, the hurdlers must score. Leon can do it, barring injuries. Best in 120 yd. highs.

Bob Raemore .....Sr. 5-11 155 Williamsport, Pa.

Rises to the occasions like no other Villanovan. Has been masterful in Penn Relays in both 880 and mile relays.

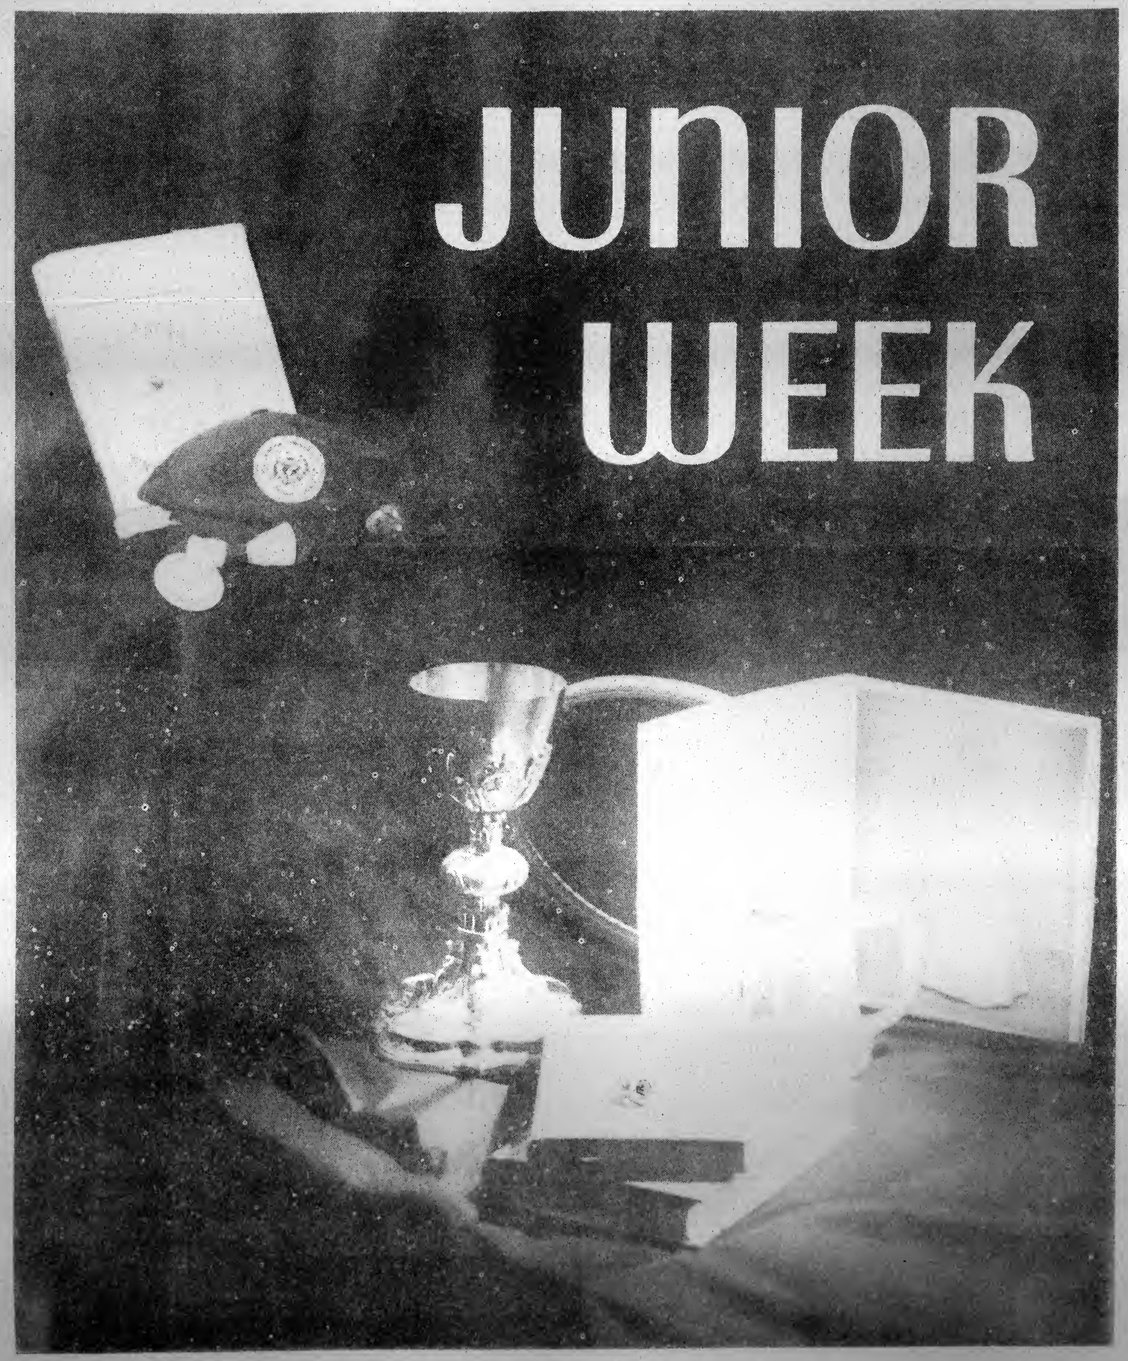
Pat Traynor .....Jr. 6-2 165 Havertown, Pa.

Fantastic surprise of 1961 NCAA—second to Lawler of ACC in the Steeplechase. Recovering from injury—he'll be back!

Carl Wagner .....Sr. 5-10 150 Philadelphia

A perfect team man. Can't win that big number eight without him. Will probably run second leg in both Penn Relays and IC4A.

Vic Zwolak .....So. 5-9 140 Wilmington, Del.



Big surprise in indoor IC4A mile—gained enough confidence that he could repeat outdoors. Strong and has great potential.

Tate Provides Impetus In Class Plans and Activities for Week

by John Driscoll

The events of Junior Week not only bring a conclusion to the activities of the Junior year, they also reflect the efforts of many who selflessly served their class. However, behind the steering wheel of the week's activities and all the other events of the year have been four men of determined leadership —the class officers.

They have successfully provided the force and guidance without which the year could not have been a success. Immediately after last year's elections, the new officers selected a steering committee and optimistically planned for the future. Even then they moved quickly to insure success.

Part of this impetus has come from able-organizer, President James Tate, who has been described as "somowhat loquacious but always responsible".

Jim's success at Villanova reflects his experience gained in high school. During his years at St. Francis de Sales High School in Toledo, Ohio, Jim was active in student government, publications and social committees. Since enrolling at Villanova he has been active in Belle Masque Society, Phi Kappa Pi Fraternity, Turf and Tinsel, intramurals and the American Society of Civil Engineers. Since becoming President, though, Jim has devoted his efforts principally to the Junior class and the Student Council.

Jim has become versed in many fields. He first enrolled in physics, transferred to engineering, and is presently majoring in industrial administration, preparing for a career in either sales or public relations.

An indispensible link to this year's success has been Rocco Guidice, who is presently serving his second term as vice-president. Rocky has proven himself to be a person of strong motivation and thoroughness. Last Fall he served as co-chairman of the Ring Mass and Communion Breakfast Committees, and this Spring has acted as a co-chairman of the Jazz Concert Program Committee. At the Communion Breakfast Rocky ably served as the master-of-ceremonies.

In Delta Pi Mu Fraternity Rocky this year served as head pledgemaster and was elected as next year's president. After graduation Rocky will enter graduate school.

Secretary Frank Gillbride, who can type the class minutes with only two fingers, has proved himself to be one of the class's most conscientious and diligent workers. He, as secretary, has not only been the recorder of the minutes, but has acted as the publicity agent for the class, its projects, and its committees. Also, Frank served with Rocky Guidice as co-chairman of the Ring Mass, Communion Breakfast and Jazz Concert Program Committees.

Aside from his class occupations, the secretary's activities have included the Spirit Committee, Turf and Tinsel, the Pre-Law Society, and the Delta Pi Epsilon Fraternity, of which he was one of this year's pledgemasters and as of next year, vice-president. Despite all his many interests, Frank has maintained a 3.30 cumulative average.

For treasurer of the class we have James O'Brien, formerly of Malvern Prep. Jim has been highly active and successful during his three years, and is typical of a class leader. He has won two varsity letters in basketball for his important contributions over the last two seasons. Recently the team elected him as next year's co-captain. Jim is an honor Chemistry student and plans to enter graduate school.

Films and Awards To Highlight The Subdued Smoker

by Ed Lowandoski

This year, as in the past, one of the highlights of Junior Week will be the annual class smoker. In departure from tradition and in deference to Belle Masque, the smoker will be held in the day-hop cafeteria in Dougherty Hall on Wednesday night, May 2, at 7:30 p.m.

Chairman and master of ceremonies Marty Whalen has planned an extremely colorful program which includes films of the past year's athletic endeavors. These films should be of extraordinary interest this year due to the successes of our football and basketball teams, the emergence of our track team as the best in the nation, annd the new prominence of our swimming team. Included will be films of the key victories which led to the Sun Bowl and the N.C.A.A. basketball tournament, and also the important track and swimming meets of the year. It will be noted that many of those in starring roles in these films will be our Junior atheletes.

AWARD

The high point of the evening will occur with the presentation of the award for the best Junior athelete, as voted by the coaches. During the affair the class will enjoy Italian cuisine (hoagies) and non-alcoholic beverages (cokes) free of charge. Matric cards must be shown to gain admittance to the smoker. Attendance at this smoker is mandatory for all sports-minded and loyal juniors.

Three members of the Dinner Dance Committee survey the inside entrance of the Downingtown Motor Inn during their last arrangement-making visit.

Dinner Dance Setting Provides Plush Air

by Joe Mosher

Seeing is believing! That's the only way in which one can describe the Downingtown Motor Inn, scene of this year's Junior Class Dinner Dance. Before seeing this magnificent spectacle, I wondered what could be the attraction of a place eighteen miles from the University. But my question was soon answered when I was taken on a personal tour by Mr. Monnet, manager of the luxurious Inn.

DESCRIPTION OF THE INN

Starting on the tour, we proceeded through an intimate cocktail lounge, before entering the ballroom where the dinner will be served. With a cool tone of ice blue and flowing music, no atmosphere could be more appropriate for a spring-time formal. Mr. Monnet said that the room comfortably seats five-hundred and fifty couples plus the head table for the invited guests. Suffice it to say, I was overwhelmed by its beauty.

What about the dancing facilities? Whose band will we dance to? Till what time may we dance? These questions were soon answered when we proceeded to the lower ballroom. With dim lights, music by Paul Judge, and dancing until the wee hours of the morning, what more could one ask to top off an evening such as this? Enough said on my part, because not until you see it, will you believe it!

FORMULA FOR SUCCESS

The evening will start with a reception at 6:00 p.m., followed by the dinner at 7:00 p.m. Upon entering the ballroom for dinner, a program will be given to each one of the guests, and favors placed on the table as a momento of this unforgettable night. Immediately after dinner, the Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, will address the Class of '63, followed by Nick Dinanio announcing the Queen and her Court.

SELL OUT

Chairman of the ticket sales, Bill Armstrong announced that tickets are on sale in the Pie Shoppe and will continue to be sold until May 5. Not being too optimistic, General Chairman John Canuso said, "With the way tickets are moving, we expect well over 500 couples to attend."

Attending the function with guest speaker Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova University, will be Reverend Norbert L. Whitley, OSA, University Chaplain, giving the invocation. Reverend Richard Appicci, OSA, Junior Class moderator, Reverend William Farrell, OSA, Dean of Student Activities will be present with Reverend Joseph Gildea,OSA, Vice-President for Student Affairs, and Reverend John Curran, OSA, Vice-President of Financial Affairs. Also present will be Reverend George McLaughlin, OSA, Dean of Men; and Miss M. Dorothy Boyle, Dean of Women; and Reverend Edward King, OSA, Vice-President of Public Relations and Development.

The menue for the dinner was announced by Chairman Canuso as being: Fruit Cocktail, Salad, Roast Prime Ribs of Beef, Baked Potato, Peas, Desert, and Coffee or Milk.

This affair could not be summed up more appropriately than when Chairman Canuso said, "With such fine atmosphere, fine music, and exceptionally fine food — what better combination could there be to culminate this unforgettable week."

The Big "F"

Maynard And The Lads Combine At Jazz Concert

by Tom Semmer

Another all-time great at Villanova University, the annual Spring Junior Weekend opens up with the fine sounds of Maynard Ferguson and The Four Lads.

The Junior Class once again upholds the fine tradition of a splended weekend. The tradition I speak of, naturally does not begin with the Class of '63, nor will it end here. This tradition is part of the Archives of Villanova. We can look back into the records of past Junior Weekends, back to March of 1935 when the Dorsey Brothers highlighted the Junior Weekend. On through years the Juniors have repeatedly produced a Weekend which will be remembered by their class.

It is by presenting two reknowned groups that we hope to stimulate the interest of all on the night of May 4th. The diversity of entertainment is stimulating, for each is known for their individual style of music.

The Class of '63 hopes to keep this tradition alive by presenting their favorites, who will take their respective places in the pages of Villanova history.

"AMERICA'S FOREMOST SINGING GROUP"

These same Four Lads found their first fame in backing up Jonny Rav on two of his best sellers "Cry" and "The Little White Cloud that Cried". Upon reaching such success as a back ground group, the Lads broke out on their own only to produce six records that sold over a million among which included, "My Little Angle", "Who Needs You", "No Not Much", "Standing on the Corner".

Originally from Canada, The Four Lads first performed together in the St. Michael's Choir. When they recognized their talent as a quartet the Lads went out on their own after perfecting a polished harmony and presentation. They launched their professional career in hotels and nightclubs in Canada until their fame increased to national reknown.

THE UNSUBORDINATED SQUEALS OF FERGUSON

Like The Four Lads, Maynard Ferguson is of Canadian birth. Ferguson, one of the greatest musicians of our time, was a master of the trumpet at the age of 15 when he headed his own orchestra.

On his way up Maynard played with such well known groups as Bix Beiderbecke, Charlie Parker, Lester Young and Stan Kenton. Kenton had special arrangements written for Ferguson. He realized the potential of the young Canadian trumpeter. It was with the Kenton Band that Maynard reached heights of fame equal only to his accomplishments with his own group. Maynard Ferguson is now pushing his predecessor Stan Kenton for the head of big music today.

A SHOW NOT TO MISS

Even though this show is one of the highlights of Junior Week, it can also be the highlight of every student's year. Bring your date, your parents, your friends, and sit back and enjoy both the soothing and the roaring sounds of two of America's greatest entertainers.

Mother Is Due Respect And Deep Gratitude For Lifelong Service

President's Message
Dear Mother:

Today is the day set aside to show our love and gratitude to you, our best girl, our Mother. This is a debt — one of love and gratitude which we owe you but can never fully repay. But more than a debt, it is the privelege and honor of being your son or daughter, which we can never be fully worthy of. For we can never give to you what you have given to us — our life and happiness. We can, however, try and repay this obligation of love by a show of complete devotion to you.

We honor you today, and initiate this lifelong devotion on your day — mothers' day. We have at times neglected you and on occasion, even have had the audacity to disregard your counsel. We were ignorant of the fact that you too have feelings, special feelings — feelings that only a mother can have — feelings that were deeply afflicted with hurt when we showed our disrespect to you. Allow us today to try and replace these injured feelings with ones of security, of love, and of devotion.

Today we thank you. Since material repayment is of only secondary importance, we kneel at Mass today and ask God to bestow on you all the graces necessary for you to obtain eternal satisfaction.

As you walk about the campus today, remember that this is your Villanova, for everything which we have, in essence belongs to you to a greater extent. Yes dear mother, this is your school, your home away from home. We are but a small portion of you but you are all of us. Wherever we go, whatever we do, you will be with us until that final day. And on that final day we will meet in heaven and once again give you thanks — but this time it will be a more complete and lasting thank you.

The chairmen who arranged this day have done an exceptional job in trying to make this a memorable occasion. On behalf of my classmates, welcome mothers, enjoy yourselves, and thanks for coming.

Very truly yours,
James E. Tate

Class Moderator, Is Able Leader In Movement Of New Enthusiasm

by John Pisarra and Bob Stefans

The arrival of Rev. Richard D. Appicci, OSA, on the Villanova campus and his appointment as Junior Class Moderator marked the advent of "The New Enthusiasm." This new enthusiasm pervading the Class of '63 has gained momentum with each succeeding affair and will culminate in Junior Week.

Richard Appicci was born in the town of North Bergen, N. J., the son of Domenico and Ida Appicci. Here Richard received both his elementary and secondary education, after which he was inducted into the United States Navy. He spent boot camp in Virginia and the remainder of his military life on the sunny shores of France.

ARE YOU APPICCI?

After fulfilling his military obligation, Richard entered the novitiate at New-Ham-Burg in 1953. Upon his arrival there, Richard Appicci (a-pee-chee) was asked, "Are you Appicci?" He replied that he was and immediately inquired as to the whereabouts of his room. The novice directed him to the main dormitory where again he was confronted with "Are you Appicci?" Two or three other novices seeing Richard, greeted him with the same salutation. Feeling rather confident and proud of himself Richard asked one of the novices how it was that everyone knew his name. "I simply asked are you a P.G. (post graduate)?"

STUDIES AT VILLANOVA

Completing his novitiate he went to St. Mary's Hall, Villanova, where he obtained his A.B. in Philosophy. Four years were then devoted to the study of Theology at the Augustinian College in Washington, D. C. He was ordained in June 1960, a member of the first class at the newly completed Shrine of the Immaculate Conception. Father Appicci was assigned to Villanova in 1961.

311 SHEEHAN

As a member of the faculty, Father teaches Theology in both the full time and part time divisions. He is also the moderator of the Radio Club, this interest stemming from a brief association with R.C.A. In addition, Father has become an integral part of dorm life. His room on the third floor of Sheehan Hall is renowned for its congeniality and warmth.

Acting as both priest and moderator for the class of '63, Father was a moral force behind the revitalization of the almost defunct Junior Class Communion Breakfast. His next endeavor was to guide the class to a successful Orphans' Weekend. This was more than adequately done. Both the Charity Ball and Orphans' Outing were tremendous successes. Junior Week, the highlight of the Villanova social calendar, has required considerable preparation and assiduity. Because of his inspiration and encouragement, The New Enthusiasm, originated in September, continues, and doubtlessly will sustain itself during the remainder of the year.

GRATIFYING ASSIGNMENT

Asked to comment on the Class of '63 Father unhesitantly replied, "Working with the officers and members of the Junior Class has added a new dimension to my assignment here at Villanova. It has given me the opportunity to meet many Juniors and at the same time to follow and even share their activities. I consider it a priceless experience."

It is not surprising that Junior Class President James Tate expresses the relationship between Father and the Class of '63 in much the same manner. He states, "Working with Father Appicci has made the performance of the obligations of the officers a pleasure rather than a task. His congeniality lends greatly to his effectiveness as Class Moderator and there is no doubt in my mind that he is the greatest asset of our class."

Delaney Leads Class With A 3.94 Average

by John J. Collins

This Junior Week may well go down in Villanova academic history as the week of the rise of the C&F Day-Hop. After three years of subjugation at the hands of the rest of the class, a Bonner High Bolivar has come to deliver his people and to raise them to their rightful level of recognition. Congratulations are in order for Robert E. Delany, an Accounting major, who leads our class academically with a cumulative average of 3.94. Bob is presently the leader of the terrible trio of the Villanova Accounting Division which also includes Wilfred Quigley and Joseph Kelly, both of whom are hovering around the 3.90 level.

LEADERS

As far as the other Commerce and Finance Divisions are concerned, they are also ably led. Robert Coogan leads the Pre-Law majors with a 3.62, while James Howley heads Finance majors boasting a 3.43. In Industrial Administration, high honors go to John Lucey as is the case with the remarkable Joseph Iamurri in the Marketing Division. John has maintained an average of 3.25, Joseph a 3.15.

Among the Junior candidates for the highly respected A.B. Degree, the man ranking highest is Thomas Castagna, a General Arts major by merit of an accumulated 3.79 average. Second in command is a History major, James Powell, with a 3.66. Other ranking Arts men are John DiGiuseppe of the Political Science Department with a 3.35. Paul DeMuro, an English major leading his comrades with an average of 2.96, and representing the Social Studies students is Mike DeLone who has a 2.88 to date.

Switching over to the related Science segment of the Arts and Sciences program, a close inspection would reveal that the Biology division, which gave us last year's leader, Joseph Brazel, almost did it again in the person of Adam M. Meyers' 3.90 was only .04 off the pace set by Delaney . Also deserving of verbal accolades are the 3.61 of William Allard in mathematics, the 3.58 of the basketball playing James O'Brien, and the 3.58 of Anthony Fisher. Other leaders in the Science division are Dennis O'Leary in Education with a 3.28, James Smith in Political Science with a 3.27, and Vincent Panetta maintaining a 3.10 in General Social Studies. The Psychology department is led by the 2.99 of Daniel Wells, while the same is true of Vincent Kennedy in Sociology by virtue of his 2.89 average.

Now turning our attention to the slide-rule bearing segment of this the class of 1963, we are able to see that the Engineers have done well for themselves and their school. All four leaders are well above the 3.50 plateau. Heading this noteworthy aggregation is John P. Corra standing out in Electrical Engineering with a commanding 3.90. Lest someone should forget, this is also a mere .04 short of the 3.94 held by Bob Delaney. Holding forth in the secondary spot among the elite is Robert Hartman of the Civil Engineering division with a strong 3.73. Rounding out this big four is a teammate of Hartman's on this year's championship intramural basketball team, Willard Geisler, who has achieved a 3.67 cumulative average in Chemical Engineering, and also Joseph Minecci who is just short of this mark with a 3.66 in Mechanical Engineering.

Athletes? Clash In Junior-Senior Muff Festivities

by Joe Tate

A question asked by many in recent weeks has been, "Can the Class of 1962 retain their Muff Day Crown?" The present Senior Class captured the crown during the Junior Week festivities last year, but must contend with a challenging array of athletes from the Junior Class in order to retain their crown this year.

The Junior-Senior Muff Day will be held on Tuesday, May 1st. The Co-chairman, Chick McDonnell and Jim Grimm, predict that this year's contest could be one of the most exciting events of Junior Week due to the calibre of athletes in the respective classes. Both the Junior and Senior classes have been recruiting men for the past two weeks in the hope of capturing the crown for their class.

FEMININE FACTOR ADDED

The activities will commence at 3 p.m. with a baseball game on Austin Field, House Courts. There has been an addition to this year's events with the inauguration of a nurses' basketball game on Thursday. Both games will be played according to intramural rules, as will the other events of the day. Also at this time, for those who wish to compete on an intellectual plane, there will be a chess match in Dougherty Hall with the outstanding players of each class participating.

The second round of activities will get under way at four o'clock with the track meet in the stadium. The feature event of the meet will be a 440 yd. dash for athletes over 225 lbs. There will also be a 100 yd. dash, shot-put and mile relay. Also scheduled at four, is a water polo match in the University pool.

INFAMOUS TUG-OF-WAR

At 4:45 p.m., the highlight of the afternoon will take place. The "tug-of-war" will be held on the football field and could prove to be the deciding factor in the day's activities.

Nurses Give Time And Enthusiasm To Jr. Projects

by Margaret Kinlan

Little is heard or known about the work which the Villanova nurses have contributed to the Class of 1963. Their show of loyalty and work at all the class and university functions is an inspiration for the class. It was with their help and tireless efforts that so much could be done.

NURSING PROGRAM

Matriculating in a four year nursing program at Villanova, the nurses, upon graduation, will receive the degree of Bachelor of Science in Nursing. With this degree the nurses are eligible to take the state board examination needed for recognition as registered nurses. This program constitutes also the theoretical aspects of nursing being taught at the neighboring Fitzgerald Mercy Hospital.

THEIR INDISPENSIBLE HELP

In Junior Class activities the nurses have participated frequently and faithfully. They have been called upon to represent the class and participate in the planning of the programs through the efforts of the Steering Committee. Part of these programs includes the very successful and gratifying Charity Weekend sponsored by the Junior Class. Through their helpful efforts, the combination of the Charity Ball, Orphans' Outing, and the Johnnys' Christmas Party, met with new and amazing successes. This same enthusiastic spirit was encountered in planning the Junior Week activities.

Though these activities have taken considerable time and relentless efforts, we know that we can expect this same enthusiasm and participation in the future.

Chorus Boys

Annual Farce Opens Junior Week Festivities

When the curtain rose on the evening of April 26th, 1962, another production of The Turf and Tinsel Club opened.

This year's original comedy satire, The Man In the Grey-Flannel Toga, was written by Mr. Robert Schiller, who also wrote Southern Comfort, last year's production. He is a graduate of Villanova, and former T 'n T performer himself. He also originated the well known jazz group, "The Villanovans".

Much praise must be given to Miss Betty Green, the director, and to Miss Bernie Donnelly, the choreographer.

The production is set around Mt. Olympus, home of the Gods and Goddesses of Greek Mythology.

The plot revolves around a mortal of the 20th Century, Willie Tilford, ably played by the star of the show and President of the Club, Joe Ruggiero. Willie is wandering around a museum at closing time, talking to the watchman (Ted Gatch). Willie touches one of the statues, and as he blacks out, the statues (Bob Capone, Jack Tallon, Ron Myers, and Bob Frattairh) come to life.

Shortly Willie finds himself before the throne of Zeus (Al Reinoso) and his family. In trying to solve everybody's problems, Willie creates more than a few of his own.

His one hope of escape is to win the Olympic Race. If he looses, Willie must marry one of the "Shady Ladies From Hades", and spend eternity on Olympus.

But Willie wins, and returns to earth very certain that he will henceforth keep his hands off museum pieces.

Since 1933 the Turf 'n Tinsel Club has delighted audiences with a mixture of songs, dances, and wild ad-libbing that could never be duplicated by a professional group.

'63 Steering Committee Completes Active Year

by Frank Gillbride

Due to its active participation and cooperation in assisting the class administration, this year's Steering Committee has played an integral role in the formulation of class policy. Throughout the year it has been this representative group that has been continually called upon to voice the opinions of the class on many of the significant decisions to be made — concerning such matters as The Ring Mass and Communion Breakfast, the Homecoming Float, Charity Weekend, and the various Junior Week activities.

The high attendance at the meetings and enthusiasm shown by the members has proven that President Tate and the executive committee made wise choices in the selection of the individual members of the class legislative body. Each member was personally selected for his interest and enthusiasm after applications were submited to the class officers last spring.

The members of this year's Steering Committee are as follows:

George Bavosa, C&F; John Bird, C&F; Joe Birle, C&F; John Brokars, Arts; Chuck Butler, Arts; John Canuso, Eng.; Bob Coogan, C&F; Joe Denahey, Eng.; Nick DiMarino, Eng.; John Driscoll, C&F; John Duffy, Arts; Joann Dynakowski, Nurs.; Gloria Ferraro, Nurs.; Tony Frate, Eng.; Mark Galgano, Eng.; Richard Gleason, C&F; Jim Jordon, Arts; Joe Klemek, Arts; Bob Kusek, Eng.; Paul Langnus, Arts; Sal LaRocca, C&F; Peter LaRose, Eng.; Jim Lombardi, Eng.; Bob MacAvoy, Eng.; Bob Mairone, C&F; Howard Moran, Arts; Joe Mosher, C&F; Cecile Mugnier, Nurs.; Dick Novia, Eng.; Bill Phelan, C&F; John Pisarra, Arts; Joe Ruggiero, Arts; Joe Salvinolo, Arts; Ralph Saviano, Arts; Tom Semmer, C&F; Jim Shiels, Arts; Bob Sim, Eng.; Bill Springler, C&F; Gerald Spoor, Eng.; Bob Sullivan, Eng.; Marion Wagner, Nurs.; Marty Whalen, C&F; and Fred White, C&F.

Also on the Steering Committee by way of office held: Jim Tate, Class President (Chairmen of the committee); Rocco Giudice, Class Vice-President; Frank Gilbride, Class Secretary; Jim O'Brien, Class Treasurer; Al LaMastra, Res. A&S Student Council Rep.; Joe Tate, Day A&S Student Council Rep.; Jim Howley, Res. C&F Student Council Rep.; Leo Rattigan, Day C&F Student Council Rep.; Bob Hartman, Res. Engr. Student Council Rep.; and Ray Shaffer, Day Engr. Student Council Rep.

Queen And Diaper Dan Finalists Proclaimed

The five finalists for the Queen of the Junior Prom were recently selected after an arduous task of narrowing down the thirty-two orginal applicants to the final number. Nick DiMarino, Chairman for the Queen Contest, revealed that the finalists were chosen by Mr. William Paul who is a member of the Promotion Department of the Ladys' Home Jourral, a division of Curtiss.

Mr. Paul named the five finalists as Jean Burke, Miss Patty Leslie, Miss Miss Mary Louise Kucharik, Miss Helen Claire McGunigle, and Miss Mary Ann Lytle. Pictures of the finalists appear on page eight of the Junior Week VILLANOVAN.

QUEEN CROWNED AT DANCE

The Prom Queen will be crowned during a special intermission at the Junior Dinner Dance. In addition to the crown, the Queen will receive a dozen red roses and an engraved pendent. Each finalist will receive an engraved charm as a memento of the fact that they were members of Her Majesty's Court.

Chairman DiMarino stated that all Juniors who have entered their dates in the contest can obtain their pictures in the Student Council Office on the Second Floor of Dougherty Hall this week.

He emphasized that if the photographs were not claimed within this period of time their return cannot be guaranteed.

DEAN OF DIAPER DANS

The Diaper Dan Contest, although of far less romantic signficance but of a sometimes somewhat "revealing" nature, once again provides a humorous note to the Week's activities. The hundreds of original applicants were pared down to a select group which was forwarded to Mrs. Robert Kennedy, wife of the Attorney General, for final Judgement. From this group Mrs. Kennedy selected Bob Merenda to be the winner. He also will receive an award for his photogenic pose.

Chairman of the Diaper Dan Contest, Jim Feller, stated that the Diaper Dan photographs will be displayed in the Center Lounge of Dougherty Hall on Mothers' Day. The Finalists of the contest appear on page twelve of the Junior Week VILLANOVAN.

Mothers' Day Signifies Tribute To "The Most Deserving Girl"

by James Howley

Today marks the start of the most memorable week in the four years of college life of the members of the class of 1963. For nearly three years we have been anticipating this week, mostly, however, in terms of the Jazz Concert and Dinner Dance. But as Junior Week was approaching we suddenly began to realize—or should have realized—that there is another day with an ever deeper significance to us. And that day is Mothers' Day.

This is the day that the members of the Junior Class pay tribute to the most "deserving" girl in their lives — their mothers. In honoring our Mom, each, in order to extract the full value and meaning of this day, should reflect upon what our mother means to us.

Too often we see our Moms in the light of just our laundress, our cook, our nurse, and our maid, but too few times do we bring these feelings to the surface and express our love and gratitude to her.

Today, for many, will probably be the first time that we devote a whole day exclusively to our mother. So, on this day, let us consider with feeling and sentiment, just who our mother is and what she has done for us. Let's bear in mind that great pain she happily endured in giving us life.

Remember the distressing times we have caused her. We should all remember the times she dressed us and fed us when we were unable to do it for ourselves, and she assisted us in reading, writing, and 'rithmetic.

It was our Mom who stuck by us in the thick and thin, even though we strained her patience to the breaking point. It was mother who did not tell Dad when you have done something mischievous.

Just try to comprehend the infinite number of things she has gone without to make our education a reality.

Today, in paying tribute to our mothers, let us show appreciation and gratitude for the aid and direction that she has always given us. Let us strive to make this day not only one of the most memorable in our lives, but also one of the most memorable for her. We can do this by showing her what's in our hearts.

When the weights of life hang heavily
Upon my weary heart,
Who gives me strength to journey and make another start.
Who fills the toilsome hours
With warming tenderness.
And with a single smile can calm
The wild seas of distress.
Who never loses faith in me
When I have chanced to stray,
And with deep understanding
Helps me to find my way.
Who lives with love beyond all love,
So wonderful and true;
Always and always ready
To bring me smiling through.
I've traveled far, I've traveled wide
To find there is no other
In all the world there is but one,
And that one is my Mother.
Thanks again for everything Mom.

President Tate Grateful For Well-Organized Junior Affairs

Junior Week 1962 — the culmination of much time and effort on the part of numerous members of the class is now reality. No longer is it in the planning stage. Make the most of this week, take part in the various activities, for this is your week.

Thanks to those who took part in any way whatsoever in the planning and preparation of this week. Without you, it would not have been possible. Many thanks to all of you.

Special thanks are in order to the general chairmen who so diligently undertook the responsibility and problems that their event entailed. Jim Howley and Bob Mairone for Mothers' Day, Chick McDonnell and Jim Grimm for Muff Day, Marty Whalen for the Athletic Smoker, Tom Semmer and Ralph Saviano for the Concert, and John Canuso for the Dinner Dance. These are the men that built the framework for this memorable week .

And then there is Frank Murphy, the man who made the newspaper possible — our Junior Week VILLANOVAN editor-in-chief. Relentlessly, Frank directed his staff through perhaps the most difficult and time consuming task of all — the formulation of a worthy Junior Week Edition. Many thanks to you, Frank Murphy.

The months gone-by witnessed many successes for the Class of 1963. Events such as the Orphans' Outing, the Charity Ball, and the Orphans' Party all prove that this class is capable of undertaking a task and doing a noteworthy job of it. Thanks are in order to all connected in any way with these successful ventures.

Thanks to Father Farrell, Father Kemme, and the rest of the administration, who graciously helped us in many ways, too numerous to mention. Without them, there would be no Villanova — no Junior Week.

Plaudits to the Senior Class for advice and assistance when needed.

And lastly thanks to Father Appicci, our moderator, and my other officers, Rocky Guidice, Frank Gillbride, and Jim O'Brien. Without their tireless efforts and assistance I would not have been able to even begin to see Junior Week a success.

Sincerely yours,
James E. Tate
President of the Class of 1963

Mass To Begin, Benediction Ends Mothers' Day

By Jim Shiels

This year, as in the past, an annual High Mass at the Grotto of Our Lady of Good Counsel will mark the opening of Junior Week. The Mass, being celebrated by the Rev. Richard Appicci, OSA, Junior Class Moderator, will be offered for the intentions of the mothers and guests of the members of the Junion Class. The Villanova Singers will sing the Missa Cantata; and the Rev. John Klekotka, OSA, the University President, will deliver the sermon.

CROWNING CEREMONY

This year a new ceremony will be added to the Grotto service. Mrs. James Tate, mother of James Tate, Class President, will present a crown of flowers at the foot of the statue of Our Blessed Mother on behalf of all the Juniors' mothers. Mrs. Tate, accompanied by her son, will then lead the congregation in a prayer to Our Mother of Good Counsel, one of the Patrons of Villanova. It is hoped that this ceremony will become a tradition for future Mothers' Days. Holy Cards of Our Mother of Good Counsel with this prayer on the back will be distributed to all of the mothers before Mass.

BENEDICTION TO END DAY

At the end of the day's activities, the mothers with their sons and daughters will meet at the Grotto once again for Solemn Benediction to be celebrated by Fr. Appicci, with Fr. Norbert W. Whitley, Chaplain, as Deacon; and Fr. William Hopkins, Assistant Chaplain, as Sub-Deacon.

After this we will bid farewell to our mothers, and prepare for the rest of the weeklong activities with the Blessing of the Lord upon us.

Three Years In The Life Of A Class

by Patricia Stroud

You arrive at Villanova in 1959, more than a little worried, shyly confident, and very, very confused. Immediately you are attacked by a horde of screaming maniacs known as "White Hats." They range in actual size from mammouth Jim McMonagle to diminutive Tony Bateman, but to you they all look ten feet tall and possessed of the idea that we will have to be raised on a steady diet of "Ram's meat". You learn the Alma Mater, 'V' for Villanova, and you meet a few friends. Then you have your start towards the Villanova spirit.

The social season starts early, as it always does at Villanova, this year with the Interfraternity Ball. You are introduced to a sort of mob hysteria in a crowded gym atmosphere. Picnics, mixers, and bull-sessions take up most of your time for the next few months. A rarely seen football team compiles an unimpressive 1-8 record, but you know that things will get better when your freshmen team, headed by Ted Aceto, Larry Glueck, and Richie Richman, gets to the varsity level. However, you don't think you will ever forgive or forget West Chester. You sign up for 83% of the activities offered on campus, then quickly drop them upon introduction to the most unpleasant of Villanova traditions—exams.

You make it through this ordeal somehow and relax in the Pie Shoppe over a large coke with your new-found friends and make resolutions for your second semester.

After mid-semester vacation some of your friends and the resolutions dissolve as you once again find the Pie Shoppe. You miss the friends but you have foam rubber seats and plastic spoons for consolation.

The basketball team is compiling an impressive 20-6 record and again your freshmen class brings promise with such men as Jim O'Brien, Tom Galia, Bernie Chavis, and big Tom Hoover. You and they are a part of Villanova now but there are a few things that you don't quite understand—just a few, though.

Freshmen elections are here and you find that your class is not only the largest in the school, but you also seem to have won the dubious distinction of having the quietest election in years. Chuck Butler and Mike Romano are given the honor of upholding your honor on the Student Council—but—what's all fuss about nurses—you like girls?

This affection finds an obstacle in its path as a local "institution" conducts a purge on social drinkers. You abandon the local chapter of the Christian Temperance Union and find that trips to more distant sources of companionship are bothersome, but worthwhile.

In your newly acquired role of playboy, you casually wait until the last minute to get a date for the Shamokinaki dance and you are introduced in desperation to the enigma of the college man—a blind date.

Before you have time to plan the Spring round of picnics, another election is upon us—this time for class officers. Highlights of the class elections include a complete sweep by the "Voice of Unity" party. The only office not attained by this party was the Vice-Presidency. Pete Manahan, Dick Santo, Bob Mairone, Jim Howley and Joe Tate carried your Unity ticket to victory. In a cloud of all-night cramming, you pack up for an intellectual summer vacation.

During the summer vacation you read three books and come back educated and tanned. You take over the other end of Orientation and find yourself wishing there were a way to do away with Monday morning classes.

The Nick Basca Homecoming Weekend brings the nurses into their own as Ceil Mugnier, class of '63, is elected Queen of Villanova. She then went on to become a member in the court of the Liberty Bowl Queen.

There still aren't quite enough home games to suit you, so you join a thousand other Villanovans on a trek to West Point—or is it more likely New York City? Then results of the trip were as usual for New York, but even your show of a tremendous rally and spirit couldn't help defeat Army. We ended the season with a 2-6 record.

You return just in time for the first official function of the Class of '63—the Sophomore Cotillion. This is the first time "Dad" let you bring the car down for the weekend, so you are really out for impression.

You are a past-master at cramming for exams by now so you don't have "much" trouble with them and can devote your time to following winter sports. Basketball turns out to be a bit depressing, but you have the consolation of knowing that yours is the best college track team in the world. In the first meet of the 1961 season, Villanova brings home ten first places, and we lose the IC4A's by ½ point, and this disappointment was on a disputed foul. You go to New York for this, too, don't you?

Your stay at home is rather shortened, for in a few weeks it's time for another return engagement in New York—this time for St. Patty's Day. The wearing of the green is extended to your complexion as you spend the next week recuperating, but soon things return to normal.

The monsoon season comes with its daily mud baths, but finally Spring breaks through and elections are again upon you. They are noisy, with promises coming fast and furious. You now take a serious view of management and elect Jim Tate as Class President, with Rocky Guidice as Vice-President, Frank Gilbride as Secretary, and Jim O'Brien as Treasurer.

Before the year's end you have ordered your class ring and without consciously realizing it—you have become a part of Villanova.

The events of this year are too numerous and too recent to recount all of them. Suffice it to say, you have many jumbled memories that all seem to run together in retrospect. When you returned after a hurried summer, you realize that you are a Junior now and it's time you started studying. Some of the highlights that will remain a constant memory are the Sun Bowl, the NCAA, the Quaker City Tournament, the IC4A crown, getting your class ring, the establishment of girls' intramurals, and the Orphan's Outing.

In the present semester you've been subjected to snow and Saturday classes but you've gained the happy prospect of the Senior car privilege. You saw Mendel Hall dedicated and opened this fall and now another new building has come to campus—the new Seminary. You have seen Villanova grow.

But you know too that this growth isn't confined to buildings and enrollment. With the start of Junior Week—your biggest event in college—you've begun to realize another growth—in yourself. You may know only a few isolated facts, but you have gained some realization of what you don't know. You've learned to meet people and you've become friends with many of them.

You and your classmates have grown together from Villanova freshmen to Villanova men and women. You've learned the spirit of Villanova—and you're part of it.

The Outing

The first time we put on our class rings we realize that at last we have become a part of Villanova.

New Theater Opened At 10th Class Reunion

By Kenny Resinski
and Denny McClain

DENNY: It has finally happened—the Villanova University campus has its own theatre. How did such an improbable thing even happen,—Only through the generosity, sincerity, and kindness of that "Johnny Walker" class, the Class of 1963. It is May, 1973—ten years since we graduated; and something which we dreamed of as we sat in those "back"-breaking seats in Vasey Hall, something which we had the foresight to visualize, this something has been finally realized in this mammoth modern structure dedicated to the histrionic arts.

KENNY: Since we are the class who has worked so hard and so diligently to place this Temple to Thespis on the campus, we have chosen to open it in the gallant Spirit of '63, that is with a cocktail party and then a first performance. The play chosen to first feel its weight on the boards of the One Hundred Proof Theatre stage is the smash hit Perseverance Pays Off by one of our own graduates FRANK MURPHY; it is the tender and moving story of a college student who, after playing second-fiddle on the literary staff finally rises to a glorious position. Two of Broadway's brightest stars appear in this travesy of life and loves connected with college existence—BILL DIPAOLO and DICK McINTYRE. The rotunda is just filled with famous celebrities who have emerged from the class of'63. The first to arrive (especially at a free cocktail party) were three rather fashionably dressed gentlemen and one in a fireman's suit—none other than BOB TRICOSKI, DENNY O'LEARY, HARRY GOLDEN and the weird one, JACK COFFEY, proprietors of the infamous "Four Roses Restaurant" in the heart of Somers Point, New Jersey. Following them came five denimed graduates, slightly dirty but nevertheless noteworthy men of the world—JOE RUGGIERO, painter of the famous and valuable "Nude Ascending the Stairs"; AL LAMASTRA, author of the gossip column "Glamour Gabble," who himself just returned from a cruise to Algeria; JOHN BIRD, the wealthy five and dime store entrepreneur (with the "Wall Street Journal" sticking conspicuously out of his left rear pocket); JIM SHIELS, the agent for that all girl orchestra (?) now appearing at the Teddy Roosevelt Light Opera Company at 11th and Arch in Philadelphia; and—and—and there is GARRETT EVANS, the inspired author of the best-selling paperback novel of the year, The Complainer (supposedly the story of his personal life at college).

DENNY: Over in the corner are two famous Duffys: the nervous one, sneaking a nip out of his own flask is TOM DUFFY, the diamond-cutter, here from Antwerp, and the chubby man with him is JACK DUFFY, the new coach of the Villanova basketball team and also associate head of athletics at Villanova. For awhile we didn't think any of our Villanova nurses would show up but there they are crowded around the bar: BARBARA SMITH still in her white uniform—oh, that's a—waitress uniform; sorry Barbara. Those two beautiful and vivacious blondes we know anywhere, KATHY HIGGINS—oh, Mrs. ————, I'm sorry Kathy, and there is our first campus sweetheart Miss Nursing History of 1968, CEIL MUGNIER; the woman with all that make-up on is none other than LANRIE BURKHOLTZ. I guess all those make-up jobs for Belle Masque and Turf and Tinsel went to her head. What's all that fuss going on over by the door—just BOBBIE HEENAN trying to punch somebody who made a crack about his national attempt to bring the pea-coat back as a college style; from the looks of the beard and hair our precocious actor is spending more and more of his time at the Actors' Studio.

KENNY: Say, whose kids are they?—eight of them with beards!— there's spouse; beside them, the one drinking the beer out of a jar is JOE STYBORSKI, the vice-president of IBM and there is PAUL CHERENAK associate boardmember of the Dial Soap Company. The old man quietly surveying everyone is HOWIES MORAN, the psychologist and advisor to JIM GRADY in his "Slenderfella Salons". The basis of this reducing bar is supposedly the new dietary food "Dietrical" discovered by RALPH SAVIANO (also a '63 grad.) The VO class has certainly given some indispensable people to society!

DENNY: That haggard young man in the fur parka is BILL BRACKEN who is making a mint selling Volkswagens to the inhabitants of the Aleutian islands; but BILL HUTTANUS, the man in the graduation gown is doing wonders with children on his TV show funny how something that happens in college can obsess a man's mind!) CHICI CHICHOWSKI must have just returned from a vacation in Bermuda—but that's right, he is co-owner of "Man Tanned" sun lotion (he certainly displays his product well!) There's another person who has made a niche for himself in TV, JOHN MURZYN—a brilliant conversationlist, the new Jack Paar of our generation; but who's that man in the rather shabby suit—ah yes, PAUL DEMURO.—I told him he could never make money teaching "The Romantic Poets of the Nineteenth Century and their effects upon the existentialistic views of literature resulting from the matured youth born in the war years 1941-43'"—in Terra del Fuego.

Some of our fellow classmen have tried but just missed the mark; for instance there's BILL KENNEDY with his exclusive pizzeria (it excludes all those without leather jackets) and JOE PETACCIO, in college a young man with high ideals—now, a mere florist.

KENNY: The group of nurses at the bar certainly has grown: there's JOANNE DYNAKOWSKI, the woman who introduced a hair style called the "artichoke" to our campus and recently has scored again with "the brussel sprout;" the sexy woman in that tight low-cut sequin gown (the one that looks just like Shirley McLaine) is the pseudo-Parisian chanteuse TRITIA STROUD; the woman sitting on the floor is DIANE HNELESKI, drinking gin straight out of the bottle, they say she's running for president of the AA as "Ma" (seems she"s always running for something!); PAT MASSI certainly looks chic but I wish she would stop chewing gun, stop taking pictures and have a good time!

Hey, tell that guy to put a robe on or something—oh, it's BILL SCHLEE, the internationally famous weight lifter and wrestler—I guess it's all right.

DENNY: There's some old friends of mine ED MULLEN, a real carman in college who has succeeded in the automobile business—he's the floorwalker at the Corvette showrooms in Norristown, and TOM SEMMER. It's a shame about Tom, a boy with so much potential in college now just a Santa Claus, appearing at Macy's annually (but I guess he showed potential for being a Santa in college, too!) BRIAN GALLAGHER, though, has not let us down; he has made a name in literature with the new literary movement "neo-neo-neo-classicism." LARRY EVERLING has made the most of his Villanova education—he's the field hockey coach at Beaver College, a real success; congratulations Larry!

Say, where are all the girls running to? Oh, JIM (Mr. Eyes) JORDAN has just arrived: Jim is a professional model for Maybelline Commericals and ads. The fleet's in: there's DICK HULITT and ROGER BRIDE, the admirals of the new super-nuclear warships (NROTC did something for somebody at least.) JOE HANLEY is here from the navy, too,—but what's this? only an ensign after all these years— good luck, Joe. Politics has absorbed many of our more prominent members: remember "The Voice of Unity" which did not quite succeed here; well, finally it has found a resting place in Antarctica with its founding fathers, CHUCK BUTLER and MIKE ROMANO.

KENNY: Remember those cold Saturday afternoons we spent watching the football games? Have you even wondered what happened to — well, there is BOB MERENDA, you know he never left Villanova; they say there has been a noticeable increase in the use of the library since Bob became Reference Librarian—been there 10 years now—the other quiet fellow who worked there accepted a job that offered a bit more money.

Denny: I've seen LARRY GLUECK's picture quite often lately, it seems that he is a model for those underwear pictures in the Sears and Roebuck catologue. Do you remember about ten years ago the coach of the Philadelphia Warriors, Frank McGuire, saying they needed a hatchet-man, well BILLY JOE was signed the next year, and—funny thing happened—it seems a number of fellows who play for the Celtics quit early in the season, and the Warriors have been winning championships every year now since we've graduated.

How about RICHIE RICHMAN? Remember how good he was in about six sports, well he couldn't choose his favorite, so now he's close to all of them—since he's been a replacement clerk at Passon's sporting goods stores. FRED EARHART worked his way up from the bottom of the railroad business until now he is President of the Pennsy. See those two acting up over near the piano—they're that comedy team: RETTINO and KROPKE: Jim is the straight man of the group.— They have been booked for seven straight years now at the Sho-Bar. Speaking of the Sho-Bar, I hear JOE CUTRONEO and AL CALLAGARIS have been doing a capable job as social-coordinators down there.

DENNY: Yeah, it looks as though a lot of the fellows from sports have succeeded in their chosen professions, for example one of the current seniors was telling me the name of what was Kelly's and Quin's a few years ago is now Bill's Bar. They have "dimey" nights all week except Sunday; MRS. ARMSTRONG is the tall woman who tends bar on weekends when Bill drives around Lafayette Hills in a rather sentimental mood. That thin fellow in the corner is CHARLIE JOHNSON the new maitre d'hotel of the Pie Shoppe. TED ACETO and MIKE DELONE are touring Berlin with the Coast Guard touch-football team . That guy talking to the waitress is AL REINOSO the prosperous mirror manufacturer. Looking out the glass facade is CHARLIES HAMMOCK—he's won the hurdles in '64, '68 and '72 Olympics; there's' a good chance he'll try for the '76 ers, too. There is DR. PAT TRAYNOR, the chairman of the Villanova History Department.

KENNY: I think I see JIM THOMAS walking in the door—to think everyone thought there wouldn't be another Elvis Presley. Hey, who's the tall guy with the spotted bathing suit, carrying a piece of vine and a spear?

DENNY: Don't you remember—that's DOUG KERR he's been quite popular since the revival of the "Tarzan" series.

KENNY: I haven't seen AL JACKMAN tonight—he was supposed to come!

DENNY: Al has to preside over night court and may be a bit late.

KENNY: Let's go talk to ARNIE BUBEN and BOB KOWALSKI—maybe we can get a few free drinks at the Irish bar they opened last year where the Moo Shop used to be—It's called KOWBUB. How about GENE CEPETTELI being named Athletic Director at Harcum? Well, they certainly picked a capable guy for that job!

DENNY: Speaking of capable people—it looks like BILL BARBARO the softspoken football coach at Villanova, is leaving—probably to "see if his boys are in bed."

KENNY: Well the Phillies are doing well with JACK LYNCH, PETE "Bobby Shanty" CONNORS, RICH RADZIAK, JOE FARBER and JERRY WINCHESTER taking the field for them almost every day. JERRY works in the Pie Shoppe off season, while RICH fills machines in the C and F "Restaurant" during the winter months.

DENNY: Did you notice the "men in blue" at the door. Captain JIM O'BRIEN with his assistants JAKE BROKARS and JERRY KEIL; the three of them majored in something or other in college and now they are full fledged members of the University law enforcement agency. AL HICKS the guy talking to them, is a sucessful truck-farmer near Vineland, N.J.

KENNY: OWEN McGUIRE and FRANK CULLOTA won't be able to come tonight since they're making pizzas down at Popeye's. Uh-Oh, there's the new Dean of Women—JOAN TATTERSOLL.

DENNY: Have you been down to the parking lot on Sunday's? It seems that the University has rented the lot to ED O'MALLEY, TOM JADICO and ED McBRIDE for their "go-cart" races. Last week BRIAN DOWNEY tried to enter his 'vette but was disqualified.

KENNY: JIM and JOE TATE have opened their School of Parliamentary Procedure on the campus of Haverford College. Well it looks as if the last few nurses have been "persuaded" the leave the bar—WILLIE ALLARD please take your math books and booze and get out of here!

DENNY: Well, Ken guess we better get our brooms and equipment and start cleaning up—the University doesn't pay us for just standing here watching.

KENNY: It sure has been nice seeing the old gang; maybe we'll still be janitors twenty years from now.

DENNY: Yeah, if we're lucky!

KENNY: Let's get to work!

Three Years In The Life Of A Class

by Patricia Stroud

You arrive at V'Lanova in 1959, more than a little worried, shyly confident, and very, very confused. Immediately you are attacked by a horde of screaming maniacs known as "White Hats." They range in actual size from mammoth Jim McMonegle to diminutive Tony Bateman, but to you they all look ten feet tall and possessed of the idea that we will have to be raised on a steady diet of "Rah-rah meat". You learn the Alma Mater, V'ive Villanova and you meet a few friends. Then you have your first taste of the Villanova spirit.

The social season starts early and days after arriving you're off to the Mainliners Ball. You do not need to be told of the probable events, a crowded gym, the punch, Pierce sisters, and buttonholes. Like at most of your dances for the next few months. A rarely seen football team complies an unimpressive 1-8 record, but you know that things will get better when your freshman team, headed by Ted Arcidi, Larry Glueck and Richie Richman gets to the varsity level. However you don't mind a one-win year forgiven by Eagle West Classic. You sign up for Sno-Ball activities, attend on-campus mixers, drag them to an introduction to the most unpleasant of Villanova traditions—exams.

You make it through this ordeal somehow and relax in the Pie Shoppe over a large coke with your new-found friends and make resolutions for your second semester.

After a pleasant vacation some of your resolutions and resolutions broken and then again find the Pie Shoppe. You're a veteran now and you have your fraternity and parlor sprung for consideration.

The basketball team is compiling an impressive 20-6 record and again your freshmen class brings promise with such men as Jim O'Brien, Tom Galia, Bernie Chavis, and big Tom Hoover. You and they are a part of Villanova now but there are a few things that you don't quite understand—just a few, though.

Freshmen elections are here and you find that your class is not only the largest in the school, but you also seem to have won the dubious distinction of having the quietest election in years. Chuck Butler and Mike Romano are given the honor of upholding your honor on the Student Council but—what's all this about nurses—you like girls?

The election finds an obstacle in its path as a local "institution" conducts a purge on local drinkers. You abandon the local chapter of the Christian Temperance Union and find that trips to more distant sources of companionship are bothersome but worthwhile.

In your newly acquired role of playboy, you casually wait until the last minute to get a date for the Shamokinaki dance and you are introduced in desperation to the enigma of the college man—a blind date.

Before you have time to plan the Spring round of picnics, another election is upon us—this time for class officers. Highlights of the class elections include a complete sweep by the "Voice of Unity" party. The only office not attained by this party was the Vice-Presidency. Pete Mangahan, Dick Santo, Rob Mairone, Jim Howley and Joe Tate carried your Unity ticket to victory. In a cloud of all-night cramming, you pack up for an intellectual summer vacation.

During the summer vacation you read three books and come back educated and bored. You take over the other end of Orientation and find yourself wishing there were a way to do away with Monday morning classes.

The Nick Basca Homecoming Weekend brings the nurses into their own as Ceil Mugnier, class of '63, is elected Queen of Villanova. She then went on to become a member in the court of the Liberty Bowl Queen.

There still aren't quite enough home games to suit you, so you join a thousand other Villanovans on a trek to West Point—or is it more likely New York City? Then results of the trip were as usual for New York, but even your show of a tremendous rally and spirit couldn't help defeat Army. We ended the season with a 2-6 record.

You return just in time for the first class function of the Class of '63: the [illegible]. This is the first [illegible] during the car down [illegible] and you are really out [illegible]

[illegible] of cramming [illegible] how we don't have [illegible] to study for exam and can do [illegible] You celebrate winter sports, [illegible] and [illegible] depression [illegible] on one of [illegible] the best college [illegible] in the world. In the first [illegible] 23rd season Villanova brings home ten first places, and we lose the IC4A's by 1 point, and this disappointment was on a disputed foul. You go to New York for this, too, don't you?

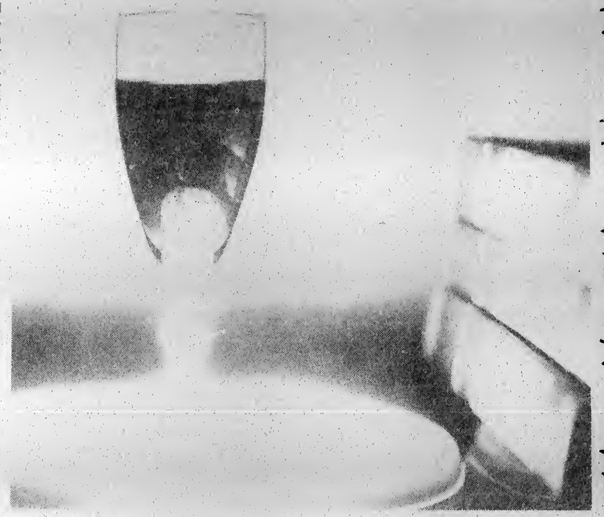
Your stay at home is rather shortened, for in a few weeks it's time for another return engagement in New York—this time for St. Patty's Day. The wearing of the green is extended to your complexion as you spend the next week recuperating, but soon things return to normal.

The [illegible] season comes with its windy mud and then finally Spring breaks through and shorts are again worn on you. They are merry, with promises coming fast and furious. You now take countless vows of engagement and elect Lee Tate as Class President with Rocky Lenzo as Vice-President, Frank Gilbride as Secretary, and Jim O'Brien as Treasurer.

Before the years end you have ordered your class ring and without consciously realizing it you have become a part of Villanova.

The events of this year are too numerous and too recent to recount all of them. Suffice it to say, you have many jumbled memories that all seem to run together in retrospect. When you returned after a hurried summer, you realize that you are a Junior now and it's time you started studying. Some of the highlights that will remain a constant memory are the Sun Bowl, the NCAA, the Quaker City Tournament, the IC4A crown, getting your class ring, the establishment of girls' intramurals, and the Orphan's Outing.

In the present semester you've been subjected to snow and Saturday classes but you've gained the happy prospect of the Senior ear privilege. You saw Mendel Hall dedicated and opened this fall and now another new building has come to campus—the new Seminary. You have seen Villanova grow.



But you know too that this growth isn't confined to buildings and enrollment. With the start of Junior Week—your biggest event in college—you've begun to realize another growth—in yourself. You may know only a few isolated facts, but you have gained some realization of what you don't know. You've learned to meet people and you've become friends with many of them.

You and your classmates have grown together from Villanova freshmen to Villanova men and women. You've learned the spirit of Villanova—and you're part of it.

The Outing

Light of Learning

The first time we put on our class rings we realize that at last we have become a part of Villanova.

New Theater Opened At 10th Class Reunion

By Kenny Resinski
and Denny McClain

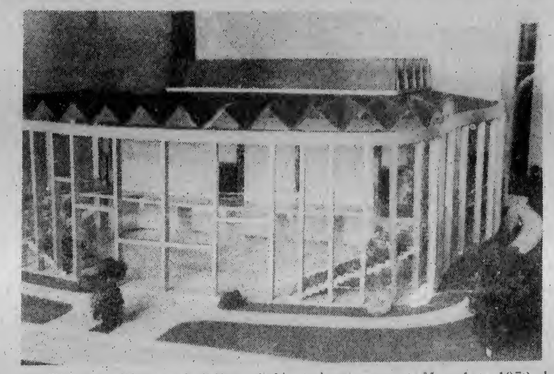
DENNY: It has finally happened—the Villanova University campus has its own theatre. How did such an improbable thing even happen.—Only through the generosity, sincerity, and kindness of that "Johnny Walker" class, the Class of 1963. It is May, 1973—ten years since we graduated; and something which we dreamed of as we sat in those "back"-breaking seats in Vasey Hall, something which we had the foresight to visualize, this something has been finally realized in this mammoth modern structure dedicated to the histrionic arts.

KENNY: Since we are the class who has worked so hard and so diligently to place this Temple to Thespis on the campus, we have chosen to open it in the gallant Spirit of '63, that is with a cocktail party and then a first performance. The play chosen to first feel its weight on the boards of the One Hundred Proof Theatre stage is the smash hit Perseverance Pays Off by one of our own graduates, FRANK MURPHY; it is the tender and moving story of a college student who, after playing second-fiddle on the literary staff finally rises to a glorious position. Two of Broadway's brightest stars appear in this tender of life and loves connected with college existence: BILL DIPAOLO and DICK McINTYRE. The rotunda is just filled with famous celebrities who have emerged from the class of '63. The first to arrive, (especially at a free cocktail party), were three rather fashionably dressed gentlemen and one in a fireman's suit—none other than BOB TRICOSKI, DENNY O'LEARY, HARRY GOLDEN and the weird one, JACK COFFEY, proprietors of the infamous "Four Roses Restaurant" in the heart of Somers Point, New Jersey. Following them came five denimed graduates, slightly dirty, but nevertheless noteworthy men of the world—JOE RUGGIERO, painter of the famous and valuable "Nude Ascending the Stairs"; AL LAMASTRA, author of the gossip column "Glamour Gabble," who himself just returned from a cruise to Algeria; JOHN BIRD, the wealthy five and dime store entrepreneur (with the "Wall Street Journal" sticking conspicuously out of his left rear pocket); JIM SHEES, the agent for that all girl orchestra (?) now appearing at the Teddy Roosevelt Eight Opera Company at 11th and Arch in Philadelphia; and amidst them there is GARRETT EVANS, the inspired author of the best-selling paperback novel of the year, The Complainer (supposedly the story of his personal life at college).

DENNY: Over in the corner are two famous Duffys: the nervous one smoking a pipe out of his own flask is TOM DUFFY, the dam-mid-cutter, here from Antwerp, and the chubby man with him is JACK DUFFY, the new coach of the Villanova basketball team and also associate head of athletics at Villanova. For while we didn't think any of our Villanova nurses would show up but there they are crowded around the bar: BARBARA SMITH still in her white uniform—oh, that's a—waitress uniform; sorry Barbara. Those two beautiful and vivacious blondes we know anywhere, KATHY HIGGINS—oh, Mrs.—I'm sorry Kathy, and there is our first famous sweetheart Miss Nursing History of 1968, CEIL MUGNIER; the woman with all that make-up on is none other than LANRIE BURKHOLTZ. I guess all those make-up jobs for Belle Masque and Turf and Tinsel went to her head. What's all that fuss going on over by the door—just BOBBIE HEENAN trying to punch somebody who made a crack about his national attempt to bring the pennant back as a college strike, from the looks of the beard and hair our precocious actor is spending more and more of his time at the Actors' Studio.

KENNY: Say, whose kids are they?—eight of them with beards—there's spouse; beside them, the one drinking the beer out of a jar is JOE STYBORSKI, the vice-president of IBM and there is PAUL CHERENAK associate boardmember of the Dial Soap Company. The old man quietly surveying everyone is HOWIES MORAN, the psychologist and advisor to JIM GRADY in his "Slenderfella Salons". The basis of this reducing bar is supposedly the new dietary food "Dietrical" discovered by RALPH SAVIANO (also a '63 grad.) The VO class has certainly given some indispensable people to society!

DENNY: That haggard young man in the fur parka is BILL BRACKEN who is making a mint selling Volkswagens to the inhabitants of the Aleutian islands; but BILL BUTTANUS, the man in the graduation gown is doing wonders with children on his TV show (funny, how something that happens in college can obsess a man's mind!) CHIEF CHICHOWSKI must have just returned from a vacation in Bermuda—but that's right, he is co-owner of "Man Tanned" sun lotion (he certainly displays his product well!) There's another person who has made a niche for himself in TV: JOHN MURZYN—a brilliant conversationlist, the new Jack Paar of our generation; but who's that man in the rather shabby suit—ah yes, PAUL DEMURO.—I told him he could never make money teaching "The Romantic Poets of the Nineteenth Century and their effects upon the existentialistic views of literature resulting from the matured youth born in the war years 1911-13" in Terra del Fuego.



Some of our fellow classmen have tried but just missed the mark: for instance there's BILL KENNEDY with his exclusive pizzeria (it excludes all those without leather jackets) and JOE PETACCIO, in college a young man with high ideals—now, a mere florist.

KENNY: The group of nurses at the bar certainly has grown: there's JOANNE DYNAKOWSKI, the woman who introduced a hair style called the "artichoke" to our campus and recently has scored again with "the brussel sprout;" the sexy woman in that tight low-cut sequin gown (the one that looks just like Shirley McLaine) is the pseudo-Parisian chanteuse TRITIA STROUD; the woman sitting on the floor is DIANE KNELESKI, drinking gin straight out of the bottle, they say she's running for president of the AA as "Ma" (seems she's always running for something!); PAT MASSI certainly looks chic but I wish she would stop chewing gum, stop taking pictures and have a good time!

Hey, tell that guy to put a robe on or something, oh, it's BILL SCHLEE, the internationally famous weight lifter and wrestler—I guess it's all right.

DENNY: There's some old friends of mine ED MULLEN, a real carman in college who has succeeded in the automobile business, he's the floorwalker at the Corvette showrooms in Norristown, and TOM SEMMER. It's a shame about Tom, a boy with so much potential in college now just a Santa Claus, appearing at Macy's annually (but I guess he showed potential for being a Santa in college, too!) BRIAN GALLAGHER, though, has not let us down; he has made a name in literature with the new literary movement "neo-neo-neo-classicism." LARRY EVERLING has made the most of his Villanova education; he's the field hockey coach at Beaver College, a real success; congratulations Larry!

Say, where are all the girls running to? Oh, JIM (Mr. Eyes) JORDAN has just arrived; Jim is a professional model for Maybelline Commercials and ads. The dark in there's DICK HULITT and ROGER BRIDE, the admirals of the new super-nuclear warships (NROTC did something for somebody at least.) JOE HANLEY is here from the navy, too—but where's this? only an ensign after all those years—good luck, Joe. Politics has absorbed many of our more prominent members; remember "The Voice of Unity" which did not quite succeed here; well, finally it has found a resting place in Antarctica with its founding fathers, CHUCK BUTLER and MIKE ROMANO.

KENNY: Remember those cold Saturday afternoons we spent watching the football games? Have you ever wondered what happened to — well, there is BOB MERENDA, you know he never left Villanova; they say there has been a noticeable increase in the use of the library since Bob became Reference Librarian—been there 10 years now—the other quiet fellow who worked there accepted a job that offered a bit more money.

Denny: I've seen LARRY GLUECK's picture quite often lately, it seems that he is a model for those underwear pictures in the Sears and Roebuck catalogue. Do you remember about ten years ago the coach of the Philadelphia Warriors, Frank McGuire, saying they needed a hatchet-man, well BILLY JOE was signed the next year, and—funny thing happened—it seems a number of fellows who play for the Celtics quit early in the season, and the Warriors have been winning championships every year now since we've graduated.

How about RICHIE RICHMAN? Remember how good he was in about six sports, well he couldn't choose his favorite, so now he's close to all of them—since he's been a replacement clerk at Passon's sporting goods stores. FRED EARHART worked his way up from the bottom of the railroad business until now he is President of the Pennsy. See those two acting up over near the piano—they're that comedy team: RETTINO and KROPKE: Jim is the straight man of the group.— They have been booked for seven straight years now at the Sho-Bar. Speaking of the Sho-Bar, I hear JOE CUTRONEO and AL CALLAGARIS have been doing a capable job as social-coordinators down there.

DENNY: Yeah, it looks as though a lot of the fellows from sports have succeeded in their chosen professions, for example one of the current seniors was telling me the name of what was Kelly's and Quin's a few years ago is now Bill's Bar. They have "dimev" nights all week except Sunday; MRS. ARMSTRONG is the tall woman who tends bar on weekends when Bill drives around Lafayette Hills in a rather sentimental mood. That thin fellow in the corner is CHARLIE JOHNSON the new maitre d'hotel of the Pie Shoppe. TED ACETO and MIKE DELONE are touring Berlin with the Coast Guard touch-football team. That guy talking to the waitress is AL REINOSO the prosperous mirror manufacturer. Looking out the glass facade is CHARLIES HAMMOCK—he's won the hurdles in '61, '68 and '72 Olympics; there's a good chance he'll run for the '76 as well. There is DR. PAT TRAYNOR, the chairman of the V'illanova History Department.

KENNY: I think I see JIM THOMAS walking in the door—to think everyone thought there wouldn't be another Elvis Presley. Hey, who's the tall guy with the spotted bathing suit, carrying a piece of vine and a spear?

DENNY: Don't you remember—that's DOUG KERR he's been quite popular since the revival of the "Tarzan" series.

KENNY: I haven't seen AL JACKMAN tonight—he was supposed to come!

DENNY: Al has to preside over night court and may be a bit late.

KENNY: Let's go talk to ARNIE BUBEN and BOB KOWALSKI—maybe we can get a few free drinks at the Irish bar they opened last year where the Moo Shop used to be—It's called KOWBUB. How about GENE CEPETTELI being named Athletic Director at Harcum? Well, they certainly picked a capable guy for that job!

DENNY: Speaking of capable people—it looks like BILL BARBARO the soft-spoken football coach at Villanova, is leaving—probably to "see if his boys are in bed."

KENNY: Well the Phillies are doing well with JACK LYNCH, PETE "Bobby Shanty" CONNORS, RICH RADZIAK, JOE FARBER and JERRY WINCHESTER taking the field for them almost every day. JERRY works in the Pie Shoppe off season, while RICH fills machines in the C and F "Restaurant" during the winter months.

DENNY: Did you notice the "men in blue" at the door. Captain JIM O'BRIEN with his assistants JAKE BROKARS and JERRY KEIL, the three of them majored in something or other in college and now they are full fledged members of the University law enforcement agency. AL HICKS the guy talking to them, is a sucessful truck-farmer near Vineland, N.J.

KENNY: OWEN McGUIRE and FRANK CULLOTA won't be able to come tonight since they're making pizzas down at Popeye's. Uh-Oh, there's the new Dean of Women—JOAN TATTERSOLL.

DENNY: Have you been down to the parking lot on Sunday's? It seems that the University has rented the lot to ED O'MALLEY, TOM JADICO and ED McBRIDE for their "go-cart" races. Last week BRIAN DOWNEY tried to enter his 'vette but was disqualified.

KENNY: JIM and JOE TATE have opened their School of Parliamentary Procedure on the campus of Haverford College. Well it looks as if the last few nurses have been "persuaded" the leave the bar—WILLIE ALLARD please take your math books and booze and get out of here!

KENNY: It sure has been nice seeing the old gang; maybe we'll still be janitors twenty years from now.

DENNY: Yeah, if we're lucky!

KENNY: Let's get to work!

Class of '63 Highlights Banner Year

Sun Bowl, IC4A's, NCAA Show Cats' Prowess

by Ted Aceto,
Pat Massi, Mike DeLone

The class of '63 has much to be proud of in the line of athletic achievement. The 1961-62 season has been highlighted by performances of these athletes in all varsity sports.

FIELD GENERALS

On the gridiron the two top quarterbacks are members of the Junior Class. Rich Richman "field boss" of the White unit, received his first recognition in the 1960 season when he led the team to victory over Rutgers and Xavier. Since then he has done well in all undertakings. An all-around athlete, Rich is presently playing with the baseball team.

Ted Aceto, signal caller for the Blue Unit is noted for his excellent ball handling, passing and sharp play calling. For outstanding performance in the V.U.-Holy Cross game, Ted was elected as "player of the week" by the Daily News. The "Aceto-led Blues" were known for their swiftness and offensive ability. The Wildcat baseball team will look forward to Ted's joining the team this spring.

AWARD WINNERS

Halfback Larry Glueck, is the team's "best all-around back" and leading pass receiver. His performance this season left him among the top scorers in the nation and a candidate for the 1961 All Catholic All American Football Team. He was voted as the Player of the Week for his performance in the season's opening game against Miami and was also honored as Most Valuable Player of '61.

Joe Cutroneo never has much to say but always gets the job done. He was V. U.'s regular left end for the past two seasons.

Voted as the "Most Consistant Player" of the 1961 campaign, a strong defensive player, Joe will team up with Johnson to hold down the left side of the line again.

Charlie Johnson, one of the standout linemen of the V. U. squad for the past two seasons, will be the only returning tackle from the 9-2 Villanova '61 team. At 6'1", 250 lbs, Charlie is definately a tough, strong defender, and is a sound offensive blocker. He will lead the Wildcats in the '62 campaign in acting role as Captain, elected by his teammates.

POWER PERSONIFIED

Bob Merenda, known by his teammates as "Bullet Bob" is a powerful runner with a good change of pace and will be No. 1 right halfback in '62. Bob was a leading ground gainer for the blue unit a year ago and our weightlifting specialist is probably the best blocking back on the V. U. squad.

Jim Thomas came into his own as a talented and powerful runner of the V. U. football season last year. One of the hardest runners on the squad, a converted fullback, Jim has adapted excellently to the left half back position and will surprise a lot of people in '62.

JARRING FULLBACKS

Billy Joe made an immediate impression on the Wildcat football fans this season. He is an outstanding runner as a great blocker and tackler. Billy received Most Valuable Player award in the Sun Bowl. Aside from being one of the V.U.'s top football players, Billy is also Field Star, excelling in throwing the Shot-put.

Lou Rettino, big and talented fullback of the V.U. football team, displays all the attributes of an outstanding back. Out of St. Peter's Prep, he was Catholic League's Back of The Year. Lou played great football for V.U. in the past, and will be counted on heavily during the '62 season.

STEADY AND SOLID PERFORMERS

Mike DeLone, a steady performer both offensively and defensively on the blue unit last season, has developed into one of Villanova's fine ends. Coach Bell is high on Mike's main forte, blocking. A big boy, 6 '2", 225 lbs., Mike is also an excellent pass receiver, he caught 9 passes during the '61 season for 100 yards.

Al Callagaris has been a regular at the guard position since coming to Villanova. Backed by the experience and the quick ability to diagnose plays, Al is considered a solid line-backer on defense. He has been moved to right guard this season by Coach Bell because of his strong blocking and tough defensive play.

Bob Kowalski, big and exceptionally fast, is a steady performer at the guard position. Last season Bob spearheaded the offensive-minded blue unit. "Killer", as he is commonly called, is Coach Alex Bell's selection for the starting left guard position for the '62 campaign.

GOOD RESERVES

Jim Kropke, saw little action on the gridiron after his freshman year because of injuries, but will probably be used by Coach Bell extensively on defense, filling in for the quarterbacks during the '62 campaign. Although he doesn't pack much weight, Jim is a pure tackler and a fine pass defender.

Al Reinoso, played in spots last year as a guard and substituted for the injured Sam Gruneisen at the end position. Al is currently running on the second unit in spring drills and will probably see a lot of action during the rugged '62 season running with the blue unit.

Bill Barbaro is a reserve end out of the Chicago area. Bill has been working hard this spring and should see a lot of action during the ensuing season. Bill is an excellent pass receiver.

Gene Ceppetelli, Canadian born "Cepper" is now being counted on by Coach Alex Bell to help fill the big gap at the center position on the V.U. football team. He is adapting himself quickly and has shown constant improvement at the pivot position. Strong and very quick, Gene is a hard worker and a conscientious football player.

ON THE HARDWOOD

John Brokars joined the varsity squad during the 60-61 campaign and backed Joe Walsh at center.

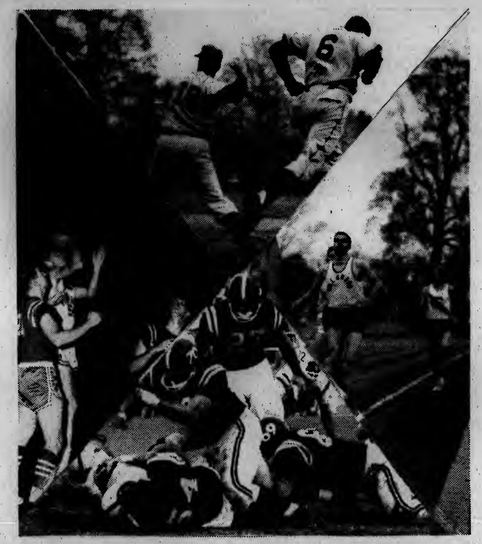
Jim O'Brien saw much action this year and last gaining the strength and experience which makes him a fine shooter. Obie named "Player of the Week" on Dec. 17 for outstandinng performance against Iowa State and St. Francis. Jim has been elected as one of the co-captains for the Wildcats next year.

ON THE CINDERS

Hurdler Charlie Hammock was a member of the American shuttle hurdles championship team last year. He shows a great promise for the outdoor season.

Al Jackman, one of the most pleasant surprises on the squad this year, has done a fine job as the second man on the mile relay team. Always a consistent scorer in the hurdles, Al has now become a triple threat man.

Distance runner, Owen Maguire is a good three miler who will see plenty of outdoor action and give the Wildcats solid agression.



Jim Purcell, top pole vaulter on the squad will be counted on for points in dual meet competition.

RECORD BREAKER

Doug Kerr broke the school Javelin record four times last year. This season Doug is hoping to go over that mark. He is also an excellent hurdler and is consistent in gaining points. He should do even better in Javelin this year.

GREAT COMEBACK

Pat Traynor made the All-American team after finishing second in the steeplechase during the 1961 NCAA title meet. Previous to that he excelled in the IC4A championship winning the steeplechase in his first attempt. Having courageously overcome a freak accident, Pat is expected to repeat as All American this year.

MAHAN'S MOUND CORPS

Pete Connors, a big surprise in his rookie year, wound up the season with an undefeated record. Used mainly in relief spots by Coach Mahan, Pete, though not overpoweringly fast, has a variety of breaking pitches that make him a winner.

Pitcher Mike Kiley had a 3 and 1 record last season as a Soph. He has plenty of pitching savy and experience which makes him a mainstay on the VU pitching staff. Mike won the second game this season defeating the University of Maine, 10-5.

Pete Sapnar is the relief pitcher of the Mahan "boys". Pete should have a bright future at VU if given the opportunity to throw.

Wayne Walz had a 4-0 rookie year in '60. However due to an injury he has been unable to pitch this year. Coach Mahan is looking forward to his recovery to aid in future campaigns.

ABLE PERFORMERS

Joe Farber decided to leave the "Bell boys" for a position as catcher on the baseball squad. His Rookie year presents him as a possible future stick-man for the 'Cats. Joe should see plenty of action in the future.

Jack Lynch, "the go-getter" of the team gets other guys up for the games. He had a fine year last year with a .357 average. His quick mobility and fine glovemanship make him a top professional prospect.

John Strogus is a possible starter this year. He is considered as a valuable asset to the team, having improved greatly over the year with the stick. We should see a lot of him as the season progresses.

WILDCAT MERMEN

Al Hicks, a fine backstroker held a school record of 2:16 flat. Al received the team's 1961 Loyalty Award. Coach Ed Geisz expects big things of him next season in relays. Hicks won several record-breaking 400 yard medly relays this year and competed on ECAC championship at Yale as well as placing third in Junior national 200 yd. backstroke.

James Grimm took several seconds off the 100 yard freestyle time this year. He is on the 400 yd freestyle relay team which holds the school record and the Middle Atlantic A.A.U.

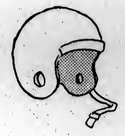
Mike Powers participates in 50 and 100 yd. freestyle. He is a member of the record breaking freestyle relay team.

Al Nencetti is the Wildcats' best diver. He holds the record for the scoring the most points for Villanova in diving competition.

LINKSMAN

Last year's Golf team was Villanova's finest. The sole representative of the Junior Class, is John Driscoll from Greensburg, who is ranked third man on the team with a 76 average. In his Sophomore year, John represented V.U. in the E.C.A.C. Tournament and finished the season with only one loss. This season Wildcat Golf fans will be watching for John to continue his good work.

As can be readily seen, the Junior Class has in the past lead Villanova to success, and with such stalwarts returning, we can look to the future with great expectations.



Enthusiastic Juniors gather after dusk to proclaim their enthusiasm for an unidentified cause.

Sophomores Sponsor New Spring Project Tour Of Campus Given

Last Saturday, May 5, the Class of 1964 undertook to present a Sophomore Spring Project, setting a precedent for campus affairs. For the occasion, one-hundred and twenty orphan boys and girls were invited to the campus for a day full of events starting with a tour of the Navy Building, John Barry Hall.

Planetarium Show

The groups then crossed to Mendel Hall where special attractions were the Planetarium and a Physics demonstration by Mr. William G. Driscoll, Department Chairman. The visitors and their sophomore companions then enjoyed a lunch in the C&F Cafeteria composed mostly of food donated for the occasion.

Group Picture

After lunch, the children from St. Joseph's and St. Mary's Orphanages were ushered into Dougherty Hall for group pictures and then down to the Field House for a talent show and a "Truth or Consequences" program.

Track Meet

The last diversions for the youngsters included a nursing demonstration for the girls while the boys watched the Wildcats romp over the St. Joseph track team and athletic contests for all on Mendel Field. Rev. James B. Gallagher, moderator of the Class of '64, closed the day's activities with Benediction in the Grotto.

Student Council Elections Give Joe Tate Chairmanship

Acclaimed Chairman of the Student Council for the 1962-1963 academic year was Joe Tate, past Vice-Chairman and the Junior Arts and Science representative. Nominated by Ray Trapp, Senior Class President, and seconded by Bob Benson. Council Treasurer, Tate will succeed Thomas Wall as Chairman. Tate's new position will include the Presidency of the Student Body of Villanova.

Reached for comment, Tate said, "I was very pleased with the outcome of this year's elections. I know that the men who have been elected to these positions are cognizant of the responsibilities they have accepted, and I am confident that they will successfully perform their duties. With the leadership of its officers and initiative from members of the student body, I feel that our Student Council will have a prosperous and successful year."

McGuinn Vice Chairman

Tate's election was held at the last Student Congress meeting before Easter. Elections for the remaining Council officers and the Senate class representatives were also held. In the election for Vice-Chairman, Marty McGuinn, present Sophomore Class President, defeated Jim McErlane, sophomore Arts and Science representative and a member of the Cultural Affairs Committee. McGuinn was nominated by Charles Labus, Executive Vice-President for Educational Affairs, while McErlane was nominated by Pete Federico, Council Secretary.

Running for position of Council Secretary were Bob Mairone and Jay Delaney with Delaney emerging victorious. Filling the position of Council Treasurer

Kennedy Vs Steel

Four weeks ago, the Steel Industry, led by U.S. Steel, shocked the country with an announced price increase of six dollars a ton. To prevent this price increase, President Kennedy immediately exercised all the powers at his disposal, including economic reprisal, legal retaliation, covert pressures and public denunciation. Within four days, the Steel Industry rescinded their price increase. This awesome demonstration of presidental power provoked one main question from its critics: Did President Kennedy's action establish a precedent for coersion by Government?

The President's action in the steel dispute did not constitute a precedent since it was a unique solution to a specifiq problem.

The Steel Industry is the basic industry of our ecomony, both because of its tremendous size and because it furnishes materials for a multitude of business and industrial concern. The maxim of our economy since the second world war has been "as steel goes; so goes inflation."

The timing of the price rise was particularly unfortunate since it came just five days after the signing of a new, two year "noninflationary" contract between U.S. Steel and the United Steelworkers Union. This contract was the culmination of the administration's efforts to pull industry and labor to gether toward a common recognition of the importance of noninflationary wage-price policies.

The administration has made steel a symbol, hoping that this "noninflationary" settlement would create a labor-management mood that would lead to similar agreements in many other industries, and thereby achieve wage-price stability in the election year of 1962. However with the price rise attempt, the Steel Industry doublecrossed the administration and would have nearly wrecked price stability if the President had not intervened.

The President knew that public opinion was behind him. The steel leaders had made the inexcusable mistake in thinking they could force a price increase down the throats of the American people just a few days after signing a labor contract that plainly did not justify an increase.

Therefore the President's intervention into such a unique situation did not establish a precedent. In different circumstances with the weight of evidence not so opposed to the industry, the President would incur the wrath of the Constitution and the disapproval of the nation if he attempted to dicate a price policy and enforce it by coercion.

Exit Electors

Joseph A. McCarthy II

All our fair young and olding Washington politicos should stop and take stock for a moment now that we are in the middle of the four year period between elections.

How would one of these aspiring individuals like to run for the Presidency, as undoubtably one or two will, and find that, though he has captured the popular vote of the United States, he has lost in the electoral college?

Today when Americans go to the polls, they do not cast their ballot for a John F. Kennedy or a Richard M. Nixon. They vote instead for a group of men known as electors.

In the past election, even the very names of the candidates failed to appear on some ballots or voting machines. The choice was merely indicated by "Democratic Elector" and "Republican Elector" and in a few cases their names were actually indicated in parentheses.

In 1960, there were 527 electors with each state having as many electors as senators and representatives. Under the Constitution each elector is free to vote for whomever he choses.

The Constitution also requires that all the electoral votes for a state be cast in a block. So, either all the state's votes go to the Democrats or to the Republicans.

The primary purpose of this system was to protect the power of the individual states against what was feared to be an excess of majority rule. This system has been under continuous attack in Congress for its reform or abolition. Three reasons support the contention that the electoral college is unfair, outdated and undemocratic.

I. The Electoral College has given us minority Presidents on three occasions and could very well do so again. These Presidents have actually received fewer popular votes than their opponents.

Andrew Jackson in 1824 was defeated in the House of Representatives by John Q. Adams even though he had polled twice as many votes as Adams. But when the Electoral College failed to give him the necessary majority, a political deal put Adams in the White House.

In 1876 Samual Tilden defeated Rutherford B. Hayes by a clean margin of 250,000 votes. Yet a dispute within the electors threw the decision to a Commission which decided in favor of Hayes.

Grover Cleveland in 1888 had a 96,000 vote margin over Benjamin Harrison but failed to carry off the electoral majority as Harrison did.

This institution directly opposes the majority-rule method used in all other phases of our government and distinctly mocks our democratic system. Every elected federal officer in this country is chosen by the outcome of a popular-vote election. There should be, therefore, no reason why the highest offices in the land, the Presidency and Vice-Presidency should not be the same.

II. Millions of citizens in reality do not have any say in their government and are deprived of meaningful votes through this antiquated system.

Those votes for the losing side in a state have no effect on the result because of our "winner-take-all" system. Millions of votes in the large state like New York, California, and Michigan were inconsequental in the last election while a fraction of that number in the smaller states put the winner over.

III. Our election results are grossly distorted in some cases by the Electoral College.

While the popular-vote might be very close, the electoral vote may look like a landslide. The 1948 election, just to cite one example, was so close that 30,000 votes cast the other way in certain states could easily have elected Dewey. But the electoral College was decisive — Truman 303 and Dewey 187.

The same is true in the 1956 election when Eisenhower defeated Stevenson 35 million to 26 million but romped in the electoral vote 457 to 74.

When the union was merely a group of feuding states the electoral system might have made sense. But now with the advent of extensive press and television coverage, we really are just one big community.

The President as the only officer that represents all the people of the country should be elected through a direct mandate of the people. This is the only democratic way.

A Dying NFCCS

When the Student Council meets tonight it will consider a motion to withdraw recognition from the campus chapter of the National Federation of Catholic College Students. Those who support the motion believe that such action is justified because the chapter serves no useful purpose. If it does not, then the passage of the motion will be only a formal statement of what is already a fact: that the chapter has effectively ceased to exist. Like a death certificate the motion will not kill: it will only attest that something has died.

But is the NFCCS really dead on this campus? Its inactivity seems to indicate that it is. The purpose of the NFCCS is to make every Catholic college student an informed Catholic citizen interested in the problems of the society and the world and active in their solution. The campus chapter has not achieved this purpose to any measureable extent.

The NFCCS sought to implement its goals through a two-part program in this academic year. During the first semester it was to inform the studentry on a few specific problem areas. During the second semester it was to organize student action in these areas. The chapter never accomplished either.

Why did it fail? Perhaps because the parts of the program were badly executed or perhaps because the whole program was too ambitious. The first part of the program was certainly badly executed. The only real activity of the chapter in this regard has been participation in on-campus conference and discussions. These did little to inform the student and nothing to instruct him. The second part of the program was probably too ambitious, for it sought to organize what did not exist.

The failure of the local chapter does not reflect the condition of the NFCCS on other campuses. At some schools it has met with success and demonstrated its value. Potentially the local chapter is just as valuable. A realization of this might well cause the pen to pause above the death certificate. Perhaps what is potentially alive can be made actually alive if an extension in time is given it.

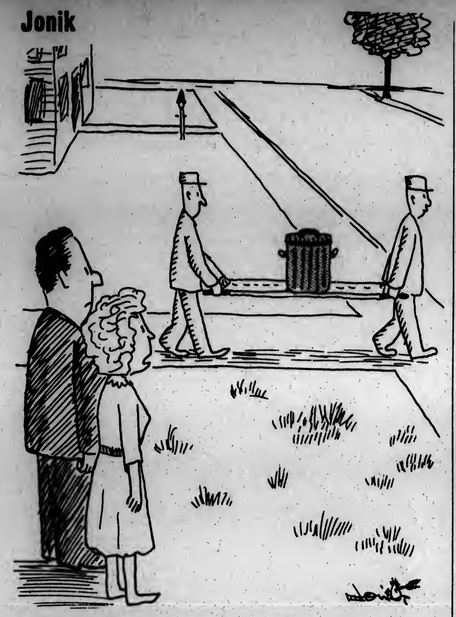
On Stacks

Students at Villanova have been known to complain about the fact that they are not permitted in the stacks of the library.

There are benefits of having open stacks. Students could browse through them at their leisure. This might stimulate outside reading. By looking through the book before it is checked out, he would be able to decide whether or not this book would be useful or interesting. Open stacks would also eliminate congestion at the main desk and at the end of each semester or before holidays, when students need books for research papers.

The fact is that the stacks once were open to students. This practice was stopped at the beginning of the fall semester in 1958. They were closed because books were being stolen and defaced and furniture was being mutilated.

There is no reason at the present time to believe that destruction would not continue if the stacks were reopened. The contrary, unfortunately, might be expected. Books are being stolen and damaged even under the present system. Pages are torn out of $300 encyclopedias because it is too much trouble to copy out information.



If students wonder why the stacks are closed, the above are the reasons. There are some students at Villanova who take advantage of the facilities which the library offers to the student body and the faculty. Regardless of whether or not the stacks are open, these same students will continue and have continued to ruin university property.

Seton Hall University has recently decided to reopen their stacks which have been closed for almost two years. The closure was due to the same type of problems Villanova faces.

The University of Pennsylvania has kept their stacks onen in spite of damage and thievery. In order to alleviate the problem Penn has employed a guard who checks each student's books as he leaves the library, as does Villanova even now.

It is unfortunate that the actions of a minority of students are depriving sincere students of the benefits of open library stacks.

T'n'T Pleasing With Zany Humor

by Art Molitierno

Ever since its inception in 1933, Turf n' Tinsel has delighted numerous audiences with its zany humor. This year's production, "The Man In The Gray Flannel Toga," is no exception. Book, music, and lyrics for the musical were written by Richard Schiller, a graduate of Villanova and former member of Turf n' Tinsel.

As the scene opens Willie Tilford (Joseph Ruggiero) is seen walking in front of four rather "talkative" statues in a museum. The statues of Athena (James Shiels), Apollo (Peter Kelly), Bacchus (Edward Jaworowski), and Artemis (Joseph Barbiero) are talking over the prospect of taking Willie up to Mount Olympus because Athena likes the looks of Willie. Before Willie can say "Zeus" he is whisked off to Mount Olympus for a wild weekend with the gods.

While on his lost weekend Willie meets the entire Olympus gang, including Zeus (Albert Reinoso III), Hera (Michael Kane), and the affectionate Aphrodite (Thomas Kepner). Much to his consternation Willie finds that he must not only avoid the advances of Athena but also those of the Big Aph. The Big Aph, goddess of love and beauty, has fallen in love with Willie — all two-hundred and some pounds of her.

Zeus, the hen-pecked husband of Hera, makes matters even more complicated for the poor misplaced mortal when he tells Willie that unless he wins an event in the Olympic Games he will be forced to remain on Mount Olympus as the husband of one of the Three Shady Ladies From Hades — three somethings that look like something from Hades.

Bacchus, the continual drunkard, comes through for the weak mortal by making a special batch of vino which will have a sluggish effect on the athletes competing with Willie. As it might be guessed, Willie wins the race by a glass and everyone is happy except the Big Aph and the disgruntled road runners who would have found out that the race was fixed. Willie returns to earth and probably will never again go near a museum.

The major strong points of the musical, besides the size of the chorus girls, were the singing voice of Joseph Ruggiero, and the comic portrayals of James Shiels (who had everyone wondering until he took off his wig), Edward Jaworowski and the not to be denied Thomas Kepner. The musical score was also fine, but could have been made much more effective by the addition of an orchestra. Probably the best song of the musical was "Take Me Home."

In a musical comedy such as T 'n' T's "The Man In The Gray Flannel Toga," it is not unusual that the clown or the ham can steal the show. In this case it was the gargantuan antics of the big Aph. Thomas Kepner gave his all to his character part, from the bellowing of what might be termed a Miss Jackie Gleason to the dancing of his twist-like gyrations.

Volley ball courts have been set up on the campus, at two locations, one at Sullivan Hall and the other at Fedigan Hall. Organized games are planned for next year, and leagues will be established.

Softball Champs

Softball championships are now close at hand at hand and the following teams are in strong contention for the league trophy: the Castaways, the Alumni, the Rat Pack, the 5'Ns and the 65ers, with a total of ten other teams involved.

The swimming pool is now available every afternoon for the use of the Student Body.

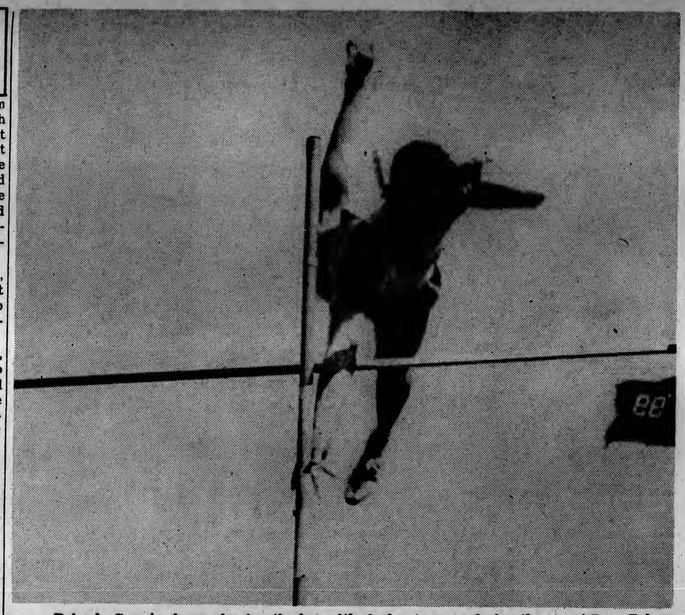
The track team will have a meet against La Salle at home on May 12. As a tuneup for the IC4A Championships to be held at Villanova on May 25-26, the Cats will face Quantico at home on Saturday, May 19.

Sports Round Up

This year the lacrosse team has dropped eight decisions with its best effort coming in an eight to four losing effort against Drexel. These losses have come at the hands of long erperienced lacrosse clubs. Throughout the year, the entire team has played with great spirit and the players have been progressing steadily game by game.

Yearling coach, Dave Cole, feels enthusiastic about next year because of the large group group of experienced men returning.

Team captain, Ed Hartwell, expresses thanks to those who have helped the team and would like to see all who can, come see the team play the Washington Lacrosse Club on Saturday at home.



The Villanova Golf Team has this season met with some bad weather and bitter disappointments. Favored at the years beginning to be one of the East's better teams they lost to Army, Princeton and Penn State by decisive margins and were upset by LaSalle 10½ to 7½.

Nevertheless, the season has been brightened by seven wins to date and some stellar individual performances. Victims of the Wildcats have been Rutgers (4½-2½), St. Joe's (12½-5½) (4-3), Seton Hall (6-3), Muhenberg (6-1), Georgetown (4-3) anl Penn (4-3).

The Rugby team dropped a 5-3 decision to Manhattan RFC last Saturday, May 5, to make its season's record three wins and a tie against four losses—but the real story lies in three other games.

On the weekend of April 14 and 15, the Villanova men were scheduled to play games on consecutive days. Saturday's game resulted in a disappointing loss to the Boston RFC. But, showing real Wildcat spirit, the team came back to put down the M.I.T. squad 11-3 on Sunday.

Fifteen members showed up on campus during the Easter vacation to play a game scheduled with Harvard for that difficult date. The remaining games are: West Chester (NY); RFC, May 12 (home-2:30); Williams, May 19 (at NYC); Philadelphia All-Sarts, June 9 (home).

'Cat Baseball Squad Captures Ninth Win With Four Defeats

by Jim Murphy

With the season past the halfway point, the power packed Villanova diamond brigade is pointing toward the NCAA regionals, hoping to equal or surpass last year's squad. To date, the team has compiled a 9-4 record against tough opposition.

After being idled for a week by rain, the Wildcats put on a late inning rally to "sink" Navy 11-10. Both teams showed power and Phil Fidalgo's three-run homer was the margin. The winning runs were scored by Jack Lynch and Don Melega. Against La Salle, a seven run first inning and a home run by captain Dan Renn featured a 12-5 win for Villanova.

Lafayette Downed

The Wildcats gained revenge for a 1961 defeat by trouncing Lafayette, 8-4. With the score knotted at 4-4, a double by Hank David and Dan Renn's second homer closed the door on the Leopards. The victory trail was short, however, as the varsity then bowed to a strong hitting Vermont team, 10-2. Jerry Harrington's long homer provided the only bright moment. Temple also proved tough to handle as they scored six runs in a wild fifth inning to down Villanova, 8-5. A combination of walks, errors and timely hits enabled the Owls to hand the varsity its third loss.

Richman and Renn Homer

The Wildcats' "R and R" men, Rich Richman and Dan Renn both hit homers in a ten run outburst which broke up a close game with St. Joe's. Soph Bruce Howard also contributed to the 18-7 win with several RBI's. The long ball, however, led to disaster in a 15-9 loss to Penn as the Quakers scored eight quick runs in the seventh. Richman continued to hit, getting a triple and his second homer in two games.

Bruce Howard was the standout of a 10-9 victory over Seton Hall. He stroked a three-run double in the fifth and quelled a late Pirate rally. Melega and Richman scored the winning runs. A 10-2 win over Scranton on May 1 was highlighted by Howard's pitching and several doubles over a short right-field fence.

On Thursday, against St. Joe's, Phil Fidalgo went all the way for his fourth win and Dan Renn ran his hitting streak to thirteen games with a two run homer that proved the margin in an 8-6 victory. Bruce Howard added to his RBI collection (23) with another three-run double.

Wildcats Scratch From Mile Relay, Traynor Double Winner, Frosh Win

by Tom Bruderle

Villanova's patched-up Wilcats invaded the 68th Annual Penn Relays on Friday, April 27. The cindermen had recently suffered defeats and muscle pulls at Quantico on April 13-14. They rebounded the following week as they captured the Queens-Iona Relays at Randall's Island. Now all eyes were turned to the relays at Penn.

'Cats Off and Running

On Friday the 27, Villanova opened the proceedings by finishing fourth in the four-mile relay. The distance medley was the first Villanova victory. Al Adams led off with a 1:59.3 half-mile which was followed by a 49.5 quarter-mile by Al Jackman. After closing a 35 yard gap with a 3:06 time, Jerry Hackett handed of to Pat Traynor who ran a 4:15.1 in the mile. The team finished with a 10:04.7 time.

Saturday

Getting off on the right foot, Villanova captured the 880 relay. Pat Nicastro, Paul Drayton, Bob Raemore and Frank Budd came in with a fine 1:25 time. Following the 880 was the Mile Relay Championship of America. For the first time in eight years Villanova had to count themselves among the 35,545 who watched NYU come in with a time of 3:12.9

Due to a poor baton pass between Drayton and Raemore, Villanova lost out by a step to Abilene Christian in the 440 relay.

Although the varsity did not compete in the mile relay, the freshman did and won. Marshall Uzzle ran the opening leg a step or two behind in second place. Uzzle handed off to the latest flying Irishman, Noel Carroll, who opened a slight lead as he handed the baton off to Stan Koglowski. Stan passed to Don Webster who quickly showed his heels to the rest of the pack. Their time of 3:17.4 beat Morgan State for the Freshmen Mile Relay Championship.

Traynor Again

Traynor was back again as he won the college 3000 meter steplechase with a time of 9:12.2 that bettered the old relay record by two seconds. Billy Joe threw the shot 58'6" and finished second behind Gary Gubner, the mammoth from NYU. Rolando Cruz tied for second place in the pole-vault with John Belitza of Maryland. Both cleared 15-4. John Plymale, of West Point soared 15-7¾.

Cat feed: During the past two weeks trainer Jake Nevins had more trouble with muscle pulls, rips and tears than Casey or Kildare would have in a month of Sundays . . . Frank Budd just isn't a top-notch relay man . . . Imagine traveling from the Virgin Islands to compete in a relay only to drop the baton—it happened . . . Pat Traynor was named MVP . . . Villanova doesn't recruit in track . . . Eddie Hunt's Morgan State mile relay team was bridesmaid for the eighth time . . . There were 5000 athletes and 115 events at the meet . . . Best all-round athlete of the meet—Jerry Dyes of Abilene, who set the Javelin record and ran the leadoff leg on the ACC Championship 440 yard relay meet . . . The loudest cheer of the day went for the winner of the women's 100 yard dash . . .

In a meet last Saturday, Villanova defeated St. Joe's 109-49. Rolando Cruz cleared the bar at 15-5½ in the pole vault to break his stadium mark by one and-a-half inches. Frank Budd won the "100" in :9.6 and "200" in :21.4. Leon Pras won the 120 high and 220 low hurdles with times of :15 and :24 seconds respectively. Pat Traynor took the mile and two mile in 4:11 and 9:27.8.

A moment of—pleasantry . . . . and one of seriousness

The Reverend William E. Farrell, OSA, Student Council Moderator, appears pleased with the gifts bestowed on him by the Council at its May 9 session. In a more serious vein John Simone, Regional NFCCS president, clarifies an item relating to the motion that the NFCCS be eliminated from the Student Council. The motion was defeated.

Anti-NF Amendment Defeated By Council Other Bills Passed

by Ed Farrell

The National Federation of Catholic College Students will remain a part of the Student Council of Villanova University at least until next year. By a vote of 8½ to 25½, an amendment to the constitution of the Council which would have abolished the organization was defeated. This action was the highlight of the lengthy Congress meeting held last Wednesday evening.

Defending the position of the NFCCS, Eugene d'Aquili, Senior Delegate, explained that one of the major difficulties encountered in successfully implementing the Federation on a campus the size of Villanova was ". . . a tremendous student apathy . . . a giant block of inertia".

In advocating the amendment, Joe Little, Executive Vice-President for Student Government, stated that the $750 allocated yearly for NFCCS dues was not justified for the amount of ac-

Father's Role In Education Recognized On Fathers' Day

"You and we, the fathers and the faculty, have worked together over the last four years in the work of education."

This excerpt from the address made to the fathers by the Rev. Robert Welsh, OSA, summarizes the theme of Fathers' Day, 1962.

The big day, observed on Saturday, May 12, by senior students and their fathers, began at 11 with a Mass in the Grotto. Rev. Joseph Kenny, OSA, class moderator, celebrated the Mass and the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President, delivered an official welcome to the fathers.

Tour of Campus

There was time then for a walk around the campus, a chance for the seniors and their dads to greet old friends, to meet new ones.

After a luncheon in the residents' cafeteria, Father Welsh, Dean of Arts and Sciences presented the keynote address. He explained the goals of a Villanova education, and thanked the fathers for helping Villanova to attain these goals. Father continued, "The work of education is truly a cooperative effort. It involves not only the parents and the faculty, but also the student . . . So far as we can judge, your men have received a Villanova education."

Sports Events

There were sports events following the luncheon, and the honored guests had their choice of watching a baseball game with Seton Hall, a rugby contest against Baltimore, or a dual track meet which pitted Villanova against the Quantico Marines.

While the sun still shone brightly, the day was ended. The seniors escorted their dads off campus and the fathers left, planning to return once more on June 4.

Under Secretary Of State Cleveland Lectures On 'Diplomatic Tight Rope'

by Joe McCarthy

The Honorable Harlan Cleveland, Assistant Secretary of State for International Organization Affairs, last Thursday lectured to a capacity audience on the "View from the Diplomatic Tight-rope." The talk was sponsored by the Villanova History and Political Science Department.

Cleveland has a major reponsibility for the United States policy in the United Nations. From 1956 until 1961, when he was appointed to his present position by President Kennedy, he was Dean of the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs at Syracuse University.

Constant Change

After the introductory remarks by the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President, Cleveland successfully attempted to delineate the difficult position which the State Department faces in view of the modern day advances and the continuous evolution of thought and situations in the diplomatic circles of the world. He further took into account the difficulty of formulating a definite stand in the forever variable and complex situations (or crises) that develop in the world.

Cleveland then divided his topic into comments and explanations of Administration policy in regard to five specific

With the season past the halfway point, the power packed Villanova diamond brigade is pointing toward the NCAA regionals, hoping to equal or surpass last year's squad. To date, the team has compiled a 9-4 record against tough opposition.

After being idled for a week by rain, the Wildcats put on a late inning rally to "sink" Navy 11-10. Both teams showed power and Phil Fidalgo's three-run homer was the margin. The winning runs were scored by Jack Lynch and Don Melega. Against La Salle, a seven run first inning and a home run by captain Dan Renn featured a 12-5 win for Villanova.

Lafayette Downed

The Wildcats gained revenge for a 1961 defeat by trouncing Lafayette, 8-4. With the score knotted at 4-4, a double by Hank David and Dan Renn's second homer closed the door on the Leopards. The victory trail was short, however, as the varsity then bowed to a strong hitting Vermont team, 10-2. Jerry Harrington's long homer provided the only bright moment. Temple also proved tough to handle as they scored six runs in a wild fifth inning to down Villanova, 8-5. A combination of walks, errors and timely hits enabled the Owls to hand the varsity its third loss.

Richman and Renn Homer

The Wildcats' "R and R" men, Rich Richman and Dan Renn both hit homers in a ten run outburst which broke up a close game with St. Joe's. Soph Bruce Howard also contributed to the 18-7 win with several RBI's. The long ball, however, led to disaster in a 15-9 loss to Penn as the Quakers scored eight quick runs in the seventh. Richman continued to hit, getting a triple and his second homer in two games.

Bruce Howard was the standout of a 10-9 victory over Seton Hall. He stroked a three-run double in the fifth and quelled a late Pirate rally. Melega and Richman scored the winning runs. A 10-2 win over Scranton on May 1 was highlighted by Howard's pitching and several doubles over a short right-field fence.

On Thursday, against St. Joe's, Phil Fidalgo went all the way for his fourth win and Dan Renn ran his hitting streak to thirteen games with a two run homer that proved the margin in an 8-6 victory. Bruce Howard added to his RBI collection (23) with another three-run double.

Wildcats Scratch From Mile Relay, Traynor Double Winner, Frosh Win

by Tom Bruderle

Villanova's patched-up Wilcats invaded the 68th Annual Penn Relays on Friday, April 27. The cindermen had recently suffered defeats and muscle pulls at Quantico on April 13-14. They rebounded the following week as they captured the Queens-Iona Relays at Randall's Island. Now all eyes were turned to the relays at Penn.

'Cats Off and Running

On Friday the 27, Villanova opened the proceedings by finishing fourth in the four-mile relay. The distance medley was the first Villanova victory. Al Adams led off with a 1:59.3 half-mile which was followed by a 49.5 quarter-mile by Al Jackman. After closing a 35 yard gap with a 3:06 time, Jerry Hackett handed of to Pat Traynor who ran a 4:15.1 in the mile. The team finished with a 10:04.7 time.

Saturday

Getting off on the right foot, Villanova captured the 880 relay. Pat Nicastro, Paul Drayton, Bob Raemore and Frank Budd came in with a fine 1:25 time. Following the 880 was the Mile Relay Championship of America. For the first time in eight years Villanova had to count themselves among the 35,545 who watched NYU come in with a time of 3:12.9

Due to a poor baton pass between Drayton and Raemore, Villanova lost out by a step to Abilene Christian in the 440 relay.

Although the varsity did not compete in the mile relay, the freshman did and won. Marshall Uzzle ran the opening leg a step or two behind in second place. Uzzle handed off to the latest flying Irishman, Noel Carroll, who opened a slight lead as he handed the baton off to Stan Koglowski. Stan passed to Don Webster who quickly showed his heels to the rest of the pack. Their time of 3:17.4 beat Morgan State for the Freshmen Mile Relay Championship.

Traynor Again

Traynor was back again as he won the college 3000 meter steplechase with a time of 9:12.2 that bettered the old relay record by two seconds. Billy Joe threw the shot 58'6" and finished second behind Gary Gubner, the mammoth from NYU. Rolando Cruz tied for second place in the pole-vault with John Belitza of Maryland. Both cleared 15-4. John Plymale, of West Point soared 15-7¾.

Cat feed: During the past two weeks trainer Jake Nevins had more trouble with muscle pulls, rips and tears than Casey or Kildare would have in a month of Sundays . . . Frank Budd just isn't a top-notch relay man . . . Imagine traveling from the Virgin Islands to compete in a relay only to drop the baton—it happened . . . Pat Traynor was named MVP . . . Villanova doesn't recruit in track . . . Eddie Hunt's Morgan State mile relay team was bridesmaid for the eighth time . . . There were 5000 athletes and 115 events at the meet . . . Best all-round athlete of the meet—Jerry Dyes of Abilene, who set the Javelin record and ran the leadoff leg on the ACC Championship 440 yard relay meet . . . The loudest cheer of the day went for the winner of the women's 100 yard dash . . .

In a meet last Saturday, Villanova defeated St. Joe's 109-49. Rolando Cruz cleared the bar at 15-5½ in the pole vault to break his stadium mark by one and-a-half inches. Frank Budd won the "100" in :9.6 and "200" in :21.4. Leon Pras won the 120 high and 220 low hurdles with times of :15 and :24 seconds respectively. Pat Traynor took the mile and two mile in 4:11 and 9:27.8.

The Reverend William E. Farrell, OSA, Student Council Moderator, appears pleased with the gifts bestowed on him by the Council at its May 9 session. In a more serious vein John Simone, Regional NFCCS president, clarifies an item relating to the motion that the NFCCS be eliminated from the Student Council. The motion was defeated.

Anti-NF Amendment Defeated By Council Other Bills Passed

by Ed Farrell

The National Federation of Catholic College Students will remain a part of the Student Council of Villanova University at least until next year. By a vote of 8½ to 25½, an amendment to the constitution of the Council which would have abolished the organization was defeated. This action was the highlight of the lengthy Congress meeting held last Wednesday evening.

Defending the position of the NFCCS, Eugene d'Aquili, Senior Delegate, explained that one of the major difficulties encountered in successfully implementing the Federation on a campus the size of Villanova was ". . . a tremendous student apathy . . . a giant block of inertia".

In advocating the amendment, Joe Little, Executive Vice-President for Student Government, stated that the $750 allocated yearly for NFCCS dues was not justified for the amount of ac-

Father's Role In Education Recognized On Fathers' Day

"You and we, the fathers and the faculty, have worked together over the last four years in the work of education."

This excerpt from the address made to the fathers by the Rev. Robert Welsh, OSA, summarizes the theme of Fathers' Day, 1962.

The big day, observed on Saturday, May 12, by senior students and their fathers, began at 11 with a Mass in the Grotto. Rev. Joseph Kenny, OSA, class moderator, celebrated the Mass and the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President, delivered an official welcome to the fathers.

Tour of Campus

There was time then for a walk around the campus, a chance for the seniors and their dads to greet old friends, to meet new ones.

After a luncheon in the residents' cafeteria, Father Welsh, Dean of Arts and Sciences presented the keynote address. He explained the goals of a Villanova education, and thanked the fathers for helping Villanova to attain these goals. Father continued, "The work of education is truly a cooperative effort. It involves not only the parents and the faculty, but also the student . . . So far as we can judge, your men have received a Villanova education."

Sports Events

There were sports events following the luncheon, and the honored guests had their choice of watching a baseball game with Seton Hall, a rugby contest against Baltimore, or a dual track meet which pitted Villanova against the Quantico Marines.

While the sun still shone brightly, the day was ended. The seniors escorted their dads off campus and the fathers left, planning to return once more on June 4.

'Largest' Lynx Edition In Paperback Binding

The 1962 Spring Edition of the Lynx will go on sale at twenty-five cents on Friday, May 18, in the Pie Shoppe. This edition, probably the largest in the history of the publication, will depart significantly from past editions, according to Frank Murphy, editor. Among the innovations will be the addition of photographs to aid in presenting the material and, because of its size, a new paperback binding for the Lynx.

by Joe McCarthy

The Honorable Harlan Cleveland, Assistant Secretary of State for International Organization Affairs, last Thursday lectured to a capacity audience on the "View from the Diplomatic Tight-rope." The talk was sponsored by the Villanova History and Political Science Department.

Cleveland has a major responsibility for the United States policy in the United Nations. From 1956 until 1961, when he was appointed to his present position by President Kennedy, he was Dean of the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs at Syracuse University.

Constant Change

After the introductory remarks by the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President, Cleveland successfully attempted to delineate the difficult position which the State Department faces in view of the modern day advances and the continuous evolution of thought and situations in the diplomatic circles of the world. He further took into account the difficulty of formulating a definite stand in the forever variable and complex situations (or crises) that develop in the world.

Cleveland then divided his topic into comments and explanations of Administration policy in regard to five specific

'United Nations And Future' Discussed By IRS Speaker

Mr. Charles Melchior, President of the Lower Bucks County chapter of the United World Federalists, spoke last week on "The United Nations and the Future." At the lecture, held Tuesday evening May 8, sponsored by the International Relations Society, Mr. Melchior spoke on the past accomplishments and merit of the United Nations. He mentioned the need for a more highly developed and effective machinery of international organization and cooperation than is presently offered by the U.N.

Among the contemporary issues discussed by Mr. Melchior were the problems of collective security, international disarmament, and World Federalism. He placed particular emphasis on the difficulty in transferring national sovereignty involved in United States' participation in an international organization of its design.

Nationalism Second

Mr. Melchior stressed the fact that it was in the interests of mutual survival, in this era of the H-bomb, to give nationalistic feelings second priority to an organization pledged to promoting peace and cooperation among international powers. In reply to a vociferous auditor's comment that "such a plan would mean losing our (United States) sovereignty," Melchior replied: "Madam, we have already lost our sovereignty," and added that the transition involved in the transfer would present no great difficulty.

Villanova ICG Club Elects New Officers After Success Year

The Villanova Chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government, completing its most successful year in its twenty-six year history of state wide participation, last week elected its officers for the 1962-3 scholastic year.

Capturing the office of Chairman was Phil Bronzi, a Junior Political Science major, who had several years of experience in the functions of the club. Jerry Cardamone, Sophomore English major, succeeded to the post of Vice-Chairman of the club while Harry Klemm and Mike Coll took the Treasurer and Secretary positions.

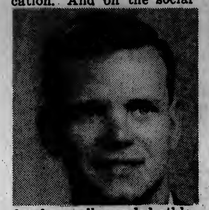
Your conscience won't keep you from being bad; it just keeps you from enjoying it.

Portraits

Dynamic Senior Prexy

Mediocrity finds no home in the life of Ray Trapp, President of the Senior Class. Ever since his transfer to Villanova from DePaul University, he has been both an academic and extra-scholastic dynamo, embodying in every way the essential qualities so vital to leading a dynamic Class.

A native of Oak Lawn, Illinois, Ray has labored tirelessly with the Student Senate, the Student Congress, and Blue Key. As a junior he was Chairman of the Orphans' Outing and emcee at the Junior Week Mothers' Day Luncheon.



'Who's Who' Titler

For these and other significant activities and his maintainance of a 3.25 cumulative average through seven semesters, Trapp earned well-deserved recognition by the National Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

Throughout his carefully-directed activities, as his scholastic average indicates, Ray never lost the ability to think precisely. Evaluating his current position, he noted the many advantages to attending Villanova, most markedly the "excellent opportunity for a student to mature on at least two levels."

The Two Levels

"On the academic level," Trapp continued, "we have a good number of lecture programs, concert series, and other cultural activities to supplement an already fine classroom education. And on the social level, a well-rounded athletic program combined with a varied calendar of social events aid the student to maturity in other ways."

Ray, an English major, plans to attend graduate school for business at either Northwestern University or Stanford University.

Trapp came to Villanova as a sophomore, and remarked that he had to do much more studying here than at DePaul to obtain good grades. In his concluding comment, he said: "Constant improvement, despite all the advantages found here, is still necessary for Villanova University to reach its full potential."

areas. They were nuclear weapons technology, the tariff, economic progress, peace-keeping, and colonialism.

In his concluding remarks, he commented that the problem was not whether or not we could produce enough progress for everyone, but what kind of progress to produce. He also reflected that this is the only generation in all of the world's history that men and women can make the choice of whether to live or not.

Villanova Singers Cut Disc After Tour Of New England

The Villanova Singers, acclaimed by music critics as one of the top three male choruses in the eastern collegiate circuit, has recently been awarded a recording contract with the Columbia Record company. The final decision to press the record was made after the Singers' successful concert tour of the New England area.

The record, a twelve-inch long-play, bears the title "Harmonies in Blue and White." It contains approximately forty-five minutes of music featuring selections in the light classical and popular fields from pieces by Franz Schubert to Jerome Kern.

Pleasure Expressed

Both Dr. Herbert Fiss, director of the Villanova Singers, and the Rev. Edward L. Doherty, moderator for the group, expressed their pleasure with the outcome of the recording session, which took ten hours.

The records will first be offered for sale on the Villanova campus and will be available to the student body during the week of May 21. Students may place their orders for the disc by contacting individual members of the club or by dropping their orders off directly in Room 110 Sullivan Hall.

Heading a cast of superb stars are Danny Kaye, Barbara Bel Geddas, and Louis Armstrong.

The price of admission is 30 cents, and nurses are more than welcome, according to Student Council officials.

These films are being shown in connection with the Council's endeavor to improve student recreation on campus.

Philosopher Anderson Writes New Treatise On Natural Theology

Dr. James F. Anderson, Professor of Philosophy at Villanova University, has published a book entitled Natural Theology: The Metaphysics of God. Dr. Anderson first became a member of the University's faculty in 1959. His academic background is wide and varied. Professor Anderson received his Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Virginia in 1933 and his Master of Arts in 1938. He won his Doctorate in Philosophy at the University of Toronto in 1940.

In describing his book Dr. Anderson declared, "It is a treatise on our knowledge of God's existence and nature in the light of reason, without recourse to the truths about Him which are taught to us through revelation."

Unlike most other books in the field, this book aims at a direct approach to the student, with the idea of engaging his personal interest in a vital and subjective way. This approach differs from the usual didactic method of the "scholastic" manuals while making full use of the advantages of many of these works. This book is being published as part of the Christian Culture and Philosophy Series.

Pinning Ceremony

Father John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova, will confer the class pins to twenty-four nurses at 2:30 p.m. in the Chapel.

Engineer's Role In Rocketry Theme Of ASEE Area Meeting

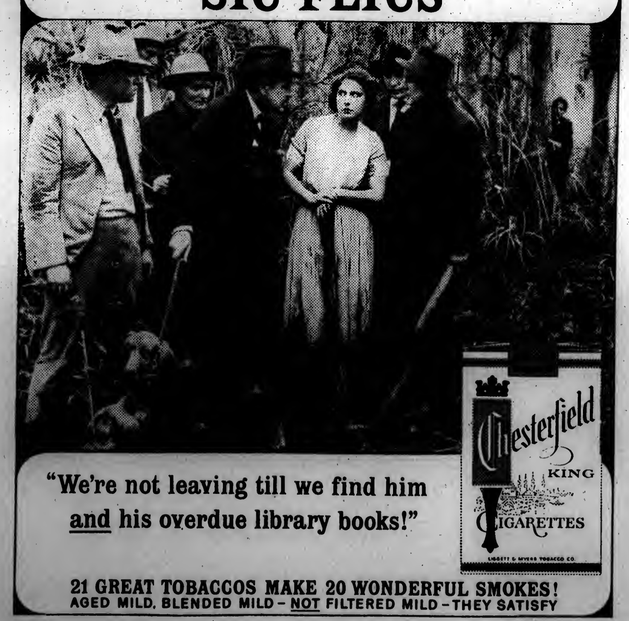
The Middle Atlantic section of the American Society for Engineering Education held their semi-annual meeting on the Villanova campus on Saturday, May 12. The theme of the day's program was, "The Role of the Engineer in Rocket Design," and the keynote speaker was Dr. Ernest Ott of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The program opened with registration and a coffee hour in the Commerce and Finance Building. Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova, welcomed the group. An introduction by Professor John J. Gallen, Dean of Engineering, and a Business Session headed by Professor John G. Truxal, the Chairman of the Middle Atlantic section of the ASEE, rounded out the morning.

Afternoon Panels

The afternoon program offered three panels, each with two guest speakers representing business and education. The panels entitled: "Structures and Materials," "Reliability," and "Propellants and Combustion," offered both an intellectual and informative afternoon. Arrangements were made by the Commanding Officer of the NROTC Unit, Capt. John E. Boyle, USN, with the Naval Air Material Center to provide sevveral interesting exhibits of an aeronautical nature. Midshipmen from the Unit served as guides for the various exhibits in John Barry, Mendel, and Tolentine Halls.

Speed Reading Course Offered At Villanova To Selected Students



Reading Dynamics, the new revolutionary technique of "high speed" reading will be offered to select Villanova students, starting September 1962. This was recently reported by Rev. Joseph J. Gildea, OSA, Vice-President for Academic Affairs.

Villanova First

Thus, Villanova becomes the first college or university in the country to make available this modern approach to improved reading and understanding. It was further reported that the introduction of Reading Dynmics is one part of an expanded service in reading improvement courses to be offered through the Office of Psychological Services.

Students interested in improving their reading should contact the Psychological Services Office in the basement of St. Rita's Hall, announced Dr. Eugene J. Albrecht, Director.

Students Bewail Scheduling

Spring is pre-registration time at Villanova University. Every year, like Banquo"s ghost at the dinner, there arises a spectre of students bewailing the inflexibility of their schedules. They take for their rallying cry the line from the University Bulletin which states, "the student may add such elective courses that interest him." They make moan of the fact that the times of the courses which interest them just happen to fall when their department has scheduled them for Theology, or Philosophy, or some other course.

They maintain that the ideal situation would be to switch their section for the conflicting prescribed course and to put their interesting elective in that time. In most instances, the departments are unable to make the requested switch and the student is placed in a none too happy frame of mind. He feels that the administration is adamant and would like to know why things are so rigid.

The answer lies in recalling the fact that in comparison with some schools in this country Villanova is a small University. There is a limited amount of classroom space and a limited number of teachers for given subjects. Couple this with the number of courses offered and there is an even more limited amount of time that is available for teaching them .

Furthermore, the course schedules and the rosters are all drawn up by hand, a task which requires approximately two months labor. As of yet, there is no wonder machine which punches a few holes in a card and automatically delivers a scedule. Once the courses are drawn up, the respective department heads supply the number of students and times are assigned, thus forming a very rigid pattern.

Perhaps someday a system will be devised which will allow the student to have relatively great freedom in his choice of electives. However under the present system complete freedom of choice of electives would results in sheer and utter chaos.

Volley Balls And Telephones

Several times during the past few years, students have been agitating for more facilities, recreational and otherwise, at Villanova. Several polls have been taken, including one by the Student Council, to see if the students thought Villanova lacking in recreational facilities. An overwhelming majority thought so. It has been a common topic of discussion among day-hops in the Pie Shoppe and resident students in the dormitories. Villanova, to the students, just doesn't seem to have enough facilities.

Recently, a volley ball court was set up between Classroom Annex and Sullivan Hall for the use of all the students. It was used extensively throughout the day. Yet within two weeks a few malicious students had ripped the net from its posts and had sliced a hole in the volley ball which lay in a box alongside the court. If this is the treatment to be given the long demanded recreational facilities, then it is no surprise that the administration has not installed more such facilities.

Nor is this the first such incident of destruction in the area of facilities. The telephones installed in the dormitories for the convenience of the resident students have become virtually extinct. Sullivan Hall, which at one time had 16 telephones, now has but one because students have ripped the receivers from the telephones. Surely Villanova students cannot expect the administration to support student proposals for more facilities when actions, such as have been described, clearly indicate lack of responsibility on the part of Villanovans.

It is time that Villanova students acquired some responsibility instead of laughing at the childish pranks. Soon it will appear that it is not just a few who spoil everything for the rest, which is the excuse commonly used. A new volley ball and net have been installed, and the damaged telephones also will be replaced. How long they will last is up to the students. If these actions should be repeated, or others like them, students will have no bargaining power with the administration, and all student demands will be ignored.

Another Class Tradition?

Taking its place on the list of Villanova social traditions is a second project devoted to the entertainment of orphans. An eventful tour of the campus, run by the sophomore class, was given on a Saturday in May for children from two orphanages. This was the first time an individual class had exclusively undertaken an act of charity on a large scale.

This project benefited both the orphans and the sophomores. It gave the orphans a chance to escape the confines of their orphanages. They were fascinated at the "wonders" of Villanova and fully enjoyed the myriad of athletic events. A project such as this gives a much needed boost to the orphans' morale an dis something they can look forward to and remember for a long time. With little reward, except the expressions on the orphans faces and the class picnic afterwards, many sophomores worked together for a worthy cause.

"Orphans Day" was also very benefictial to the sophomore class. During the second year, the Sophomore Cotillion is the only function in which the class can get experience in working. Occuring in the beginning of the fall semester, this dance does not provide the opportunity for long range planning as the Spring Project did. This experience in coordination and planning is very important to the class so that the many junior class functions can be run effectively. If a project like this is run by the sophomore class, the difficulties arising in junior activities would be considerably alleviated.

Whether or not this worthwhile project is continued in the years to come is entirely up to the sophomore classes to come. No set social calendar requires the project to be carried out each year.

The hardest task has been successfully performed. The precedent has been set. Whether it is to develop into a tradition is up to future classes and, more immediately, up to the class of '65.

Letter To The Editor

The success of the first "Sophomore Spring Day" was a result of the efforts of many people. More than one hundred sophomores and their dates participated as hosts for the children on our campus. Many others served on committees and helped in preparing the lunch and arranging the tours. The chairman of each of the committees carried out his responsibilities admirably.

The co-operation of the administration and faculty contributed to a smooth and pleasurable program. The Navy Department, Mr. William Driscoll, Mr. Lou Spacia, and three Seniors, Pat Kenny, Kevin Shea, and Guy Guarch, and many others were an integral part of a day which was the cause of a great deal of happiness for many children, and which brought much satisfaction to those Villanovans who "opened their house" to such appreciative visitors.

Finally, we are indebted to our class moderator, Father Michael Gallagher, OSA, who, as he has been for the entire year, was an advisor and a friend to the entire class. Perhaps an event most indicative of the day occurred at the close of the day when it was an hour before the children — some in tears and clinging to sophomores — were able to be situated in the buses for the ride back to the Homes.

I hope that a project of this nature will continue to be a part of sophomore class activities.

Strife In Laos

by Ed Farrell

Last Saturday, President Kennedy ordered units of the U. S. Seventh Fleet to head for the area of the Indochinese peninsula. The move came as preparation for further complications in the bitter civil strife tearing apart the tiny kingdom of Laos. One thousand marines are already on patrol in bordering Thailand against infiltration by communist or pro-communist troops from north Laos.

Immediate Cause

The immediate cause for the action was the commencement of a campaign by the pro-Communists against the southern areas. Underlying the move is the failure of the three Laotian princes to get together to sign a truce agreement.

Helpless Armies

The pro-Western armies under General Phoumi and Prince Boun Oum are helpless and in fact nearly non-existent. Thus if the kingdom is to be saved from Communist domination, action must be taken soon, and unfortunately this action will most probably be with the gun rather than the pen and the conference table.

These developments indicate that Washington has drawn the line in South East Asia much as the line in Europe has been drawn in Berlin.

Firm Stand

It is up to the administration to take a firm stand in the Kingdom regardless of the political implications and entanglements in Washington. If petty politics are going to prevent the president of the United States from carrying out his commitments to a free nation, no matter how small or poor, the political system must surely need some sort of overhauling.

Time of Crisis

The time of crisis in Laos will shortly be at hand if the Communists continue their warlike actions against the comparatively peaceful southern half of the kingdom.

When this time comes let the United States stand firm and let the communists meet the opposition of marines' rifles as they make their southward march.

Philadelphia Chamber Music Society Featured At Last Villanova Concert

by Art Molitierno

The final concert in a series of four was held last Sunday at 3:30 in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall. Featured at the concert was the Philadelphia Chamber Music Society, ably conducted by Mr. Herbert Fiss. The Chamber Music Society gave ample proof for its reputation of being a truly fine orchestra by performing works by Corelli - Barbirolli, Castrucci, Porter, Hindemith, Cowell, and Tchaikovsky.

Two numbers in particular seemed to please the audience attending the concert last Sunday, Concerto in G Minor for Violin and Strings by Castrucci and Music of Morning by Hindemith. It is no surprise why these two selections should prove most appealing. The Concerto in G Minor featured Michael Tree, violin soloist, and the Music of Morning featured Karen Tuttle, viola soloist. Both of the selections personified those qualities for which the violin and viola are best known. The performing artists were extremely capable and were in no small way responsible for the acceptance which the two numbers received. The audience expressed their esteem and the soloists in return showed their appreciation for a well-deserved tribute.

Audience Hesitates

A moment of hesitation on the part of the audience came after the completion of the Hymn and Fuguing Tune No. 2 by H. Cowell. Not sensing that the number had drawn to a conclusion, the audience anxiously awaited another movement. To their chagrin, Mr. Fiss quietly turned around and announced that it was very interesting that since a particular selection didn't end on a third the audience should experience difficulty in realizing its completion.

The Philadelphia Chamber Music Society has played at a number of colleges throughout the country and received wide acceptance. Composed for the most part of leading members of well-known symphony orchestras, the Society has been performing a series of Spring Concerts. The conductor, Mr. Fiss, is well-known at VU for his work with the Band and Glee Club.

Commerce And Finance Dean Given Testimonial Dinner

by Jan Dyroff

Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O.S.A., Dean of the School of Commerce and Finance at Villanova University for the past forty years, will be honored at a testimonial dinner on campus Saturday evening, May 19.

The sixty-nine year old educator was the founder of the Commerce and Finance curriculum in 1922 and has served as head of the program ever since. The first class consisted of less than thirty-five students. Today Villanova's school of Commerce and Finance with nearly 1600 students is the largest of the University's four major divisions.

Young Seminarian

A native of Lawrence, Massachusetts, Father Bartley came to Villanova in 1909 as a young seminarian. He was present when Villanova honored William Howard Taft, President of the United States, at its 1910 commencement and composer Victor Herbert the following year.

Ordained as a priest in 1919 Father Bartley had completed his undergraduate work at Villanova and was doing graduate study at the University of Pennsylvania. Following his ordination he was sent to Catholic University in Washington to study for his Doctor's Degree.

Finance Series

In 1920 a series of commerce and economics subjects had been added to the Arts curriculum at the University and interest in them required their separation from the Arts program. It was decided to inaugurate a commerce, economics and finance curriculum.

Interest in the field of economics and finance was keen in the early twenties and Villanova's school of Commerce and Finance flourished. By 1930 it was necessary to construct a building to house the new department.

Consistent Growth

Growth in this area has been consistent ever since and in 1958 Villanova opened its newest Commerce and Finance Building, a three million dollar structure at the east end of the campus on Ithan Avenue.

Father Bartley guided his department with wisdom and foresight and today the building stands as a monument to him.

On Saturday evening at 6:30 p.m. fellow priests, faculty members, former students and friends from all walks of life will gather to pay tribute to this fine priest, educator and administrator.

Summer Plays-A Wasteland

by Jerry Heavy

One of the seasonal changes now taking place in the entertainment world is that from legitimate theater to summer stock. To a Philadelphian this means that the large and small in-city theaters will lock their doors and the park and suburban theaters will begin to give performances amid the nocturnal beauty of the countryside.

These summer theaters are something of a cross between the "off-Broadways" and the "legitimates" of the regular season. They resemble the former in size and expense, the latter in quality of acting, and, unfortunately, the kind of show presented.

Serious Vs. Trivial

Most of the summer theaters show only comedies or musicals. Only a few, such as The Playhouse in the Park, ever produce plays containing any serious thought. This is not to disparage musical comedy, for the summer theaters do produce entertaining shows. It is difficult, though, to believe that the summer playgoer desires no emotion or thought with his entertainment.

Players Indicate Opposite

The playgoers themselves seem to have indicated the opposite when given the opportunity. Good serious drama has seldom played to empty seats in summer, as for example last year's production of "All the Way Home" at the Playhouse in the Park.

"Straw-Hat"

The trend towards more musicals and more comedies seems likely to grow. There is some encouragement, though, in the steady increase in the number of summer theaters in the area. Some, like the Hedgerow, have a taste for thought provoking plays. Given the patronage they deserve, their number may increase. We may yet see a "straw hat" circuit which is not designed to be worn on a straw head.

Magnitude And Poetry Seem Lacking In Grad's 'Merchant Of Venice'

by Gus Susnjara

"The Merchant of Venice", presented last week by the Villanova Graduate Theater, seemed to fall somewhat short of the success gained by the group's two previous Shakespearean productions.

The reasons for this, we feel, are twofold.

First, the Merchant lacks the magnitude of Othello and the burlesque quality of "Twelfth Night". There is no Sir Toby Belch, nor anyone who actually approaches him in comic character. True, Shylock is laughable, but the stock Jew userer (whose anti-semetic backgrounds are found in works like the "Prioress's Tale" and the "Ballad of Hugh of Lincoln") is less easily appreciated outside the Elizabethan setting than the "Miles Gloriosus".

Lost Poetry

Secondly, the production lost one of the major aspects of Shakespeare's drama—the poetry. The author's blank verse is considerably regular in its rhythmical structure and the ideas are expressed poetically. It seems inevitable that such a loss of the metrical qualities in the character's dialogue can only serve to mar the role. This is not to say that the lines should be delivered as near to doggerel as possible, but totally obscured rhythms tend to distort meaning as well as imagery.

These difficulties did by no means obliterate the play's success. They did, however, foil its attempt at total fulfillment.

Fine Performance

As Shylock, Tom Nevins offered another fine performance. He ranted, demanded revenge, and bemoaned his impending Christianity with a flair for the Renaissance loan-shark ghetto. Shylock's humorous lines were effective and his fate sated one and all. The difficulty we mentioned above is natural to the role in this century, but Nevins brought more out of Shylock than might have been expected.

Bill Diepenbrock played the Prince of Arragon with full arrogance. Disgustingly proper, the prince was a perfect boob. As the other unsuccessful coffer chooser, Gene Corcoran made the usually fiery Prince of Morocco fizzle out. His attitude was forced and many of his lines failed to connect.

Bright Spot

A bright spot among the lesser characters was William Byrne's portrayal of Launcelot Gobbo. Byrne recreated the fool with an impish, troublemaking mood that kept the characters and the audience laughing. As Launcelot's father, Vincent Van de Weyer let his St. Vitus' Dance get the best of him. The shaking made Old Gobbo so pathetic that Launcelot began to take on definite malicious signs of filial ingratitude.

Bill Flynn played Bassanio with serious courtly overtones that brought the suitor across successfully. As his friend, Antonio the merchant, Jim Willaert saw his usual fine performance suffer slightly through a lack of inflection.

Kathy Crane, as Portia, lost most of the poetry in her lines. When, however, she disguised herself as Balthozer, her role was well received. As Portia's handmaid Nerissa, Mary Lee McDonald was giddy enough for the most part, and too giddy in places.

Frank Thornton, as Lorenzo, contained more Hollywood than Venice. As his Gentilized spouse, Christine Assini was adequate, but not outstanding.

Mike Tanny's Gratiano was reminiscent of his comical role as Sir Andrew in "Twelfth Night". As Solanio, Paul Buckley's voice was not quite audible at times, but he was helped through these spots by Kenneth Resinski's nitwit antics in the role of Salerio.

The set, lights, and music were well coordinated, and the show was technically professional.

Finally, the Merchant was a qualified success. The only complaint seems to be the loss of poetry—unfortunately this complaint is a major one.

NOT BY CHANCE

Editor's Note: The article below was written by a recently ordained Augustinain priest

A few months ago I was ordained an Augustinian priest. One of the best parts of that happy time was sharing the grace and joy with my friends, a great many of them from Villanova days. My roommate, now married to a very fine girl, has his Navy time and Law School behind him, and now lives in New York. He wrote, "Man, this is a big one coming up! I guess my own reaction is one of inordinate and justifiable pride at that . . . I am now a practicing lawyer, finding the work very hard, satisfying, and challenging. We don't have very much money, but then, who cares. God has been very good to us."

One of my closest friends works and lives near Villanova and I can rejoice in his family almost as if they were my own. I heard from him after being made a Deacon last October, "I am inadequate in my expression of elation and gratitude to Him in your behalf." Another, with whom I worked on Mothers' Day, is newly and happily married, and flew in from Chicago just for the occasion. One of the fellows with whom I worked on the paper lives in Bryn Mawr, is one of the best lawyers going, and is a really happy married man. One of the bachelors present is an engineer now prospering in New York, playing the field after finishing his Navy service. I just received a letter from him tonight, ". . . pray hard and be very happy . . ."

The Navy called back several of those whom I wanted to see. Most of those who could not come wrote expressing real regret, and I was equally sorry that they could not be with me. One sent a telegram announcing a new baby. He and his wife have had tremendous difficulties, but they are solidly and joyfully in God's care and know it. Another couple who have had their share of hardships were able to share the big days with me. Summing up, I guess their reaction is best expressed by one of them ". . . we want you to know how much we rejoice for you.

And all these fine persons came to me and knelt for my blessing. And they received Christ from my hands. What words will ever express what I felt? Yet God chose me to be their priest. Human reasoning can't fathom such a choice.

Seven years from now, where will you and your classmates stand? In happiness, I trust. You probably noticed that all of us, despite different ways of life, are happy. Back at VU, a few years ago, these were good men, but not saints. They asked God what He wanted of them, and asked this with an open mind. For most, God's reply was marriage. For me it was the priesthood. And you? We do need priests, but more basic than that is that each of us follow God's will. So pray to Him. Talk about your future to Him, and perhaps to a priest around the campus. Again, pray that you may know and follow your own vocation, and even if that is not to be the priesthood, pray that those of your friends who are so called will answer generously, so that one day He can help all of you to God. And take it from one with experience, it might be one of you that is called.

Magnitude And Poetry Seem Lacking In Grad's 'Merchant Of Venice'

by Gus Susnjara

"The Merchant of Venice", presented last week by the Villanova Graduate Theater, seemed to fall somewhat short of the success gained by the group's two previous Shakespearean productions.

The reasons for this, we feel, are twofold.

First, the Merchant lacks the magnitude of Othello and the burlesque quality of "Twelfth Night". There is no Sir Toby Belch, nor anyone who actually approaches him in comic character. True, Shylock is laughable, but the stock Jew userer (whose anti-semetic backgrounds are found in works like the "Prioress's Tale" and the "Ballad of Hugh of Lincoln") is less easily appreciated outside the Elizabethan setting than the "Miles Gloriosus".

Lost Poetry

Secondly, the production lost one of the major aspects of Shakespeare's drama—the poetry. The author's blank verse is considerably regular in its rhythmical structure and the ideas are expressed poetically. It seems inevitable that such a loss of the metrical qualities in the character's dialogue can only serve to mar the role. This is not to say that the lines should be delivered as near to doggerel as possible, but totally obscured rhythms tend to distort meaning as well as imagery.

These difficulties did by no means obliterate the play's success. They did, however, foil its attempt at total fulfillment.

Fine Performance

As Shylock, Tom Nevins offered another fine performance. He ranted, demanded revenge, and bemoaned his impending Christianity with a flair for the Renaissance loan-shark ghetto. Shylock's humorous lines were effective and his fate sated one and all. The difficulty we mentioned above is natural to the role in this century, but Nevins brought more out of Shylock than might have been expected.

Bill Diepenbrock played the Prince of Arragon with full arrogance. Disgustingly proper, the prince was a perfect boob. As the other unsuccessful cofer chooser, Gene Corcoran made the usually fiery Prince of Morrocco fizzle out. His attitude was forced and many of his lines failed to connect.

Bright Spot

A bright spot among the lesser characters was William Byrne's portrayal of Launcelot Gobbo. Byrne recreated the fool with an impish, troublemaking mood that kept the characters and the audience laughing. As Launcelot's father, Vincent Van de Weyer let his St. Vitus' Dance get the best of him. The shaking made Old Gobbo so pathetic that Launcelot began to take on definite malicious signs of filial ingratitude.

Bill Flynn played Bassanio with serious courtly overtones that brought the suitor across successfully. As his friend, Antonio the merchant, Jim Willaert saw his usual fine performance suffer slightly through a lack of inflection.

Kathy Crane, as Portia, lost most of the poetry in her lines. When, however, she disguised herself as Balthozer, her role was well received. As Portia's handmaid Nerissa, Mary Lee McDonald was giddy enough for the most part, and too giddy in places.

Frank Thornton, as Lorenzo, contained more Hollywood than Venice. As his Gentilized spouse, Christine Assini was adequate, but not outstanding.

Mike Tanny's Gratiano was reminiscent of his comical role as Sir Andrew in "Twelfth Night". As Solanio, Paul Buckley's voice was not quite audible at times, but he was helped through these spots by Kenneth Resinski's nitwit antics in the role of Salerio.

The set, lights, and music were well coordinated, and the show was technically professional.

Finally, the Merchant was a qualified success. The only complaint seems to be the loss of poetry—unfortunately this complaint is a major one.

NOT BY CHANCE

Editor's Note: The article below was written by a recently ordained Augustinain priest

A few months ago I was ordained an Augustinian priest. One of the best parts of that happy time was sharing the grace and joy with my friends, a great many of them from Villanova days. My roommate, now married to a very fine girl, has his Navy time and Law School behind him, and now lives in New York. He wrote, "Man, this is a big one coming up! I guess my own reaction is one of inordinate and justifiable pride at that . . . I am now a practicing lawyer, finding the work very hard, satisfying, and challenging. We don't have very much money, but then, who cares. God has been very good to us."

One of my closest friends works and lives near Villanova and I can rejoice in his family almost as if they were my own. I heard from him after being made a Deacon last October, "I am inadequate in my expression of elation and gratitude to Him in your behalf." Another, with whom I worked on Mothers' Day, is newly and happily married, and flew in from Chicago just for the occasion. One of the fellows with whom I worked on the paper lives in Bryn Mawr, is one of the best lawyers going, and is a really happy married man. One of the bachelors present is an engineer now prospering in New York, playing the field after finishing his Navy service. I just received a letter from him tonight, ". . . pray hard and be very happy . . ."

The Navy called back several of those whom I wanted to see. Most of those who could not come wrote expressing real regret, and I was equally sorry that they could not be with me. One sent a telegram announcing a new baby. He and his wife have had tremendous difficulties, but they are solidly and joyfully in God's care and know it. Another couple who have had their share of hardships were able to share the big days with me. Summing up, I guess their reaction is best expressed by one of them ". . . we want you to know how much we rejoice for you.

And all these fine persons came to me and knelt for my blessing. And they received Christ from my hands. What words will ever express what I felt? Yet God chose me to be their priest. Human reasoning can't fathom such a choice.

Seven years from now, where will you and your classmates stand? In happiness, I trust. You probably noticed that all of us, despite different ways of life, are happy. Back at VU, a few years ago, these were good men, but not saints. They asked God what He wanted of them, and asked this with an open mind. For most, God's reply was marriage. For me it was the priesthood. And you? We do need priests, but more basic than that is that each of us follow God's will. So pray to Him. Talk about your future to Him, and perhaps to a priest around the campus. Again, pray that you may know and follow your own vocation, and even if that is not to be the priesthood, pray that those of your friends who are so called will answer generously, so that one day He can help all of you to God. And take it from one with experience, it might be one of you that is called.

Rifle, Pistol Teams Honored, Presented Awards At Dinner

The rifle and pistol teams held their annual banquet on May 3 at the Elks Club in Norristown. Highlighting the evening was the presentation of trophies to rifle team members Jan Garigliano and Cal Adams for high average and individual high score respectively. Adams compiled 292 points out of a possible 300 in a match against Georgetown.

Receiving varsity letters with Adams and Garigliano were Edward Hogan, Art Blades, Mike

Jan Garigliano

Nolan, Pete Debus, James Garofalo, and John Clancy. Blades has been named next year's team captain.

Record: 10-4

The 1961-62 season saw the rifle team compile a 10-4 record in varsity competition. Villanova was well represented in the National Rifle Association sectionals with a second place finish. LaSalle, Penn, and Valley Forge were some of the local schools competing in these sectionals. Ed Hogan, retiring team captain, took first place in the NRA event.

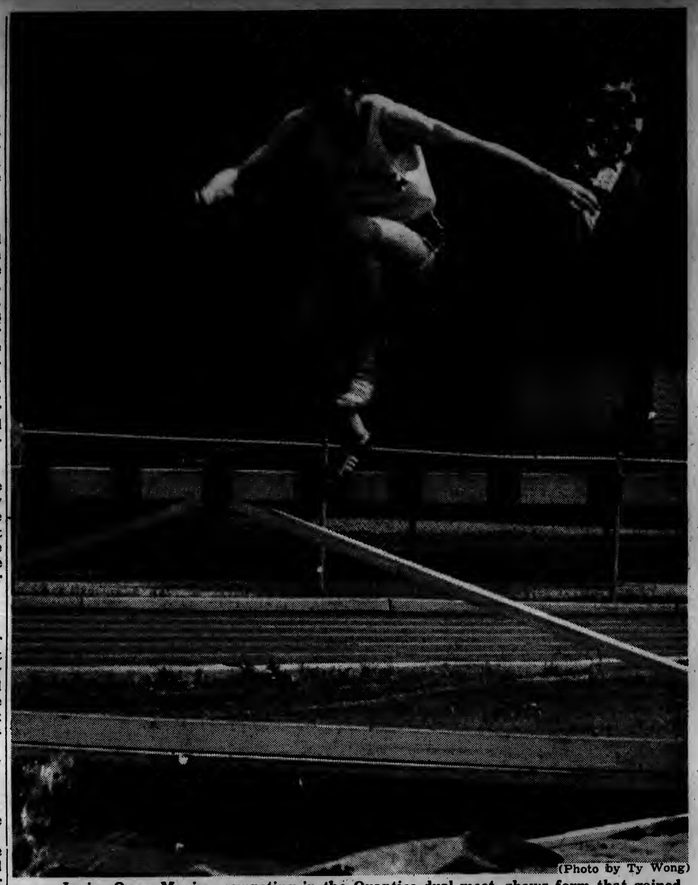
Letters Given to Pistol Team

Varsity letters were presented to the following pistol team members: George Sinclair, Joe Bader, Al Deckert, Joe Hack, Mike Benson, Carl Ackerman, and Ed Barron. Sinclair was named All-American, and Bader was named to the alternate team. Both men were co-captains. This squad, which won the NRA sectionals last year, finished second this year. Bader and Ackerman finished second and third respectively in the individual standings.

Pistol Team 4-2

The pistol team finished the year with a 4-2 record in varsity competition and 12-5 in the Delaware Valley League. About thirty trophys and medals were won in local tournaments. Joe Hack was named captain for the 1962-63 season.

Instructions Next September



Sergeant Reilly, mentor for both teams, reminds the student body that these are varsity sports, distinct from the naval unit. The rifle and pistol course will again be offered for a week next September to interest potential marksman.

Golf Team Blanks Scranton

The Golf Team, captained by Joe Bilder, added its eight victory of the season at the expense of the Scranton team, 7-0, at the Aronomink Golf Club last Friday, May 4.

In an earlier match won by Villanova over Georgetown, Joe Bilder set a school record with a two under par 68, three under the old school mark for the Aronomink course.

The remaining matches are with West Chester, Temple, and Delaware. The West Chester game is set for Monday, May 14, while the Temple and Delaware teams will provide the competition in a triangular match to be played on Thursday, May 17.

Baseball NCAA Chances Crumbles; VU Gains Runnerup Spot In Big-Five

by Dan Boyle

As of now, the baseball team has ended its competition in the Big Five for the 1962 season. The LaSalle game, scheduled to be played at 20th and Olney on Friday, May 11, was called off due to inclement weather. In the Big Five, Villanova's record is 3-2. They defeated LaSalle earlier in the season 12-5, and downed St. Joe's twice, the most recent being an 18-7 slugfast. The two losses came at the hands of Temple 5-8 and Penn 9-15. For the first time in five years Villanova is in the runner-up spot for the Big Five crown. Temple is currently in the lead position.

Princeton Defeated

After defeating St. Joe's for the second time, Villanova tangled with Princeton. When the dust had cleared, Villanova had mauled the Tigers by the score of 7-2. Coach Art Mahan got good work out of pitcher Bruce Howard who went the distance and received credit for the win. The hitting was sparked by second-baseman Don Melega who went four-for-five.

'Cats Dumped By Rider

On May 7 the 'Cats played Rider College and came out on the short end of a 6-2 score. Second-baseman Melega continued his fine hitting as he collected a single, double, and a triple. Starting pitcher Phil Fidalgo went the distance and was tagged with the loss.

Villanova Rammed

Hoping to bounce back after the loss at the hands of Rider, Villanova met a hot West Chester team. Richie Richman slammed an inside-the-park home run but the 'Cats were only able to add one more run as they were defeated 14-2. Pitchers Howard, Pete Connors, and Art Smith could not stop the Rams' heavy hitting. In addition, there were several untimely errors by the Wildcat fielders that aided the West Chester cause.

Hopes Dimmed

Any hopes Villanova had for an NCAA bid were crushed as Seton Hall defeated Villanova last Saturday by the count of 7-0. Seton Hall, now 14-4, scored all their runs in the first four innings.

Twice the 'Cats had a chance to crack the game wide open. In the first inning, after Seton Hall had scored four runs, Jack Lynch, Don Melega, and Richie Richman got on base. Bruce Howard grounded out for the third out. Again in the seventh the Wildcats threatened. After pitcher Mike Kiley went out, Hank David slapped a base hit. Dan Renn got on first base, a fielder's choice. Jack Lynch walked and Melega singled but Richman flew out. Renn, Melega, and David each collected two hits from Pirate pitcher Drew Beifus. The loss given to Fidalgo made Villanova's record 10-7.

Coach Comments

As can be seen, Villanova has had some good hitting this year. Several times this year, the Wildcats scored in double figures. The pitching appears to be the problem. When asked about this, Coach Mahan commented, "We have a good group of boys here, but our pitching is a little weak. Most of the games we've won were on strong hitting. With better pitching Villanova would surely be the team to beat."

'Cat feed:

The team plays this afternoon against Delaware at home . . . Catcher Al Wiegand has missed the last several games due to a leg injury. Wiegand, who is being ably subbed by Joe Farber, is not expected to see any more action this year . . . The last two games of the season will be against Army at home on May 18, and May 19, West Chester, away . . . The schedule for next year is almost complete with most of this year's competition back for another year of opposition.

Lacrosse Closes Experimental Season With Four Graduating

by Mike Magro

The lacrosse team ended an unsuccessful season with a final loss to Dickinson, 10-6. The team, organized only two years ago, played high caliber, well fought ball, but had to bow to more experienced teams such as C. W. Post, Franklin and Marshall, and Dickinson.

Although the final record was 0-9, Capt. Ed Heartwell and Coach Dave Cole are optimistic about the 1963 season. With only four men graduating, the team will be stronger in all positions and will surely profit by past experience. Lack of a field and adequate facilities seriously hampered the team's practice.

Goalie Eddie Welsh played well throughout the entire season, and he was aided by Sophomore Dave Dunn and Freshman Bill White, the team's leading scorers.

Next Year

The schedule for the 1963 season is partially filled as of now. Bowdoin, Middleburg, and Franklin and Marshall will provide some strong opposition for next year's team. Heartwell would like to express thanks to Fr. Farrell, Art Mahan, Athletic Director, and Dr. Reilly for their help. Thanks also go to Alex Bell, and, especially Dave Cole who, while not a member of the University, attended every game and practice.

Bowling Team Captain Takes Second Place In Collegiate Games

On Sunday, May 6, Sal Rico of Villanova's bowling team finished second in the Eastern Collegiate Match Games Championships held in New York. Rico finished second to Tom Kuster of St. John's University, Rico had a 16 game average of 190 and he won 9 and dropped 7 matches. Kuster, who had a 195 will compete against Jim Nixon of the University of Minnesota for the National Collegiate Title.

Wildcat Rugby Team Slowed By Injuries Bows To Notre Dame

Rugby went "big-time" a short while back when the Villanova Rugby Club took on the "Fighting Irish" of Notre Dame. By far the biggest name on the schedule, the boys from South Bend brought a fine team to the Villanova campus. Villanova suffered a 6-0 defeat that did credit to both schools.

Midway through the first half Notre Dame opened the scoring by pushing across a try on a scrum from the left side. The "Irish" failed to convert the extra point attempted from a difficult angle. At the half the score was 3-0.

N.D. Scores Again

The game's scoring was closed out in the final ten minutes of the game when N. D. pushed over another try from the right. The extra point was again missed and the score stood 6-0 for the remainder of the game.

Villanova played two men short throughout most of the game. Early in the game John Robbins and Walt Shearer retired from the match, both with injured shoulders sustained on the same play. Despite this handicap, the 'Cats threatened often and only a fine defensive performance saved a shutout for Notre Dame.

No word has been received from several local golf courses as to an available day for the tentatively scheduled golf tournament. The annual Nurse's Tennis Tournament has also been delayed and results will be posted as soon as they are received.

Villanova Defeats Quantico In Tuneup For L. A. Relays

by Vince Kennedy

On Fathers' Day one of the greatest and most exciting dual track meets ever held on the East Coast took place at Villanova Stadium as the incomparable track team in the East defeated the talent-laden Marines from Quantico 78-62. The "Western bad men" will have much to fear this Friday night when "Jumbo's mild Easterners" invade the Coliseum for the Los Angeles Relays to challenge the low times of the West Coast.

Dual Sprint Record

The track was fast, Frank Budd was in a good running lane, and a crowd of 5,000 watched tensely as Frank jettisoned out of the starting blocks, exploded about 30 yards out, and flew to a :09.3 century to equal his track mark and which was only one tenth of a second off his world mark of :09.2. This set the crowd up for the coming 220 and Frank responded as he blurred to a world tying mark of :20 flat as one timer had Frank clocked at an incredible :19.9.

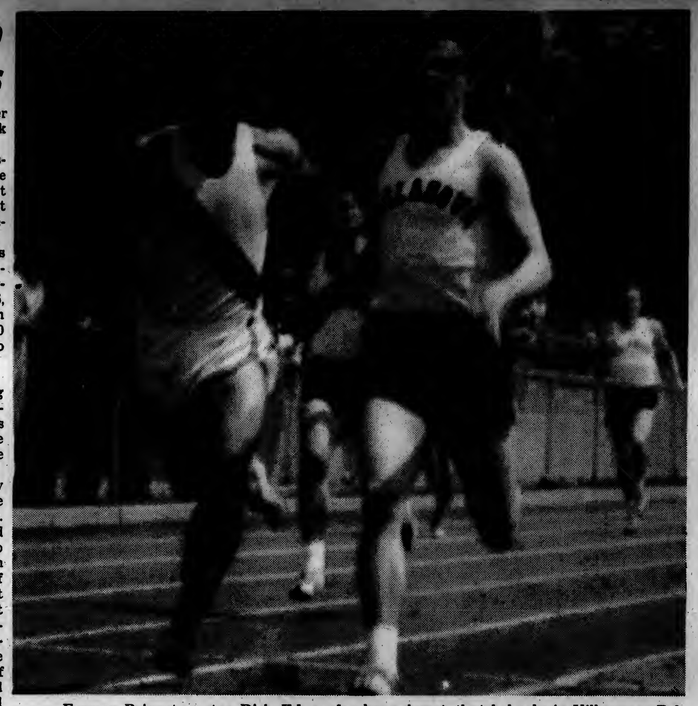
Paul Drayton, second to Budd in both events with the respective times of :09.5 and :20.1, which would be good enough to win any other meet in the country, claimed that "Frank's great starts and his ability to explode at any time makes him the fastest man in the world". Otis finished strong in both events and especially in the 220 which is a big reason for Frank's dual sprint record which he shares with the former Duke sprinter, Dave Sime, set in June, 1956 at Sanger, Calif.

Marine Aces Win

Quantico's Gary Weisigner, who was pushed by Villanova's Pat Traynor, set a stadium mark for the mile run as he ran it off in 4:02. Pat Traynor, whose best event is the 3,000 yard steeple chase, placed second with a tremendous 4:07 mile, a career best. Weisiger then came back to take the 880 in 1:52.5.

Jumbo Elliot was so impressed with Weisiger's mile that he is trying to get him to come out to the Coliseum on Friday night to give the East a good representative in the mile run.

In the 440 yard run, which is actually a dash, former Princeton star, Dick Edmunds, overshadowed Bob Raemore's :47.6, and flashed through the tape in :46.8 which is the fastest 440 ever run in lanes and around two turns in the East.



Mile Relay

Even with world marks being broken and tied the most excitement of the afternoon was generated by the mile relay, the event that always keeps the crowd from leaving early.

Quantico's top notch relay team came to the meet with the best time of the East so far. Al Jackman led off and passed the baton to Pat Nicastro who made up a two yard deficit with a great closing and handed off to Bob Raemore who ran a great third leg. The climax was at the boiling point as Paul Drayton and Dick Edmunds anxiously waited side by side for the final leg. Edmunds jumped of to a two yard lead and the crowd was on its feet as Otis breathed down his neck. In a great finish Edmunds nosed out Drayton to give the Marines a 3:11.4 victory as Villanova broke their Stadium relay mark in 3:11.6.

Other Events

Billy Joe, was the other Villanova double winner as he put the shot 58' 5" and threw the discus 145'. Pat Traynor won the two mile in 9:21.2, Leon Pras won the 120 high hurdles in :14.3, Rolando Cruz pole vaulted 14' 11" and Jim McGrath high jumped 6' 3". All other events were won by Quantico, one of the best track teams in the East.

Former Princeton star Dick Edmunds shows burst that helped nip Villanovan Bob Raemore in the 440 yard dash. Edmunds was timed in :46.8, which is the fastest 440 ever run in lanes and around two turns in the east. (Photo by Ty Wong)

All American Traynor

by Tom Bruderle

Pat Traynor has been one of the most pleasant surprises this year for track coach Jim Elliot. Last year he finished second to John Lawler in the 3000 meter steeplechase at the Penn Relays and was named All-American. This year, although he finished second to Deacon Jones in the same event at the recent Penn Relays, he won the college event in 9:12.2, two seconds under the old relay record.

It is surprising to note, however, that Traynor's track exploits appear to have come about by accident. After hanging up his sneakers for the 1958-59 Monsignor Bonner High School basketball team, Pat still "wanted something to do." In the fall of 1959 he set a Catholic League record in cross-country. In that same year he was chosen the outstanding cross-country runner among the cities' Catholic high schools and was one of the top milers in the state.

Overcame Injury

Once at Villanova, Pat worked hard in both cross-country and track. He was looking forward to running in the 1961-62 season when he was seriously injured in a tractor accident last summer. Despite this handicap and the pessimism of some of the attending doctors, Pat has come back in fine style. Almost a year after he was nearly crippled for life, Pat Traynor is being counted on heavily in the coming IC4A meet at Villanova on May 25-26.

"Goose" has also provided strong reliability in dual meets thus far this season. Last Saturday it was his 4:07 mile that pushed Quantico Marine Gary Weisigner to a 4:02 mile on the Villanova track. His time was his best effort ever in the mile and puts the spotlight on him as a potential threat to almost any competition in the mile.

It's funny what someone can do when he has just a little bit of spare time. Just All American honors in college track!

Raymond Trapp, senior class president and class valedictorian discusses his speech with Rev. Joseph Kemme, OSA, one of those who chose him for his position.

Trapp Chosen Valedictorian To Speak On 'Christian Life'

Ray Trapp, senior English major, has been chosen the valedictorian for the Class of 1962. He was chosen in competition with twelve other seniors who were selected by the Deans of the various schools. At the outset of the competition, each had to read a selection from literature and, of the twelve, six were chosen to present an original speech on May 4. Of the final six, Trapp was the victor.

Trapp announced as the theme of his speech the application of Christian life. He points out the correlation between the ideals learned here at Villanova as Christian gentlemen and the workaday world that will commence upon graduation.

Accorded Honor

In speaking of his being accorded the honor, Trapp declared, "I am extremely pleased that I should be the one to represent my class. I feel that this is the climax of my years at Villanova and am grateful that they should be capped off by such an honor."

Ray Trapp was the President of the Senior Class, a member of Blue Key, and was nominated to Who's Who. He plans to do graduate work at Northwestern University.

Committees Chosen By Student Council In Final Gathering

Ballot counting remained the prinicipal item on the agenda of the Student Council at the Congress meeting last Wednesday evening. John Neary was elected senior NFCCS delegate over Len Limongelli. Neary was nominated by Jim McErlane while Jim Howley placed Limongelli's nomination.

Elected as Junior Delegate was Tom Menchin.

Stated Neary after his election, "As Senior Delegate of NFCCS I recognize the responsibilty that has been placed on my shoulders by the Student Council and therefore the students of Villanova. NFCCS will realize its potentiality next year only if support is given it by Large Percentage Of Seniors To Pursue Graduate Studies

by Ron Fenstermaker

The ever increasing demand for more highly educated men and women in our advancing society is realized by the large percentage of the class '62 which will continue their education in graduate schools across the nation.

Because of the many seniors who have not made final decisions as to future plans, the following data compiled from various sources by the VILLANOVAN is not currently complete. However, on the basis of this present data, it is certain that the number of graduates who will further their education will be considerably higher than last year.

Law School

Once again, law schools are claiming the largest number of graduates. Heading for Villanova's Garey Hall are Arts Majors Joseph Busacca, Paul Downey, David Gilbert, Salvatore Rico, and Vedder White; Mechanical Engineers Joseph McGlynn, John Penrose, and John Sweeney; Electrical Engineer Joseph Stratman; Accounting Majors Thomas Henry and Francis O'Hara; Finance Major George Brestle; Pre-Law Majors Richard Morrison and Richard Phillips; and Industrial Administration Majors James Lynch and Arthur Schulman.

Temple's Law School will claim Thomas Callan, Neil Gross, John Kelly, Richard Kutner, and George West, all Pre-Law Majors. Other graduates who will matriculate in Law schools include Mathias Mone, Eugene McCarthy, James Sweeney, and Richard Mulcahy (Fordham); Paul Rosen and Nicholas D'Alonzo (Dickinson); Bernard Senger and Sal Cracio (Seton Hall); Louis Meringolo and Raymond Renza (St. John's); Thomas O'Connor (Michigan); Vincent Lamanna (Rutgers); Joseph Odierno (N.Y.U.); Daniel Grove (Virginia); John Piccin (Georgetown); and Hugh Leitch (Cornell).

VU Graduate School

Graduate departments of Villanova University were chosen by Chemical Engineers Lawrence Emerle, Sergio Garcia-Rangel, and Joseph Puchalik; Mechanical Engineers Fred Huenerfauth and Yin-Kang Peng; Industrial Administration Major Paul Stimmler; and Chemistry Majors John Herce and Gray Shamenek.

Four Division Leaders Honored For Excellence By Faculty Club

The Villanova Chapter of the American Association of University Professors will honor the outstanding students in each division of the university today. Each year the Association awards these students for their academic excellence in each particular division of the university.

The winners this year as announced by Mr. J. J. Fisher of the English Department are Josephine M. Carmosky of the Nursing Division, John T. Deiser of Engineering, majoring in Mechanical Engineering, John M. Lane of Commerce and Finance, majoring in Industrial Administration, and John De Santo of Arts and Science majoring in Physics.

The students will receive their rewards at a luncheon given in their honor in the Faculty Dining Room in Dougherty Hall at noon today. Each leader will receive a gold key that will be inscribed with their attainment during undergraduate study.

Movie Policy Altered; Better Films In Fall

The Student Council will continue its movie program next year with a change in chairmen and policies. The new chairmen of the Movie Committee are Richard Billon and Arthur Christiano. The planned films will be shown in the Vasey Hall auditorium on pre-announced dates by the Movie Committee.

Following the program of new policies there will be a matinee for the convenience of the day-hops as well as the regular evening program. New policies will also include: the price of admission decreased to 25 cents, possibility of a new projector to be provided so that films may be shown without interruption (new projector pending approval of Student Council).

Chairman Richard Billon has chosen a variety of quality films to be shown, including: ROMANOFF AND JULIET, THE GREAT IMPOSTER, TO HELL AND BACK, and DEATH OF A SALESMAN. There will also be some specials integrated with the feature program. One proposed special is a 57 minute documentary on Col. John Glenn's historic flight into space.

University Will Host County Story League For Workshop Lunch

The Delaware County Story League will sponsor a story tellers workshop by the National Capital Story League of Washington D.C. on next Saturday May 26, at Villanova. The Workshop will be held in 110 Commerce and Finance Building and will be followed by a luncheon.

Afterwards a panel discussion and an informal story hour will complete the day. All Villanova students are encouraged to attend and if interested are to contact Mrs. Francis K. Walsh in the Library.

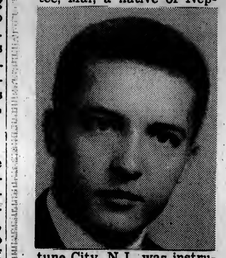
Belle Air On Schedule; Has Fold-Out Section, Increased Color Pages

The 1962 Belle Air is currently receiving its finishing touches at the printer's and is on schedule. It will be distributed before the close of the spring term, according to Jan Garigliano, Editor.

Seniors will enjoy their traditional privilege of receiving their copies on a date prior to distribution to underclassmen. The date for delivery to Seniors is Wednesday, May 23. Underclassman must wait until Thursday, May 24. Matriculation cards must be presented by all who ask for their copies.

More Color

The fortieth volume of the Villanova yearbook will resemble its predecessors in most respects, but there have been several innovations. Among these, probably the most interesting to the recipients is the addition of more color pictures. The new edition will also feature fold-out sections among its 327 pages.



The Editor-in-Chief for the 1963 Belle Air, Joseph Ruggiero, announced that all who are interested in working on the next issue of the yearbook should report to the Belle Air office before the termination of the current school term.

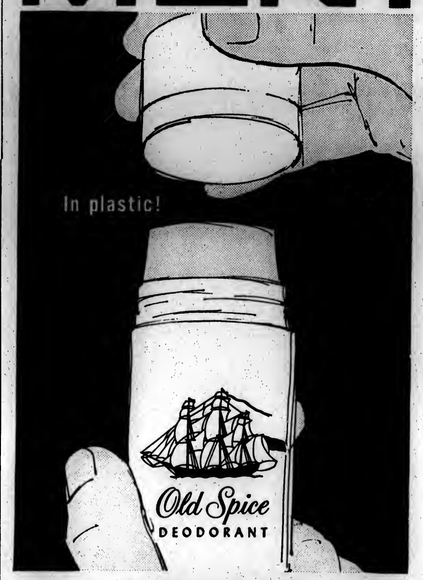
Portrette

Malcolm V. Carton is one of the indefatigable members of the Student Council that the Class of 1962 and Villanova Seniors of all future years have to thank for their improved car privileges.

As Co-Chairman of the Student Activities Committee, Mal, a native of Neptune City, N.J., was instrumental in pushing through the Senior car privileges issue after it had been vetoed by the Administration for four years. For the benefit of those who may not know exactly what was accomplished, Mal restated the terms of the agreement made with the Administration.



In contrast to the former situation in which the Seniors which were eligible for the privileges still could only park in the Lancaster Avenue lots on weekends, by the new agreement, they are allowed to keep their cars on the lot during the whole week. The only restriction are that they meet the requirements demanded by the Administration and cooperate in restricting themselves to the designated area in the lot.

Cites Need of Accord

As a result of his success with the car privilege of this problem, Mal is confident that many more accomplishments can be wrought through closer Administration-Student Body cooperation.

In addition to his work for the Student Council, Mal has served his class during the past year as Chairman of the Senior Class Publicity Committee and as a member of the Senior Steering Committee.

After he graduates from Villanova this spring, Mal's plans center mostly around his intention to attend law school at the Dickinson Law School in Carlyle, Pa.
